Our tent is ready for the field, when paid for, and the brethren who have pledged will forthwith remit to Bro. Goodrich their subscription. We must have it, to pay for the tent. We have found a place in Greenwich, where but little has been heard on our faith; a farming country, about the centre of five towns, and none of them more than ten miles off, and four within six miles. There are no Advent believers in the place, but the people are interested in the matter. They expect it will be a campmeeting,—so writes Bro. Hemenway. Now, Brn. of the Mass. Conference, shall we make a general rally and call a meeting of the old-fashioned stamp, commencing in June, so as to hold over the fourth and fifth of July? A campmeeting with the new tent on the ground? Come, brethren, speak out. Will you come with tents and help inaugurate a campmeeting, and dedicate the spot to the service of God for a yearly Advent meeting till Jesus comes? L. BOUTELL.

CORRECTION.—In the article "The Devil in the Fire," please read—"If there had been a gallows prepared for Stokes who killed Fisk, and the papers had announced that Stokes was hung, who would have thought that it had been any other Stokes than the murderer of Fisk? Now, as there was a fire prepared for the devil, and then the prophetic assurance that the devil was cast into the fire, how can we conclude that it was any other than the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil?" H. PRATT.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

BRO. P. G. BOWMAN'S REPORT.

To the Board of the A. A. M. S., Boston, Mass. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. My dear brethren: In presenting this my last quarterly report from this mission for the last conference year, I might say that, while there are some things of a discouraging character, there are many things to fill us with hope and encouragement. The priests of nearly all the sects seem to combine to crush us, as a set of heretics and materialists. They do not regard us as christians, or worthy of the name; therefore they will not commune with us at the Lord's table, nor suffer us to commune with them. Well, no doubt they think they are doing God service in all this. We must therefore see to it, that our own personal daily union and communion with the Father, and with the Son, and with the Holy Ghost, is such that the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost given to us, that we may be always ready to give "to every man . . . a reason of the hope" within us. Our hearts must be pure; love to God and man must be the ruling passion of our daily lives; we must lay aside all malice, and guile, and evil speaking, and hatred, and envyings, so that our peace may be as the capacious river, and our righteousness as the waves of the mighty sea. Now, what in all the word of God is more calculated to bring this precious experience in heart and life to us, than a daily looking for "the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works"?

We now have three comfortable chapels in this county, where we meet from Sabbath to Sabbath to worship our heavenly Father and his Son Jesus the Messiah, under our own vine and fig-tree, without the fear of men or demons to molest. Thank the Lord for the liberty of conscience. The truth that we hold as a people is spreading in every direction throughout this entire section. All thinking men and women, who are not bound by creeds, declare it to be the most reasonable exposition of the Scriptures they have ever heard; and hence the opposition of the clergy. Last Sunday I preached my first sermon at the Court House in this county. I preached in the Market-house to a large and attentive congregation of Jews and Gentiles, white and colored. I had an armful of tracts lying on the table before me. At the close of service I told the people they could have them by coming up for them; and such a rush I never saw. If the table had been covered with gold coin, they could not have manifested a greater eagerness for it. In one minute every tract was gone, and the usual excitement about the sermon followed. The subject was the nature of man and the end of evil. One preacher said he hoped I would not come back again, as I was unsettling the minds of his people. But I had to yield to the urgent request of the people, and make another appointment for the last Sunday in this month.

Thus you see, my dear brethren, my work is extending in every direction, and I have no one to assist me in preaching the word. Were I to attend to all the calls abroad, I should have to neglect the little flock I have under God gathered here. I do hope and pray the Board and brethren at large will make some definite and permanent arrangement at our next annual meeting to keep some one or two brethren, at least, in this southern field, to blow the trumpet long and loud, that Jesus the Messiah is coming, and coming soon to finish this economy forever, and bring in everlasting righteousness; when we and our loved ones will meet to part no more forever. This is what I firmly believe the Holy Ghost has raised up the people called the Second Adventists for. Now suppose that every man and woman among us who firmly believes in the speedy coming of Jesus, the literal resurrection of the dead, the final extirpation of all evil, and the final and eternal reign of Jesus and his saints amid the beauties and glories of a regenerated world;—I say, suppose all of every shade among us, who believe these doctrines were from this day to fall in each other's hearts, each esteeming another better than themselves, all bound by some divine cohesive power in one body, going out anywhere and everywhere, no matter for the poverty, or persecution, or loss of property or reputation, give all, lose all, suffer all, only keep Jesus and love inside, and hard work for Jesus and one another outside; what power of men or devils could withstand such a body of heaven-appointed people? O my Jesus, do let this power fall speedily from heaven upon all the Advent people.—Amen. Please pray for me and my poor flock in the wilderness.

THE St. Louis Central Baptist of May 14th says: "The result of the women's temperance movement, thus far, gives the following figures: Thirty-seven cities and towns entirely freed from the liquor traffic: 1,761 liquor saloons in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois closed; and 800 liquor sellers not only reformed, but hopefully converted to Christ."

SOUTHERN VOLCANO.

I arrived here March 28th, and proceeded at once to make inquiry in reference to the reported volcano some twenty-five miles distant from here. Many of the newspaper reports are far from true. The most reasonable and scientific reports that I have seen in print (not excepting my own) were from Gen. T. L. Clingman, Prof. Kennedy, and Col. L. M. Hatch, all residents of this county, and men of science. With Col. Hatch, I am persuaded that the shocks have been electric, and not caused by subterranean fire. Yet we are near the time when I think we may expect great commotions, not only among men, but literally in the bowels of the earth.

This is indeed a beautiful country, with more similarity, I think, to that promised to Abraham and to his seed, than any other I have ever beheld. The people here, as a class, are intelligent in matters pertaining to this life, and refined; not a great many who seem to be given to deep investigation about the Scriptures; yet I am satisfied that there are some here who will investigate and come to acknowledge the truth, if properly taught in love by a man or woman full of good works and apt to teach. The expense of coming here may be an obstacle. Were it not for that expense, or if I knew how it may be met, I would urge that some good man, full of love and kind words, with hard arguments in favor of the truth as it is in Jesus, be sent here some time in July, Aug., or Sept., and let him stay here and near here for a month. I will do what I can with tracts and in private conversation; but as you are aware I am not a public speaker.

On last Sunday, I heard a Disciple (commonly called Christian) lecture here, and was surprised that he seemed nearing the truth in reference to the coming of the King, but blind in reference to the kingdom. I conversed with him, and gave him some tracts which he promised to investigate in all honesty. Some persons here have already begun to look on me as a dangerous man, because I do not join in the statement of Satan to Eve that man shall not, can not die. The U. S. District Court meets here in May and Nov. I will duly consider the matter, but at present I am inclined to think that in Nov. next, if not sooner, would be a good time to hold a meeting here, though for want of a large hall, and other reasons, the warm weather and moonlight nights may be preferable. The people here are generally very kind and hospitable. I like them very much indeed. Faithfully yours for the truth, R. H. GRESHAM.

P. S.—Many visitors from abroad, by scores, and probably by hundreds, are expected here from May until Oct. R. H. G.

OHIO STATE CONFERENCE.

The recent session of this Conference, at Nevada, O., May 21st to 24th, was a renewal of the interest in the cause of Christ in the A. C. Churches. A session of the Conference had not been held for some two years, and the interest in its work had nearly died out. The attendance from abroad was not large, but the effect of the meeting was to enliven and encourage the hearts of all present, and the indications are favorable to future progress. The churches of Nevada, North Fairfield, Norwalk, Rockbridge, and Berea, were well represented by delegates, and the interest among the people of various other places was reported.

Certificates of recommend to the ministry were granted to J. G. Baughman of Rockbridge, Hocking Co., and Joseph Eshleman of West Salem. Frank Burr, E. McCullock, and A. J. Flaharty were chosen delegates to the W. A. C. P. Society. Darius T. Call of Florence, Erie Co., was voted a certificate as an ordained elder, he having been ordained at East Clarksfield, Huron Co., in Feb. last. It was voted to recommend an early session of the National A. C. Conference, to be held at either Buchanan, Mich., or Chicago, Ill., as may be thought best. Preaching during the session by J. G. Baughman, J. M. Judson, Frank Burr, and H. L. Hastings, of Boston, Mass. The love feast on Sunday morning was very spiritual and meling in its its influence, and the results of the conference are very encouraging.

Frank Burr, E. McCullock, and D. C. Jefferson, were chosen a committee to make an appeal through the papers to arouse the brethren scattered abroad in the State to renewed activity and zeal. Brethren from Rockbridge invited the annual session in Oct., to be held at their place. Left open for decision hereafter.

SR. NELLIE M. TRIPP, Alfred, Me., writes: —"Dear Brn., and Srs.:—As I enjoy very much reading the letters in the Crisis from the dear ones scattered abroad, I thought I would write a few lines. I thank the Lord that I am traveling, as I humbly trust, in the strait and narrow way that leads unto eternal life. Although I meet with trials by the way, yet I am going to try, by the help of God, to see the end of the christian journey, and have a seat in the blessed kingdom when Jesus comes.

We have got a new Advent Chapel in this place. It was commenced early in the spring, and notwithstanding the cold weather, it has been carried forward to completion, and now we have got a very neat, comfortable house to worship the Lord in. Last Tuesday, the 12th of May, we dedicated it. We had a beautiful day, and the house was filled. Oh I do hope that there will be much good done in this town and vicinity; sinners converted, backsliders reclaimed, and I hope we shall all be faithful, and have a spirit of love one toward another, and be a blessing to each other.

My father and mother have both embraced the Advent doctrine, and father is trying, by the help of God, to preach the truth. I believe that Jesus is coming back to earth again in like manner as he went away. O that we may all of us have our lamps trimmed and lights burning, and have on the wedding garment, so that when he comes we shall have it said unto us, 'Well done.'"

BRO. F. M. DRAKE writes from Richmond, P. Q., May 25th:—"The protracted meeting that Bro. Wingate and myself held at Melbourne Ridge resulted in good. Quite a number commenced to serve the Lord, and some that had been cold and indifferent started with renewed vigor for the kingdom. Fourteen were baptized, and quite a number of others are expected to go forward in the ordinance of baptism at the next meeting we hold there. A weekly prayer-meeting has been established, which is greatly needed, as there has been no prayer-meeting in that vicinity for years. Surely the Lord is doing his last work upon the earth, and it will be cut short in righteousness. May God bless and keep the lambs of the flock, that the wolves may not devour them is my prayer."

Obituaries.

DIMAN. In McClintockville, Venango Co., Pa., May 4th, 1874, of consumption, Josiah M., son of Bro. E. S. Diman of Plymouth, aged thirty-five years.

He longed for rest, and in Jesus he sweetly sleeps, waiting for his voice to wake him to immortal life. His parents, wife and little ones survive to mourn his death, but not as those who sorrow without hope. The impressive solemnities of the occasion were intensified by the sudden death of one of the pall-bearers. Frank G. Irwin sat up as a watcher at J. N. Diman's over night, attended funeral at 10 A. M., dined at home, went to Oil City and returned at 3 P. M., said he was indisposed, asked for tea, then fell to the floor and died in five minutes. He was large, well made, fine and healthy looking, apparently, in the full vigor of manhood. Truly in the midst of life we are in death. Prepare to meet thy God.
G. W. STETSON.

GILMAN. In Buckland, Conn., May 5th, 1874, Martin L. Gilman, aged seventy years.

The enemy had long been trying to gain the victory by painful disease, but, as it were, wearied of that method, sought other avenues of approach to the seat of life. A few weeks before his death, a terrible abscess formed in his head, which alarmed us all; and just as we began to hope the worst was past, apoplexy intervened with frightful convulsions, and he yielded up his life. To those who knew him no words of mine are needed to tell of worth, or of his calm and steadfast trusting in his Savior to the end. O that we, his children, may possess as pure a heart, and leave as sweet a memory.
S. A. GILMAN.

SMITH. In Grantham, N. H., April 20th, 1874, Sister Rebecca Smith, aged seventy-five years.

Sister Smith was one of the pioneers in the Advent ranks. She has ever sustained a good christian character since the death of her husband, some two years and a half since. Being very deaf, and the infirmities of years resting heavily upon her, she had often expressed her wish to die and sleep until the coming of Christ. She suffered much, but patiently in the last weeks of her sickness. Funeral services attended by the writer, assisted by Eld. Henry Eastman.
C. H. FLETCHER.

LORD. In Madison, N. H., March 18th, 1874, Charlotte M. Lord, aged eighty-one years and ten months.

Dear grandmother sleeps in Jesus. She has loved the blessed hope of soon seeing her coming Redeemer, but she died without the sight. We believe she will live again, with all of her dear children, who sleep by her side. O, blessed hope.
C. H. COLBY.

ADAMS. In Manchester, N. H., May 8th, Betsey F. Adams, wife of J. J. Adams, aged fifty-six years, eight months and eight days.

We "sorrow not as those that have no hope."

TUCK—KENNEY. In Bangor, Me., May 20th, by Eld. Daniel Warren, Mr. CHARLES C. TUCK, of Bangor, and Miss FIDELIA M. KENNEY, of Holden.

HALE—TAYLOR. In Norridgewock, Me., May 1st, by Eld. Walker, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. ALFRED W. HALE and Miss ROSE A. TAYLOR, both of Norridgewock.

RAMER—DUSEY. May 14th, at the bride's residence in Northfield, Minn., PHILIP RAMER, of Lewiston, Minn., and H. M. DUSEY, of Northfield, Minn.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, May 19. Count Schouvaloff, Chief of the Russian Imperial Police, to-day gave assurances that all exiled Poles, with the exception of two or three known assassins, may return to their native country.

May 26. A Paris despatch says that the political situation continues to be the leading theme in all circles. The new Ministry has been nicknamed "The Ministry of impossible programmes." The Bonapartists are active and increasing in numbers and influence. The Republican candidate for the Assembly in the Department of Nivers will contest the seat of M. Bourgoing, the Bonapartist, who was declared elected.

PARIS, May 28. The Assembly met again to-day, but the proceedings were devoid of interest.

Prince Napoleon has gone to England.

It is stated at the next election the Bonapartists will considerably extend their operations. They intend to advance the candidature of the Duke of Padone for the Department of the Seine et Oise, the Duke de Mouchy for the Department of Oise, and Prince Napoleon and Duke of Massena for the Department of Alpes Maritimes. They will also contest the election for the Maine et Loire and Calvados.

The Debats and Univers confirm the announcement of the intended candidacy of a German prince for the throne of Spain. It is said Don Carlos has sent Gen. Elio to Versailles to inform the French Government in regard to the movement.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE CONDITION OF THE RAILROADS.—Poor's "Manual of Railroads of the United States" presents every year a complete and exhaustive statement of all the railroads in the country—their condition, earnings, running expenses, etc. An examination of the proof-sheets of the forthcoming volume shows that the total number of miles of roads in operation at the close of the year 1873 was 70,651; and of these reports are published from companies operating 65,714 miles. There were built during the year 3916 miles. The gross earnings of the roads for the year amounted to $535,000,000. As compared with the year 1872, this statement shows an increase of 8391 in the number of miles operated, and of $62,000,000 in the gross earnings.

Statistics are commonly thought to be rather dull reading, but we ask attention to this brief statement of American railroads, for the reason that there seems to be a popular impression that our business interests in general, and the railroad interests in particular, are in a state of decline. This increase of more than thirteen per cent. in gross earnings in a single year does not seem to warrant any such conclusion. The increase has arisen, not from an advance in the tariffs, but the transaction of a greater volume of business; and this increase in the business, furthermore, is not confined to any particular section, but every region shows a gain.—Boston Journal.

In Brief.

— Particulars have arrived by the recent mail of a disastrous hurricane in the Island of Mauritius, which raged from the 27th to the 29th of March. Though not so long or so severe as that of the year 1868, it is estimated to have destroyed nearly forty per cent. of this year's sugar crop, which promised to be unusually good, and would have reached to 120,000 tons.

— Constantinople has forty-three newspapers, of which sixteen are published daily.

— There are said to be three hundred different religious sects in England.

— The Pope is suffering from fever, the result of a cold. Receptions at the Vatican are consequently suspended.

— The hot blast is now used in dentistry. Nothing will dry a cavity of the gum so quickly. It is blown by means of a syringe.

— Dunkers, not Dunkards, is the proper name of the sect which has been holding a convention at Girard, Ill. Dunkards is a corruption liable, as circumstances have proved, to be made more corrupt.

— A despatch to the Globe from Brussels says that the Congress of European powers will meet there on the 15th of July next, for the purpose of considering the subject of international law during war.

— The Society of Friends is holding its annual meeting in New York. This body now numbers about 250,000 members in the United States, of whom 12,000 reside in New York and Brooklyn.

THERE is a tradition that men were sent to Congress once to serve the country, but now they go to serve themselves. It was put in evidence before an investigating committee, yesterday, that the Hon. Mr. Parsons of Ohio received $10,000 from a Chicago wooden pavement concern for obtaining a contract from the Washington Board of Public Works. What Parsons has ever done for the country doth not appear.

TENT MEETING AT HONEOYE.—The Lord willing, the Wayne Co. A. C. Mission tent will be pitched in Honeoye (as Bro. Ira Allen may arrange), for a series of religious meetings and lectures on the prophecies, commencing Friday evening, June 5th, to continue over two Sundays, and longer if duty requires. We hope to see all the brethren and sisters in that vicinity at this meeting. We wish to hear promptly from any and all localities that desire meetings, and will do something in support of the same. (1) In this county and vicinity. (2) From any place in Central or Western New York; and arrangements will be made as the way opens, and the Lord seems to direct. Let all who desire meetings speak soon. Address all communications, with inquiries or propositions, to ROB'T. C. BROWN, South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.

CONFERENCE.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Quarterly Conference of North Western Kansas will be held with the Adv. Chris. church at Solomon Rapids, Mitchel Co., commencing Friday evening, June 26th, and continuing over two Sundays. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us and worship the Lord in the grove. Let us lay aside all our hobbies, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. "Let brotherly love continue."
E. N. BLISS, Pres.
J. S. THORP, Sec.

GENERAL UNION STATE CONF. AND CAMPMEETING OF IOWA.—The General Union State Campmeeting will be held in Brooklin, Poweshiek Co., in Bro. R. L. Clark's grove, commencing Friday, July 3d (instead of June 26th, as per previous notice), and holding over Sunday, July 12th.

Brooklyn is on the Chicago and Rock Island R. R., fifteen miles east of Grinnell. Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonable rates. Large tents will be provided in which to hold meetings in case of rain. Let all of the brethren, sisters, and friends, east, west, north and south, make a general rally and come to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love to God and man; and as this is a union meeting, let all hobbies be left at home. Bring your bedding and tents if possible. The conference session will be held during the first part of the meeting; so let all be in attendance at the very commencement.
J. RIDLEY, Sec.

MEETING AT FREEDOM, N. H.—The lovers of the "blessed hope" in that region have arranged to hold a meeting in the Second Advent Chapel, at Freedom, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A large gathering of those of like precious faith is hoped for. All are invited from far and near. M. Stevens, C. H. Sweet, and perhaps others, will be present to preach the word.
C. H. SWEET, for the Brn.

CONFERENCE.—The second quarterly conference of the church in Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, will be held at their chapel, commencing Saturday, June 13th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following. The church in Norwalk, together with all the lovers of Jesus, are invited.
E. MCCULLOCH, Pastor.

CONFERENCE.—The Eastern Maine and New Brunswick Conference will be held in Milltown, Me., commencing Thursday, June 25th, and continue over the Lord's day. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come, and let us work for the advancing of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners.
M. W. CORLISS.

CAUTION.—There is a man traveling through the country, calling his name Hiram H. Davis, inquiring everywhere he goes for Adventists, and stopping among them, taking money and subscriptions for what he terms an International Union campmeeting; and wherever he goes he strives to prejudice the minds of the people against the brethren, such as J. M. Tozier, M. Corliss, J. R. Hall, I. C. Wellcome, I. K. Lombard, M. Grant, J. Couch, J. G. Hook, and others, by ridiculing them, and saying, "If you knew as much about them as I do"; and when asked, What do you know? says, "I don't tell all I know." Thus, while professing to promote union, he is sowing discord among the brethren. May God deliver us from such Unionists, is the prayer of a lover of the Lord Jesus Christ and the brethren.
G. J. HUNTLEY, East Machias, Me.

INFORMATION.—My labors with the church at Danville and Melbourne, P. Q., have closed; therefore my appointments are withdrawn from the Crisis.
F. M. DRAKE.

THOSE wishing to preach in New Castle, N. H., will please correspond with either of the following committee: Rufus Yeaton, William W. Martin, Chas. W. White.

THE Advent Christian Church of Lewiston, Me., hold their meetings regularly every Sabbath in the Hall over First National Bank, Main St. Prayer and praise meetings at ten o'clock A. M. Preaching at half-past two and half-past six P. M. Also prayer meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings at half-past seven.

THE Advent church in Portsmouth, N. H., have elected as Executive Committee for the present year the following brethren: L. Leach, S. W. Hoyt, J. B. Trefethen. All communications in regard to preaching should be addressed to the Secretary, S. W. Hoyt.

THE Mechanic Falls campmeeting committee are requested to meet on the camp-ground June 8th, at nine o'clock A. M., to make preparation for the coming campmeeting. We earnestly solicit brethren to meet and help us build a preacher's stand, and do such other repairs as may be necessary. Are there any preachers who will volunteer to have a meeting on the ground June 7th? If so, please give notice in the Crisis.
C. DENNEN, for the Com.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be a grove meeting in Bro. C. W. Kimbal's grove, in Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, June 19th and 20th. Brn. B. P. Stevens and M. R. Miles are expected to preach the word of life. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come, as last year, to labor and worship with the "one spirit." Our meeting last year was a glorious success, and we desire this one to be even better than that. Come and meet with us. We will try and entertain all that come; but come Friday night or Saturday morning. Be early. Meeting Friday night at the school-house. Cars arrive here at eight in the evening and ten in the morning.
For the Brn., A. P. MOORE.

NEW YORK STATE A. C. CONFERENCE.—The Annual Meeting of the New York State A. C. Conference will be held in Lockport, instead of Sodus Point, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over the following Sunday. The reason of the change of places is because our old tent cannot be repaired which we depended upon to hold the meeting in at Sodus. Let there be a good turnout at Lockport. Let every church be represented.
D. COGSWELL, President.
A. P. MOORE, Sec.

HOOSICK CONFERENCE TENT.—The Tent Committee have settled on the following points: (1) To keep the tents in new fields the coming season, if funds are provided to meet the expenses. (2) To hold the first meeting at Pittston, N. Y., if desired. (3.) To employ C. W. Baker as tent-master, with a salary of $12 a week. (4.) That subscriptions and payments for this work are now in order, and should be sent at once to J. B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., who is the Conference Treasurer, and will acknowledge all sums received. This is an important enterprise, and should be sustained. Whether the tent shall be in service every week of this season depends upon the action of individuals within the conference. Prompt liberality will ensure early and steady work all summer. The committee do not care to issue a long begging appeal; we only say we think it the duty of this conference to support their tent mission, and expect "every man to do his duty." As we sow, so shall we reap.

Those who want meetings will write at once to H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt., stating how much they will raise toward the expenses, that we may know what provision to make in the case, and just what to depend upon. (5) We intend, as far as possible, to provide laborers within the conference; but will make any consistent arrangement with those who may desire preachers from abroad. (6) Any further information can be obtained by addressing either of the committee, and enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY,
W. L. HIMES,
} Committee.

CAMPMEETING.—A campmeeting will be held at the Cheatham grove campmeeting ground, Winona Co., Minn., two miles southeast of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter R. R., commencing Tuesday, June 23d, at three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come and labor with us in the "one spirit." Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, so that all may be accommodated with something to eat. Those who can will please bring provisions and bedding with them. The state tent is expected to be on the ground. Teams will be in attendance at the station to carry at the camp-ground. We hope to see a large attendance both of ministers and laity. Cars arrive here at two P. M.
PHILIP RAMER.

ADVENT CHRIS. CONF.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, will be held with the church in Cascade, beginning Thursday, June 11th and holding over the following Sunday. As there is important business to come before this conference, we hope to see every minister belonging to the conference in attendance, also a full delegation from each church. Let the clerk of each church provide the delegates that are appointed with credentials. There were some churches that did not report last year, also some ministers, and by a resolution passed at the annual meeting in 1872, such churches and ministers will forfeit their membership unless they report (in person or by letter,) at the next annual session and give a satisfactory reason for not reporting last year. Time is short and we are living amid perils. We need your counsel (Heb. 10: 25, and encouragement. We desire those churches that cannot send delegates to report by letter. Address the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa; or to D. A. Dickenson, President, Cascade, Iowa.
J. RIDLEY, Secretary.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The third Dist. or Quar. Meeting of the Adv. Chris. Conf. of the Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, will be attended in the Melbourne District, and convene, D. V., at Danville, P. Q., at the Advent Church, on Thursday, June 18th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. A full attendance is urgently solicited, as these meetings are of great importance. Ministers and official members of this District are expected to be present; and also from other Districts of the Conference, so far as is at all practicable.
CHAS. P. DOW, Pres. of Conf.

TENT AND BASKET MEETING.—There will be a meeting of days held in the Evangel Tent, Vienna, Me., near the Brick Chapel, commencing June 11th, five o'clock P. M., and continue as long as thought best. A general invitation is given to all. Those who can bring food and tents are requested to do so, that all may be provided for. We shall do all we can to make this meeting one of profit to all. Come, brethren, sisters and friends, to unite in labor for the salvation of sinners, and make a people ready for Jesus' coming.
H. B. SEVEY.

IOWA CHRISTIAN CAMPMEETING.—The Annual Christian Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 18th, and holding over two Lord's days. Brethren from all parts of the west are cordially invited to attend this yearly feast. Come praying that the Lord will revive and unite his people. It is thought best to make this meeting an especial one, for the spiritual benefit of the church; therefore we would say to every one, Come, but leave all hobbies at home. Come to build up, and not tear down. Come with your hearts filled with love. Remember the object of the meeting is holiness of heart. We expect ministerial assistance from Boston, Mass., which will be announced in due time.

I wish to further say that there will be no especial saloon or restaurant on the ground; but there will be an extensive boarding-house, sufficient to accommodate all who may wish to board on the ground, at reasonable rates. Any one wishing to engage board, or get other information, can address Eld. J. W. Burroughs, New Hartford, Iowa, President of the Campmeeting.
M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec. Campmeeting Com.

NOVA SCOTIA CONFERENCE.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held, the Lord willing, at Bear River, Digby Co., N. S., commencing Thursday, June 18th, and continue over the following Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come ready to work for the Lord. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of New Brunswick and the United States.
J. J. WOODWORTH.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 24th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.
J. W. BURROUGHS, Sec.

THE fourth session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly meeting conference will meet with the church at Bath, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of your Master, and work for the good of the cause, and for the salvation of perishing sinners.
H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL.

THE church at Martville and North Victory will hold a quarterly meeting June 7th. We hope to see many of our brethren and sisters of adjacent churches present. Come to work for Jesus.
M. R. MILES, Pastor.

THOSE wishing to preach in West Deerfield, N. H., are requested to correspond with Elder Rufus P. Bean, West Deerfield, or Elder Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H.

THE Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit.
I. DAMMAN.
J. EMERSON.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

Phelps, Miles Grant, and others, and is published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of the Crisis three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free.

All orders for the Banner and Crisis should be addressed to Geo. T. Adams, 160 Hanover street, Boston, Mass. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner alone, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray street, New York.

PAPAL ROME.

BY ELD. S. S. BREWER.

This work states the predictions concerning the Papacy in its glory, its gloom, and destruction, together with the most reliable points of history showing their fulfillment, with a graphic statement of her present dying state. The widowhood, the moaning over her fate, the dying struggles under her afflictions, losses, poverty, and burning, are brought out in present history. It is a work of value for its historical quotations, which will be wanted by all interested in this subject.

Single copy 15 cts. by mail; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per hundred by express.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

THE MASTER'S CALL.

A. M. TILSON.

The Master calls for volunteers,
And shall he call in vain?
O banish all your needless fears,
And come with might and main.

He calls for men who're not afraid
In the front ranks to stand—
Waiting for the marching word to be said,
Though the foe be near at hand.

Men who are not afraid to die,
If the cause of Christ demand;
Who on the word of God rely,
In hopes of life in a better land.

Men who will never desert the right,
Though foes may hate, and friends disown;
Men who walk as in God's sight,
As pilgrims on their journey home.

Come, precious, blooming youth,
With love, fire, and zeal;
Strike for the God of truth,
Until the foe quits the field.

Come in manhood's manly form,
With brave heart and sinew strong;
Never falter through calm or storm,
Christ will be your joy and song.

Come, timid, fearful, doubting one,
God your courage and your shield;
Christ will ever lead you on,
While there is a foe left on the field.

And when the war is over,
And Jesus shall come again,
With all the ransomed throng forever,
You will join Messiah's train.

WHAT FAITH IN CHRIST IS ABLE TO DO.

Comparatively speaking, how few there are in proportion to the vast multitude which throng this world, who rarely give this all-important subject one solemn thought, or one honest moment's reflection. Faith, which our loving Father brings so prominently before the sinner in his word, is seldom thought of, and too often ignorantly despised and set at nought by man. How sad such diversities; how it exposes the insignificance of the creature, in contrast with the sublimity of the Creator. Let us turn to the word of God, which has proved to all who seek earnestly for the deep and inexhaustible treasures contained therein, through the teaching of the Holy Spirit, that spiritual light, which is a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path. Ps. 116: 105.

The literal meaning or definition of faith, in God's acceptation of the term, is mentioned in the 11th chap. of Heb., v. 1: and there we find unfolded to our view, from the beginning to the end of the chapter, a catalogue of the patriarchs of old, who triumphed through faith, and experienced a foretaste of that heavenly communion with Christ, "whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now we see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." 1 Pet. 1: 8.

Faith is something more than taking God at his word; it is an act of the understanding, whereby we grasp the precious promises of God, and make them ours by appropriation. Faith is the fountain-head of our spiritual existence; for "the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God." Gal. 2: 20. Faith is the main anchor of the soul, which anchor will alone hold the afflicted and tempest-tossed soul, stable and secure, while the storms of life are raging, while the secret trials assail, and when the dark and gloomy hour of death in all its stern reality approaches. The word of the living God clearly testifies, what faith can do for those who with child-like simplicity, put implicit confidence, and earnest reliance and fidelity in his inspired word. See Scripture proofs. 1. It justifies the soul. Rom. 5: 1. 2. Purifies the heart. Acts 15: 9. 3. Works by love. Gal. 5: 6. 4. Overcomes the world. 1 John 5: 4. 5. Makes us stand. 2 Cor. 1: 24. Now our feelings never could realize such results; because by nature we are too corrupt. Isa. 1: 6. But the living faith emanates from God its only true source.

Let our aim be then, to search diligently, to seek repeatedly, and to pray unceasingly for this priceless pearl, this inestimable gift of divine grace, which secures for us a heaven on earth, peace as a river, joy unspeakable, and in the world to come an eternity of everlasting happiness. Observe, faith in Christ is absolutely necessary to salvation. For without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. 11: 5. It is the connecting link between God and the sinner; it is the medium or channel by which we approach God. Rom. 5: 2. Again we find in the sacred volume, what we may boldly claim through simple faith in the blood of Christ, and the results of that faith.

1. WHAT IT GIVES US. Redemption. Col. 1: 14. Forgiveness. Eph. 1: 7. Reconciliation. 2 Cor. 5; 18. Justification. Rom. 5: 9. Sanctification. Heb. 13: 12.

2. WHAT IT LEADS TO. Filled with the knowledge of his will. Col. 1: 9. Grounded and settled in the faith. Col. 1: 23. Established in the faith. Col. 2: 7. Complete in Christ. Col. 2: 10. Therefore, let the soldier of Christ go boldly forward, clothed in the whole armor of God, above all taking the shield of faith, and thus equipped he goes forth, not in his own strength, but in the strength of that faith, which overcomes the world; makes us more than conquerors, and nerves the christian to press "toward the mark, for the prize" Phil. 3: 14, even to the throne of Christ (Rev. 3: 21), and the crown of glory. Rev. 2: 10.

J. M. S.

PASTORS.

H. S. MITCHELL.

Few gifts are of more vital importance to the church than the pastoral gift. We need pastors to "feed the church of God," and to take the spiritual oversight of the flock. This work is attended by responsibilities, onerous duties, severe trials, and exquisite pleasures, of which none but the faithful pastor can form any adequate idea. Experimental knowledge is always the best. I have often heard people speak of the ease of the pastor's office. Such persons know nothing about it experimentally. The man who faithfully discharges the obligations of the pastoral office, will need a natural gift of industry. His calling is an every day toil. No faithful pastor can be lazy. It requires live men to fill the place creditably. Besides the regular routine of duties, to be performed weekly or daily as the case may demand, there are multitudes of incidental or occasional duties constantly coming in to fill up his vacant time.

Visiting and comforting the sick ones, hunting up and helping along the inquiring ones, seeing after and encouraging the weak ones, all of this and as much more constantly demand the attention of the pastor, who would be a faithful steward in the Lord's cause.

He has regular duties also that must be attended to. He must study. No man can be faithful in the pastoral office, and neglect his study. And what little experience I have had in this has been, that the more system we can have in prosecuting the pastoral office, the better. We should have so many hours for study, and so many hours for visiting. There are many anxieties of mind experienced by the pastor, with which his people are wholly unacquainted. If his members could realize how many heart-aches he has, how many wakeful nights he has, how many solicitous tears he sheds in his jealous watch-care over the merchandise of God committed to his trust, methinks there would be less fault found with his remissness in duty. I would say to the churches, pray for your pastors more, and find fault less, and see if they will not do better.

2 COR. 5: 19.

"Not imputing their trespasses unto them."

J. P. MARQUAND.

The doctrine of imputed righteousness is scriptural as in the case of Abraham, David, and many other ancient worthies; but by using the word "implanted," we get a deeper and more significant meaning. The Scriptures plainly teach implanted righteousness in the soul as follows: "The King's daughter is all glorious within." "Christ in you the hope of glory." "I will be in them a well of water springing up into everlasting life." I and my Father will come and take our abode in you. "I in them, and thou in me, that we may all be one." "Know ye not your own selves that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." It is a fact mentioned often in the Bible that God the Father dwelt in his Son, and gave him strength and dignity; and it is also true that Jesus offers to come by his Spirit and dwell with man, giving him power to overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil; and "he whom the Son makes free is free indeed." This glorious implanted seed (or word) in the soul gives additional comfort to every believer, affording light, serenity, peace and calmness, under all conditions and circumstances. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom."

Wm. Lloyd Garrison was put in the jail at Baltimore for preaching the gospel of liberty. While there he resolved (if he came out) his life should be consecrated to the cause of truth, and for forty years he labored for freedom to all mankind. He lives to see slavery abolished in America. Now let the same energy and fidelity to glorious principles characterize each one of us. When the truth is fairly implanted in our souls, it will work out into beneficent feelings, kindly acts, longing desires after the welfare and happiness of mankind. It will do away with sectionalism and sectarianism, give enlarged and expansive ideas and thoughts, correct false notions, and open up to the mind the plans and purposes of God our heavenly Father. Unless we have this implanted righteousness, our views of the grandeur of creation and its sublime workings will be limited, our conceptions of true and just government narrow and contracted. We believe the Holy Spirit is implanted in the heart of every child of God, and gives discrimination between the true and the false, leads to all that is good, and warns us of evil.

As we are now coming down to the close of the Gentile dispensation, when certain kinds of truth are necessary, our condition must be wholesome and advanced, nothing less than a whole heart, a living Christ within. If the tree is corrupt, the fruit will be corrupt. "Make the tree good, and the fruit will be good." God has promised to implant within us his word, his Spirit, his truth, and his life; shall we neglect to ask and obtain it? Shall we be found wanting when weighed in the scales of even-handed justice? Nay, rather, let us turn to God with full purpose of heart, to seek that baptism without which we cannot be saved.

THE HIGHER CHRISTIAN LIFE.

In this article I shall consider what the higher life is, and how it is to be attained. As to what it is—it is simply letting the Lord carry our burdens and manage our affairs, instead of trying to do it ourselves. Most christians are like a man who was toiling along the road bending under a heavy burden, when a wagon overtook him, and the driver kindly offered to help him on his journey. He joyfully accepted the offer; but when seated continued to bend beneath his burden, which he still kept on his shoulder. "Why do you not lay down your burden?" asked the kind-hearted driver. "O!" replied the man, "I feel that it is almost too much to ask you to carry me, and I could not think of letting you carry my burden too." And so christians, who have given themselves into the care and keeping of the Lord Jesus, still continue to bend beneath the weight of their heavy burden, and often go weary and heavy laden through the whole length of their journey.

When I speak of burdens, I mean every thing that troubles us, whether temporal or spiritual. I mean our houses, our servants, our business, our children, and all our outward affairs. And I mean also our peculiar temperaments, our especial weaknesses, our cold and dead frames and feelings, and all our inward affairs. We are prone to commit the keeping of our souls to the Lord, because we know, without a shadow of doubt, that we cannot keep them ourselves; but all these other things we take into our own keeping, and try to carry on our own shoulders, with the, perhaps, unconfessed feeling that it is a great deal to ask the Lord to carry us, and that we cannot think of asking him to carry our burdens too.

I knew a lady who had a very heavy burden. It took away her sleep and her appetite, and there was a danger of her health breaking down under it. One day, when it seemed especially heavy, she noticed lying on the table near her a little tract called Hannah's Faith." Attracted by the name, she picked it up and began to read it, little knowing, however, that it was to create a revolution in her whole experience. The story was of a poor woman who had been carried triumphantly through a life of unusual sorrow. She was giving the history of her life to a kind visitor on one occasion, and at the close the visitor said, feelingly, "O Hannah! I do not see how you could bear so much sorrow."

"I did not bear it," was the quick reply; "the Lord bore it for me."

"Yes," said the visitor, "That is the right way. We must take our troubles to the Lord."

"Yes," replied Hannah, "but we must do more than that; we must leave them there. Most people," she continued, "take their burdens to him; but they take them away with them again, and are just as worried and unhappy as ever. But I take mine and I leave them with him, and come away and forget them. And if they come back, I take them again; and I do this over and over, until at last I just forget I have any troubles, and am at perfect rest."

My friend was very much struck with this plan, and resolved to try it. The circumstances of her life she could not alter; but she took them to the Lord, and handed them over into his management, and then she believed that he took it, and she left all the responsibility and the worry and anxiety with him. As often as they returned she took them back; and the result was, that although the circumstances remained unchanged, her soul was kept in perfect peace in the midst of them. She felt that she had found out a blessed secret; and from that time she never again tried to carry one of her own burdens, nor to manage any thing for herself.

And the secret she found so effectual in her outward affairs, she found to be still more effectual in her inward ones, which were in truth even more utterly unmanageable. She abandoned her whole self to the Lord, with all that she was and that she had; and, believing that he took that which she had committed to him, she ceased forever to fret and worry, and her life became all sunshine in the gladness of belonging to him. And this was "the higher christian life!" It was a very simple secret she had found out; only this, that it was possible to obey God's commandment contained in those words, "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God," and that, in obeying it, the result would inevitably be, according to the promise, that the "peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep her heart and mind through Christ Jesus."

There are many other things to be said about the higher christian life; many details as to what the Lord Jesus does for those who thus abandon themselves to him. But the gist of the whole matter is here stated, and the soul that has got hold of this secret has found the key that will unlock the whole treasure-house of God.

And now I do trust I have made you hungry for this blessed life. Would you not like to get rid of your burdens? Do you not long to hand over the management of your unmanageable self into the hands of one who is able to manage you? Are you not tired and weary? and does not the rest I speak of look sweet to you?

Will you not, then, ask the Lord, with me, to make the way of entering into rest so plain that none can fail to see it? And meanwhile, will you not try, day and night, in all things to obey this blessed command of our Lord, "Let not you heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid?"—Pathway of Power.

SUFFERINGS AND TRIALS.

J. G. ORCHARD.

Suffering is found in the highway of holiness, in which our beloved Savior trod, as an exemplar for us, and in which he has left us many a mark and guide board; and it is the inevitable road in which the disciple must travel, in order to reach the heavenly Canaan of perfect rest. Our great Exemplar and Mediator endured all the sufferings to which his followers are liable, while passing through this deep "vale of tears," thereby leaving us an example that we should follow his steps, and thus become, as St. Paul terms it, "perfect through suffering." Heb. 2: 10. Verily, it is as he himself tells his disciples, "The servant is not greater than his Lord; if they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." It is one of the means our heavenly Father uses to purify us, and "make us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." As the silver is cast into the furnace of fire to separate the pure metal, and consume the dross; so we are told in Malachi, the Lord will "sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." Peter says: "He that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin." And Paul tells us "our light affliction" works out "for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." David says, "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now have I kept thy word." And Paul again tells us, He chasteneth us "for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness." Then let us each and every one try and profit by the afflictions sent us; for they are the chastenings of his good pleasure, leading us to final, and everlasting salvation.

Let us look for a moment at some of the illustrious examples we have of suffering, and its purifying tendency upon those to whom it has been sanctified by the grace of God. In the first place we will notice the beloved disciple, who was banished to the isle of Patmos for the testimony and the word of Jesus. What child of God would not be willing to be in exile with him on that lonely isle, if he might thereby be privileged to enjoy his seraphic visions of the glory of the redeemed made "perfect through suffering;" and hear the angels harping on their golden harps, and see the saints tread the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, and bathe in the pure "river of the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb?" Let us remember the blessed apostle Paul imprisoned in Rome, penning those glorious epistles, which have comforted and cheered so many of God's suffering ones in their mortal pilgrimages here; and not only have these blessed words of promise been made the means of purifying and sanctifying the hearts of many of God's dear children, and causing them, through faith in his dear Son, to enter into the Canaan of perfect rest; but they have been made the instrument in the Spirit's hands, of causing them to cry out, at the close of their mortal pilgrimage, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my couse, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Again look at John Bunyan confined in Bedford jail, penning that living allegory, his "Pilgrim's Progress," which was the means of his own perfection in the divine life, as well as giving such glorious foretastes of the land of Beulah, and the Delectable Mountains, to countless multitudes of God's suffering children. In close alliance with these sufferings, comes the individual's trials. God has said he would "try us, as gold is tried in the fire." And does not our experience verify his word, and prove it true to our hearts every day our lives are prolonged? There are two reasons why God tries his chosen ones. First, for our good. We never would reach out after those deeper experiences in the things of God, unless he lifted the glory from us, and placed us in those circumstances where every grace already given might be tested to its fullest extent, and at the same time revealed in us the necessity for something more.

The second reason why he tries us, is for the good of others. The grace of God and his power to save are the most clearly manifested and most deeply felt by the world, when the christian is passing through his darkest hour of trial and suffering. It was not until that wicked king put the three Hebrew children in the fire, that he saw the form of the fourth with them, "like the Son of God," which led him to change the worship of the nation from idols to the worship of the true God. The Centurion, when he saw Jesus pass through his sufferings on the cross, and heard him say, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit, and... gave up the Ghost," glorified God, saying, "Certainly this was a righteous man."

Finally, dear brethren, let us remember that God is purifying "unto himself a peculiar people," &c. And if ever there was a time when the church of Christ needed to heed his faithful admonition to "watch," as well as "pray," it is just now. May God help both reader and writer to look at our sufferings and trials in their true light, and apply them to our benefit. Amen.

THE RELIGIOUS MOUNTEBANK.

J. H. WHITMORE.

Mountebanks abound every where. They infest all circles of society, political, educational, industrial and religious. Their principal stock in trade is pretension. They are a race of pretenders. The religious mountebank is found in all denominations, and Simon Magus was not the prototype of the tribe. He is every where a nuisance, and every where doing more harm than good. He is often what men call "smart," but he is never profound. He has a natural dislike to all severe and pains-taking study. He never goes far below the surface. He always wants to keep in sight. His principal ambition seems to be to advertise himself. The religious mountebank is nothing if not sensational. He can live and flourish only in excitement, and the excitement must be that which he himself has created, or he is among the first to denounce it as a false and mischievous sensation. The pulpit mountebank relies more on sound and fury and theatrical tricks for effect, than on plainly stated facts, and calmly reasoned arguments. He knows that for immediate and popular effect, confident assertion of the truthfulness of a statement, often outweighs the most careful and elaborate statement. Hence the mountebank does not greatly afflict himself in his search after facts, for he knows he can better subserve his purpose by drawing upon his fertile imagination for something novel, startling and sensational.

The religious quack often pretends to be deep in the divine counsels, and in the pulpit he will solemnly and with great emphasis assure his audience that what he says is true, "for God has declared it." He speaks as flippantly of "God's purposes," as he does of his own, and does not hesitate to say that "God means" so and so, as though he were himself the privileged private messenger of heaven. Clad from head to foot in the armor of his own ignorance and conceit, he assumes to be the Lord's messenger, and the infallible interpreter of his holy will. The religious mountebank pretends to understand the greatest secrets of time and eternity. He discourses as freely about heaven and hell as though he had long been a resident of both localities. Sometimes "terrorism" is his forte. In such case he feels it to be his duty to outstrip all his predecessors. Accordingly he revels in descriptions of hell torments, and throws Tertullian, Dante, and Pollok completely in the shade. A mountebank of this sort, not long since, in a sermon on "Dives and Lazarus," condescended to tell his numerous audience many things hitherto unkown about the said Dives. He described this particular rich man's house, told what he had to eat for dinner on the particular occasion referred to, what the conversation was about at the table, talked about the "blanketted horses" in the rich man's stable, and told the interesting particulars that Luke in his bungling and unartificial manner had neglected to give. The reader will not be surprised to learn that the mountebank who furnishes such hitherto inaccessible bits of information to the hungry religious public, is one of the most successful of his tribe. He performs in a $1000,000 church, and succeeds in drawing a large salary and a crowd—two very essential requisites to his success.

The religious mountebank dreads nothing so much as that which he most richly deserves—obscurity. He had rather be kicked into notice, than not to be noticed at all. So if he cannot shine as a pulpit celebrity, he is more than willing to suffer as a martyr—provided that he can thereby become notorious. The religious empiric often assumes the role of extreme humility. Like Uriah Heep, he asserts over and over again that he is himself very humble, and like that celebrated character he is quite unwilling that people should judge of his humility by his acts—he prefers to tell them that which otherwise they would never have suspected.

Mountebanks will flourish in the pulpit just so long as religious charlatanism commands a premium. Every body knows that the first requisite demanded by extravagant churches in a preacher is, the capacity to "draw." When a church is deeply in debt for their costly "sanctuary," and expensive organ, they look about them for a man who can "draw" well. The man's piety, good sense, and sound learning are quite secondary considerations, if indeed, they are considered at all. But all these feverish and highly strained attempts to keep up an artificial and temporary excitement, are morally depressing, and do more harm than good. Public worship was designed to be something more than a spectacular moral drama, and preaching something else than a theatrical performance.

Gloversville, N. Y., May 12th, 1874.

CONFIDENTIAL.—TO MINISTERS.

Make no apologies. If you have the Lord's message, declare it; if not, hold your peace. Use short prefaces and introductions. Say your best things first, and stop before you get prosy. Do not spoil the appetite for dinner by too much thin soup. Leave yourself out of the pulpit, and take Jesus in. Defend the gospel, and let the Lord defend you and your character.

Do not get excited too soon; do not run away from your hearers; engine driving-wheels whirl fast on an icy track, but when they draw anything they then go slower. It takes a cold hammer to bend hot iron. Heat up the people, and keep the hammer wet and cool. Do not brawl and scream. Too much water stops a mill, and too much noise drowns sense. Empty wheels ring the loudest. Thunder is harmless, lightning kills. If you have lightning, you can afford to thunder. Do not abuse the faithful souls who come to meetings on rainy days because others are too lazy to attend. Preach the best to the smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and she got all Samaria out to hear him next time.

Do not repeat sentences, saying, "as I said before;" if you said it before, say something else after. Do not end sentences, passages of Scripture, or quotations with "and so forth;" say what you mean and stop. Leave out all words you cannot define. Stop preaching and talk to folks. Come down from your stilted ways and sacred tones, and become as a little child. Tell stories; Jesus did, and the common people heard him gladly.

Relate your experience; Paul did, and you can hardly do better than he. One fact that you have seen or felt is worth a bushel of mouldy ideas dug out of mouldier books. Change the subject if it goes hard. Do not preach till the middle of your sermon buries the beginning, and is in turn buried by the end.

Beware of long prayers except in your closet. When weariness begins, devotion ends. Look people in the face, and live so you are not ashamed of them, nor they of you. It is easier to run a saw mill with a full pond than an empty one. Be moderate at first; hoist the gate a little; when you are half way through, raise it more; when you are nearly done, put on the full head of water.

Aim at the mark, and hit it; stop and look where the shot struck; then fire again, let your target be the heart and the soul. —Ex.

BIBLE WINES.—NO. 1.

We need to know something of the language in which the Scriptures were written and of the literature of the period in which the patriarchs and apostles lived, in order to understand accurately the subject under consideration. It is not necessary for us, however, to be linguists and profound scholars, since we can avail ourselves of the learning and the critical knowledge of those who are fully competent to give us instruction.

The Old Testament Scriptures, as our readers know, were written in the Hebrew language. There are nine words, derived from different roots, and having different significations, which are translated wine in our English Bible. Some of these words are generic, and others are specific. The beverages may have been made from grapes, dates, or other fruits; while some of the terms indicate fruit, before it is gathered from the tree or the vine.

The wines were of different kinds; some were sweet and pure—just expressed from the grapes; some wines were preserved in their unfermented state by boiling, filtering and fumigating; and some were suffered to pass through the process of fermentation.

The wines approved of God, and in the use of which blessings were pronounced, were never alcoholic and intoxicating in their character. The divine blessing could never rest upon those who debauch themselves by drunkenness.

The fallacy of insisting that wine is the fermented juice of grapes, because Webster so defines it, must be apparent to the thoughtful and intelligent student. Modern dictionaries are not made to give us the signification of words as they were used three or four thousand years ago. Webster does not attempt to tell us what Moses, David, Solomon and Isaiah understood by the use of some nine Hebrew words which are translated wine in our Bible. There are dictionaries that will give us the information which is needed, so that we may know the truth in regard to the subject.

The ancients frequently prepared their wines for preservation in a pure state and wholly free from intoxicating properties. The proof is conclusive and satisfactory. The authorities we shall quote in support of this proposition are of the highest character.

Archbishop Potter, who lived two hundred years ago, in his Grecian Antiquities, says: "The Lacedæmonians used to boil their wines till a fifth part was consumed; then after four years were expired began to drink them."

Aristotle, who lived some three and a half centuries before Christ, says: "The wine of Arcadia was so thick that it was necessary to scrape it from the skin bottles in which it was contained, and to dissolve it in water.

Columilla, about the same period, says: "In Greece and Italy it was common to boil their wines."

Horace, who lived in the century before Christ, says: "There is no wine sweeter to drink than the Lesbian; it was like nectar, and more resembled ambrosia than wine; it was perfectly harmless and would not produce intoxication.

Modern missionaries and travelers in Syria state that the custom of boiling wines to prevent fermentation is still observed in that country. Dr. Kitto quotes statements made by Dr. Bowring, who, in his report on the commerce of Syria, says: "The habit of boiling their wines is almost universal."

Volney, in his travels in Syria, says: "The wines are of three sorts, the red, the white, and the yellow. The white wines are most rare, and so bitter as to be disagreeable. The red and yellow are too sweet and sugary,—this arises from their being boiled."

Dr. Neuman, professor of chemistry in Berlin, says: "It is observable that sweet juices boiled down do not ferment."

Robert Alsop, a Quaker preacher, says that in the south of France grape-juice, boiled down, is an article of domestic use in nearly every house.

Adams, in his Roman Antiquities, on the authority of Pliny and Virgil, says: "In order to make wine keep, they used to boil the must down to one-half."

Wines were sometimes made and used immediately. This was the custom with the Egyptians, from whom the Israelites received it. In the fortieth chapter of Genesis we read that the butler pressed the grapes into the cup of Pharaoh and gave the wine into the king's hand. Bishop Lowth, referring to this says: "It would seem, from this, that the Egyptians drank only the fresh juice pressed from the grapes."

The commentary of Dr. A. Clarke, on the above passage, is this: "From this we find that wine anciently was the mere expressed juice of the grape without fermentation. The saky, or cup-bearer, took the bunch, pressed the juice into the cup, and instantly delivered it into the hands of his master. This was anciently the yayin (wine) of the Hebrews, the oinos (wine) of the Greeks, and the mustum (new fresh wine) of the ancient Latins."

Bagster's Comprehensive Bible quotes Dr. Clarke approvingly.

The Mohammedans, of Arabia, it is said, thus make and use their wines at the same time at the present day.

These authorities will, assuredly, be accepted as establishing the statement that certain kinds of wine, extensively used and highly prized by the ancients, were free from fermentation.

Henceforth we trust the intelligent reader will not consult Webster's Dictionary for a definition of wine as the word is used in the Scriptures.—California Christian Advocate.

VERMONT SLATE QUARRIES.

H. MUNGER.

Probably hundreds of the readers of the Crisis never saw a slate quarry, and some not even a slated roof; only a slate used in school, which is got in the same way, out of the earth. Vermont abounds in marble and slate quarries, which lie from ten to thirty feet under the surface rock. When the slate veins are struck, large rocks are thrown out by blasting or prying, and broken up into square blocks, twenty-four inches long by twelve wide, on an average. They are turned up on end like a shingle block, and a froe or chisel is used similar to those used in riving out shingles, and they are split out in the same way, then pointed and sorted for market. Some are reddish colored, like the slates used in schools, but are mostly of a greenish color. Some ledges have ten or twenty openings, which are all in sight, with derricks to hoist out the stones; which makes it look like business. In one place over two hundred men were at work within less than a mile. Near Castleton and Poultney over one hundred such quarries are opened now, and new ones just being discovered.

Brother Rogers, in Poultney, has been lucky enough to find a good slate quarry on his farm (where I am writing this), which is very extensive, and is probably worth more than ten such farms. He will make good use of it to keep this light before the people. There are seven openings now, producing good slate. They give twenty-five cents a square for it in the ground, which yields Bro. Rogers from ten to fifteen dollars a day. Some of the pits are from twenty-five to forty feet deep, and the deeper they go the better the state. They are mostly worked by the Welchmen, who are acquainted with the business. They are very civil, and all Protestants, and religious. They were out to hear me preach, and paid the best attention. Most of them understood our language; but they had their own interpreter with them, and he could interpret what they did not understand. They hold meetings in the same house every Sabbath, and a Sabbath School conducted in their own language, which no one can understand but God and themselves.

ROME.

The following has, probably, some foundation in fact, as it has been extensively copied into the Catholic papers.

It may interest our people to know how the Catholics view these things, and it tends to show us that there is a "failing for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

"The Journal de Florence announces that there is in Florence a man who, for four years past has been going about like a prophet of old, exhorting the people to do penance. "For," said he, "unless we do repent God will chastise us." This man has several times been seen in an ecstasy before the Blessed Sacrament, and this fact has led the people to believe in his predictions, and that the terrible visions and prophecies of coming evil that he relates are not the result of a disordered imagination. He says that the most fearful calamities will fall upon Italy before long, and about a week ago, he went through the streets crying out, "Tremble, O Rome! repent, repent. Listen to my voice and return to God. If you do not he will abandon you entirely. You will be obliged to return to him soon, but over a path strewn with thorns. The year 1874 is the year of God's wrath."

This man was arrested as insane, but he was proved by the Florentine authorities to be in his right mind, and was consequently set at liberty again. Without being a Jeremiah it is still easy to predict coming misfortunes to Italy. This man has created quite a sensation in Florence, and wherever he goes, a crowd follows his steps."—Catholic Review.

LONG SERMONS.—When the disciples in Troas came together to break bread, "on the first day of the week," we are informed that Paul preached to them, "and continued his speech until midnight (Acts 20: 7). "We know some," says Matthew Henry, "that would have reproached Paul for this as a long-winded preacher, that tired his hearers." We do not think it would be hard in our day to find some ready to charge him with the same thing.

Whether a sermon in church or an article in a paper seems long or short depends very much on the importance of the theme discussed, the manner of its presentation, and the physical, mental and moral condition of the hearer and reader. "Some men's sermons are always shortest," says Prof. Townsend. "There is much mystery in this, but the length of sermons is in propostion to interest. Some sermons are long after twelve and a half minutes; others are short after one and a half hours. Eternity, if it had an end would be very short in paradise.—Advent Herald.

HOME AND HEALTH.

POISONED BY TOBACCO.

Young papas who luxuriate in cigars and pipes, might take warning from a distressing circumstance which has recently occurred in Brooklyn.

The petted four-year old child of a friend of ours, a few days since amused himself with making cigarettes of the paper which lined his father's tobacco-box, and smoked them, in imitation of papa. Suddenly he exclaimed: "Me smoke too much; me sick." A blue line was discovered round his mouth, and the doctor who was sent for in haste, pronounced him poisoned with the essential oil of tobacco, with which the paper had become impregnated.

For four days the little fellow lingered between life and death, unable to retain any nourishment, with fixed eyes, quite delirious, and, as I write, scarcely a hope of saving his life remains.

Should he die, how will his father in future regard the foolish and hurtful habit which, for an indulgence in a selfish and doubtful pleasure, has brought such sudden destruction upon one so dear to him?

And yet how many fathers, and mothers too, all over the land, are steadily teaching their children by example, if not precept, worse things than this! Things which, if the almost miraculously exerted grace of God does not interfere to restrain, must end in the destruction not only of the bodies but also of the souls for whom now they so tenderly care.—N. Y. Witness.

LIGHT FOOD.

People often speak of hygienic diet, of grains, fruits, and vegetables, as light food. Now what does common sense and reason dictate in this matter? The camel, the elephant, the horse, the ox, and the swift-footed deer, are all of them graminivorous, and by habit and nature opposed to the use of meat in any form; and these animals are the strongest of the animal races, or we should not use them as beasts of burden. Who would urge any of these noble animals to stimulate their systems with cups of hot tea or coffee, or quids of tobacco, or slices of pork or beef, or glasses of brandy or rum? Surely this would be absurd. Who, then, will say that the diet which pleases the wolf and the lion is superior to that which nourishes the horse and the elephant? Which of these possesses the noblest powers, the wolf or the horse? the lion or the elephant? the leopard or the camel? Which would be most useful to man? And would any strength be added to the strong animals by giving them what is called strong food, that is, highly seasoned food, meats, grease, spices, etc.? Nay, you will say, such habits would spoil these noble animals, and would degrade and weaken them.—Health Reformer.

HOUSE VERMIN.—Cockroaches are the plague of many housekeepers, and yet a little Paris green is death to them. Keep it in a common flour dredging box, label it Poison, and apply it weekly to their haunts. Red bugs or chinch bugs may also be dispersed and utterly routed, with this remedy; and both cockroaches and bed-bugs will flee from powdered borax. Travelers should always carry a paper of borax in their bags, and sprinkle it under and over their pillows, if they fear they shall be food to the last named wretches. Sprigs of wormwood will drive away large black ants; and none of them, whether black, brown or red, relish wintergreen, tansy, Paris green, cayenne or kerosene; so if they invade our pantries we can, by a judicious application of some one of these articles, make the premises too unpleasant for them. Fly paper should be kept around the house as early as the middle of May. Put it in every open window, and thus destroy every intruder.—Country Gentleman.

THE WAY TO HEALTH.—The only true way to health is that which common sense dictates to man. Live within the bounds of reason. Eat moderately, drink temperately, avoid excess in anything, and preserve a conscience "void of offence."

Some men eat themselves to death, some wear out their lives by indolence, and some by over-exertion; others are killed by the doctors, while not a few sink into the grave under the effects of vicious and beastly practices. All the medicines in creation are not worth a farthing to a man who is constantly and habitually violating the laws of his own nature. All the medical science in the world cannot save him from a premature grave. With a suicidal course of conduct he is planting the seeds of decay in his own constitution, and accelerating the destruction of his own life.—Health Reformer.

FIRE WATER.—"Ten gallons of kerosene, three pounds of potash, one ounce of strychnine, mixed with soft water." It was according to this cheerful, not to say convivial formula, that a quantity of "whiskey" seized last week in Newton, Mass., was compounded, the recipe having also been found in the possession of the unfortunate dealer. If you want "gin," add quantum sufficit of oil of juniper! The mystery is that men who drink this diabolical fluid do not drop down stone dead at once.

Now, as moths lay their eggs mostly in June, that evidently is the best time for making an onslaught upon them. Take out every article of fur or woolen, give a thorough shaking and whipping, a long exposure to hot sun, if practicable, and another dressing with the switch before storing them. Put salt and scotch snuff under the edges of the carpets. Fumigate the drawers and closets with tobacco. On returning the articles to their places, put small branches of cedar or distribute little packages of camphor gum among them.

REST IN JESUS.

GEO. B. LEE.

Oh, rest in Jesus, troubled soul,
Think not of toil, and sigh
Because of troublous waves that roll
Around thy barque so high;
Directly now the dawn of day
Is gleaming in the east;
The Lord of glory soon shall say,
"Come, children, to the feast."

Oh, rest in Jesus; doubt no more
His faithfulness and love;
Oh, trust his grace, and he will pour
Rich blessings from above.
Fret not because of wicked men;
From their devices flee;
'Tis but a little while, and then
"The wicked shall not be."

Oh, rest in Jesus; meekly wait
A few more weeks, or days;
And then we'll pass the golden gate,
And songs of victory raise.
The New Jerusalem from heaven
In glory shall come down;
And all who have their sins forgiven,
Shall then receive a crown.

This earth, restored to purity,
Shall be the saint's delight;
Then peace and immortality
Shall supercede the night.
Oh, glorious rest! oh, blessed day!
We welcome thee with joy;
Keep us, oh Father, guard our way,
That nought our hopes destroy.

WILL CHRIST COME ON THE TENTH DAY OF THE SEVENTH MONTH?

R. H. BATEMAN.

A strong belief in the affirmative of the above question has naturally led many of God's dear children, who, like Simeon and Anna of old, were just and devout, and who have waited for the full "consolation of Israel," to continually look forward to the "tenth day of the seventh month," as the only day in the year when Christ would, to "them that look for him, appear the second time, without sin unto salvation."

If there is any one principle to be admired in christian character it is "honesty," actuated by a conscientious motive of what is right. If good brethren honestly believe the Lord will come on the "tenth day of the seventh month," and publicly proclaim it to the world, they are only bringing forth the fruit of their faith on this one point. They are honest with themselves and with their fellow men, so far as their faith is concerned, and this honesty every one ought to respect, who recognizes the principles of individual rights and privileges. But while we admire the man's honesty, we may have just cause to deplore the result. I am also honest when I say that I believe the proclaiming to the world of the definite day of our Lord's return has been a very serious hindrance to the advancement of the glorious truth that Jesus is soon coming. Men are not angels, and a plain fact is not fiction.

As a people, or "sect that is every where spoken against," we know it is true that in almost every place where we have held forth the plain word of God to the people, our influence has been materially injured, and the word of God rejected, by their knowledge of the fact that thirty years ago, we expected and taught the Lord would come on a certain day; and some of our members have since set forth different times when the end would come. And when we have tried to reason with men, and show them from the Holy Scriptures the "nature of man," "the destiny of the wicked," "the saints' inheritance," and the fulfillment of prophecy, showing the fearfully close proximity we are in to the great judgment day, and proved our position step by step, with a "thus saith the Lord," while a few were willing to admit the force of our position, and come out and acknowledge it before the world, many would reject it and say, "Although we cannot meet your argument, yet we know of a plain, positive fact, that happened thirty years ago, that did meet it, and overthrew it most successfully, and it has met it ever since, and these facts are better than your well arranged theories." There is no use in crying for spilled milk, but we ought to learn not to upset the bowl again. If we once burn our hands by carelessly handling fire, we should be more careful in the future. I am willing, yea, I esteem it a great pleasure, as well as privilege, to "go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach;" for, if I suffer with him, I shall also reign with him; but I do not wish to promulgate an error, and then, when persecutions arise therefrom, turn it off upon Christ, and say it is his reproach we are bearing. It is acting too much like Bruin, when he burned his nose smelling of the hot tea-kettle, and then conceiving a sudden attachment for it, hugged it with all his might. I would not speak lightly upon this subject, for it is of too serious a nature.

I am aware that many of our noble and staunch old veterans, who have been, and still are, those of them who are yet alive, strong pillars in the church, "strengthening the weak hands, and confirming the feeble knees," and whose wisdom and superior judgment I profoundly respect, that they have been, and are yet, earnest advocates that the Lord will come on the "tenth day of the seventh month," as well as some who, like myself, are still young and in the prime of life. We are commanded to "prove all things," and "hold fast that which is good."

Question. Can the definite day theory, that the Lord will come on the "tenth day of the seventh month," be proved from the Scriptures? If it can, then let us have it, and let us preach it, and let us all meekly and patiently bear the reproach, for then it would be the reproach of Christ and not of error. If it cannot be proved from the Scriptures, then we have no right to preach or publish it in any way, and in fact no right to believe it, and consequently we ought not to gather to ourselves unnecessary reproach to bear, thereby hindering our work for Christ, and a great stumbling block to many would be removed. I shall enter into a detailed argument from Scriptural premises bearing on the question, that all may see that the conclusions are just and legitimate.

The year of Christ's birth was not known to any one before he was born, until the angel told his mother, and she communicated it to her husband, and the parents of John the Baptist. Yet the Jews were expecting their Messiah at the time he came, whether we place his coming at his birth or baptism, and their reason for expecting him then was the prophecy of Daniel given in full numbers; yet they knew not just where to begin the computation of those years; so of course they could not tell just where they ended. Their knowledge of this prophecy was the reason why they went out in such vast multitudes to John's preaching and baptism; and had Christ appeared in the manner they expected he would, as a mighty king and conqueror, the whole Jewish nation would have flocked to his standard. The day of his birth was not foretold in any way, nor was it known unto his parents until the very day itself, otherwise it stands to reason, that previous arrangements and accommodations would have been made.

We now come to that which is used as one argument to establish the fact of the coming of the Lord on the "tenth day of the seventh month." It is from analogy and precedent. On this platform, I am willing in the fear of God to fully commit myself, and if any one will legitimately prove the affirmative to the above question, from analogy and precedent established on Scripture facts, bearing directly on the question, I stand pledged to adopt it. 1 Cor. 15: 3, 4 is chosen as the base of the argument. It reads thus: "For I delivered unto you first of all, that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." The Scriptures here referred to are the Old Testament Scriptures, as the New Testament was not written at the time Paul refers to them in the context, when he preached this to them in person.

Question. Did any of the prophets ever foretell that Christ must die for our sins? Yes: read Isa. 53rd, especially last clause of the 8th verse. "For the transgression of my people was he stricken." Did they tell the way in which Christ Jesus was to die? Yes. Isa. 53: 6. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all . . . and he bare the sin of many." Then as Christ had the iniquity of us all laid upon him, and also bear the sin of many; then a curse must rest upon him, just as much as a heavy load would rest upon the shoulders of any man upon whom the burden was laid to be borne for others. Now read the law Moses gave. Deut. 21: 22, 23. "And if any man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree, his body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day, for he that is hanged is accursed of God." Now read the proof Paul gives us thereof. Gal. 3: 13. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree."

Thus we see that Christ actually died on the cross for our sins, according to the Old Testament Scriptures. They also give in detail all the various features of the tragic scene of his crucifixion. Let us notice some of them. Isa. 53. "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed . . . He was oppressed and he was afflicted; yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment, . . . and he was numbered with the transgressors." Now turn to the 22nd Ps. "And they that see me laugh me to scorn, they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, He trusted in the Lord that he would deliver him, let him deliver him, seeing that he delighted in him . . . The assembly of the wicked have inclosed me, they pierced my hands and my feet; . . . they look and stare upon me, they part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture . . . My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Again 34th Ps. "He keepeth all his bones, not one of them is broken." These prophetic predictions were all fulfilled to the letter on the day of his death, as the New Testament proves them true by its record of the event, so that Christ did die according to the Scriptures.

But let us go still farther. Was the year of his death foretold? I believe it was by Daniel. "And after threescore and two weeks, shall Messiah be cut off." Dan. 9: 26. Because the Jews did not know at what time to begin the sixty-two weeks or four hundred and thirty-four years, is no argument against the prophecy itself. The fact of Christ's death, his being "cut off," gives us the key to unlock the secret so long hidden, of knowing where to begin its date by simply computing four hundred and thirty four years backwards from the time of his death.

We now come to an important point. Was the day of Christ's death foretold in any way? I believe it was. How? In Type. What Type? The slaying of the paschal lamb at the passover as recorded in Ex. 12th. We all understand that lamb and its blood, to be a type of Christ and his blood; for when the destroying angel saw the blood of this lamb on the lintel and door-posts of the Israelites' dwellings, he passed over them; and if this blood saved them temporarily at that time, what will the blood of Christ, as the great antitype, do? It will cleanse us from all sin, and save us with an eternal savation.

Proof. Christ observed and kept the passover. The beginning of the Jewish day was at 6 o'clock in the evening, consequently the night was the first part of the day of twenty-four hours. Matt. 26: 18. "And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The Master saith, My time is at hand. I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples . . . Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve, as they did eat, he said, verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me . . . And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples and said, Take, eat, this is my body," etc. Paul in 1 Cor. 11: 23, says, "the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it and said, Take, eat, this is my body," etc. Now, we all know that Jesus was crucified and died the same day on which he was betrayed, Jewish time, and he was betrayed on the night of the passover. Thus the fact of the fulfillment of Jesus' words, when he says, "My time is at hand," proves that the passover foretold in type, the day of his death. Again, he was buried according to the Scriptures. Isa. 53: 9. "And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death." This was fulfilled by his being laid in Joseph's new tomb. "He rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." Ps. 16: 10. "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." Peter, in Acts 2nd, quotes this as being fulfilled at Christ's resurrection. Rising on "the third day" says one? Yes, that is all right. When the Pharisees asked to see a sign, Jesus told them, "There shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas; for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." This was also a type they had in the "Book of Jonah," and Christ referred them to it. But the prophet Hosea speaks about it in plain language. Hosea 6: 2. "After two days will he revive us; in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight." Thus we see how exactly "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures."

Question. Will Christ come the second time according to the Scriptures? Yes. While Paul had only the Old Testament to prove his position from on the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, we have both the Old and the New Testament Scriptures to appeal to, to prove how Christ will come the second time. Will Jesus ever come back again. John 14: 2. "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself." How will Jesus come back? Acts 1: 11. "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which was taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." 1 Thess. 4: 16. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout." Matt. 25: 31. "The Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him." Will we have timely notice given us in any way of his coming? Matt. 24: 32. "Now learn a parable of the fig-tree. When his branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you this generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." Luke 21: 28. "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." How will Christ come, slowly, or suddenly? Matt. 24: 27. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Do the Scriptures foretell the year of Christ's second coming? I believe they do. Dan. 8: 14. "And he said unto me, Unto 2300 days (years), then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." Dan. 12: 12. "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. But go thou thy way till the end be, for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days" (years).

But whether we know the exact year of our christian era, when these two periods of time end, is another question. We may think we can arrive at a correct knowledge of the time, when the last of the 2300 and 1335 years end; but our thinking so does not make a positive fact of it, as past experience amply proves. We may endeavor to establish the year when these two periods end, by apparently well authenticated arguments; yet we can never prove those arguments true. There is but one thing that can ever absolutely prove the last year of these prophetic numbers; and that is the coming of Christ himself, for that, and that only will settle the question forever as a positive fact. God has not so plainly told us of the exact years, where we can, without the shadow of a doubt, or the possibility of a failure, put on the measuring rods of 2300 and 1335, that reach to the resurrection; if he had, we should never have been disappointed.

Though some of our good brethren have had faith as firm as the rocks of Gibraltar, that the Lord would come on some certain year in times past; yet the positive fact that Jesus did not come the year they expected him, compelled them to admit they were mistaken in the year. With such precedents before us, which are facts, how can any one stand up and declare positively that the Lord Jesus will come in some certain year, which they may name. Let us remember that no man is yet infallible, though the Pope does claim the title. If well meaning brethren have arguments to advance upon the probability of Jesus' coming on a certain year, then advance them as such, leaving it an open question, to be settled by the onward march of time, or the coming of the Lord; and let our zeal be according to knowledge and not personal desires.

A young man in the full bloom of health and strength, with a sound constitution and strong vitality, very naturally expects to live to a good old age. But when the frosts of many winters have silvered his raven locks into snowy whiteness, and the infirmities of old age have bowed that once erect and noble form, while his elastic tread has given place to the feeble and tottering gait as he leans upon the top of his staff, his expectations are changed. He now expects to die, and that soon. Would he tell you of a certainty, "I know I shall die this year, or next year?" This year, and next year might pass by, and he be still alive; and yet he might as confidently continue to say the same thing, year after year, as one rolled away and another came round, until at last he did die. "Well," says one, "he would hit the year at last, anyway." "Exactly, but it was all guesswork, and this would destroy the confidence of the people in his saneness of mind, and they would say that "the poor old man has had himself dead every year for these ten years, more or less, and he is still alive, and liable to remain so for some time to come." But should he talk to his friends in a different manner, and say unto them, "Behold me as I am, an old man full of years, weak and feeble, laboring under the infirmities that continue to increase upon me from time to time. Think you as you look upon me, with my head blossomed for the grave, that I shall be able to live much longer?" The verdict of every man must be, "Truly he cannot live much longer, but a few years at farthest; yea, liable now to die at any moment." Thus it it is with the subject of the Lord's speedy coming to judgment. Let us go before the world with God's holy word in one hand, and history in the other; and then, with the personal knowledge men have of the present condition of the world, which they derive from the secular press, we can plainly present to their minds the true condition of the world as it now is, and the plain, positive testimony of the Lord concerning its doom. We can then effectually show them the fearfully close proximity we are in of the terrible judgments of God, that are now overhanging the world like a cloud, gathering its sable folds in thick darkness, threatening every moment to be riven by the thunderbolt of God's wrath, as Jesus shall descend like the lightnings flash from heaven to earth, clothed with the immortal glory of God and with "flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Again. Do the Scriptures foretell in any way, the definite day of any year when Christ will return?

(To be concluded.)

GOD'S LONG-SUFFERING.

Were there but eight, only eight, saved? There were thousands, millions sought. Nor is it justice to God to forget how long a period of patience and preaching and warning and compassion preceded that dreadful deluge. Long before the lightnings flashed from angry heavens; long before the thunders rolled along dissolving skies; long before the clouds rained down death; long before the floor and solid pavement of this earth, under the prodigious agencies at work broke up like the deck of a leaking ship, and the waters rushed from below to meet the waters from above, and sink a guilty world; long before the time when the ark floated away, by tower and town, and those crowded hill-tops where frantic groups had clustered, and, amid prayers and curses and shrieks and shouts, hung out their signals of distress,—very long before this, God had been calling an impenitent world to repentance. Had they no warning in Noah's preaching? Was there nothing to alarm them in the very sight of the ark, as story rose upon story? and nothing in the sound of those ceaseless hammers to waken all but the dead? It was not till mercy's arm grew weary ringing the warning bell that God "poured out fury" upon them. I appeal to the story of this awful judgment.

True, for forty days it rained incessantly, and for one hundred and fifty days more the waters prevailed on the earth; but while the period of God's justice is reckoned by days, the period of his long-sufferance was drawn out into years, and there was a truce of one hundred and twenty years between the first stroke of the bell and the first crash of the thunder. Noah grew gray preaching repentance. The ark stood useless for years, a huge laughing-stock for the scoffer's wit; it stood till it was covered with marks of age, and its builders with the contempt of the world; and many a sneer had those men to bear, as, pointing to the serene heavens above, and an empty ark below, the question was put: "Where is the promise of his coming?" Most patient God! Then, as now, thou wert slow to punish—waiting to be gracious.—Selected by H. P. Sikes.

DEAD TO THE WORLD.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Is not every true believer crucified with Christ? Yes; and he is dead to sin, and dead to the world. Then what follows? What should we expect of or from the world? Does the world choose dead men to fill high offices and occupy honorable positions? Not if they know the fact that the man is dead. But why should dead men be so anxious for the favor and respect of the world? Why seek the friendship or applause of the world? The scion cut from one tree to be grafted into another, has no connection any longer with its original stick, but derives its life from the new tree. So with the christian. He was cut out of "the mild olive tree" and is engrafted into the true Vine, which is Christ. Now if we are in Christ, let us show that we are dead to the world—cut off from it, and let us have no further fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. A dead man is not supposed to be sensitive. Neither should we be very sensitive to the scoffs and frowns of the world, or think it a strange thing if they separate us from their company, or cast out our name as evil for the Son of man's sake.

The corn of wheat falls into the ground and dies, before it can bring forth fruit. The professor of religion who still holds to the world, and seeks its favor, friendship, applause and honor, is but a barren tree cumbering the ground. "Seekest thou great things for thyself? (In this world). Seek them not." Strangers and pilgrims are not eligible to office in the land of their temporary sojourn. Is it hard for you, dear reader, to give up all your aspirations, hopes, and worldly ambition? If you would run the race with confidence, "not uncertainly," you must lay aside all these weights. "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "When Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3: 1, 4.

THE PRESENT CRISIS.

When I look up, and behold the blackening heavens above concealing from us the throne of the Eternal, but revealing, through chinks and crevices, some glances of the frowning countenance of him who sits upon the throne, and see the clouds still gathering, in which lie sleeping the thunders and the lightnings of Jehovah's ire, ready in a moment to be let loose, not only on the open transgressors of his holy law, but on the open and obstinate neglecters of duty, more especially "at such a time as this"—such a terrible crisis as the present in the destiny of the world and its inhabitants—oh, it is this that alarms me; it is this that appals me; it is this which frightens me; it is this which, at times, almost stuns me into utter insensibility!

Why, in the very midst of such a mighty crisis, threatening daily, almost hourly, to precipitate itself into a catastrophe which holds out no prospect of recovery, to be necessitated to turn aside from it, by our own doings and voluntary choice; and, in regard to it, allow ourselves to sink down into a state of apathy and unconcern, sleep and slumber; relieved, it may be, only by some airy dreams and baseless visions—were nothing wiser and nothing better than cooly or indifferently to go to sleep at the mast-head, when the sails are rending into shreds, and the tempest is mournfully sounding through the shrouds the death-knell of all on board; nothing wiser and nothing better than to lie down and sleep on the very edge of the crater of a volcano, when the earthquakes' rumblings underneath, and the frequent jets of sulphurous smoke and burning ashes above, are loudly pealing the alarm that the grand eruption is at hand which may upheave the whole mountain from its foundations, and hurl the hapless sleeper a thousand fathoms down into the depths below. Why, the stark, staring incongruity of all this, to say nothing of its sinfulness, is such that I would not be in the condition of any of those represented by these sleepers, no, not for a thousand worlds.

Never, never since the world began, were the forces of evil so multitudinous, so universally diffused, so completely panoplied in choicest armor—offensive and defensive,—so plausible in device and policy, so cunning in strategem, so satanic in subtlety, so exasperating in insolence and scorn, so gigantic, and apparently resistless, in power. But all this goes for nothing in the estimation of the enlightened and firm believer in the eternal verities of Jehovah's holy oracles!

Nay, more. Bad as things now may be, they may yet become infinitely worse. And that such is the probability, as regards the future, is my own decided conviction and belief. But what of all that to him who calmly and securely rests on the immovable rock of Jehovah's promises?

Though to the eye of sense or of finite understanding it might look as if the powers of evil now at work really threatened to extinguish every luminary in the firmament of divine truth, and leave the world, morally and religiously, in a state of darkness and of chaos as complete as it would be physically, if sun, moon, and stars were wiped away from the canopy of heaven, not even then would the true believer in the Bible—that blessed book of books—be for a moment staggered. He could still cheerfully hold on his way, and exultingly sing—

"Faith, mighty faith, God's promise sees,
And looks on that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries, 'It shall be done.'"

And done it shall be assuredly, in God's own good time. When the great world-wide crisis shall have reached the zenith of its development, and the hope of all but the true believer has given place to the wildest despair, as if the Lord had forsaken or forgotten the world and his own along with it, then, oh, then, will be his time for effectual interposition—

"Just at the last distressing hour
The Lord displays delivering power;
The mount of danger is the place
Where we shall see surprising grace."

Surprising grace, indeed! For then will he, who is King and Governor among the nations, and, as such, has never for a moment relaxed his hold of the reins of mediatorial government, in ways of mercy and of judgment inscrutable to us now, usher this sin-laden and sin-distracted world, purged and purified, into scenes of glory surpassing fable.

And when the great design, purposed from all eternity, shall thus be consummated—when creation, providence, and redemption shall be brought to their final issue—when the decrees and dispensations of the Almighty shall be triumphantly vindicated—when Satan, the grand adversary of God and man, with his rebel angels and the spirits of the incorrigible unbeliever and hardened reprobate, with sin, and death, and hell, shall be cast forever into the bottomless pit of perdition—when the mediatorial kingdom, or kingdom of grace, consisting of all the members of the redeemed church—a great multitude, praised be God! as represented to the holy seer in Apocalyptic vision, which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds, and people and tongues—with souls and bodies glorified, and reigning with Christ as kings and priests, shall be delivered as trophies of victory to the Father—the former, to remain everlasting monuments to the praise and glory of God's power and justice, and immeasurable hatred of sin; the latter, eternal monuments to the praise and glory of God's love and mercy, and the inexhaustible treasures of his wisdom and grace;—then shall stability and righteousness, harmony and peace, be restored, and forever perpetuated through the rejoicing universe of God!

Then shall it be conspicuously and eternally made manifest to all holy intelligences that the great Creator originally made all things for himself—for the illustration of his own glory, more especially in connection with the holiness and boundless felicity of his redeemed creatures—that he is, in the absolute fulness of its significancy, the "All in all"—and that, in the triumphant issue of all his plans and purposes, and, most signally, in the exaltation and glorification of countless myriads out of the wreck and ruin of the fall, he shall himself be infinitely and forever glorified! And then, if through believing acceptance of the offered salvation we are privileged to secure a valid title-deed to an inheritauce so transcendant in glory and infinite in duration, through the incarnation and victorious sufferings and atoning death of our adored Immanuel—the second Adam—the Lord from heaven—we shall, as regards our own eternal interests, have no reason to regret, rather, in some true and important sense, shall have abundant reason to rejoice, that the first Adam once fell, and that for us the cool shades of Paradise lost have been blessedly exchanged for the never-ending sunshine of Paradise regained.—Prophetic Times.

LAZY CHRISTIANS.

Our churches have a vast host of people in them that do nothing at all. We have a large number of people in communion with us whose names might almost as well be struck out of the church book for all the good they do. It is true they subscribe to the minister's support, and so they serve God by proxy. They have paid their pew rents; and that is all they intend to do. They sit under the gospel ministry; they do sit under it, and that is all they do. They neither walk, nor live, nor act under it, but sit there like dead things, although they be alive. "Nay," says another large portion of the church, "we do not like people who are lazy and idle. We serve God, but you do not expect us to serve him to such an extent as some enthusiasts would wish. We, sir, are for doing things according to rule and rote. We find out our duty, and do it, but take care never to do any more." Ay, that is another class of men, the use of which I never could see.

And there is another class who say, "Oh, every man ought to serve God as much as he can; sir, I used to do so and so"; and they are continually delighting you with the story of what they used to do. That kind of tale is current everywhere. The minister says, "Ah, I used to preach often. Ah, I used to do so and so." The Sunday school teacher always used to be at his class early, and he used to be so attentive to his scholars; but he thinks he has done so much that it is now time for him to lie still and retire from the business a little, and let some one else take a turn. And so a large part of our troops are lost in the day of battle, some of them because they have fought so well in other battles that they think they have no need to fight again; others, because they will not fight at all; and others, because they do not see that the commanding officer commands them to rush to the battle; and therefore they tarry behind, whilst those who delight in the law of the Lord bear all the brunt of the fight.—Spurgeon.

—Happy is the man that findeth wisdom.

2 KINGS 5: 40.

"There is death in the pot."

J. P. MARQUAND.

In the 15th Exodus, during the march of the Israelites, they came to Marah, and the waters there were bitter. Moses cried to the Lord, and he showed him a tree which when cast into the waters they were made sweet. In 2 Kings 2: 21, there were also impure waters, and Elisha the prophet threw in some salt and healed the waters; and in our text we are told they were preparing food in a pot, and some one by mistake put in some poisoned herbs. Elisha called for meal, threw it in, and made the food good and wholesome. Here you see there was a remedial agent brought in which effected a cure; and now we desire to draw a moral from this story, that we must overcome evil with good; overcome hate with love; get wisdom for ignorance, strength for weakness, and life for death. The people could not drink the bitter waters in the wilderness, but God could sweeten them by natural means and make them good. The people could not eat the food from the pot because of the poisoned herbs in it, but God could instruct his prophet to throw in a remedy to make it wholesome.

It is a fact that we live in a world of sin, sorrow and death,—a world of trial, pain and suffering; and none of the human race have been exempt. We are under the law of sin and death, as set forth in Rom. 8: 2; and the only remedial agent capable of giving us comfort and hope is Jesus Christ, "who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." There is no fear that any one will make too much of Christ. The more we look at him and grow into his image, the more happy and useful we become, and the less our attachment to earthly things. The more spiritual our minds, the less we have of carnality and worldly wisdom. Let us bless God for this tree of life (Christ) which sweetens all the bitterness of this transitory and fallen world. He is the only agent through whom comes peace and quietude. If any one attempts to climb up some other way, the Bible says he is a thief and a robber.

All those persons who have experience, and are observing, will trace all evil back to its introduction into this world; and the curse is seen and felt everywhere. Go to the mineral kingdom; there we find all the deadly articles, such as strychnia, arsenic, calomel, etc. Go to the vegetable kingdom, and we find the poppy, from which is extracted opium, the deadly nightshade, etc., etc. Go to the animal kingdom, and there is the snake, whose bite is almost certain death. The tiger and other ravenous beasts, and also man and woman when under the influence of evil passions, will exhibit jealousy, hatred, malice, envy, backbiting, licentiousness, theft, treachery and murder. These things all illustrate the truth of our text that "there is death in the pot."

Here we see the deep necessity of a remedial agent, and this is given to man for his profit. This agent is the Holy Ghost, which was poured out upon the world eighteen hundred years since, and has never left us. This Spirit was called by our Savior "the promise of the Father." Acts 1: 4. Jesus, true to his word, on the day of Pentecost sent the Holy Ghost down, and it filled the house like a rushing mighty wind. Its effects were soon seen in the quickening of God's children and the conviction of the impenitent, and they cried out, "What shall we do?" Just such a baptism is needed all over this earth, and especially in large wicked cities where men get together to do mischief and create evil. The office work of this Spirit is to arouse men and women from a state of carnality and sin, discover to them their hearts as they are laid out in the Scriptures, full of evil and idolatry, if by any means they may find the antidote or remedy, which is Jesus Christ.

We therefore urge every sin-sick, weary, heavy-laden soul to come to this fountain, no matter how high, how deep, how broad your sins are,—come just as you are, and ask for grace and love; bathe in those healing waters which God hath opened for sin and uncleanness, and plead importunately, and never relinquish until the blessing comes. It was said of Daniel the prophet that he prayed twenty-one days before he obtained his request; and when the angel came to him he said, I was sent to you on the first day you commenced to pray, but was hindered while on my way twenty-one days. Dan. 10. God hears our prayer when we commence, but may defer the blessing for a time in order to try our faith and patience; and he may also see that we are not ready to receive it, and thus the delay. But what did queen Esther say? It is not lawful to go before the king under thirty days; but I will go. I can but perish if I go; for if I stay away I know that death awaits me.

The law of God demands perfect integrity and rectitude. It gives no lee-way for error or sin. Its claims are imperious and exacting. It knows no mercy, but cries for stern justice. It follows us wheresoever we go. If we go up into heaven, there it shines around the throne of God. If we go down into hell, it is there.

Sinner, what will you do? Ah! there is no place of rest or comfort except in "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." In the time of the deluge there was but one place of safety (the ark) from the angry waters. So now when fiery judgments come, there is but one safe refuge—the blessed and adorable Redeemer.

— The Bible anchors in the heart. Its truths are justified by logic; will bear the sharpest criticism; grow bright by keen assaults, but do not rely upon argument for their support.

POLITICAL SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Scriptural signs of any period, are events foretold in the Bible to transpire at that time. There were predictions in the Old Testament of events to occur at the time of Christ's first manifestation, and the signs indicating that that period had come were the presence of those foretold events. So important was a belief that the events then transpiring were the signs predicted, that a rejection of them caused a rejection of the Messiah. So it was at the destruction of Jerusalem; only those fled from the city who received the events then transpiring as signs of its overthrow. Men cannot trifle with any part of God's word with impunity. When he foretells events as signs of any special providence, he gives such signs because they are necessary for the safety of men; and if they do not use them for that purpose, they suffer the results.

It is easy for men to accept of signs as tokens of coming good, as precursors of their triumph and glory, but it is hard to convince them of signs of their defeat and punishment. It is, therefore, natural for men, when a prophetic announcement is made that a change is about to be experienced in their condition, which is unfavorable to them, to reject the evidences and signs of its approach; while those who anticipate advantages by the change, readily receive any evidences of its coming. The history of the past proves the truthfulness of this statement, and also that faith in the signs of coming changes always resulted in deliverance and salvation, while unbelief has invariably proved a snare.

Political signs of the present time are therefore the predicted relations, conditions, and purposes of the nations at this time. We can readily ascertain what predictions of the nations belong to the present period, because they are arranged in consecutive order, so that we may know those belonging to the present time, by ascertaining how many of the series have been fulfilled in the past, just as we can tell what day of the week it is by learning how many of its days have passed. By this rule we see that predictions, giving Babylonian history, do not give the signs of the present time, for they were fulfilled long ago. Neither can the predictions of Persian or Grecian history give us the present signs, for they are also past; but it must be prophecies relating to Roman events which will give us the political signs of the present times. As the prophetical history of the Roman power is divided into several distinct periods, it will be necessary to ascertain which of those periods we occupy, to know what predictions give the signs of our times.

Rome, during its first period, is represented as possessing a strong central government, dictating other powers as their arbitor. In the second period it is presented as being divided into distinct kingdoms, among which a peculiar one would arise with the ruling power of church and state united, becoming the leading, controlling power of the Roman kingdoms, and making war on the church of Christ. In the third and last period, Rome is described as having no central, controlling kingdom united with its church as an arbitrating power; but the kingdoms are represented as enjoying a kind of equality, partially allied, and partially independent and antagonistic. Their union is formed by mingling themselves with the seed of men; that is, by intermarriage of the royal families, for the purpose of "holding the winds," or preventing war. The power produced by this unreal union is necessarily unreal, but is the only arbitrating political power of Rome, to take the place of the former head-power, called the beast; and this is therefore called the "image" or unreal beast. The very last days of Rome's political rule must be the same exactly, whether presented by Daniel or John, illustrated in the same way or differently. Daniel presents the same Roman kings, and in the same position, when Christ comes, as does the Revelator. Daniel represents those kings at the end as united in a precarious, unsafe alliance, and not one kingdom ruling over the others as formerly. John presents them as forming a quadruple alliance to restrain the war element, until the last of his servants should be sealed, and the end should come. He also represents this last segment of Roman power as an image beast, existing in appearance and name, being unreal, superficial, without the constituent elements of an imperial government.

Where are we in the great prophetic week? How many of its days have passed? Can we tell? Yes. We have come to its Saturday evening. The sun is going down, and the shades of night are fast gathering around us. Babylon's day was spent in golden splendors, and ended in inglorious and everlasting defeat. Persia's day dawned with triumphant victories, and rolled its imperial car through the world in blood and tears, closing with expiation for its dark deeds of oppression and debauchery, by an infamous and eternal overthrow. Grecia's day rolled up its light from the west, and flashed the reflected rays from the brazen armor of unbroken ranks of invincible warriors across the seas, and through the cities, wherever there were thrones and spears to defend them. Its clock ticked away the hours of terrible battle scenes, while the air was rent with dying agony and crushed hopes, until the rays of the setting sun lingered in desolated council-chambers and uninhabited palaces. The Roman morning dawned at its prophetic hour, when the full fledged eagle suddenly spread its wings and lifted itself far above the waving branches of the wolf's native bower, and swept around the world in imperial and priestly grandeur, filling prisons with its captives, and martyrs, graves with its victims. The morning hours filled the long roll of royalty with earth's mightiest captains, wisest counsellors, vilest libertines, and most heartless tyrants; while the midday brought earthquakes, thunderings, lightnings, and tempests of blood. But her sun is declining. The shadows of her ancient monuments, vacant palaces and new-made battlements are swiftly extending eastward, and throw a threatening gloom over the revolutionizing masses and the confederating rulers of this generation. The angel hand seems to be writing the mystic sentence, "MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN," upon the palace walls of the Roman kings. Fearfulness has seized them, and they make unparalled efforts to entrench themselves with armies and navies, which it will be impossible to long maintain in peace. So many have laid down the pruning hook, and taken the sword, that the classes have lost their equilibrium, which must inevitably result in bankruptcy, famine, and revolution.

No nation can long continue after the producing classes are reduced below a certain standard, and the nonproducing classes, who have drawn from the national treasury, are increased above that standard. Such a state of things necessarily makes the financial question a vital question for the safety of the government. People will not peacably, long continue to be taxed so as to deprive them of a comfortable support from their earnings; especially when they are educated so as to comprehend the situation. Who is so blind as not to see that the Roman kingdoms are rapidly drifting into these fatal whirlpools. And who has not learned from the prophetic Scriptures that these are the very circumstances foretold, as connected with them at the end? They were to beat their "plowshares into swords," and the rich howl, while the laborers will cry to be avenged, because their wages for reaping the fields have been extorted from them.

The present crisis of war and communism are echoes from the prophetic watch-tower. The daily news of the strange alliances, and mighty efforts of kings to execute long-contemplated plans of the acquisition of dominions,—siezing the "sick man's" possessions, and the holy Father's patrimony of St. Peter, are reprints from the sacred foreshadowings of the last days. The sickening story every where told of governmental factions, intrigues, disloyalty, embezzlement, extortion, defalcations, and political corruption in all classes, is repeating the strain the holy seers expresstd in ancient times, as last-day events. Surely we can say of God's word and its fulfillment in the language of Scripture, "How great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders!" He scatters his signs in the heavens, and spreads them out upon the earth, so that every eye may see and hear God's warning of approaching judgment. The anger of nations, and upheaving of society, and wide-spread disloyalty, loudly proclaim the end at hand. May God anoint our eyes that we may see clearly the signs of the present times, and thus be enabled to escape the terrible destruction that is coming on the earth. May the guiding hand of a loving Savior bring us to the land of safety, where no forewarning signs of coming danger will be needed, and where the proclamation of approaching judgments will never be heard. J. C.

MARRIAGE.—We are desired to give our opinion of Matt. 19: 9, which reads as follows:

"And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery."

This statement of the Savior reads so plainly, that we see no occasion for any comment. All we can say is, believe Jesus means what he says, and be careful not to be found guilty of adultery when Jesus comes, for the Scriptures affirm that no adulterer "shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 6: 9–10. M. G.

ONE BAPTISM.

"There is one body and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, ONE BAPTISM, one God."—EPH 4: 4-6.

As all Bible readers are aware that heavy judgments are declared upon those who add to the word of the Lord, or take from its sacred pages, it follows that those who are public expounders of the Scriptures cannot be too careful in this respect. One little addition or omission might lead to the most disastrous results, like the little leak in the ship causing it to sink in mid ocean. It is often remarked: "The Lord has said what he meant, and meant what he said." This we believe to be strictly true in relation to all points of doctrine and practical duties expressed in the sacred writings. We presume all will admit the correctness of the following statement:—What is not taught in the Bible is not a Bible doctrine.

Should we be justified in putting the word "trine" in the place of "one" in the Scripture at the head of this article, making it read: trine body, trine Spirit, trine hope, trine Lord, trine faith, trine baptism, trine God? Does any one answer, Yes? If so, then of course he would feel justified in discarding the present Bible and making a new one, as the spirits of demons direct.

We believe all who are familiar with the Bible must admit that there is not one word in the whole Book concerning trine baptism, nor an intimation that it was ever practised. Suppose we should teach "trine baptism," and some one should claim such teaching was unscriptural, what should we do in such a case? Give chapter and verse, or admit our mistake. When we call for the passage that speaks of trine baptism, no one can tell where it may be found; but an inspired man rises up and declares by the authority of the Most High, there is but "ONE BAPTISM." Should not such a witness forever put to silence any further teaching about "trine baptism"?

But the inquiry comes, How came trine baptism ever to be administered? Whence its origin? This is certainly an important question, as we find the Scripture stands opposed to the practice. That "trine baptism" was observed by many from about A. D. 130, and onward for several centuries, is a historic fact. We have recently taken considerable pains to find its beginning. We have traced it back to the time of Tertullian, and can find no evidence that any one ever advocated it before MARCION, A. D. 130. His followers were called "Marcionites," hence we read of the "three-fold baptism of the Marcionites."—Homilies, Credner, vol. 3, p. 308; Hagenback's History of Doctrine, vol. 1, p. 196. It is expressly stated that Marcion taught the people to be "baptized three times."—Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, p. 773. As we found the opposite taught in the Sacred Scriptures, then we may expect to find this doctrine of "trine baptism," first taught by Marcion, to be a heresy introduced by Satan to sow discord, and divide the flock of God.

Let us now look into this matter with careful candor, as none of us wish to teach, or practice that which is unscriptural and heretical. We will first give some facts in relation to the religious life of Marcion. Epiphanius says: "He was born at Sinope in Pontus, where his father was a bishop. For some while Marcion lived a retired life, in strict continence."—H. 42, n. 1. p. 302, B. C. D. He went to Hyginus, and tried to become a bishop, but was disappointed. He flourished between A. D. 130 and 160.

Neander says of him: "His endeavor to find the genuine documents of pure original christianity, led him into historical and critical investigations." "The single-hearted Marcion was a zealous enemy of this artificial mode of interpretation. He was on the contrary, a warm adherent of the literal interpretation." "He would not suffer himself to be bound by a general church tradition, because, in his opinion, foreign matter had already mixed itself in such a tradition with pure apostolic christianity. . . . He wished to consider the word of Christ and of his genuine disciples the only valid source of a knowledge of the true gospel." "By his simple and practical turn of mind, he was far removed from that mysticism that delighted in outward pomp; but then he was far removed, also, from that proud, contemplative idealism. His endeavor was here also to bring back the original christian simplicity of the service of God."

The Marcionites were on a par with the strictest christians in their abhorrence of the heathen theatres and public pleasures."

When speaking of the Marcionites, Dr. Lardner says: "It is evident that these people were in general strictly virtuous; that they dreaded sin as the greatest evil and had such a real regard for Christ, as to undergo martyrdom rather than offer incense to idols. They seem indeed to have had a great number of martyrs."—Lardner, Vol. 8, p. 480.

In the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, p. 773, we read: "The rule of manners which Marcion prescribed to his followers was excessively austere." It is said he "had many followers." Epiphanius speaks of the "multitudes of people" who followed him "in Italy, Egypt, Palestina, Arabia, and Syria, in Cyprus, Thebais, Persia, and other places."

Having said thus much in relation to the religious character of Marcion and his followers, we pass to consider his theological views. As before stated, he appears to be the first who taught trine baptism, which was accepted by Tertullian, who opposed him on other heretical views.

The following from Irenæus, who wrote five books in the second century against heresies, will give some idea of Marcion's theology:

"Marcion of Pontus, successor of Cerdon, added to his doctrine with greater assurance; blaspheming him who is declared to be God by the law and the prophets; who, as he says, appears to be author of evil, delighting in war, inconstant, and contrary to himself. But Jesus," he says, "came from the Father, who is superior to the God that made the world. He came into Judea in the time of Pontius Pilate, governor under Tiberius Cæsar. He appeared to them in the form of a man, dissolving the law and the prophets, and all the works of him that made the world. Moreover he mutilated the gospel according to Luke, striking out all that relates to our Lord's nativity, and taking away many things from our Lord's discourses, especially where he speaks of the Creator of this world as his Father; thus delivering to his disciples not the gospel, but a scrap of it. In like manner he curtails the epistles of the apostle Paul, taking away those passages where the apostle plainly speaks of the Creator of the world, as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; and also his quotations from the prophetical writings, that foretell the coming of the Lord. He held that the soul only will be saved; as for the body, it being taken from matter, it is with him incapable of salvation. Beside all these blasphemies, he maintained that Cain and the people of Sodom, and the Ægyptians, and all the nations in general, though they had lived in all manner of wickedness, were saved by the Lord when he descended into hell (or the invisible world, the receptacle of departed spirits); for they came to him, and he took them up into his kingdom. But that Abel, and Enoch, and Noah, and the patriarchs, and the prophets, and other righteous men, who walked with God, and pleased him, did not obtain salvation. For," says he, "they knew their God had been wont to tempt or try them; and they suspected that now a temptation was laid in their way. Therefore they would not come to Jesus, nor believe in him; for which reason," as he says, "their souls remained in hell."—Iren. l. i. c. [al. 29.] p. 106.

Epiphanius also says, that, according to Marcion, "the Lord descended to hell and saved Cain, and Corah, and Dathan, and Abiram, and Esau, and all the nations who did not worship the God of the Jews; but that he left there Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and Moses, and David, and Solomon." To the like purpose Theodoret, that "Cain and the people of Sodom, and other wicked people, came to the Lord Jesus in hell, obtained salvation, and were taken by him into his kingdom; but Abel, and Enoch, and Noah, and the prophets, were not delivered, because they would not come to him."—H. 42. n. iv. p. 305.

Marcion did not believe our Savior was born of a virgin, or born at all. He thought "the Son of God took the exterior form of a man, and appeared as a man, and without being born, or gradually growing up to the full stature of a man, he showed himself at once in Gallilee as a man grown."—Dr. Lardner, Vol. 8, p. 471-2.

Marcion acknowledged Jesus to be Christ, but not the Christ foretold by the Jewish prophets;" hence he believed in two Christs. Dr. Lardner, v. 8, p. 475. Epiphanius says Marcion "taught the transmigration of souls from one body to another."

The Marcionites had a great number of martyrs. It is said they had Marcion "in great veneration." This high esteem for him was caused, no doubt, by his self denial and rigid mode of living. Tertullian speaks of those who followed him in many points, but differed with him in some others. Irenæus says Polycarp led many to give up the heresies of Marcion. Theodoret, also, was the instrument in leading about a thousand Marcionites in his diocese to turn from the errors of their leader; but his heresies continued to spread for centuries, especially the trine baptism.

Neander has well said in his church history: "It is instructive to mark how an endeavor which proceeded from the very depths of christianity, could receive an unchristian turn by means of a gross partiality. It is a warning and a startling circumstance to see a man, whose errors themselves were connected with a spirit of love, only that it was a mistaken spirit, and a man to whom the Christ, who filled his heart, was one and all, misunderstood and called a heretic by most of the christians of his own day." It is said of him, he "was always inclined to push matters to the extreme." Neander goes on to say: "A man of Marcions's character would naturally be induced by opposition only to develope himself more strikingly in his partial views, and to harden himself in them." Hence, being "rejected . . . by the church, he was driven into forming his anti-church dispositions into a firm, determinate system, and founding an independent community." "My fellows in being hated; my fellow-sufferers," was his usual address to his disciples. It is said:—"With Marcion, everything proceeded from the heart." This gave his followers great confidence in his teaching, and increased their esteem for him, and attachment.

So far as we can learn, this was the man who first practised trine immersion. It was certain it did not begin with the apostles; for Paul expressly declares there is "ONE BAPTISM." Which shall we follow, Paul, or Marcion? As Marcion "denied the resurrection of the body," of course he could not understand baptism, and must make it represent something else. We do not see how any one who has a clear view of the signification of baptism, as taught in the Scriptures, could adopt trine immersion. As baptism represents Christ's burial and resurrection, and the resurrection of all the saints; then, if we adopt trine baptism, it would indicate that Christ was buried and raised three times; and that at the time of his second coming he will raise the saints, then bury and raise them the second time, and bury and raise them the third time. This is not true; but we believe it is just as scriptural as trine baptism.

In Robert Robinson's History of Baptism, p. 59, when speaking of "Apostolic Baptism," he says: "There are frequent narrations of the baptism of believers, but not one infant appears in the whole history; . . there is no mention of . . . kneeling in the water; no trine immersion. . . . It belongs to those who practice such additions to say how they came by them, and under what master they serve."

Much more might be said, showing there is no evidence of a single case of trine immersion before the time of Marcion, the noted heretic, A. D. 130. Let us not go back to the theories and practices of old heretics, at this late day, just at the time when our dear Savior is to appear to set up his everlasting kingdom. Remember, the Bible teaches "ONE BAPTISM." M. G.

MINISTERS' MEETING.—We are pleased with Bro. Munger's suggestion, in another column for an early meeting of the ministers at the National Campmeeting at Springfield, to arrange for a vigorous and united effort to arouse the people to prepare for the coming of Christ. Such a conference is needed for a mutual interchange of thought. M. G.

ESCAPE OF ROCHEFORT.

Henri Rochefort, the noted French Communist, who was banished to New Caledonia for life, has escaped, and is now in New York City. He landed first in San Francisco. The following is a brief statement of facts in relation to his escape:

"From the first Rochefort had determined to escape at the first opportunity. He had received a plenty of money, and at length he purchased a large sail-boat and placed on board two men who were utterly devoted to his interests. They were ordered to cruise about the island, and on a certain night to stand on and off outside the point near where Rochefort and his friends resided. These orders were executed to the letter, and about midnight Rochefort and his comrades swam out and were taken on board. When they first entered the water Rochfort and his comrades were seen and fired upon by the guards. But they escaped by swimming under water, and thoroughly exhausted, were at length sailing away to get into the track of the steamers from Melbourne to the Sandwich Islands and San Francisco. If they had gone to Melbourne they were afraid that they would have been taken back to New Caledonia. After a long cruise they met the Mikado, Capt. Moore, and were taken on board. Rochefort reached San Francisco on Friday, May 22d."

It is his purpose to return to Europe in a few days, and be ready for the first opportunity to help forward another revolution in France. M. G.

VISIONS AND PROPHECIES.

Visions and prophecies are valuable and reliable when they come from the Lord. He makes no mistakes, teaches no false theories, gives no wrong information. Satan has power also to speak through mediums as well as the Lord, and during the history of the human race, he has taken occasion to utter many prophecies, by means of which he has often deceived intelligent and good people. It is often a very successful way to lead men and women astray, and start up a new party. Whenever he can so far deceive the people as to make them believe that the visions and prophecies, which he gives, are from the Lord, he thereby gains great controlling power over those who are thus deceived; for when the true followers of Christ are satisfied they have communications direct from heaven, no arguments, or reasoning are sufficient to turn them, so long as their confidence in the visions remains. Satan knows this full well, and when he once gets control of a professor of religion, as a medium, he carries forward his work of deception with great skill and cunning. This he has often done in past ages, and in modern times. Witness the cases of Joanna Southcott, a prophetess, and John Wroe a prophet, who were leaders among the "True Israelites," who were taught by the visions and prophecies through the persons named, that the Savior would come about this time, and that in order to be ready, they must keep the seventh-day Sabbath, and be circumcised, and that one hundred and forty-four thousand would receive this seal, who would constitute the bride of the Lamb. These "True Israelites" appear to be as devoted, sincere, and earnest in their work, as any other class of believers in Christ, whom they loved, adored and accepted as their only Savior.

Joanna Southcott was an English lady, born about 1750, and died in London, Dec. 27th, 1814. She was for some years a member of the established church, but joined the Wesleyans a little while before she advanced her peculiar views. The historian says:

"In 1792 she began to attract attention by claiming supernatural powers, narrating remarkable revelations made to her in dreams, and making prophecies. She found many followers, over whom her influence appears to have been almost supreme. In the ordinary course of events it was natural that a portion of the many predictions she made should be verified, and these instances were speedily noised abroad and magnified, by herself and followers, and contributed to her notoriety and power over those who adhered to her ideas. She published a number of prophecies and warnings, . . . challenged the clergy to investigation and discussion, and labored with so much labor and zeal that her sect at the time of her death was estimated at one hundred thousand persons."

Whenever Satan can succeed in forming a new religious body by means of prophecies and visions, in which great and important truths may be presented to gain the confidence of those whom he would deceive, the test of fellowship will always be something not required by the Lord, some obsolete custom, law, or feast day, that was binding only under the old covenant, which was confined to the Jewish nation. The test for membership in all religious bodies, led off by seducing spirits, is never a "present truth" then binding, and commanded by the Lord. It might have been once required in the time when the first covenant was in force, but is not enjoined in the new dispensation. When Satan would divide the true flock of God, he does not attempt to lead its members to give up the Bible, but to persuade them to adopt false interpretations by which to sustain his test doctrine. He may give through his prophet, or prophetess, the most strict instruction in relation to diet, dress, and practical duties, in order to more fully secure the confidence of those whom he would deceive. In this way he confirms their belief that the instruction comes from the Lord, instead of a seducing spirit, transformed into an angel of light. This deception is kept up in some cases for many years, and managed so skillfully that the deceived are as confident they are led by the Lord, as is any Catholic that the Pope is Christ's earthly vicegerent. The whole object of Satan in these delusions appears to be to divide and scatter the children of the Lord, and thus cripple their power for doing good. No persons are more sincere than those who are thus deceived. Among them may be found some of the most upright men and women, who are ready to sacrifice all for Christ. This is one reason why they were taken in the snare, so craftily set by the arch deceiver. Had he instructed them in his visions to dress more like the world, and to indulge their appetites, conforming to the customs and manners of fashionable society, they would have turned away; but when they were taught in harmony with the Bible to lay aside foolish ornaments, gold and costly apparel, they thought such instruction must come from the Lord, because it was leading them to greater self-denial. All the doctrine taught by such may be true, excepting that which relates to the test of fellowship. Many such bodies might be named, that have risen up during the christian dispensation, having greater or less success. Whenever an attempt is made to expose the snare, they are quite sure to raise the cry of persecution, and denounce those as their worst enemies, who are truly their best friends. M. G.

WE learn Bro. Geo. A. Brown, pastor of the church in Philadelphia, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden streets, commenced a discussion in Washington, D. C., Monday evening, June 8th, with Jas. W. "THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

WHEN SHALL CHRIST COME?

This is a generation of thrilling interest. In answer to this inquiry, Dr. Seiss, of Philadelphia, says:—

"Christ will come before the millennium, not after it. The millennium is the seventh thousand years, or great Sabbath of the world. Now, then, if we can ascertain in what period of the world's age we live, we may form some idea of the time when the Son of man shall come. Without professing to ascertain the very day and hour, we may approximate the truth with some degree of reliability. The holy book, to which we are indebted for what else we know upon this subject, has not left blank the department of dates. The births and ages of the ancient patriarchs, both before and since the flood, have been so particularly and circumstantially recorded in Genesis, that we can readily measure the period through which they lived by summing the united lengths of time occupied by the several generations.

There are also various important records by which to measure the duration of the servitude in Egypt, of the wandering in the wilderness, and of the reign of the Judges, by whom Israel was governed to the institution of the kingdom under Saul. From that on to the Babylonian captivity the name of every king is given in succession, with the length of time each one reigned. And from the time of the captivity to the present, records, both sacred and profane, are such as leave but little room for uncertainty.

The commonly received chronology, which is usually found printed in the margins of our Bibles, is no part of the inspired record. Its dates are inserted from a system framed by Usher and others. It is now agreed that it is defective in many particulars. It makes the birth of Christ to be about 4004 A. M., and consequently there would yet be about 125 years to the end of 6000. But Lidyat, Browne, Vegnier, Bowen, Elliot, Bliss, Clinton, Fynes, Shimeall, Savile, and other chronologers calculate the intervening period to be more than 100 years shorter. Having looked into these chronological computations, I am convinced that those are the most reliable which leave but little of the 6000 years unexpired; and we are now most probably within only a few years of the Sabbatic millennium, and the glorious epiphany of our Lord." IOWA LAW IN REGARD TO MEETINGS.

As the season of the year has approached for holding tent and camp meetings, I thought it would be both interesting and beneficial to the readers of the Crisis, who are anticipating holding or attending said meeting, to have a copy of our statute law, copied from the Code of Iowa for 1873.

Section 4023. "If any person wilfully disturb or disquiet any assembly of persons met for religious worship, by profane discourse, or rude and indecent behavior, or by making a noise either within the place of worship, or so near as to disturb the order and solemnity of the assembly, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars" (the same in all other public assemblies).

Sec. 4024. "If any person within one mile from the place where any religious society is collected together for religious worship, in any field or wood-land, expose to sale or gift any spiritous or other liquors, or any article of merchandise, or any provisions or other articles of traffic, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars."

Sec. 4025. "The preceding section does not apply to tavern or grocery keepers exercising their calling or business in the places mentioned in their licenses, if they have such; nor to any distillers or manufacturers or others in the prosecution of their ordinary calling or business, so as to prevent them from vending or exposing to sale the articles above prohibited at their place of residence; nor to any person who has a written permit from the persons having the charge of such religious society to sell any of such prohibited articles, on complying with the regulations of such religious assembly and with the law of the State."

The above is the law in substance of other States. J. W. BURROUGHS.

New Hartford, Iowa.

AS IT is never too soon to be good, so is it never too late to amend: I will therefore neither neglect the time present, nor despair of the time past. If I had been sooner good, I might have been better; if I am longer bad I shall (I am sure) be worse. That I have stayed a long time idle in the market-place deserves reprehension; but if I am late sent into the vineyard, I have encouragement to work, "I will give unto this last as unto thee."—Warwick.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

FROM TENNESSEE, ALABAMA, AND GEORGIA.

Dear Brethren:—I have been trying for some time to labor more earnestly for my Master than I have ever done before. I have had great reason to rejoice and thank the Lord for the blessing on my feeble efforts. The first Sabbath in May, I attended two funerals, sons of Col. John F. Anderson, at Catchings, Tenn.; spoke to the largest congregation I ever saw. I hope some good was done. The second Sabbath I was at our church "Shilo," in DeKalb Co., Ala., and preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Sarah Daniel, one of the beloved and faithful of our little company. Bro. J. J. Smith was with me, also a Bro. Stewart, who voted to turn me out of the Baptist church. He is now preaching the same things he then called heresy. Had a good meeting from Saturday till Monday, only I was very weak and not able to labor much, except at the funeral, and then I became so exhausted that I had to close a little too soon.

The third Sabbath I tried to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Lucy Sells, in Trenton, Dade Co., Ga. At the close, a Presbyterian minister told the people he did not believe God would let the old thief into Paradise the day he was crucified, and then keep that sainted sister slumbering there till the resurrection. He then affirmed—"She is in heaven." We merely told the people we were surprised to see him take such a course on a funeral occasion; and as he had misquoted the scripture, we would not reply then. We have since written to him, by the advice of three of the most prominent citizens of his county, two of them his brethren, proposing to give him a fair opportunity to defend his position, and prove his assertion. Have not heard from him yet.

Fourth Saturday at Bethel church, near Ooltewah, Tenn. I had a good time. Sunday, we had the communion, which I really believe was the most melting, precious sacrament I ever enjoyed. Sabbath P. M. Bro. J. W. Backhout spoke with much interest, and received good attention. We then received one into the fellowship of the church, and closed with an overflow of the Spirit. Here I met Srs. Phifer and Fleming. The former lives in Philadelphia, and the latter at Mouse Creek, Tenn., where we spent a week last winter. We were much encouraged to learn from them that the seed sown in their locality has taken deep root, and I hope and believe in good soil. We expect to revisit those places again some time this summer. Those people up there have convinced me that they love God's word in its purity. I am praying that while they read these glorious truths, they may be filled with love for God, and drawn to the cross of Jesus more closely every day; for they will need more and more of his grace to sustain them as they advance to charge the breastworks of Satan.

Brethren, I have gained a stand-point in my religious course, where I can just see where I must be to enjoy "perfect love," and fill the gospel mould as a watchman on the walls of Zion; but oh! I am not so near the point as my soul desires. I have been earnestly praying for two weeks to simply be altogether absorbed in God's love. Pray for me, all ye that believe Father will hear his children when they pray. I am in the field, and if I die before the Master comes, I want to die at my post, telling the church he is near. O that the time might be ushered in when we as a people could all be "a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

J. A. CARGILE.

Stevenson, Ala., May 26th, 1874.

THE MINISTERS' MEETING.

As there is no move made for a general ministers' meeting, would it not be well to have a local one at Springfield, for New England, that a mutual understanding be had about future operations at our coming campmeetings, and be agreed in presenting the most important subjects for the good of others, beside ourselves? We are losing ground by neglecting to give this matter proper attention. Campmeeting is too expensive a place to invent new tools. Let us use what we have got, and are acquainted with, and let experiments alone till some other time. All pull one way, and we shall draw a larger load. This year's effort will be a very important one; and I think it would be well for the preachers to get together two or three days before the campmeeting, say Thursday at two P. M., August 13th. As that is the day our reduced fare begins, and the boarding house is opened, it will be a favorable time for such a meeting, without any extra expense. Plans of operation can be made better before the confusion of the meeting begins. God is pleased with a system in his work. Many are looking forward to this meeting with great anxiety. Some of other churches have spoken for tent-ground, and will be there to learn, and should be taught, instead of being pounded. Let wisdom dictate. HIRAM MUNGER.

Obituaries.

KINGSLEY. At Mayfield, Ill., March 21st, 1874, Chloe B. Kingsley, widow of the late A. C. Kingsley, aged eighty-one years.

She was cheered much by the weekly visits of the World's Crisis, and after she could not read it, she would ask to have it read to her. The last she heard read was Bro. Grant's account of the conversion of the Jewish lady. She expressed a wish that you might receive her thanks for continuing its visits since last year. She was a devoted christian, looking for the soon coming of her King. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. ETTIE C. WYNKOOP.

MORRIS. In Wayland, N. Y., May 11th, 1874, Annie Morris, wife of the late Lyman Morris, of Springwater, aged sixty-seven years.

Sr. Morris was converted in early life, and united with the M. E. church. About 1842 she heard the proclamation of the soon coming of Christ, and kindred truths, and has believed them ever since. She has fallen asleep firm in the faith of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him. She will be remembered by many in Southern N. Y., who have attended the annual grove meetings which have been held on her farm. The writer preached her funeral discourse to a large audience of her neighbors and relations from Ps. 17: 15, assisted by Eld. Hunter (Presb.) of Springwater, and Eld. Catharine; M. E. clergyman of Wayland. She sleeps in Jesus. WARREN J. HOBBS.

TROTT. In Richmond, Me., May 20th, 1874, Parlin C., son of Charles Trott, aged four years.

Little Parlin was a bright and lovely little boy. May this severe stroke of affliction prove a blessing to the father and mother. May it learn them more than ever to lean hard on him that is mighty to save. We tried to comfort them from 1 Cor. 15: 26. H. S. MITCHELL.

BROOKS. Fell asleep in Jesus, April 27th, 1874, in New Durham, N. H., of heart disease, Bro. John Brooks, aged eighty-two years.

He lived only twenty or thirty minutes after being taken sick, but we trust he was prepared. Our brother sought the Lord in early life, but by neglecting duty lost the saving power. Some thirteen years ago he gave himself anew to the Lord, and was led to see that the literal coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead was the true hope of the church. Sermon on the occasion from 2 Tim. 4: 6-8, by the writer. J. G. SMITH.

TOWLE. In Porter, Me., May 4th, 1874, Bro. James Towle, aged thirty-eight.

Another family circle is broken, and a beloved wife and two little ones, with numerous friends and brethren, mourn for the departed. His life is hid with Christ in God; and when Christ shall appear, our brother will also appear with him in glory. He experienced religion several years since, and was baptized by Eld. T. W. Piper, and he was one of the first in this vicinity to embrace the views held by us as a people, as he has been the first one to die of the original number of our little church in Porter.

"We have laid him away in deep sadness,
Yet not without hope in our breast;
For again he will join us with gladness,
And enter the heavenly rest."

C. H. HURD.

MAINE. In South Windham, Conn., May 8th, 1874, of consumption, Sr. Almira C. Maine, wife of Bro. Avery Maine, aged fifty years.

Sr. M. was a worthy member of the Baptist church for some years. She became interested in the Advent doctrine in the fall of 1870, and after carefully investigating the same she became a firm believer in the unconscious state of the dead, the speedy coming of Christ, and a general resurrection, when all will be judged and rewarded according to their works. We laid her away in the cold grave, to await the Master's call. Discourse by the writer. I. B. POTTER.

LIBBEY. In Biddeford, Me., April 10th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Harry R. Libbey, aged one year and ten months. Also April 17th, of same disease, Christie Belle Libbey, aged five years, five months, children of Joseph G. and Ellen H. Libbey.

Thus in one short week a home is left childless, and the parents are called to mourn. May the Lord sustain them in this great affliction, and enable them to meet them on the resurrection morn. WM. C. STEWART.

SWEETSER. In Saco, Me., April 25th, 1874, James O. Sweetser, aged two years and five months, son of James and Almeda Sweetser.

Our dear brother and sister have been called again to drink of sorrow's cup; but they sorrow not as those without hope, for they believe when Jesus comes, little Jamie will come from the enemy's land. May this bereavement be sanctified to the good of the entire family. WM. C. STEWART.

MOORE. In Saco, Me., April 9th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Laura E., eldest daughter of Joshua and Olive Moore, aged about eleven years.

This is the first time that this family circle has been broken, but the enemy is cruel, and snatched a lovely flower. May our dear brother and sister have grace given them to bear up amid the sorrows, and look beyond this vale of tears to a deathless land soon to be theirs. WM. C. STEWART.

MAINARD. At Square Pond, Ct., May 1st, 1874, Sr. Betsey Mainard, aged sixty-five years.

Sr. M. embraced the doctrine of Christ's second speedy coming about twelve years ago, and remained firm in that belief until her death. She was fully aware that she must sleep; but she looked forward to the resurrection morn with joyful anticipation of coming forth to a blessed immortality. She selected a text (John 11: 24) from which a discourse was preached by the writer. I. B. POTTER.

BARTLETT. Fell asleep in Jesus, at West Stafford, Ct., April 26th, 1874, Bro. Samuel Bartlett, aged fifty-eight years.

Bro. B. was taken with a fit of paralysis April 2nd, midnight, and was rendered nearly insensible, from which there was no recovery. Our brother became a believer in the speedy coming of Christ in '41, and lived a consistent, devoted life until his death. He awaits the Master's call in the morn of the resurrection. Then he will live to die no more. We commend his dear family to God and the word of his grace, which is able to sustain them in this deep affliction. Funeral services by the writer. I. B. POTTER.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, June 1. As the Prince of Saxe Weimar was leaving his residence this afternoon he was fired at by an unknown assassin, who escaped. The Prince was not hurt. He had previously received threatening letters, as had also the Duke of Cambridge and Mr. Disraeli.

June 3. A special dispatch from Vienna reports extensive inundations in the province of Badat and elsewhere in Hungary. Many villages were swept away.

BAYONNE, June 1. The town of Hernani is hard pressed by the Carlists, and the Republican commander there requires reinforcements. General Loma with the First Corps of the Army of the North, has joined General Concha's command at Miranda.

MADRID, June 1. The national forces have entered Chelva, disposing of a body of four thousand Carlists.

THE FRENCH CRISIS.—Everything in the French Assembly goes to show that the dissolution of that body and a fresh appeal to the people is only a question of time. The Republican members are a unit in favor of that step, and they are supported by public opinion. The Bonapartists would probably consent to the dissolution, if it could be followed by a plebiscitum, instead of regular elections of members of a new Assembly. The plebiscitum is a peculiarly imperial institution, and it is thought would revive the old Napoleonic enthusiasm. The last demonstration of that kind declared it as the voice of France that the imperial dignity conferred on Napoleon III. "is hereditary in the direct and legitimate heirs of Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, from male to male, in the order of primogeniture." The only question with the Bonapartists is, whether it would be advisable to risk this sort of appeal to France at present, if they could get it. There is no prospect, however, that the Republicans will accommodate them.—Boston Journal.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

MORMONISM RUNNING INTO COMMUNISM.—Interesting correspondence from Salt Lake City, throws light upon a new movement of Brigham Young, or rather the revival of an old one, calculated to give this "prophetic" man more power and wealth. A grand conference has been held, lasting four days, in the tabernacle, to consider the "Order of Enoch," an organization purporting to have all temporal things in common—a system of communism pure and simple—but which will, of course, give the head of the Mormon church, Brigham Young, absolute power over the property and labor of his deluded followers.—New York Herald, May 26th.

IMPENDING DESTRUCTION OF NEW YORK CITY.—An extraordinary communication, purporting to be a revelation from the spirit of the Prophet Elijah to a medium in New York City, is published in the Graphic. The following are its main features:

"This generation knoweth not the calamities that are, ere long, going to befall them; many thousands of the inhabitants of this city will go down with the crumbling buildings into the depths of angry waters.

"Before the sun shall have risen and set twelve months more, this beautiful city of America—the pride of the East—shall have been laid in ruins. Great God! what a scene it presents! No battle-field ever produced such devastation of human life. No pen, no language, no description can picture it, for it has never had its equal in all the annals of the history of the world. Rejoice ye who are warned, and heed its counsellings.

"Next in order in our prophecy is the danger on the ocean. Many more steamers will go down laden with human freight, and, annexed to the list already gone, will make a startling fact, that appeals directly to the questioner, if there is not something more than ordinary symptoms resting there; if God has not used this channel also to work Divine purpose?

"Next in order we mention disease of animals and also of the human. Both man and beast will meet with a pestilence and also a famine. These are not hard to describe, for they come under the category of natural causes, and therefore the result is but natural. Cloven footed beasts will appear in the offspring of animals in large numbers, and they will not be nutritious to the human stomach, neither fit to eat, and the grain will become molten with mildew while it grows in the field. Swallows will cease to fly toward their native clime at the change of the seasons, and the anchors will cease to find a sounding, for the waters shall be moved, and all the face of nature shall be changed, and 'Lo! I come' will be heralded from shore to shore, from end to end of the universe.

"Weep and bewail, ye daughters of Babylon, for ye shall be torn out of your doomed city, with your priceless beads and jewelled necks, unto the ravages of the beasts of prey that shall hunt you to perdition. 'The virgins of the city shall be the horseman's prey.'"

In Brief.

— The pilgrims to Rome from this country carried three hundred thousand dollars as a gift to the Pope.

— A singularly fatal horse disease prevails near Galena, Illinois. The animals are seized with a severe colic and die within an hour. The disease has baffled the surgeons thus far.

— They tell of a hen that floated down the raging tide of Mill river, in a barrel, setting on nineteen eggs. She attended strictly to business during the flood, finally brought up in a friendly harbor, and has since left her barrel with nineteen chickens at her heels.

— The Presbyterians of Nauvoo, Ill., are raising money to build a church on the site of the old Mormon temple there.

— Insects resembling the beetle, which ply in large clouds, are destroying the ash and poplar trees north of Davenport, Iowa.

— The Jews are raising money to found a national college in this country for their special use.

— The address of the Pope to the French pilgrims at their recent visit to the Vatican condemns universal suffrage.

— The women crusaders of Philadelphia have established a Drunkard's Home, which already has eleven inmates, nine men and two women, saved by the praying band. These are most tenderly and thoroughly cared for.

— Steam is successfully used on London street railroads. The machinery is quite hidden from view, no heat is felt, no noise is heard, and stoppages are effected more readily than with horses.

— A Mrs. Chapman of Pleasant Ridge, Missouri, went out to a pasture recently and returned to her home in about half an hour, speechless. Her loss of speech cannot be accounted for.

— At Mount Vernon, Michigan, a few days ago, a little child was found playing with a copperhead snake, which made no attempt to injure it, but seemed to enjoy the companionship.

— June 21st is the 28th anniversary of the inauguration of Pius IX. as Pope, and it is proposed that all good Roman Catholics shall celebrate the day by public prayers and thanksgivings and offerings throughout the universal church.

Notices.

THE next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 2d to 5th inclusive, in connection with the dedication of the new Advent chapel at that place. Friends there will please advertise the meeting, and make arrangements for special services on the Fourth. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.
WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

MISSIONARY MEETING.—There will be a campmeeting under the direction of the Mass. A. Conference, at Greenwich Plains, Mass., commencing July 1st, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The unfinished business of the annual conference will be taken up at this meeting, according to the resolution of the conference; therefore it is important that every church in Mass. be represented by preachers and delegates. The meeting is located on the Springfield and Athol R. R., about thirty miles from Springfield, fifteen miles from Athol, in a beautiful grove, prepared for us by the R. R. Co., free of expense, situated about thirty rods from the depot, near a beautiful pond, and near a quiet village. It is expected that the fare will be reduced on the Springfield, Athol, and Vt. and Mass. R. R., and possibly on the Boston and Albany. Come, one and all, and let us try and put new life into the missionary work in Mass. We can do it if there is a will. Will you do it, brethren? J. HEMENWAY, for Tent Com.

GROVE AND BASKET MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove-meeting at Kendall Mills, Orleans Co., N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. Eld. A. C. Newell, Sr. L. M. Stoddard, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is extended to all far and near. Those coming with teams will provide for themselves as far as possible, and those coming by R. R. will be accommodated with good homes near the grove. Leave the cars on the Niagara Falls R. R. at Holley, Saturday, 9 A. M., and conveyance at a reasonable rate will be furnished to the meeting, five miles distant. Come, brethren and sisters, and declare our faith in the name of the Lord. This is a new field, and much interest exists among the people to hear the truth concerning the day of the Lord. Let earnest prayer ascend for this meeting, that sinners may be "pricked in the heart," and obey the gospel ere it is too late.
In behalf of the people, L. M. STODDARD.

MEETING AT FREEDOM, N. H.—The lovers of the "blessed hope" in that region have arranged to hold a meeting in the Second Advent Chapel, at Freedom, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A large gathering of those of like precious faith is hoped for. All are invited from far and near. M. Stevens, C. H. Sweet, and perhaps others, will be present to preach the word.
C. H. SWEET, for the Brn.

ALTON BAY.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee will meet on the camp-ground Friday, July 3d, at twelve o'clock M. There will be preaching on the ground, the Lord willing, July 4th, at eleven o'clock A. M. There will also be preaching on the ground Sabbath, July 5th. J. COUCH.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. COUCH.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.—The Bethel Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) August 29th, and continue till Sept. 7th. H. F. C., for Com.

PITTSFIELD CAMPMEETING.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.
JER. CARR, Chairman.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and held over Sept. 13th.
W. H. MITCHELL, for Com.

CONNECTICUT CAMPMEETING.—The Lord willing, the Connecticut Campmeeting will commence in the grove near Plainville, Saturday, June 20th, and continue over Sunday, June 28th. Campmeeting tickets will be sold at reduced rates from stations on the New Haven and Northampton Railroad to Plainville. Brethren from Massachusetts can get campmeeting tickets at Westfield by coming that route; the usual conveyance from Plainville to the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates. We have changed the time of the meeting to accommodate brethren wishing to attend other meetings later in the season.

B. HITCHCOCK,
O. D. WOODRUFF,
H. P. BRADLEY,
L. MILLS, } Committee.

P. S. Two or three tents 14×14 to rent if spoken for in season. O. D. W.

CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, the third quarterly session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Whitefield, commencing Thursday evening, June 11th, to hold over the following Sabbath. It is hoped that our preaching brethren will try and attend, especially those whose sympathy and interests are with the conference, and can labor together for the upbuilding of the church and salvation of the sinner. An invitation is extended to all.

T. W. PIPER.
G. W. BROWN.
D. W. DAVIS.

CONFERENCE.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Quarterly Conference of North Western Kansas will be held with the Adv. Chris. church at Solomon Rapids, Mitchel Co., commencing Friday evening, June 26th, and continuing over two Sundays. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us and worship the Lord in the grove. Let us lay aside all our hobbies, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. "Let brotherly love continue."
E. N. BLISS, Pres.
J. S. THORP, Sec.

GENERAL UNION STATE CONF. AND CAMPMEETING OF IOWA.—The General Union State Campmeeting will be held in Brooklin, Poweshiek Co., in Bro. R. L. Clark's grove, commencing Friday, July 3d (instead of June 26th, as per previous notice), and holding over Sunday, July 12th.

Brooklyn is on the Chicago and Rock Island R. R., fifteen miles east of Grinnell. Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonable rates. Large tents will be provided in which to hold meetings in case of rain. Let all of the brethren, sisters, and friends, east, west, north and south, make a general rally and come to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love to God and man; and as this is a union meeting, let all hobbies be left at home. Bring your bedding and tents if possible. The conference session will be held during the first part of the meeting; so let all be in attendance at the very commencement.
J. RIDLEY, Sec.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Iowa Mission Tent will be pitched at New Hartford, June 18th, as usual; and that I have received a message from Eld. H. L. Hastings that he is on his way west, and bound for the campmeeting. I hope to see all the friends of Jesus, and those interested in this meeting, on hand at an early hour, that this yearly feast may be profitable to all.
P. S. W. DEYO.

P. S. This tent is in as good condition as formerly, and all who wish tent or campmeeting room, will please write me early, that I may arrange in proper time. P. S. W. D.

THE June annual meeting will be held in the grove on the Morris farm, in Springwater, June 20th and 21st. We hope to see a good turn out, as this is probably the last, as mother Morris is dead, as well as her husband. Meetings to commence at two o'clock P. M., in the grove, on the 20th. Social meeting at half past nine A. M. Sunday, June 21st. Preaching at 10.30 A. M. and one o'clock P. M. on Sunday.
For the Com., C. F. SWEET.

A QUARTERLY MEETING will be held at East Creek, Huron Co., Ohio, on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in June. We would like to see all the brethren from the surrounding country at this meeting. For the church, D. T. CALL.

IF ANY desire a tent meeting in June, before our camp and tent meeting at Greenwich, let us hear soon, or there will not be time to make arrangements for one. The pledges for the tent are wanted immediately. Send to Bro. Goodrich, Crisis office. L. BOUTELL, for Com.

CONFERENCE.—The second quarterly conference of the church in Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, will be held at their chapel, commencing Saturday, June 13th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following. The church in Norwalk together with all the lovers of Jesus, are invited.
E. MCCULLOCH, Pastor.

CONFERENCE.—The Eastern Maine and New Brunswick Conference will be held in Milltown, Me., commencing Thursday, June 25th, and continue over the Lord's day. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come, and let us work for the advancing of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. M. W. CORLISS.

TENT MEETING.—If the Lord will, there will be a tent meeting at Canaan Village, Vt., commencing Saturday, June 20th, and hold over two Sabbaths. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come and labor for the salvation of sinners. Let us lay aside all hobbies, and labor to prepare a people for the coming of the Lord. Will preaching brethren come and help us? Bro. and Sr. McKinstry are expected to be with us.
A. GORDON.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove-meeting at Dayton, Me., in Hezekiah Buzzell's grove (the same spot that was used last year for a like purpose). Brn. John R. Tripp, Franklin Haines, Jesse Gay, and J. Hill, will be there to preach the word. Time of meeting, ten A. M. Come, brethren and sisters, one and all, and enjoy the meeting with us. [No time named.—ED.] For committee, JER. HILL.

THERE will be a barn-meeting the 4th and 5th of July at Bro. M. Smith's place, in Rochester, N. H., near the chapel. We trust the Lord will send some one to preach the word. Come with the armor on to work for souls.
For the Church, S. HAWKINS.

THERE will be a grove-meeting in H. Batchelder's grove, near Loudon Ridge, N. H., Sunday, June 28th. We hope to see a goodly number out to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love for Jesus. O. W. KIMBALL.

IOWA CHRISTIAN CAMPMEETING.—The Annual Christian Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 18th, and holding over two Lord's days. Brethren from all parts of the west are cordially invited to attend this yearly feast. Come praying that the Lord will revive and unite his people. It is thought best to make this meeting an especial one, for the spiritual benefit of the church; therefore we would say to every one, Come, but leave all hobbies at home. Come to build up, and not tear down. Come with your hearts filled with love. Remember the object of the meeting is holiness of heart. We expect ministerial assistance from Boston, Mass., which will be announced in due time.

I wish to further say that there will be no especial saloon or restaurant on the ground; but there will be an extensive boarding-house, sufficient to accommodate all who may wish to board on the ground, at reasonable rates. Any one wishing to engage board, or get other information, can address Eld. J. W. Burroughs, New Hartford, Iowa, President of the Campmeeting.
M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec. Campmeeting Com.

THE fourth session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly meeting conference will meet with the church at Bath, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of your Master, and work for the good of the cause, and for the salvation of perishing sinners. H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be a grove meeting in Bro. C. W. Kimbal's grove, in Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, June 19th and 20th. Brn. B. P. Stevens and M. R. Miles are expected to preach the word of life. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come, as last year, to labor and worship with the "one spirit." Our meeting last year was a glorious success, and we desire this one to be even better than that. Come and meet with us. We will try and entertain all that come; but come Friday night or Saturday morning. Be early. Meeting Friday night at the school-house. Cars arrive here at eight in the evening and ten in the morning.
For the Brn., A. P. MOORE.

NEW YORK STATE A. C. CONFERENCE.—The Annual Meeting of the New York State A. C. Conference will be held in Lockport, instead of Sodus Point, June 20th and 21st. The reason of the change of places is because our old tent cannot be repaired which we depended upon to hold the meeting in at Sodus. Let there be a good turnout at Lockport. Let every church be represented. D. COGSWELL, President.
A. P. MOORE, Sec.

HOOSICK CONFERENCE TENT.—The Tent Committee have settled on the following points: (1) To keep the tents in new fields the coming season, if funds are provided to meet the expenses. (2) To hold the first meeting at Pittston, N. Y., if desired. (3.) To employ C. W. Baker as tent-master, with a salary of $12 a week. (4.) That subscriptions and payments for this work are now in order, and should be sent at once to J. B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., who is the Conference Treasurer, and will acknowledge all sums received. This is an important enterprise, and should be sustained. Whether the tent shall be in service every week of this season depends upon the action of individuals within the conference. Prompt liberality will ensure early and steady work all summer. The committee do not care to issue a long begging appeal; we only say we think it the duty of this conference to support their tent mission, and expect "every man to do his duty." As we sow, so shall we reap.

Those who want meetings will write at once to H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt., stating how much they will raise toward the expenses, that we may know what provision to make in the case, and just what to depend upon. (5) We intend, as far as possible, to provide laborers within the conference; but will make any consistent arrangement with those who may desire preachers from abroad. (6) Any further information can be obtained by addressing either of the committee, and enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY,
W. L. HIMES, } Committee.

CAMPMEETING.—A campmeeting will be held at the Cheatham grove campmeeting ground, Winona Co., Minn., two miles southeast of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter R. R., commencing Tuesday, June 23d, at three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come and labor with us in the "one spirit." Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, so that all may be accommodated with something to eat. Those who can will please bring provisions and bedding with them. The state tent is expected to be on the ground. Teams will be in attendance at the station to carry at the camp-ground. We hope to see a large attendance both of ministers and laity. Cars arrive here at two P. M.
PHILIP RAMER.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The third Dist. or Quar. Meeting of the Adv. Chris. Conf. of the Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, will be attended in the Melbourne District, and convene, D. V., at Danville, P. Q., at the Advent Church, on Thursday, June 18th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. A full attendance is urgently solicited, as these meetings are of great importance. Ministers and official members of this District are expected to be present; and also from other Districts of the Conference, so far as is at all practicable.
CHAS. P. DOW, Pres. of Conf.

TENT AND BASKET MEETING.—There will be a meeting of days held in the Evangel Tent, Vienna, Me., near the Brick Chapel, commencing June 11th, five o'clock P. M., and continue as long as thought best. A general invitation is given to all. Those who can bring food and tents are requested to do so, that all may be provided for. We shall do all we can to make this meeting one of profit to all. Come, brethren, sisters and friends, to unite in labor for the salvation of sinners, and make a people ready for Jesus' coming.
H. B. SEVEY.

NOVA SCOTIA CONFERENCE.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held, the Lord willing, at Bear River, Digby Co., N. S., commencing Thursday, June 18th, and continue over the following Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come ready to work for the Lord. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of New Brunswick and the United States. J. J. WOODWORTH.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 21th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.
J. W. BURROUGHS, Sec.

THE Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit. I. DAMMAN.
J. EMERSON.

THE church at Martville and North Victory will hold a quarterly meeting June 7th. We hope to see many of our brethren and sisters of adjacent churches present. Come to work for Jesus.
M. R. MILES, Pastor.

THOSE wishing to preach at Lake Village, N. H., North Church, please correspond with Levi Allen, or D. G. Drake.

THOSE wishing to preach at East Canaan, N. H., please correspond with E. G. Mudgett, as he has been unanimously chosen for this present year to act in behalf of the church.

To the brethren and sisters who have sent to me for the new pamphlets on Primitive Christian Faith; or the Tree of Life and Colloquy on the Life and Death Question, as noticed in the Crisis and other papers. If you have not received them, or as many as you wish of them, please write to me. Some have sent one dollar, and others more; some have asked for one or two pamphlets; and the rest to help in the tent enterprise, and to give to the poor. We have sent to all the names we have received. If others wish them, we will send post paid, at 20 cents each, or $2.00 per dozen. (Send a stamp.) The Lord's poor free. Direct to John T. Ongley, Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa., or to C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

HE IS MY PORTION.

J. A. GOODRICH.

"The Lord is my portion, saith my soul, therefore will I hope in him."—LAM. 3: 24.

The Lord Jehovah reigns,
My prophet, priest and king;
And he in mercy deigns
To own my offering.
My helpless soul on Christ relies,
His love consumes the sacrifice.

Who, who is like the Lord,
In wisdom, love and power?
His holy, blessed word
Has kept me to this hour.
His precious blood has made me whole,
He is my portion, saith my soul.

I rest beneath the shade
Of his almighty wing;
He screens my naked head,
My soul in triumph sings,
While storms of sorrow roll;
He is my portion, saith my soul.

What am I, Lord, to thee,
That thou dost thus reveal
Thy precious name to me,
And all my sorrows heal?
Less than the least of all I am,
Yet for my portion thee I claim.

I hope to see his face,
When all my conflicts o'er,
And celebrate his praise
On Canaan's peaceful shore,
And gain the blood-washed throng above,
To sing my Savior's dying love.

There I shall all possess,
That Christ has bought for me;
And be forever blessed,
From pain and sorrow free;
Enjoy his smiles, while ages roll,
He is my portion, saith my soul.

CONFORMITY TO THE WORLD.

NANCY G. ESTEY.

Some may think me strict, if I write all I think on this subject, but I will write the feeling of my heart. I know God is able and willing to give joys much superior to every worldly amusement. I must say that worldliness and worldly amusements appear to me quite inconsistent with the character of a christian, and that we can never enjoy happy converse with God till we give them up. The christian is described in the Scriptures as the temple of the living God. Where the holy God takes up his abode, surely that heart must be sanctified and set apart from every common use, and be wholly devoted to his service. The spirit of the world which reigns, worldly company, is quite opposite to his Spirit; and the friendship of the world is at enmity with God. I know this may be called uncharitable; but I do not wish to be more charitable than the Bible; and surely experience proves it to be true. My dear friends, it cannot be a proper place for a christian where religion must not be named. When christians venture into such a place, they must either have heavenly thoughts, and then the amusements would appear uninteresting; or else, if the amusements are amusing to them, they fill their hearts with a crowd of vain thoughts, shutting out Christ and letting in the world. This prepares the way for doubts and fears and much bitter repentance, before the Spirit will again shine upon a heart which has so wantonly despised its grace.

Let me draw your attention to the sweet precepts of our Lord. "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately." I am sure no one would choose that his Lord should come for him while engaged in worldly amusements. In such a place, he would not be ready to open immediately, but would rather ask time to collect his scattered thoughts, and trim his wasted lamp. "Whether, therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God"; and "whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." These are the precepts which the Lord has given for our guidance. Let us always ask ourselves, before we set about any employment, or enter into any company, am I doing this to the glory of God? Am I doing this in the name of the Lord Jesus? Is it such an action as he would approve? Can I look up to him all the time I am doing it for his sanction and blessing? If we can answer these questions readily in the affirmative, we need not fear; but if, on the contrary, the mind recoils at even asking such a question, be assured there is something wrong. This seems to me to be the marked distinction between the christian and the worldling. The latter lives to himself; the former "to him who died for him, and rose again." The one consults his own pleasure, leans to his own understanding, and seeks his own glory; the christian prays that his will may be swallowed up in the will of God. He no longer seeks the honor which cometh from man, but desires that Christ, the author of all his good things, may have all the glory of them.

Let us, then, take this consideration with us, that Christ, not self, is to be the end of all our actions; and that whether we eat, drink, speak, go in or out, alone or in company, or engaged in study, we must do all to the glory of God, and in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Littleton, Mass.

AN INDIVIDUAL WORK.

C. MENDENHALL.

The great plan of salvation is adapted to the necessities of individuals. Religion is a personal duty and privilege, which cannot be exercised by proxy; therefore we are not to sit as judges over one another's conduct, but to remove the beam from our own eyes is the proper work. Paul says, "Let a man examine himself." This duty, which is of vast importance, especially in these latter times, is frequently neglected.

Our time is often uselessly and improperly employed in searching out the faults of other persons, societies and sects, to the entire or partial neglect of self. This work ought to begin at home, with a candid, prayerful spirit, and contrite heart, and God will bless abundantly. It is written, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." In secular affairs men look into their business, take an account of stock, balance books, and find out how they stand financially; so we should examine ourselves, praying with the Psalmist that God will cleanse us from our secret faults.

The final reckoning time is hastening on with mighty strides. Soon the Son of man will come in power and great glory, to usher in a new and a better order of things. This fact should be a potent motive to self-examination. Are we on the Rock of Ages? Is our faith strong? are vital questions. We are beset by that which is evil on every hand. Our inclinations drift towards iniquity. We are weak; yet in Christ we are made strong, and can successfully pull against the stream of evil and come off conquerors over the difficulties of this present state.

The work of personal examination is solemn and at times humiliating; but it is a duty which cannot be set aside. Jesus Christ is the only safe guide and pattern, consequently we must compare our thoughts and actions with his, striving to do those things which will be in harmony with his example, and according to his teachings. Let us pray for each other, that we see to it that we make sure and steadfast our hopes, looking into our personal conduct and motives impartially, thereby improving our spiritual status, and adding to the glory of God. With David, let us sincerely say, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." Ps. 139: 23, 24.

Wilmington, Del.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

As I have not written to the Crisis for a long time, I thought I would write a few words, so as to let the dear readers of our excellent paper know that the little band in Sacramento City are still laboring together, and journeying on in search of that city whose builder and maker is God. Bro. Grant has often told you what a bad place Sacramento is, and how worldly the people are, even those professing the name of Jesus; so that I need not enter into any particulars at this time. The Bible truths that we love so well have quite recently been assailed from the pulpits of the different denominations. They seem determined in teaching that a dead man knows more than a live one. One of those teachers, in preaching on the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, said that if the doctrine of the sleep of the soul is true, we lose an inconceivable amount of good. Did good old Job think so? We think not. Hear him: "So man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job 14: 12. And further, this man, who should be a shining light, said: We have no desire to sleep in the grave, as the soul-sleepers would have it; but we want to be up in heaven gazing on and watching the conflict here below. Dear Brn. and Srs., we ask your prayers in our behalf, that we may grow stronger in the love and grace of the blessed Master. We are satisfied that we are living down close to that glorious morning that holy patriarchs, prophets and apostles spoke of and looked forward to with so much joy and rejoicing.

We felt very sorrowful because Bro. Grant could not stop with us before he went East. We wanted so much to hear him talk about the glorified Jesus, and his soon triumphant return to establish that everlasting kingdom. We wanted to hear him talk of that glorious reunion of King Jesus with the apostles and saints of all ages at the great "marriage supper of the Lamb," but a little way off. God has designed otherwise, and we submit. Bro. and Sr. D. D. Reed were with us from the 8th to the 11th of May. They preached to us on the signs of the times and coming kingdom. We love them very much. They are truly devoted to the Master's cause. Bro. Reed baptized Sr. Julia Moore, after the manner and likeness of our blessed Lord. There are others who we hope soon to see follow the footsteps of our dear sister in showing forth the burial and resurrection of our Savior. We are expecting Bro. Hook soon. We need some one to preach to us the words of eternal life.

Your Bro. in the hope of eternal life through Christ, GEO. W. FICKS.

BIBLE WINES—NO. 2.

Preserved or sweet wines are pure and innocent. This was well understood by the ancients. Fermented wines are always intoxicating, since fermentation produces alcohol. Such wines are not pure, neither are they the simple fruit or product of grapes. Grapes do not possess a particle of alcohol, neither is it found in any article that God ever made. It is the product of putrefaction or rottenness in every case. Then, it is absurd to call wine pure, after the expressed juice has undergone a chemical change and has acquired properties wholly foreign to it in its pure state.

The two classes of wine—pure and impure, preserved and fermented—are mentioned in the Scriptures. The pure, which does not intoxicate, is mentioned with corn and oil, as a rich gift of the Father's hand; the other, which "gives its color in the cup, and moves itself aright," is a "mocker," causing woes, sorrows and wounds. Its use is never commended. When wine is mentioned in general terms, as in our English Bible, the meaning of the word must be considered, and the general idea of the inspired writer must, if possible, be ascertained. This can be done very readily in most cases by studying the context.

If it were possible to examine this subject without naming a single Hebrew term, we should much prefer to do it; but a critical examination requires us to consider the signification of the original words. The two most important Hebrew terms, which are always translated wine, are yayin and tirosh; the former occurring one hundred and thirty-six times; and the latter, thirty-eight times in the original Scriptures.

Yayin is a generic word, including in its signification the expressed juice of the grape in whatever condition it may be found. It is impossible to determine from the term whether it is pure or alcoholic. We will give authorities as to the meaning of this Hebrew word. Prof. Moses Stuart, a graduate of Yale College, and for years a professor at Andover, and the author of a Hebrew grammar, says:

"There are in the Scriptures (Hebrew) but two generic words to designate such drinks as may be of an intoxicating nature when fermented, and which are not so before fermentation. In the Hebrew Scriptures the word yayin in its broadest meaning, designates grape-juice, or the liquid which the fruit of the vine yields. It may be new or old, sweet or sour, fermented or unfermented, intoxicating or unintoxicating. The simple idea of grape-juice or vine-liquor is the basis and essence of the word in whatever connection found. The specific sense which we must often assign to the word arises not from the word itself, but from the connection in which it stands."

James G. Murphy, LL. D., T. S. D., author of the commentary on portions of the Pentateuch, and professor of Hebrew in Belfast, Ireland, says: "Yayin denotes all stages of the juice of the grape."

Dr. Roy, professor of Oriental languages, in New York, says: "It is derived from yanah, to oppress, persecute, afflict, squeeze, crush as grapes are crushed in the press. Hence, yayin, wine, which is pressed from the grape."

Dr. Nott, who long served with distinguished ability as President of Union College says: "Yayin is a generic term, and when not restricted in its meaning, comprehends vinous beverages of every sort, however produced. It is, however, restricted to the fruit of the vine in its natural and unintoxicating state."

In Kitto's Cyclopædia, article wine: "Yayin in Bible use is a very general term, including every species of wine made from grapes."

The authorities thus quoted, as it seems to us, are altogether sufficient to settle the question, and to establish the proposition that the leading Hebrew word (yayin), is generic, and may signify the expressed juice of the grape in any of its stages. It may be unfermented or fermented—pure or alcoholic. The ablest scholars and Bible critics are in agreement on this subject; and we know of no writer of reputation as a scholar who teaches otherwise.

That the wines of the Bible were, in many cases intoxicating, no one doubts. The denunciations against drunkenness are many and fearful, and the warnings and admonitions are given with great emphasis. Temperance reformers, who employ language that is much less harsh and severe than the inspired writers used in denouncing the sin of wine-bibbing, are considered "abusive" and are accused of throwing "mud." Their language is considered "scurrillous."

The Hebrew word tirosh, which is next in importance, and which occurs some thirty-eight times in the Bible—always translated wine—is never used in a bad sense. The article never intoxicates, and it is always (save in a single text), classed with God's richest blessings.—California Christian Advocate.

THE PASSION FOR REFORM.

What is now the leading watchword that is convulsing the whole earth from the equator to the poles? Reform, reform, reform! The church must be reformed; governments must be reformed; everything must be reformed. Nothing is any longer right or adequate for dotard humanity. Laws, creeds, politics, theology, worship, venerable customs, all are found fault with by the restless spirit that is abroad, and must be revised, changed, recast, and reconstructed on other models which cannot be agreed upon. The fathers of old have become mere infants; the intellectual giants of other times have dwindled into dwarfs; the great emancipators of the world have degenerated into dreaming school-boys, who knew nothing of humanity's wants, and never comprehended the will of God or the good of man.

Suddenly it has been discovered that our domestic institutions are wrong, that our marriage laws are wrong, that our entire legislation is wrong, that the wisest cabinets are composed of fools, that our church arrangements are imbecile, that old-fashioned religion is mere hypocrisy and cant, and that whatever is is wrong. Protestantism must needs have a new foundation, and men are tinkering to effect it. Catholicism must have an addition to its creed, and so a special convention was called to inaugurate the miserable absurdity. And we must have new recensions, and new liturgies, and new distributions of powers in church and state, and even new gospels, until everything rocks and totters in the throes of approaching dissolution. Young America and young England, and young France, and young Italy, and young China, and the ruling spirit even where things have been stagnant for ages, now cry, "Down with the world's old props! Down with the rickety regime of other days!" And everybody is in the intensest earnest. As Carlyle says, "the age of shams is past." Every sect, party, clique, club, and faction, and every individual man, seems to be determined that his own way shall carry. There is no yielding, no compromise, no ear open to the counselings of moderation or entreaty. All is being unsettled, canvassed, distracted and rendered impotent, except in that direction in which the wave may for the moment dash.

Never before were such mighty conflicting forces at work in our world. Never before has there been such a deep and universal agitation upon all that respects the interests of man. Governments the most powerful, ideas the most potent, and customs the most firmly rooted, are becoming mere playthings in the hands of remorseless and determined revolution. Surely the signal for the end has come. This loud cry from every quarter for reform, change and something new, only proves that "society is sick," and nearing its dissolution, and yet, like the sick man, imagines that if its bed were changed it would be well. Alas, alas, for the projects and dreamy hopes of modern reformers!—J. A. Seiss.

OUT ON PICKET DUTY.

H. MUNGER.

Old, experienced hands make the best pickets. Young soldiers are apt to get frightened without sufficient cause for alarming the whole camp. In one war, the whole camp was aroused to action by a young picket guard, who fired at a hog prowling around in the woods, because he did not answer the third call. The young man fired, and ran to the camp crying, The enemy is coming! when an old hand would have waited to see whether it was a hog, the devil, or the Indians; as this was an Indian war. Some people are easily frightened, and think our cause is all going down. In some places I have visited of late, young pickets have produced this result. A little encouragement produced good results. These young inexperienced pickets, who fired at everything they saw, in their ignorant zeal, have wounded some good soldiers; yet God has taken charge, and with the help of old hands, good meetings are being sustained. This may be said of Newark, Green Point, Hoosick, Hebron, Poultney, and Low Hampton. Castleton is well cared for by Bro. Wm. Himes. Rutland has settled down into the work under the labors of Bro. Flagg. The church is well united, and its influence is being felt for good.

I have been engaged the last ten weeks in prospecting, and find things in much better state than many of our brethren expected. On my way home, I called at Chester, Vt., and found Bro. Farrell, from Boston, in a public house doing well. He has revolutionized the house, cleaned out the liquor, and keeps a good temperance house, to the joy of all good people. I preached there on three hours' notice, and about forty attended, the State's Attorney being present, who told me Eld. Farrell had got the good will of the good people. Vernon church is holding up its old colors, and looking for the Lord soon.

FROM KANSAS.

To all that love the Lord, Greeting:—Peace be with you evermore. Be of good cheer, Jesus is for us. All praise be unto the Father and Son. We have been greatly blest within the last month, and have seen some good done in Jesus' name. We have traveled nearly four hundred miles, scattered the seed in a number of counties, and seen a people raised up to glorify God in Dickinson Co. We were invited to that county by a Bro. Peck. The first evening only eight or ten were present, but we spoke to the few as we would to the many, on the glorious theme of the kingdom. The next night more came, and so on to the last. We were with the people ten evenings, scattering tracts, visiting, etc. Notwithstanding the busy state of things in farming, some left all to follow Christ. One who had been into almost everything—gambling, dancing, etc., came out and put on Christ. Another, who had been a fiddler, and attended all the dances to play for them, with his wife, daughter, and son, all came out and put on Christ by baptism. Another Bro., who had backslid from God, injured his brother, and brother-in-law, came to the house with his team in the middle of the afternoon, went and became reconciled to his brothers, and then in the evening at meeting offered his gift—a broken and contrite heart. I can assure you peace came, and a new impetus was given to the work. The two offended brothers were gained, came out, confessed Christ, and put him on by baptism. Twelve went forward in this ordinance, and twenty united in church covenant, appointing John Peck as Elder, and Bro. Maraton as deacon. The Lord did the work in a short time, and great grace rested upon the people. We did not shun to declare unto them the whole counsel of God. The blessed truths of the coming King and kingdom of our Lord and Savior had their desired effect.

The Lord blesses his truth wherever we go. Another year has commenced with the tent. We met, according to appointment, on the 15th of May, and elected new officers. Many came from all parts of the State. Thirteen were present who preach the word; others were not able to be with us. A Bro. Crowell, from Linn Co., was with us. He has long been united to the Baptist church, but has held our views, and has helped on the work after a godly sort. We hope others will do likewise, and that a greater power may be given to the cause this season, as the tent goes forth into new fields. Laborers ought to be supported, but, owing to the hard times, only a very few are able to do anything. We do hope that all will do what they can in this blessed work. We shall need more papers, tracts, books, etc., and we would invite all that desire to see the cause prosper in this State to lend us a helping hand in plucking some as brands from the burning. The Lord has blessed abundantly the past season, and we trust a ten-fold greater work may be wrought this season. Will not every one look to the Lord for wisdom in this movement? May every heart be uplifted to him in prayer, for his might and power to rest upon us, that we may have our health and strength as we shall go from place to place to proclaim these last messages of divine truth to the people. Bro. Virgil Hunt will accompany us this season. We hope the united prayers of God's children will be that his blessing may rest upon us and the people, and a great harvest be gathered home when Jesus comes.

We thank Sr. Russell, of Natick, Mass., for the tracts sent us; also Sr. Goodnow, of Hudson. The Lord reward them. Others sending tracts and books please direct to J. C. Smith, Arvonia, Orange Co. Remember the cause in Kansas, and pray that our faith fail not. From your Bro. and Sr. in the mission field for the Lord,

MY EXPERIENCE.

C. S. TUTTLE.

I became interested in the second coming of Christ almost twelve years ago, and was baptized by Bro. R. R. York. I enjoyed my mind about four years. In the mean time I was bereaved of my dear companion, who left evidence that he will receive immortality when Jesus comes. After my husband's death, I felt obliged to labor very hard to support myself and child; still remembering God's promise to the widow and fatherless. After a time worldly cares prevented my meeting with God's people, and I gradually lost my enjoyment. I did not hear an Advent sermon for more than seven years. Almost two years ago I went to hear Bro. Carr preach at Dexter, Me. He referred to the backsliders, unconverted and careless ones, and I felt like one of the careless ones, and thought I could never be a christian again, for I was at that time conformed to the world, loving society, and doing very fashionable business (dressmaking) in Bangor.

On account of ill health I retired from the city, and accepted numerous invitations from my friends to attend the Pittsfield Campmeeting last August. My object was to benefit my health, and see some dear ones I expected would be there. When I saw the love and union which was manifested throughout the camp, I thought it no place for me with so good a company, and would have got away without observation if I could. I avoided all conversation as much as possible, and did not care to attend any prayer meetings; but the love of God acting through his dear servants was too strong for me, and by kind persuasions I attended the last meeting Sunday evening, which was very powerful. God's Holy Spirit was manifested. I could not refrain from rising for prayer, and left the ground feeling somewhat relieved; but not being strongly fortified, I could not withstand the fiery darts of the enemy.

On returning to my work, my health failed rapidly. I could not labor, therefore went to Levant, to visit Bro. and Sr. Baker; the latter was formerly a dear friend of mine. After having some blessed privileges attending meeting, I returned to Bangor stronger and determined to lead a new life. My engagements for work were due, and I thought I would try and fulfill them, and if my health should fail again I would give up my business and look to the Lord for other ways of support. My prayer was for him to lead me aright. I worked for three months, then I was brought very low by hemorrhage of the lungs. As soon as able I came to Dexter, where I am now with my friends. Have improved slowly, and expect to be strong again. I have suffered much, nevertheless my heavenly Father has dealt rightly, for I have been a perverse child. I can see his guiding hand has kept me from many dangers. Truly he is more tender than any earthly parent. I will try to be a dutiful child hereafter, knowing if I love God all things will work for my good. I cannot manifest my gratitude like many, but I can say with sincerity, I thank all who have been interested to save the wandering one.

Beloved ones, come now, just now, and see how good the Savior is. A child of God receives comfort and peace which the world can neither give or take away. O thank the blessed Lord for providing a way by which all can be saved. Reader, will you and I hear it said, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord"? By the grace of God, let us strive for it.

HEAVIER THE CROSS.

Heavier the cross, the nearer heaven;
No cross without, no God within—
Death, judgment from the heart are driven
Amid the world's false glare and din,
Oh! happy he with all his loss,
Whom God hath set beneath the cross.

Heavier the cross, the better christian;
This is the touchstone God applies.
How many a garden would be wasting,
Unwet by showers from weeping eyes!
The gold by fire is purified;
The christian is by trouble tried.

Heavier the cross, the stronger faith;
The loaded palm strikes deeper root;
The vine-juice sweetly issueth
When men have pressed the clustered fruit;
And courage grows where dangers come,
Like pearls beneath the salt sea foam.

Heavier the cross, the heartier prayer;
The bruised reeds most fragrant are;
If sky and wind were always fair,
The sailor would not watch the star;
And David's psalms had ne'er been sung,
If grief his heart had never wrung.

Heavier the cross, the more aspiring;
From vales we climb to mountain crest;
The pilgrim of the desert tiring,
Longs for the Canaan of his rest.
The dove has here no rest in sight,
And to the ark she wings her flight.

Heavier the cross, the easier dying,
Death is a friendlier face to see;
To life's decay one bids defying,
From life's distress one then is free.
The cross sublimely lifts our faith
To him who triumphed over death.

Though crucified, the cross I carry
The longer, may it dearer be;
And lest I faint while here I tarry,
Implant thou such a heart in me,
That faith, hope, love, may flourish there,
Till for the cross my crown I wear.

Gems.

— There is more virtue in one sunbeam than a whole hemisphere of cloud and melancholy.

— Prayer is the daughter of charity and the sister of meekness.

— Joy flourishes in the sunshine but love grows and flourishes in the storm also.

— The best martyrs are those who know what it is to have the martyrdom of sin take place in their hearts.

— Sin is Satan's anvil in the heart of the impenitent; it feels nothing from unnumbered strokes.

— We should endeavor to honor the work of redemption, by our close imitation of Christ.

— The two great agents of Satan to lead sinful man to destruction, are pride and infidelity.

— Men are never so ridiculous from the qualities which really belong to them, as from those which they pretend to have.

Either exercise thy graces, or Satan will exercise thy corruptions; as one bucket descends, the other rises.

— The too frequent use of authority impairs it. If thunder were continuous it would excite no more sensation than the noise of a grist-mill.

— Good men are guided by reverence, not by fear, and they avoid not that which is afflictive, but that which is dishonest.

— The greatest heresy that can deceive the human mind, is the heresy that makes a man believe he can meet with mercy while he lives in sin.

— Hath any wronged thee? be bravely revenged; slight it, and the work is begun; forgive it, and 'tis finished; he is below himself that is not above an injury.

— We can do more good by being good, than all the wisdom treasured up in man has power to effect.

GOOD TESTIMONY FROM ONE LATELY SAVED.

J. H. SIMMS.

About the 1st of July, while earnestly engaged in secret prayer, I was strangely moved in reference to the higher life. It seemed to me there were precious heights to which I had never yet attained, although I thought in justification we obtained about all the evidence we ever could find. I was very much in opposition to the teachings of a second blessing, or witnessing power, and had spoken against it. Yet from the moment of my awaking to the necessity of this witnessing power, until I experienced it, I never doubted as I had done before. As soon as I became awakened, I became an inquirer, seeking for all the information I could obtain, not only from my brethren, but from the precious word of God. (Oh, how I love the precious word!) I resolved on going to Landisville national campmeeting. And I shall praise God as long as I live that I did go. I set about the work in much earnestness, the next day after my arrival, Tuesday, July 29th.

In the evening of this day, while fully engaged, God opened my eyes to behold the idols I entertained, and which I had never given up. And when I saw this, I shrank back, for I could not see how I ever could give up my dear old idol of over thirty years' enjoyment,—tobacco. I loved this idol; to me it was my dearest and only idol I cared much for. Here let me say, that so terrible was the struggle with this idol, that I arose and went away, much perplexed in mind. I prayed fervently, yet the necessity of giving up tobacco grew stronger and stronger.

After a night's rest, I resumed the contest again, attending the five o'clock meeting in the tabernacle, which I did not enjoy very much. After breakfast, I retired to a small woods near by; there I engaged with more earnestness than I ever remember of before in secret prayer. And it was there I saw plainly, that, if ever I obtained the blessing of sanctification, I must first, as a preparation and necessity, give up my tobacco. Through the assisting grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, then and there, under the old oak of a hundred years, I suppose, in age, I was fully enabled to give up tobacco. And no sooner had this sacrifice been accomplished than I began to feel better. I then returned to the camp; the meeting was about beginning at the stand; the invitation was given; and I, with some two hundred other brethren, bowed at the altar; and there, in a moment almost, after I bowed, God sanctified me wholly, the blood of Jesus cleansed me from all sin, and set me at perfect liberty.

Oh! the sweetness of that hour I shall never forget. I expect I shall shout it over again in glory. The most singular part of this rich grace to me is, from the moment the precious blood fully redeemed me until now, I have never felt the least taste or desire or appetite for tobacco. At Moundsville the Lord gave me a glorious renewal of his full redeeming power. I came home much strengthened, and ever since my entire consecration, I feel an earnest desire to see the work spread. Everywhere I go I feel it a duty to hold up the banner of full redemption, and many brethren have, since my return home, entered into this precious rest of faith. We are holding delightful meetings every week in our church (Asbury) at Wilmington, Del., which are continually increasing in power, and new witnesses are appearing and testifying at all our meetings. So the work is going on.

[Our good friend and brother, the doctor, who furnishes the above testimony, informed us that it had cost him about three hundred dollars per year for tobacco; but he has seen that he must not only give up the idol, but consecrate the idol-money to holy purposes, and is using it to scatter holiness literature. Reader, go and do likewise.—ED.]—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

THE PEACE CRY AGAIN.

Sergeant Bates is preparing a grand sensation for the world. While in Chicago recently, he announced his programme. The plan is nearly arranged, and he leaves for London in about ten days to carry it into effect. It is briefly as follows:

America, England, France, Spain, Germany, Russia, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, Austria, Sweden and Italy will each furnish one ex-soldier of their respective armies to make a grand march through the countries named. Each soldier will be mounted on a black horse, bearing the flag of his country, while leading the battalion will be one on a white horse, who will carry a white banner, labeled "Peace on earth, and good will to men."

This cavalcade, which will be led by Sergeant Bates, will start from Amsterdam, and will visit in turn Hamburg, Stockholm, St. Petersburg, Berlin, Dresden, Vienna, Venice, Rome, Florence, Geneva, Paris, London, and some other places in Europe. They will then embark at Liverpool for the United States, and after visiting Washington, will commence a march to the West, passing through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to Chicago. The march will probably not begin before next spring, though the London parties desire to start at once. Sergeant Bates expects to reach Chicago in about five months from the time his flags are unfurled at Amsterdam.

Absurd and silly as this contemplated pilgrimage may seem, it might yet strongly arouse the people, and the march of the fourteen may yet be as famous as the six hundred who roused Paris to frenzy as they tramped through France to the sound of the Marseillais.—Exchange.

HOME AND HEALTH.

LIKE JESUS.

I want to be like Jesus,
So lowly and so meek;
For no one marked an angry word
That ever heard him speak.

I want to be like Jesus,
So frequently in prayer;
Alone upon the mountain top,
He met his Father there.

I want to be like Jesus,
I never, never, find
That he, though persecuted, was
To any one unkind.

I want to be like Jesus,
Engaged in doing good;
So that of me it may be said,
She hath done what she could.

Alas! I'm not like Jesus,
As any one may see;
O, gentle Savior, send thy grace
And make me like to thee.

BOYS' SAYINGS.

"I WANT TO" AND "I DON'T WANT TO."

I think these words are most commonly heard from that class of boys who may be called "whining boys."

That they want a thing is with them quite a good reason why they should have it. They have not the least idea that the world is full of other people.

Their own wants are to them such great matters that they think that every thing else should give way, and they are greatly surprised when they find that "I want to" does not strike some one else as quite a good reason.

Peter wants to learn to swim. His elder brother, who had promised to take him, is suddenly called away, and the pleasure must be put off.

But oh, what a sad house Peter does make! It is no use to try to divert him. He will not be diverted. He wants to go by himself. He has never been in the water; and the thing is not to be thought of. His mother tells him that he would be risking his life. Peter hangs his head and his under lip, and answers, in a tone between a whine and a snarl,—"No, I shouldn't!"

He will not do anything else, or go anywhere else. He hangs about the room, throws himself down on the sofa, and "teases" after this fashion—"I want to."

"But you can't, Peter. It's impossible."

"Why?" And oh, with what a whine the words come out! And so, perhaps, it goes on for an hour or two, Peter always ending with—"Well, I want to."

I certainly think "the whining boy" ought never to have anything he whines for. It is a most unmanly habit. It is bad enough in a little child, but in a great boy of twelve it is simply absurd.

Of course those boys who think "I want to" a good reason for doing anything, also think "I don't want to" a good reason for leaving it undone. They "don't want to" go after the cows; they "don't want to" feed the horse; they "don't want to" go to market; in short, they "don't want to" do anything that requires the least effort and does not tend directly to their own pleasure.

To be sure, they expect to be called when tea is ready, they like milk when some one else brings home the cows, and they are fond of riding the horse which they are too lazy to feed; and of course they expect their share of what comes from the market.

One boy in a Sunday-school class "wants" some sort of a book, he does not exactly know what, only that it is not among those offered him for choice. He "don't want" this and he "don't want" that; but he does want his teacher to spend his time and pains to please him. It makes him feel himself of importance to have a lady or gentleman waiting on his whims. If I were this boy's teacher, I fear I should give him a certain time to please himself with a book, and if he did not do it, then he would go home without one.

I wonder if any boy who reads this paper ever thinks how much pains and expense and time are given to provide him with Sunday-school books. They must be covered and taken care of, and the librarian is at his post, rain or shine; the books must be often renewed; and all this is done that the children may have something to read.

I wonder how many Sunday scholars give a thought of gratitude to the givers of their weekly pleasures. Many of those who get books at Sunday-school would never get them in any other way. And yet I have sometimes seen more than one of these very boys behave as though in coming to the school they were doing the teacher a favor, whereas it was their place to be thankful and grateful.

Learn from what has been said to be contented, cheerful, and obedient. Do all you can to please others, and in so doing you will promote your own peace and good.—English Magazine.

RISE EARLY.

D. F. NEWTON.

"The lark is up to meet the sun,
The bee is on the wing;
The ant his labor has begun,
And groves with music ring."

The morning air adds brightness to the blood and vigor to the whole frame. "The freshness of the lip is one of the surest signs of health." Would you be well, enjoy health, life, vigor of soul and body? have your heart dance joyfully like the April breeze, and your blood flowing like an April brook? Up with the lark! inhale the pure sweetness of early dawn?

"Wake while yet the sparkling dew-drops
Gem each flowret's tiny bell;
With the joyous woodland warblers,
Loud their grateful chorus swell;
Kneel with calm and thankful spirit,
Kneel and breathe thy morning prayer."

Rise early! Up betimes! Who questions it? Wake, wake!—wake up, little sleepers; up and on your knees ere the sun streaks the east!

"Wake! for behold the rising light
Of morning gilds the sky!
Its glories call for thankful songs,
For action, prompt and high."

Prayer is called for—searching the Scriptures—the first thing. All the most eminently distinguished for elevated piety and usefulness have been early risers. The Lord Jesus, our great Exemplar, not only spent whole nights in prayer, but, also, "in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." See Mark 1: 25, and no doubt that this was his frequent custom. Mark, too, those who first visited the tomb of our blessed Lord. Who were they? what the hour of this visitation? before the dawn, "while it was yet dark." Their souls were kindled, lighted up in a flame most holy. D. F. NEWTON.

TRICHINA.—How many hogs have trichnia?

ANS. At a meeting of the St. Louis Board of Health a few weeks ago the city chemist reported that he had made microscopic examination of pork from one thousand hogs retailed at butcher's stalls in the city, for the purpose of ascertaining what per cent. of the pork sold was afflicted with trichina. The flesh from thirteen of the hogs, or one and three-tenths per cent., was found to be infected. The result when the experiment was made with separate hundreds was about the same. The doctor said that the butchers reported that they had sold but little pork during the last few months, and more care than usual had probably been exercised in cooking it. The parasite, when in a hog, was found in all parts, which must be very cheerful reading to those people who are wont to regale themselves upon the savory sausage or the nourishing bacon.

The true way to avoid trichina is to eschew pork. Touch not the unclean thing. The Bible is more emphatic in forbidding the use of pork than of wine, and yet christians use it.—Herald of Health.

A RACE OF MEN WITHOUT A LANGUAGE.—On the Island of Borneo has been found a race of wild creatures, of which kindred varieties have been discovered in the Philippine Islands, Terra del Fuego, and in South America. They walk ususually almost erect, on two legs, and in that attitude measure about four feet in height. They construct no habitations, form no families, scarcely associate together, sleep in caves, feed on snakes and vermin, on ants' eggs, and on each other. They cannot be tamed or forced to any labor, and are hunted and shot among the trees like the great gorilla, of which they are a stunted copy. When captured alive one finds with surprise that their uncouth jabbering sounds are like articulate language. They turn up a human face to gaze at their captors, and females show instincts of modesty: In fine, these wretched beings are men and women.—Herald of Health.

DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.—The following remedy for dyspepsia is said to be very effective in some cases: "Sweet cream or sweet milk, the richer the better; use as often as convenient. Whenever any burning or sour sensation at the stomach appears, drink half a pint of sweet cream or milk, and relief is evident. Make free use of it at meals. Total abstinence from the use of tobacco, coffee, strong drink, or of anything very sour, must be strictly adhered to. Coffee being the worst of all things for dyspeptics must be entirely avoided." Dyspeptics must remember that as their troubles come from over-eating, or eating irregularly, or some abuse of the stomach, the matter of a limited diet of nourishing food, taken regularly, is quite as important as anything in the shape of medicine.—Herald of Health.

THE NEW SONG.

Beyond the hills where suns go down,
And brightly beckon as they go,
I see the land of far renown,
The land which I so soon shall know.

Above the dissonance of time,
And discord of its angry words,
I hear the everlasting chime,
The music of unjarring chords.

I bid it welcome; and my haste
To join it cannot brook delay:
O song of morning, come at last,
And ye who sing it, come away!

O song of light, and dawn, and bliss,
Sound over earth, and fill these skies,
Nor ever, ever, ever cease
Thy soul-entrancing melodies.

Glad song of this disburdened earth,
Which holy voices then shall sing;
Praise for creation's second birth,
And glory to creation's King!

WILL CHRIST COME ON THE TENTH DAY OF THE SEVENTH MONTH?

E. H. BATEMAN.

(Concluded.)

Again. Do the Scriptures foretell in any way, the definite day of any year when Christ will return. Not to my knowledge. If they do, I confess my ignorance thereof. "But hold," says one. "You claimed the day of Christ's death was foretold by type, in the slaying of the paschal lamb, and may not the day of the Lord's return be also foretold by some remarkable type?" Well, what one is it? The answer comes from Lev. 23: 27. "On the tenth day of the seventh month there shall be a day of atonement." Let us now examine this in the light of Scripture facts, without any regard whatever to preconceived opinions. We know from Scripture, that the Levitical priesthood on earth, typified the great and unchangable priesthood of Christ in heaven. Proof, Heb. 8. "Now, of the things we have spoken, this is the sum, we have such a high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not man. For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer. For if he were on earth, he would not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law; who serve unto the example of heavenly things."

In Lev. 16, we are told the duties of the high priest on the "tenth day of the seventh month." The high priest on that day must first make an atonement for himself and his house, by offering a bullock as a sin offering. 15 vs. "Then shall he kill the goat of the sin offering that is for the people, and bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock. . . . And when he hath made an end of reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat, and Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness, and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited . . . And he shall wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments and come forth and offer his burnt offering, and the burnt offering for the people, and make an atonement for himself and for the people, . . . and this shall be a statute forever unto you, that, in the seventh month on the tenth day of the month, ye shall afflict your souls and do no work at all; . . . for, on that day, shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the Lord."

Now for the test. Who was our sin-offering? Jesus Christ. Was Jesus offered to make an atonement for us, according to the type on the "tenth day of the seventh month?" No. When was he offered. On the day of the passover. Does this make a break in the application of the "tenth day of the seventh month" type? It does. But let us proceed. Where must the high priest on earth go with the blood? "Bring his blood within the vail" or "Holy of Holies." Proof. Heb. 9: 25. "The high priest entereth into the Holy place, every year with the blood of others." Where must Christ our great high priest go? Heb. 9: 24. "For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." When must the high priest on earth enter into the holy place, or within the vail? On the "tenth day of the seventh month." Did Christ our great antitypical high priest ascend into heaven itself on the "tenth day of the seventh month?" No. When did he ascend? About ten days before Pentecost. Here Christ again breaks the definite time force of the type, by utterly ignoring its so-called claims. He sets the day of the year entirely aside, which the type sets forth as the day when he, as the great high priest, should enter into heaven.

"Well," says one, "we know that Jesus could not have died, and been buried, and rose again, and entered heaven all on one day, and fulfilled the Scriptures. Very true, but if this "tenth day" type is of so great importance to us, as revealing the time or specified day of his return, why did he not postpone the day of his ascension until that time, and so ratify the force thereof by establishing a precedent for us? "But," says another, "I admit that Jesus left this earth about ten days before Pentecost, but how do we know how long it took him to go to heaven, or but what he delayed his entering into heaven itself, until the "tenth day of the seventh month" came round? I confess we do not know just how long it took the Lord Jesus to perform the journey from earth to heaven, whether it took one minute, one hour, one day, or one week; but this we do know as a positive fact, taking the New Testament Scriptures for authority, that on the day of Pentecost, following his ascension, Jesus was, on that day, whether he was any sooner or not, glorified of God, enthroned in heaven itself, and "set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens, a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle which the Lord pitched and not man." Just before Jesus ascended, he spake to his disciples as follows (Luke 24: 49): "And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you, but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endowed with power from on high;" and in John 7: 39 it reads thus: "But this he spake of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified."

When was the Holy Ghost given? Acts 2. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place, . . . and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Then according to John 7: 39, Jesus was at that time, if not before, glorified of God; and Jesus was also on the day of Pentecost in "heaven itself" officiating as "a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle which the Lord pitched and not man;" for when Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, preached that mighty sermon unto the people on the day of Pentecost, "they were pricked in their hearts, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptizen, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call . . . Then they that gladly received the word were baptized, and the same day there were added unto them about 3.000 souls."

Question. Could this work of the conversion of about 3000 souls on the day of Pentecost, ever been accomplished, if Jesus our high priest had not been officiating in his priestly character in the "true tabernacle which the Lord pitched and not man?" No; for Christ must enter "into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." "And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father" [not away from him, outside of heaven]. For "it is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." Though Peter did plant, even as did Paul and Apollos, yet God himself must give the increase, and that through the personal intercession of Christ, who must appear in God's presence in heaven itself.

Now as we have plainly proved Christ's death, burial, and resurrection to have been exactly "according to the Scriptures," we also believe his second coming will be "according to the Scriptures." We have also proved that Christ entirely disregarded and set at naught the "tenth day of the seventh month," as the time when he must offer himself as a sin-offering for the sins of the people. We have further proved that Christ did not observe the "tenth day of the seventh month" as the time when he must enter into heaven, but ascended months before that time. Now, what right have we to expect, much less what Scripiural authority have we for teaching to our fellow-men as a part of God's revealed word to us, that Christ will leave the mercy seat on the "tenth day of the seventh month," and fulfill on time the last part of a type, the time force of which, he has never conformed to, but contrarywise has showed his disapproval thereof by twice breaking it? "It is a part of my faith" says one, "and I can't help believing it." Is that the way we should give a reason of the hope and faith we possess? Paul says, "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Then our faith must rest upon the "word of God," and if we have not this word to sustain our faith, it is unscriptural and ought to be abandoned. As a people, we know that the majority of christendom have some of their doctrines founded upon heathen traditions, and not upon the "word of God." Let us then be careful not to act upon the same principle we deplore in others.

Now, what is the conclusion? When we reason from type to antitype, and from shadow to substance, we reason upon an analogical scale. When one great feature of a type is fulfilled in its antitype, the fulfillment thereof establishes the precedent, that a part is fulfilled and we may reasonably look for the complete fulfillment of all its most prominent features in due time, as set forth by the first precedent. In the case before us, we have first, in the type, the sacrifice of the sin-offering for the people; and first in the antitype, we have Christ offering himself as a sin-offering to be sacrificed for the people. This is the first precedent. We may now look for the second great feature in the type, namely; the high priest entering within the vail. In the antitype this is fulfilled by Christ's entering into heaven itself. Thus the second precedent is established.

Third and last feature; the coming out of the high priest from within the vail. This has not yet been fulfilled in the great antitype, but will be when Christ shall rise up and leave the mediatorial seat, and come to bless his waiting people; for the analogical argument established by these two former precedents prove that it must be even so, and to this agree all the plain and positive teachings of the scriptures that bear on this point. But those two precedents prove another thing. They prove that the "tenth day of the seventh month" was not the time of their fulfillment. Do they prove anything else? Yes, they prove as much forward as they do backwards. What then is the analogy? It is that Christ will not come out from "within the vail," "heaven itself," on the "tenth day of the seventh month," for he did not observe this day at his death nor at his ascension; and to this agrees the words of Jesus himself, where he speaks through his disciples to those who shall be living and believing on him at the time when the signs preceding his second coming are being fulfilled. Mark 13: 13. "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." I am willing to submit this application of our Lord's language as here recorded, to the judgment of any competent grammarian, who will take into due consideration the context.

Again, in Luke 17: 34, "I tell you in that night, there shall be two in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left." This shows conclusively the condition of the two classes, the good and the bad, up to the very last moment of probation.

Another argument for sustaining the theory of the "tenth day of the seventh month" is based on the day of the sounding of the "Jubilee Trumpet." Lev. 25: 9, 10. "Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land. And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." I admit the sounding of the jubilee trumpet and the proclamation of liberty was a type, which must at some time be fulfilled in its antitype just as much as was the atonement. In the type the trumpet sounded on the "tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of the atonement." As Jesus our antitypical high priest officiated at the atonement by offering himself as a sin-offering for the people, and himself ascended into heaven; so must he also preside and officiate at the sounding of the antitypical jubilee trumpet and also cause it to sound. Now as Jesus did not observe the "tenth day of the seventh month," as the specified and definite time for the atonement which he made, what reason have we to suppose that he will observe that particular day in the sounding of the great antitypical jubilee trumpet? None at all. The two precedents already established prove by fair analogical argument, that Jesus has repudiated the "tenth day of the seventh month" as being the time of fulfilling in antitype those great events that were foreshadowed in types on the day of atonement. In this he plainly gives us to understand by precept and example, that it is the events he fulfills and not the definite time of those events.

Question. Has the type of the jubilee trumpet ever been fulfilled in its antitype in the past, or does it remain to be fulfilled in the future? Let God's word answer it, and not man's theory. Luke 4: 16–24. "And he came to Nazareth where he had been brought up; and as his custom was he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up for to read. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias, and when he had opened the book he found the place where it was written: The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind; to set at liberty them that are bruised. To preach the acceptable year of the Lord . . . And he began to say unto them, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears."

What plainer Scripture evidence can any one desire than this, to prove that Christ fulfilled on that day the antitypical jubilee set forth by the type? What does the type say? Lev. 25: 10. "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land." What does Isaiah prophecy in Isa. 61: 1? "To proclaim liberty to the captives." How does it read in Luke 4: 18? "To preach deliverance to the captives, to set at liberty them that are bruised." And now, as though Jesus would forever put to silence those who claim the jubilee type must be fulfilled in the future, he says (Luke 4: 21), "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." In that synagogue in Nazareth, and on that very day, the ears of the Jews heard that great jubilee trumpet sound as the Son of God placed it to his lips and blew a blast thereon, the sound of which has not yet died away, but has continued to echo and reecho till every nation has heard its glad notes of liberty, for Jesus said to his disciples, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." Matt. 28: 19. And now hear Paul in the 8th chapter of Romans. "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death; for what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh; for they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit; for to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Brethren, let us catch these notes of warning from Paul, and be careful that we become not "carnally minded," by tenaciously holding the future fulfillment of this old Jewish type, when Christ says over 1800 years ago, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." "To be spiritually minded is life and peace." Question. Does the persistent urging of the "tenth day of the seventh month" produce "life and peace" in the body? Plain facts declare that it tends to discord, alienation, division, and death. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

After giving the "parable of the ten virgins," the Lord adds for our benefit this admonition: "Watch, therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." Why then spend our time, money and talents in trying to find out something which Jesus has expressly declared we never shall know, until it bursts upon us like the lightning's flash? We might as well try to take heaven by storm, and go where Jesus forbade his disciples from going when he said, "Whither I go ye cannot come." We might as well take a straw for a lever, and a blade of grass for a fulcrum, and with these tumble the Rocky Mountains into the sea, as to attempt to tell the day when Christ will come.

Let us note one more Scripture quotation, that is sometimes used as collateral evidence to substantiate the "theory" of the "tenth day of the seventh month." Amos 3: 7. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." This I firmly believe; and now I would ask a few questions touching this point, which each one may answer for themselves. Has not God fully made that revelation in his word? Has not he told us that Jesus was coming back again, and how he would come? Has he not given us ample warning of the event? Are we not told in his word of the rise and fall of the four universal kingdoms of this world? Have we not beheld with our own eyes on the pages of history, the record of these prophecies as being already fulfilled? Has not God told us of the rise, growth and decay of the Papal Hiearchy? and do we not behold it today, tottering on the verge of eternal ruin, rotten to the very core, a mass of putrefaction from which there rises a stench worse than the foulest odors from a dead carcass? Have we not already seen hung out in the heavens the blazing signal lights which the prophets and Jesus told us would be there just before the Lord should come? Has not the earth of late, groaned in her travailing pains, as never before, waiting for her redemption from the curse? Has not God told us of the condition of the world at large just prior to the great and terrible day of wrath? And do we not see every day of our lives the literal fulfillment thereof? Do we not see the whole earth and all that is therein in the condition of the aged man before alluded to, bearing its marks of age, and staggering under the load which the curse has heaped upon it, ready at any moment for dissolution? Jesus told us "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh." Has not God then amply revealed his plans and purposes unto us to fulfill the prophecy of Amos? I claim that he has. "God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world by that man Christ Jesus;" but that definite day he has not revealed unto us, for Jesus says to us, "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is . . . Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh . . lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping, and what I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH."

I am watching for my blessed Savior now, to-day, for I firmly believe we are close up to the judgment, and no other position is safe for me, for I know not when he will come. If he does not come this year, it is my desire and fixed purpose to watch every day next year, and if he does not come next year, then I expect to watch the next, and so on and on, patiently waiting and watching and giving the household meat in due season, as God may give me from his great storehouse, until this poor heart shall be made glad and rejoice, when mine eyes shall behold the king in his beauty, or until these weak hands shall have done their last work for the Master, and I shall have fallen asleep in Jesus. If my position is wrong, I wish to know it, and I will then abandon it; but if true, then let us sustain it, for it is a subject of much importance to us as a people.

Lockport, N. Y.

The Christian era commenced Jan. 1, in the middle of the 4th year of the 194th Olympiad; the 753d year from the building of Rome, and in the 4714 of the Julian period. It is now believed that Christ was born April 5th, 4 B. C. This era was invented by a monk, Dionysius Exiguus, about 532. It was introduced into Italy in the 6th century, and ordered to be used by Bishops, by the council of Chelsea, in 816, but not generally employed for several centuries. Charles III., of Germany, was the first who added "in the year of our Lord" to his reign in 879.

The hope of living long on earth should not make you covetous, but the prospect of living long in heaven should make you bounteous. Though the sun of charity rise at home, yet it should always set abroad.

THE SUDDEN ADVENT OF CHRIST.

The Second Advent of Christ will come suddenly, in an instant of time, all things continuing as they were through the very preceding instant, all things in the world, sun, moon, stars, dew, rain, beasts, birds, men, women, each and all found in their ordinary track, following their ordinary calling, up to the very instant of the bursting in of the Lord upon the world. You are gazing upon the sky; you see a lightning-light along it; it is the coming of the Lord. You are speaking to your wife or your child by your fireside; an awful thunder breaks upon you, or you are sleeping in your bed and hear a fearful crash; it is the Lord's coming. You are awake in an hour of midnight darkness; you behold a fearful stream of brightness blaze in upon you; it is the advent of the Lord. You are riding upon your horse, or buying in the market, or working in the field, or busied in your garden, or looking over your accounts, or getting bread for your family, or eating it with them, or reading a book; you feel the earth tremble with a fearful shaking under your feet; —it is the Lord's return. You go to the door to meet a mother, or a brother, or a friend —you meet the Lord. You open the window to hear the chime of the evening bells —you hear the Lord. You hasten to see something that calls your attention—you see the Lord. Awful day! awful coming! awful Lord! awful suddenness! awful judgment! "Prepare to meet your God;" prepare to meet his day; prepare to meet his judgments; prepare, prepare.

That Advent will come when the world is full of living men, women, and children. No universal blast of death will have first swept across the earth, and depopulated it of its inhabitants. Living men, and women, and children will be all over the world when the day comes, as full of strength, health, vigor, activity, thought, forethought, as at any period since God first "breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life."

It will come when men are blind to its coming, each in his own blindness, asleep—each in his own dream. The astronomer will be calculating his eclipses for years yet to come; the physician will be studying his arts, to add length of days to man's body; the philosopher, with his "philosophy falsely so called," will be improving and enlightening his species; the politician will be planning beautiful schemes for man's welfare in ages onward; the man of riches will be saying to his soul, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry;" the man "that will be rich" will be toiling and laboring after his "filthy lucre," rising up early and sitting up late; the man that "liveth in pleasure" will be sending for "the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe and wine," to be in his "feast," regarding "not the work of the Lord, neither considering the operation of his hands;" blind preachers will be speaking their smooth things and prophesying their deceits, each in his own delusion, but all of them blinding men's eyes to the day—the king, and the noble, and the magistrate, and the farmer, and the tradesman, and the laborer—the mean man, and the mighty man, the married and the unmarried, the people and the priest, the servant and his master, the maid and her mistress, the buyer and the seller, the lender and the borrower, the taker of usury and the giver of usury to him,—shall all be weaving their webs of distant years and distant things, turning time into eternity, thinking and speaking of time's world as never-ending, at the very instant when the day of the Lord cometh upon them as a thief.

Sinners of this generation, as it was in the day when the Son of man is revealed. Thousands and tens of thousands of living men, eating and drinking, buying and selling, planting and building, fluttering like the butterflies in a summer's day, about the perishing flowers of a perishing world, steeping all their senses in the earthly business of the passing hour, making everything a business, whether pleasure, daily avocation, necessary labor, natural appetites, even "eating and drinking," everything made a business of, and the soul observed and quenched therein, "whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things." The farmer at his market! the planter with his trees! the builder at his house! the tradesman in his shop! the student at his books! the reveller at his feast! the gambler at his cards! the rake at his revels! the usurer at his gold! the nobleman at his pomp! the king at his court! the soldier in his camp! the laborer at his toil! the idler at his folly! the drunkard at his drink! the glutton at his meat! Each at his sin. Each in his day-dream. Each in his soul's poison. The Lord bears it no longer. His mouth has sent forth the word of all-desolating vengeance. The vengeance-storm obeys, and gathers and thickens, and rolls on, and hangs over. One moment's pause—the preachers are preaching; peradventure the sinners may repent. One moment's pause—hark! the pause is for the wise virgins—hark! "A shout, the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God." The Lord can do nothing till they are in refuge, being merciful unto them. See, O see! they are caught up together in the air, and so are they ever with the Lord. The storm now bursts upon the poor guilty world.

O what a day of separation—of instant and awful separation—will that day indeed be! Two of a household shall be in one bed, brothers, it may be, that have grown up together, eating of the same meat, and drinking of the same cup; two women of one village, sisters in neighborly love and kindness, shall be grinding corn in one mill, each for her little ones; two men of the same house of worship, dwelling together as brethren in unity, and making their daily labor good and pleasant by sharing it together, shall be working in one field; and "one shall taken," "caught up to meet the Lord in the air," and "the other shall be left." Oh! then will be the cry of those who are left, Lord, Lord, open to us. Then will be the cry of the left child to the taken parent, "O my father! O my mother! take me with thee, take me with thee;" one look of love and pity, seeming to say, "My poor child I cannot save thee, thou wouldest not hearken to me in days that are gone;" and the parent is taken to the Lord in the air, and the child is left. Then will the parent cry to the child, "O my son! O my daughter! do not leave me, do not leave me, hide me with thee from this wrath;" and the child will answer, "My poor father, my poor mother, thou wouldest not listen to me, thou thoughtest me foolish, now I cannot help thee!" Then will be the bitter cry between the husband and the wife, the brother and the sister, the grandmother and her child's child, the young man and his beloved maiden, as each goes in this hour or eternal separation, one to the glory or heaven, and the other to the terrors of the great tribulation! Sinner, sinner, tremble, and believe, and repent. Now is the day of grace, free and full, for thee and for thy kindred. Now is the day of God's justification of the ungodly. Rom. 4: 5. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." 2 Cor. 6: 2. Oh, what a change awaits those who love the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. In that day, whilst a sensual and benighted world is locked in the profoundest sleep, as still almost as death itself, the Son of man shall suddenly appear in the region of the air, and his voice shall be heard through the vaulted arch of heaven as the voice of mighty thunderings; and those, and those only who hear that voice, shall live; the organs of their ears having been already exercised and quickened by listening to the note of warning; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, shall a glorious change pass upon the expecting saints of God; from corruption they shall be translated into incorruption, and be clothed with immortality and life; attracted by that glorious vision, the brightness of which shall dispel for them the darkness that encircles the world; and drawn by the intensity of their love, and guided by attendant angels, they shall rise to meet the Lord in the air, mocking the brightness of the sun by the dazzling splendor of their own radiance. Immortality alone can sustain such a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory—raised, it may be, from the depths of penury and suffering into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

What a change to pass upon that man—the object, it may be, of this world's scorn; poor in spirit, perhaps poor in person; his life sustained by the cold hand of reluctant charity; the subject of suffering and sorrow, with little human sympathy, known to few, and it may be to those few only as an object of pity, and perhaps contempt; possessing none of this world's goods, and, strange—O, strange to say! in the ears of this generation, not caring to possess them, because he has within him the earnest of an enduring substance, an everlasting inheritance which fadeth not away. Ye proud and noble, ye high and lofty ones, ye kings and princes, ye great and rich among the sons of men, ye who have no eyes for such a class of men, look upon him now that he is transfigured and translated.

Say, know ye the man again? or can ye not steadily look, and have your proud eyes sunk beneath the high and lofty bearing of that glorious being, upon whom God hath stamped the impress of his own image; and before whom the proudest kings on the earth, could they look upon him with an unquailing eye and an unblanched cheek, would fall down and worship? Well, we know, in that day, ye would give the honors of successive ages, the wealth of accumulating generations—could ye bring to recollection even a cup of cold water given in love to this disciple of the Lord Jesus Christ. Can ye not even now, before that change passes, trace the semblance between the sons of a king and the King himself?—Signs of our Times.

SOLEMN HOUR.

D. C. THOMAS.

Dear readers of the Crisis:—We are nearing the judgment. There is no time for idle dreaming; no time for folded hands, when the Master stands before the door, and a guilty world is to be warned of approaching doom. Solemn thought! Let him who would be wise now flee to Christ for a refuge from the coming storm of wrath, which is soon to burst upon this careless, sin-loving, God-forgetting generation. Thankful indeed should we be that mercy still is offered to all who will repent and forsake their sins, avail themselves of that full and free salvation which is obtained through the sin-cleansing blood of Jesus alone. Beloved friends, God has said, Lift up a warning voice. We dare not refuse. The Judge is at the door. He has announced the penalty of sin; it is death.

Transgressors, sinners, unbelievers, are to be destroyed, consumed, blotted out of being; that is the righteous sentence of the Holy One. We recognize its equity. We bow to its wisdom. We see in it deep mercy to the sinners themselves. The man was offered pardon, peace, justification, purity, immortality in Christ, without money, and without merit; but he would not accept the offer. Love sought him, followed him, entreated him to become an heir of God, and a fellow heir with Christ; but he scorned her entreaties, and turned to his corruptions with renewed zest. So the word goes forth, Let him "utterly perish in his own corruption." He has no more taste for the pure, the noble, the sublime, the holy. He does not appreciate Christ; he does not desire the Holy Spirit. What is to be done with him? He must die. There is mercy to him at the very heart of the penalty. Tears fill our eyes while we pen the sinner's doom. Jesus offers to save us, but if we reject his offer, we remain as we were. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Escape is impossible, if we neglect the only means of safety. Neglect is ruin. Jesus alone can save us. Neither is there salvation in any other. O, sinner, your damnation is sure if you neglect Jesus. Dost thou think that God will not execute his threatenings? that thou canst escape his piercing eye? or that the rocks will cover thee? Vain hopes. There is no escape but to come to Jesus. He entreats you to be saved. Come, with all your sins and sorrows. Come, just as you are. Come at once. He will in no wise cast you out. Come to Jesus.

THE UPRIGHT.

"For the righteous Lord loveth righteousness; his countenance doth behold the upright. Praise is comely to the upright. The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and their inheritance shall be forever. Behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace. His seed shall be mighty upon the earth; the generation of the upright shall be blessed. Unto the upright ariseth light in the darkness; he is gracious and full of compassion, and righteous. The upright shall dwell in thy presence. For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. The way of the Lord is strength to the upright. The integrity of the upright shall guide them. The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them. The mouth of the upright shall deliver them. Righteousness keepeth him that is upright. Such as are upright in their way are his delight. The tabernacle of the upright shall flourish. The prayer of the upright is his delight. The highway of the upright is to depart from evil. The upright shall have good things in possession."

Who would not be upright when we are so near the possession of these good things? The Lord strengthen the heart of his people. Amen. Hoping to be among the upright ones who shall have dominion in the morning, I am your sister, E. S. Willard.

TRUST IN GOD.

IDA AHLBORN.

Who is it that has not felt at times that there is one, and only one, from whom aid can come? In the hour of emergency, men feel their own weakness, and knowing that God is powerful and loving, they turn unto him; and lips long unused to prayer breathe forth strong and earnest supplication. Then they feel that they are not self-reliant; that they need some higher and stronger arm to lean upon than the arm of flesh. But it is not only in the day of sorrow and danger that we are to call upon him. Trust him in cloudy and sunshiny weather. It is safe to trust him. Read how he has led his people, how he has rescued them from danger, how he has answered prayer and blessed abundantly; and then ask yourself whether it is not safe to confide all to him, and let him be your guard and guide. He who divided the sea that his people might pass through, who made the water gush forth from the rock, who fed them with manna from heaven, who was with them despite all their murmurings and distrust; oh! he will surely lead thee into the good path. Though the night be closing around thee, and the dark precipice and swift torrent be near, yet thou shalt not stumble, for thy guide will go before thee a pillar of fire, and thou art safe.

Hast thou pain and afflictions? He who sweetened the waters of Marah can sweeten for thee the bitter cup of sorrow. Art thou heavy laden? Go to Him, for he is the great burden-bearer. Are there temptations in thy way that thou canst not resist? Trust in the Lord, and he will bring thee out purer by the fiery trial. In the dark hour of trial, when thou hast none to whom thou canst go, when the eyes of mankind look coldly on thee, and when no heart beats in sympathy with thine, oh! then the arms of everlasting love are around thee, and the heart of the great Father yearns over thee with tender pity.

He has promised in his word to succor us, and his word is truth. Transitory and false are all earthly things, but "the word of our Lord shall stand forever." O! it is blessed to trust the Lord. He is more willing to give good gifts to us than we are to our children. Yet how doubting are our hearts! Even after he has succored us from perils, we, like the Israelites, distrust him when new difficulties come in our way. We forget that he has said, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." What a mighty friend he is! Earth can offer us no friend so constant and powerful. Her gifts are all subject to decay. Her fame and wealth are fleeting and transitory; but the glory and riches of our Lord are eternal. He "is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever." Let us trust him wholly. Before the Savior left his disciples, he said to them, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." And he is with us now. He may hide his face from us for awhile; he may try us in the furnace of affliction; yet the Lord can not be afar off. O, may we all say with David, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."

CHRISTIAN PROGRESSION.

We believe all christians admit and claim, that no disciple of Christ can attain to a position in this life, beyond which there is no more growth, or reach a point where he is not liable to make mistakes, be tempted, and have sore conflicts with Satan. Growth in grace is plainly taught in the Scriptures, but nowhere are we exhorted to grow into grace. A tree or plant might grow in the ground, when planted in a good soil, but it would be quite another thing for it to grow into the ground.

There are a few questions that may be asked in relation to christian experience, that should be definitely answered, and the points connected with them clearly understood by every disciple of Christ. (1) Do we grow into pardon for our sins? or is it received instantaneously? Will any one say, who has ever received pardon, that he obtained it by installments, a little at a time? or did it come fully all at once? It is a settled fact in christian experience, that a person does not obtain pardon because he has done a certain amount of work, fasted a given number of days, performed a pilgrimage journey, or paid a specified sum of money into the Lord's treasury; but simply because he confessed and forsook his sins. When he did that, pardon was as sudden as his decision and corresponding action. Instead of growing out of sin, he was pardoned out; not partly out, but fully; so that not a single sin remained to produce condemnation. If he should ever fall into sin again, he would need to be pardoned out in the same way as at the first. Hence it follows that christian progression does not consist in growing out of sin.

Whoever should advocate that we grow out of sin, to be consistent, must also deny that our sins are forgiven at the time of conversion; or in other words, deny that pardon holds any place in the plan of salvation taught in the Bible; but this cannot be done without denying an abundance of plain Scripture. Without further examination, we think it is most apparent, that growth in grace is not growing out of sin, but rather a growth that takes place because we are "made free from sin." We have yet to learn that one can grow in grace while he remains in sin. He may grow in knowledge, and become an able defender of the doctrine of the Bible; a thorough theoretical preacher of the same, and yet be destitute of the grace of God, because he allows sin to remain, produced by hatred, variance, pride, covetousness, lying, licentiousness, or some other thing. Such may succeed in leading others to see and embrace the true doctrine of the Bible, while they must fail in building them up spiritually. One cannot lead others beyond where he has been himself. He may teach clearly all he has learned of doctrinal or prophetical subjects, while his own heart is burdened with condemnation for sin. Such an one may continue to grow in knowledge during his whole life time, and not grow a particle in grace, because sin remains in his heart, and no amount of growth will ever take it out. Sins committed never grow smaller. They do not become outlawed like some debts. They do not grow smaller as they grow older. They remain in full size till they receive complete pardon through faith in the blood of Christ. When that takes place, then the individual can begin to grow in grace. It will be seen that this point is reached suddenly by pardon.

We think all who believe in Christ as a Savior must be agreed that we do not grow out of our sins, but that the only way to be free from them is by instantaneous pardon, through faith in Jesus.

THE GIFT.

We now come to inquire (2), does the pardoned one grow into "the gift of the Spirit?" No more than he did into pardon. When received, it comes as suddenly as pardon, but never till after there is full forgiveness for all sins, and it can be retained no longer than we are "free from sin." So long as we are filled with the Spirit, we are in a condition to grow in grace. "The gift" produces no new attributes that were not received through the Spirit when first pardoned, but it subdues and paralyzes the Adamic nature, or "the law of sin and death," that had been working before in the system, producing at times pride, impatience, hatred, covetousness, love of the world, envy, jealousy, etc., so that these, like weeds in the garden, which have hindered the growth of the plants, are prevented by the presence of the Holy Spirit from standing in the way of "Christian progression," as was the case before the gift was received. The person may then grow steadily in the strength of his love, in meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, forbearance, patience, peace, self-denial, and all other christian graces, which are the fruits of the abiding Spirit. Such we understand to be the law of "christian growth. M. G.

DISCUSSION IN SALEM.

Monday evening, June 8th, we commenced a discussion in Salem, Mass., in Lyceum Hall, with W. F. Jamieson, a noted Spiritualist, from Chicago. We discussed the following:—"RESOLVED, "That the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from demons." We debated five evenings. The large audiences manifested more than ordinary interest in the discussion. Mr. Jamieson is an earnest, interesting, and ready speaker, of quick perception, abounding in wit, sarcasm and ridicule, and not over particular in putting his opponent's position in a correct light.

Considering his ability, it was thought he made a weak defense. He made but a faint attempt to show that departed human spirits are the authors of the Spiritual manifestations. He said he did not propose to prove any thing. He reminded us of the saying of an inspired writer when referring, evidently, to the system Mr. Jamieson was endeavoring to support: "Ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." He seemed like a blind man wandering in a trackless forest in pursuit of a distant home.

He is a bold blasphemer against God and the Bible, and eulogized the Devil very highly, expressing for him great sympathy and respect. We think he must be one of Satan's favorites, worthy of a prominent position in his service, if his spirit and talk may be taken for evidence. It is a marked fact, that Spiritualists are continually becoming more and more hostile to christianity, God and the Bible, and seem determined to do all in their power to destroy confidence in them. When speaking of Satan, Mr. Jamieson said: "Good old Devil, how you have been abused. Poor, old, patient, gentle being; not a murmur from your lips. Job was nowhere when compared with you." Thus he went on for sometime eulogizing the Devil for his noble deeds, but speaking, most contemptuously of the Lord. Such are the fruits of Spiritualism, more properly called Devilism. It surpasses all other false systems of religion in its diabolical spirit. It is Satan's last and best effort to seduce the whole world to take the broad road to destruction. M. G.

THE EASTERN QUESTION AGAIN.

We watch with eager gaze the eastern heavens, to mark the dawning light of day as it unfolds its mantle of morning brightness, ending a tedious night of gloomy sadness. So the spouse of Christ, mid the storm and darkness of a cursed and blighted world, has long turned her watchful eye toward the prophetic eastern nations, and carefully marked the foretold movements of the great Gog of the north, as he prepares himself among his snow-capped mountains and frozen lakes, to march to the "unwalled" fields of the "sick man's" possessions. Then the war bugle will sound from all the Roman mountains, summoning Armageddon's warriors to the vale of earth's last tragic battle scene.

Russia has been watched by God's unwearied sentinels through a long period, as she has developed her national counsels, in which she has unvaryingly designed to float her imperial robes over Ivan's bridal inheritance—the Greek Empire. The prophets, long ago, saw through the prophetic glass the grand movements of the iron kingdoms, wheeling into line on Megiddo's field of fearful slaughter. Their predictions evidently involve the same nations, and contemplate the same movements as are involved in the present "Eastern Question." We, therefore, watch every advanced step and new development of national combinations and military movements connected with that question, as he that watcheth for the morning. It is so certain, to political men and statesmen in Europe, that the next great war will witness Russia moving to occupy Constantinople and Palestine, by consent of Austria, Germany and Italy, with England, France, and the whole Catholic world in opposition; that they anticipate those events in every great movement that is made. They seem to record with breathless anxiety the movement of every king and cabinet, thinking that the next may apply the match to the terrible magazine lying under the Roman kingdoms. All seem to feel that unparalled scenes of blood are rapidly approaching, and are now casting their gloomy shadows upon us. All seem involuntarily to cast their eyes to Rome and Constantinople, as the grand centres, where the fearful scenes of doom are to be enacted. God has clearly pointed the prophetic hand to these same great powers, and has signified his immutable purpose whelming destruction of the last day retribution.

We present below, extracts from two writers, giving the present aspect of the great Eastern question, thus:—

THE EASTERN QUESTION AGAIN.—Since the visit made recently by the Emperor Francis Joseph to St. Petersburg, the German press has been freely discussing the Eastern question. A leading German journal, the Allemeine Zeitung, tells us that the interests of Germany on the upper Danube are identical with those of Russia on the lower. Austria is warned that if she stands in the way of the development of Germany or Russia, she will be smothered in their embrace. The maintenance of Turkey is no dogma in Germany. The crystallizing process of the Christian minor States of Turkey is the common interest of Germany and Russia. This is plain speaking. Is Austria the only power to be consulted in the premises? In the event of such ideas taking practical shape, France and even England might have something to say. Germany and Russia united could no doubt do much as they liked with Austria and Turkey. But if Austria and Turkey were backed up by France and England, the fate of battle might not be in harmony with the ambition of the German and Slavonic powers.—Boston Journal.

As so much interest attaches to meetings of crowned heads in these days, the visit which the cable announces of the Emperor of Austria to the King of Italy, may well excite anxiety among alarmists. Francis Joseph has lately been at St. Petersburg, and the rapprochement between him and the Czar, considering their late unfriendly relations, was as remarkable as his fraternizing with the monarch who, with the aid of Napoleon III., wrested from him his Italian dominions. Ultramontanism may well be puzzled by a visit which, in its purely political relations, is full of interest to observers of European complications.—Boston Globe. J. C.

STATE OF EUROPE.

The following is from the "Signs of Our Times," published at 2 Ivy Lane, Paternoster Row, London, E. C. It is published weekly, and advocates the immediate personal coming of Christ. It says:

"The nations of Europe are more disquieted now than they were at the time of our last conference twelve months ago. In France political parties seem more irreconcilable, and the difficulty of agreeing upon any settled government appears more formidable than at any period since the end of the Communist outbreak in 1871. In Spain the Carlist rebellion seems to have passed into a chronic stage; and changes in the government are of constant occurrence. In Germany the apprehensions of an inevitable renewal of the Franco-German war at an early date have deepened; and it is felt that a general European war may soon be precipitated either by the ceaseless agitations of the Ultramontane party, or by the movement of Russia toward Central Asia or Turkey and the re-opening of the eastern question. The nations are everywhere arming to the teeth, and Europe resembles a vast military camp.

Thoughtful men, irrespective of prophetic conclusions, are taking the same view as to a great crisis being at hand. By a singular coincidence, almost on the same day that the prophetical conference in London was being held, there was an address delivered by the moderator of the free church of Scotland to their annual general assembly in Edinburgh, at which hundreds of their ministers were present, and the views expressed by him as to the coming conflict were precisely those which enlightened investigators of prophecy entertain. He stated that in the present unexampled religious awakening, as well as in other signs of the times, he saw a foretoken of great trials and even persecutions about to befall the church." M. G.

DARK CLOUDS keep rising over Rome, and 'signs there's no mistaking' declare 'that Jesus will soon appear. The following is from the Catholic Review:—

"It is observed by the press of Italy that the masons of that country invariably give their dinners and banquets on a Friday. This, however, it appears, is not the practice of the masons in the Brazils. In that country which is still full of Catholic traditions they dare not openly violate ancient customs. At Rio the masonic party works under the surface and not openly as in Europe; but the results are the same, as has been recently demonstrated by the persecutions which several bishops of this empire have received at the hands of the government which seems to be at present entirely in the hands of the masons. At a recent masonic dinner in Rome, given on Friday in Easter week, one of the chief dignitaries of the order proposed the following toast: 'Death to religion and long life to the principles of the French revolution of 1793.' Another, Brother Bacci, stated that 'Masonry having at last attained its grand object,—possession of Rome—, it must remain in that city until the last obstrcles had been removed'—meaning the Catholic religion. There can be no doubt that the Italian Masonic lodges of to-day are identical with the clubs of Paris in the last century, and that sooner or later like men will come forth from their obscurity to repeat the same fearful and oloody deeds. The '93 of Italy has not yet come, but any one of sense and discernment can easily predict that before long that unfortunate country will witness scenes as terrible as those which filled France and Europe with horror during the 'Terror' and late 'Commune.'" M. G.

OUTLOOK IN FRANCE.—The present political aspect in France is very threatening. There is a strong propability of another revolution in a short time. The Republicans and Imperialists are becoming bitter in their feelings towards each other. The Buonapartists claim that the Imperial Prince should take the throne of his father, Napoleon III.; the Republicans are most firmly opposed. There is much danger of a bloody struggle between the parties. See the news on this subject. It is evident that some important changes must soon take place, that may produce thrilling results. We shall wait for the issue with much interest. M. G.

EXCELLENT.—The following from an exchange paper is the best thing we have seen written concerning the "witness of the Spirit." None but those who have experienced it will understand the language:

"The witness of the Spirit is a thing that we cannot express; a certain inexpressible assurance that we are the children of God; a certain secret manifestation that God hath received us and put away our sins. No one knows it but he that has it. I confess it is a wondrous thing, and if there were not some christians that did feel it and know it, you might believe there was no such thing; but it is certain there is a generation of men that know what the seal of the Lord is." M. G.

THE GREAT REVIVAL IN SCOTLAND.—The remarkable revival in Scotland under the labors of Bro. D. L. Moody and Bro. Sankey still continues. They returned from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and held a meeting at Queen's Park, May 21st, at which, "by careful calculation," there was computed to be fifteen thousand people." Some four months since, these Brn. held a series of meetings in Edinburgh with wonderful results. On their return, they held a meeting for young converts, when some three thousand were present. It is said the converts are holding fast with much firmness and perseverance. Two thousand five hundred assembled at a noon prayer-meeting, and many had to go away for want of room. On one occasion some two thousand rose for prayers. The work is still onward. M. G.

THE BIBLICAL MESSENGER, or Herald of Christian Faith and Holiness, edited by Bro. H. F. Carpenter and A. Hoyt, at Plainfield, Vt., comes to us twice its usual size, and filled with interesting matter, deserving the attention of all good people. It is published monthly, on the following terms: One copy, with map and chart, "Biblical Mirror," $1.00. One copy without map and chart 60cts. One copy on trial, or to be given to friends, 50cts. One copy to the poor, and to preachers 40cts. Ten copies to our address $5.00, or for free distribution, $4.00. M. G.

OUR readers will find an excellent article in this paper on "Consecration," by Bro. Pomeroy. M. G.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

WHY IS IT?

There are a great many good men and women that love the truths we advocate, yet they are in the different churches, and we lose their influence in carrying forward the glorious work. We sometimes feel sad when we see so many, who could do much good, resting quietly in a position that neutralizes all their efforts, and is a barrier in the way of others. I do not complain of these brethren, but I sometimes ask, Why is it so? There are many reasons that are valid to them, undoubtedly,. As a people we waste much of our labor and means for want of system. Our churches, many of them, are without any head or system; consequently they are weak and hold out but little encouragement for others to join. Our mode of supplying our churches with preaching is expensive, and destructive in its results. Many times diversity of views and a want of proper understanding of the condition of the people neutralizes the efforts of the preacher and people.

We raise up churches, and then let them die for want of care. The fault does not rest with any one in particular, but upon the whole body, and largely upon our ministry. We have not advocated order and regulation as we should. Why not have our Massachusetts Conference a live body, made up of those churches that mean work? Why not have our State Conferences organized into a National Conference? Some will reply, that we have our conferences. True, but they are like a great machine without power to drive it. We want a constitution for our National and State Conferences that will require each church to raise means to send delegates and ministers with a knowledge of the financial and moral condition, and number of members of each church. We want a system upon which we can all unite in regulating our affairs, and a standard of membership of ministers and people in the conference. We want means and MEN to go into new fields within the limits of each conference. Until we as a people adopt some system to regulate matters, we must expect that not only those of our brethren that are in the churches will stay there, but our converts go there, and some of our ablest men are going that way.

Look the matter over, brethren. Think of it. How many ministers have we in Massachusetts that devote their time to preaching? They are few. Why? Because they have no interest? No, but the churches have driven them to the plough, the shop, and other business. You ask how they have done it? The answer is ready: By want of system, and interest outside of your little circle,—system in our financial department, in church regulation, etc. We labor, and hundreds are converted every year; but the converts (especially the young) go to other churches. Why? As a people we are unsocial (unless we can talk about some pet hobby); they come and go without any notice by older members. They die for want of care. As a people we are guilty, and the cause of our Master suffers in our hands. Unless there is a reform, I fear we shall be counted unfaithful, if not unjust stewards.

This subject was discussed at our annual conference, and deferred until it should meet again at the campmeeting at Greenwich. Now let every church in Mass. be represented there by a delegate. Let some one in every church begin to talk the matter over, and not let it end in talk,—mean BUSINESS, AND DO IT. Some will object and find fault, no doubt; but keep at the work, and they will learn that God is a God of order and system.

For thirty-three years we, as a people, have been at work, and to-day we do not know how many churches, or ministers, or people we have, and have no means of knowing. We are not acquainted with each other as churches. We have been contented to work in an obscure way, and with little system; and the result is, we are not much, if any stronger than twenty years ago. This ought not so to be. J. HEMENWAY.

DRESS REFORM.—Several ladies in Vineland, N. J., have formed themselves into a society for the purpose of agitating and reforming the fashions. They ask women to organize, and sustain each other in a combined movement on the works of the enemy, that the sex may be emancipted from the thraldom of fuss, feathers, and foolish fashions.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE A. C. MISSION BOARD.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The Lord is blessing his truth abundantly down here in the regions I visited last fall. Having previously arranged for about thirty appointments, I left home on the 21st of last month, with a heavy baggage of books and tracts, on foot to the railroad six miles away; thence thirty miles by rail, and took it on foot six miles more to my first appointment in a grove. There are two houses for worship in the neighborhood, but they were not for the use of heretics.

May 23d. Met a small congregation; preached on the second coming of Christ to reign literally on the throne of his father David, according to the promise. At night met a large assembly by moonlight. How impressive the scene, to worship in the face of the silver moon and the starry heavens, which "declare the glory of God." Continued the subject of the kingdom, showing that the church is not the kingdom, as many in this section teach; that the church is the school in which we strive for a preparation and an "entrance abundantly into the everlasting kingdom." I had much liberty in my utterance, and felt the power of the Spirit. The people seemed to be much interested. There were two ministers present; one an old man, who fully embraces our views as taught in the literature of the A. C. P. Society. He says, for many years he could not subscribe to the common teaching of going to heaven or hell at death, nor the doctrine of eternal torment; but that he was bewildered as to how to get out of it. Now he rejoices in the clear light.

24th. Met with a very large concourse under the green foliage. Subject, the visions of Daniel, 2nd, 7th and 8th chapters, illustrated by the Symbolic Chart. I never saw more fixed attention than that audience gave. At night my subject was the signs of the times that show the second coming of Christ is "nigh, even at the door." I know that a deep impression was made, and that the many tracts left will be fixed in the minds of many. One minister, who had in strong terms reprobated my teaching, confessed his error, retracted his sayings, and cordially invited me to the hospitalities of his home, and would freely offer me the use of his pulpit, but he knew his brethren would oppose it. This brother, a Presbyterian minister, is almost out in the clear light. The first thing that softened his hardness was the reading of "Trumpet for the Watchman," which I had left here on my former visit.

25th and 26th. Nights fair, and a full moon. We met in other places at private houses, but the assemblies were so large that I had to preach out in the open night air. Subject, the saints' inheritance and the time of reward. There is a house of worship in the circle of the foregoing appointments, now thrown open to us, and we were urged to make an appointment before leaving the neighborhood. I consented, and met with a jammed house. Bro. Cargile is to meet me to-morrow night in another neighborhood, but they beg me to let him stop over and preach once on his way, at this church. I made announcement. How changed!

30th. Bro. Cargile met me at Concord, where I had a pleasant time sowing the seed of truth last fall. Some of it is up and will bring forth fruit. I learn that Bro. Cargile made a good impression at the Goose Pond church last night. They want him to return soon. Our congregation was small to-day, the farmers being very busy with their crops. At night the house was full to overflowing, and excellent attention. Bro. Cargile discoursed on the nature of man as he was, is, and is to be; dwelling upon the christian's hope—"that blessed hope."

31st. Sunday. At an early hour the people came teeming in from every quarter,—numbers on foot from over the mountains. The house not being large enough to hold half the people, we repaired to the grove. Bro. Cargile preached on the coming kingdom, making one of his happy efforts, God helping him greatly. More than half the audience stood on their feet, or sat on the ground, but all gave patient attention. Evidently some good was done.

Night. Bro. C. has gone to Goose Pond church to preach, and thence returns home. I preached from Daniel's prophecies, using the Chart to illustrate. This was novel to all, and elicited the utmost attention. We have had with us in this meeting six ministers,—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterian, and Christian. They all seem to give heed to the word, and some of them are wide awake to the importance of our teachings, and are searching with deep interest for the truth of these things. Not one indication of opposition to us has manifested itself here, though it was reported that I would be mobbed if I came here preaching the stuff I had on the other side of the creek. The field is white for the harvest. O that I could preach up and down this river valley constantly for some time. I think much good might be effected, God blessing such poor, frail instrumentality.

June 1st. I rest to-day, being much worn out with labor and loss of sleep. To-morrow I begin for another week's labors, and four appointments in answer to new calls from three different denominations. I feel the great importance of keeping in the field, while there is a prospect of doing good. I want to respond to the urgent calls on me from Jefferson Co., Ala., but I have not the means, nor time to spare from my family, without help, as we are now in need of my labor at home. Were I relieved from home labor, I would be out in the field till winter sets in, the Lord being my helper. Yours in hope of eternal life, J. J. SMITH.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

Since we last parted at Vallejo, the Lord has been good to us in blessing our labors. Praise his great name. Preached at Vallejo the next Lord's day after you left. Had a good day. From there we started on our summer campaign. We stopped first at Vacaville, but found no opening. Took the evening train for Sacramento. The next morning called on Dr. Truesdell. Found him happy in the Lord. We found Bro. Ficks, who requested us to stop over Sunday. He made arrangements, and we spoke to them twice, to the comfort and encouragement of the saints. We baptized one sister, who had long been waiting for an opportunity, and was very anxious to follow the Lord in this ordinance. Had communion in the evening, at their request. It was a good day to us all. We visited all the band, and found a few faithful ones—salt of the earth, like sheep without a shepherd, struggling for eternal life, amid the perils of that great, wicked Sodom.

On Monday we parted with them, with hearts uplifted to God to keep them until the day of Christ. We took a steamer down the Sacramento to Courtland, where we found a few saints looking for Jesus. At Richland we held two meetings. Then we came to this town (Georgetown), where we have held meetings over two Sundays. Good congregations on Lord's days, and God blessed his word. One lady said she had never heard the gospel preached before since she came to this coast. A number became deeply interested. A young man came five miles to hear us. He is unconverted, and has never heard on the Lord's soon coming before. He was greatly interested, and convicted of sin, and said he would be a christian. He invited us to go to his place and hold meetings, and we are to commence there to-morrow evening. It is a new field, and we expect to see a move. The great truths of Christ's soon coming, and a preparation to meet him, stir up and move the people.

One good sister said she began to feel that Christianity was something more than she had thought it was; and yet she is sound in doctrine. The best are feeling they must have a deeper work wrought in the heart by the power of God's Holy Spirit, or not be prepared to be quickened to immortality at Christ's coming. We press the great truths upon the people of entire consecration and holiness to God. We must put away the "old man" and his deeds. None but "the pure in heart" shall see God. O to be among the pure when he comes.

We have found some blessed saints in this region. We also find them hungering for more of the Spirit, and the spirit of love, union and fellowship with one another. We exhort them to love God with all their hearts, depart from all iniquity, and to love one another. O how we love the good work in which we are engaged. I praise God for the privilege of helping get a people ready to meet him. Pray for us.

Georgetown, Cal., May 26th, 1874.

From Bro. James A. Gardner.

I have loved Jesus for eight years, and many times my heart has been moved to go and tell the story of Jesus and his love, but I have thought that I was not capable, and, like Jonah, have tried to get away from the work. I feel that it is my duty to labor among the sailors. Will not some of our brethren help on this work, by sending some of their old papers and tracts that they have laid away, and perhaps never will read again? I am willing to carry them into the harbor of Boston.

Brethren, do not let your papers be idle, when there is so much to do for the Master. Those papers may save many a poor soul. Perhaps it will be your son, your husband, your brother. I have given all to Jesus and I know that he has blessed me. I am looking for the Master to return soon, and this work is upon me. May my Father move some one to help on this work. My heart feels for the sailors. They are denied the blessings that we have on the land They are noble, brave, and kind. They are glad to have men that love Jesus talk with them.

Now, brethren, if you have any papers, and don't want them, please send them to me, and try to save soul's by them, instead of using those glorious papers for wrapping paper, as I have known many to do. I will wait for you to think of this. If any one sends, please direct to Boston, Mass., 327 Hanover St.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I am striving to enter in at the strait gate. It is my choice to follow Christ in everything, and to suffer all things for his sake. O how blessed the thought that "if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." Then we shall be more than paid for all we suffer in this mortal life. I have often been led to say, from the depths of my heart, that if I never enjoyed any more than I do in this life, I would be satisfied. Jesus is and has been my satisfying portion. When I attempt to tell of his goodness, I know not where to begin. All through my life, he has stood by me, and led me in the way I knew not; and the best of it all is, he has promised to be with us even unto the end of the world. He tells us that because he 'lives, we shall live also. Praise the Lord for his unspeakable goodness to poor fallen man.

If I ever thanked the Lord for his goodness, it is to-day. I have thought much of the last lesson our Lord taught his disciples—"Not my will, but thine be done"; and felt that I ought to seek submission as my great attainment. It is a beautiful prayer with which the apostle Paul closes the epistle to the Hebrews—"Now the God of peace . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen." I believe the more simple we are, the more we shall be in the right spirit. This is my daily prayer: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? May the Lord grant us grace to make him our chooser in all things. Would we live near to God, we must trust him as a child does his father. We must come to him for our daily portion. We must cast all our care upon him. We must review his mercies, so that there shall be a continual strain of praise. I believe we do not make enough of the blessings we have, which is one reason that we have not more. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift. O may we all look to our blessed Master, instead of pondering on our own state. Meditate upon his glory. Contemplate his all-sufficiency. Look at his dying love. Examine his blessed promises. Enter into the state where he sits, and we shall find the Lord will grant us our desires. He will fulfill his promise—"Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give thee the desire of thine heart."

DEBATE.

A highly interesting debate is now going on each evening, at Lyceum Hall, between Elder Grant of the Second Advent denomination of religious views, and Mr. Jamieson of the Spiritualist faith. The debate commenced on Monday evening (June 8th) and will continue to Friday evening. The subject of the debate, an assertion made by Elder Grant which he believes himself prepared to prove is: "that the phenomena of Spiritualism proceeds from Demons." The president of the meeting, ex-Mayor Calley, introduced the speakers on Monday evening and stated the rules that should govern the debate, allowing each speaker to occupy alternately, twenty minutes time; the debate to occupy two hours each evening. Elder Grant, after prayer had been offered, opened the discussion by contending that it is impossible for any departed human spirit to make communications with the inhabitants of the earth, because there are no departed human spirits. Human spirits are impossible; they are contrary to science and the Bible. All attributes of living bodies are immaterial, and cannot exist without the body; love, anger, thoughts, the sense of smelling, tasting, feeling, etc. etc., are attributes of, and cannot exist without the body. If the soul is an attribute of the body, then it cannot exist after the body is dead. Mr. Jamieson here took the stand, and without attempting to discuss the points advanced by his opponent, launched into a brief sketch of the rise and progress of spiritualism, exhausting his twenty minutes in reading extracts from papers, and scoffing at the idea of the existence of demons as advanced by Elder Grant, and extolling the beauties of the spiritual belief.

Elder Grant agreed with Mr. Jamieson in regard to the growth of Spiritualism. It had been most rapid, but he did not allow that to be proof of its truthfulness any more than the increase of wickedness is a proof that wickedness is not wrong. He claimed that no material part of man leaves the body at death, therefore no communication can come from the dead. There is but one intellectual, moral, and living being in man, and when that is dead, all is dead that belongs to man. We cannot have a man without the organism. Every being that knows anything must be an organism, and when the organism is gone, the man must also be gone. Spiritualism rests on the lie that man never dies. A living man is an organized being made of the dust of the ground and in the likeness of his Creator; when dust returns to dust and the likeness is gone, the man must be gone also. A dead person is buried in the ground, the hands are there and immovable. How then can it be possible for that dead man to write a communication without the use of hands? Is a man whom we know to be dead and buried, out there but away some where else? Does a dead man know more than a living one? Elder Grant then spoke of angels as being different beings from men, though resembling men so closely as to be taken for them, as were the two mentioned in the Bible, who were entertained by Lot unawares. If departed human spirits are angels, then let them show themselves as did the angels to Lot, for they have power to appear or disappear at pleasure.

The discussion was closed for the evening by Mr. Jamieson, who grew more warm and eloquent as the debate increased. He claimed that he was not there to prove that spiritualism was true, but to refute by other facts any facts which might be brought forward by his opponent to prove that the phenomena of Spiritualism is the work of devils, that Elder Grant had the laboring oar, and that he would find that he had engaged in warm work before the debate ends.

Whether this debate will be instructive, or otherwise, remains to be proved, but one thing is certain, that to those who desire to think for themselves, it is highly interesting; and more especially when it engages the talents of two men so widely apart in their views, and so well read in all that pertains to both natural and revealed theology, as well as to the speculative. Last evening the debate was continued, and the interest seems to increase with the debate. Both men are very able speakers, one being cool and moderate, the other rapid and nervous, each well calculatdd to hold the closest attention of any intelligent audience. Our own ideas of religious discussions, although we agree it ought not to be so, are, that they are in the main useless, as observation has proven that believers in a creed congenial to their desires, are loth to relinquish that creed, even though they are proven to be in the wrong. If it was in the nature of man to remain convinced after once being convinced that his theory is wrong (for it is all theory), then there might some good result from religious discussions, and a possible chance of making all mankind believe alike—Salem Post.

WITHOUT the Holy Spirit to unfold, impress and quicken, the Bible remains a book not understood, and the Savior as a root out of dry ground, without form or comeliness, and the preaching of Christ and him crucified but a "vain babbling of foolishness."

Obituaries.

Davis. Fell asleep at Enfield, Ct., April 6th, in hope of a future life, Sr. Sarah B. Davis, aged forty-one years.

A devoted wife and mother, a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, a kind, sympathizing neighbor, has fallen. She was a friend to the unfortunate, and ready to relieve the sick and needy. With breaking hearts we watched for months the work of the destroyer, while the sweetness of her life, her entire resignation to the Lord's will, and the christian fortitude and patience with which she endured her peculiar trials and sufferings, greatly endeared her to us. Yet in vain were our prayers and tears; for ere the spring flowers bloomed, and while only here and there was heard the stray note of the wild bird in the leafless forest; and as the day was softly dying, and sombre shadows draped the earth, she passed away, and with her all the sunshine from our hearts. She now sweetly sleeps, and in the "morning" we hope to sing with her the song of Moses and the Lamb.

> "Come, thou resurrection morning,
> Come, dear Savior, soon, and reign;
> Waken all the saints now sleeping;
> Give us back our lost again."

T. M. Hancock.

French. In North Norway, Me., May 18th, 1874, Bro. James French, aged ninety years and four months.

He calmly fell asleep in Jesus, to wait the resurrection unto eternal life at the coming of Christ. He leaves nine living children, the youngest forty-five, the oldest sixty-five. Their ages in round numbers added at the day of his death amounted to five hundred years. Words of comfort were spoken to a large circle of mourning friends, by the writer, from 2 Cor. 1: 3, 4.

Jared Whitman.

Chambers. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Owottonna, Minn., Feb. 5th, 1874, Mrs. Mary Orintha Chambers, wife of Mr. John Chambers, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. Spalding, of Aurora, Ill.

The subject of this notice gave her heart to God in early life, and was buried beneath the yielding wave, in the likeness of Christ's death, by Bro. Fox, in Aurora. She has left a kind and affectionate husband, two little children, parents, brothers and sisters, with many kind-hearted friends, to mourn; but they sorrow not as those without hope, for when Jesus comes again, our loved ones that sleep will come forth to die no more.

P. M. London.

Marden. In Epsom, N. H., April 20th, 1874, Bro. Jonathan Marden, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Three months before, death entered his home and robbed him of his companion. In their death the church has lost a father and mother, and the preacher a home; but we hope to meet them in paradise restored.

John Parsons.

Carr. In Montpelier, Vt., Alburn S. Carr, son of Sidney D. and Lydia R. Carr, aged two years and twenty-six days.

> "He will sleep, but not forever."

Bickford. In Rochester, N. H., April 26th, 1874, Sister Lizzie A. Bickford, daughter of Q. L. and C. A. Bickford, aged twenty-one years.

Our sister leaves near and dear relatives, and a large circle of young friends to mourn her loss.

> She "sleeps, but not forever,
> There will be a glorious dawn."

C. S. Emerson.

Williams. At Red Creek, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 1st, 1874, after a short and severe illness, Sr. A. Williams, aged forty-one years, eleven months, and seven days.

May this sudden bereavement be blessed to the mourning circle, especially the husband and children. Funeral services by the writer. Text, Acts 24: 21. "Touching the resurrection of the dead."

B. P. Stevens.

Cronkrite. In Freedom, Minn., March 26th, 1874, Eliza Cronkrite, wife of William Cronkrite, aged fifty-six years.

Sr. Cronkrite left a companion and nine children to mourn the loss of one of the best of mothers and companion. Being of a sympathetic and benevolent disposition, it endeared her very much to her neighbors and a large circle of friends, who sympathize deeply with the afflicted family. Sr. C. was formerly from Canada West, and brought up in the Episcopal church. After coming to Minn., she became very much interested in the Advent doctrine. She was a reader of the Crisis and Banner, and loved the truths they advocate.

Martha Chamberlin.

Newhall. In Woodstock Valley, Ct., April 19th, 1874, Angelo A. Newhall, aged twelve years and seven months.

Angelo was the oldest child of Sr. Ellen Newhall. He was an unusually good, obedient, and industrious boy, which made his death, which was sudden and quite unexpected, a heavy stroke of affliction to his widowed mother. It was evident that he loved the Lord, and that he felt that he had not long to live here. The following was found written in his little diary after his death: "How good the Lord is; how we ought to love him.—I am not very well."

> "Think, mother! while sweet tears are shed,
> How blessed are the early dead!"

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Jer. 31: 16.

P. S. Butler.

Field. In Searsport, Me., April 24th, 1874, our dear mother, Mrs. Jane Field, aged eighty-five years.

She had been a believer in the second coming of Christ for more than thirty years. She suffered much the last year of her life, which she bore with patience. We believe she sleeps in Jesus.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Paris, June 10. The Assembly to-day, by a vote of 348 to 337, adopted an amendment to the Municipal Electoral bill, fixing the age of electors at 21 instead of 25 years, proposed by the Government, which is thus defeated in a vital provision of the bill.

A strong guard was placed on the train which conveyed the Deputies from Versailles to Paris this evening to protect the Bonapartists, against whom the feeling is very bitter on the part of Gambetta's supporters. On the arrival of the Parliamentary train at the Paris depot last evening several Bonapartists accosted Gambetta and defied him to repeat the offensive words he used in the Assembly Chamber.

London, June 12. A Paris special to the Times says that the Left Centre to-day will probably introduce a bill the first clause of which recognizes the republic according to the bill of 1873, and the second fixes the date for the dissolution of the Assembly.

The Gazette de France says that the civil war will be the immediate consequence of a dissolution. It is generally thought that in the event of a dissolution, the Assembly, before dispersing, will authorize MacMahon to govern some months, probably a year, without the Assembly, and will also authorize him to dissolve the next Assembly.

The crowd at the depot last evening numbered 10,000. The police clearly manifested sympathy with the Bonapartists.

Paris, June 12. The scenes of yesterday were literally repeated at the Western depot to-day at the time of the departure of the Parliamentary train for Versailles. The populace again assembled in large numbers, and the Deputies to the Assembly were respectively insulted and cheered. The police once more dispersed the rioters and took twelve of the more violent into custody. Four of the arrested parties were released, after having been identified, and the rest were committed for trial. So threatening was the demonstration that a body of troops was ordered to the station and aided the police in maintaining order. M. Armand Adam, a brother of the Deputy of that name, and M. Spuller, brother of the publisher of La Republique Francaise, a radical Republican journal, were among those arrested.

NEWSPAPERS SUSPENDED.

The Government has suspended the publication of the Le Pays, a Bonapartist journal, Le Rappel, Radical Republican, and Le Dix Neuviem Seicle, Conservative Republican organ, for a fortnight, because of the violent attacks upon its policy.

BLOODTHIRSTY EDITORS.

M. Paul de Cassagnac, editor of Le Pays, replies in that journal to-day to the demand of Schoelcher and Testelin, who were delegated by the Republicans to demand an armed reparation for his article attacking the members of the Left. He says therein that he assailed Gambetta and other Deputies, but not Clemenceau, who is not, therefore, entitled to reparation; but, says Cassagnac, if Clemenceau wants a personal quarrel he can have it. Cassagnac says that he particularly wishes to fight Gambetta, and adds that nine members of the editorial staff of Le Pays are willing to fight nine Republican Deputies, and will draw lots for choice of arms and adversaries.

Paris, June 13. It is reported that the violence of the Bonapartists during the past few days is part of a conspiracy they have entered into to bring about the dissolution of the Assembly and an appeal to the country through a plebiscite.

London, June 13. The Times has the following special dispatch, dated Paris, 12th, midnight: The Boulevards are crowded to-night. All the cafes are full of people. An immense conflagration is visible in the northern part of the city. The freight station of the Northern Railway is in flames. All the firemen in the city are hurrying to the spot, and thousands of policemen and soldiers are going in the same direction. The fire began at ten o'clock.

The Czar and the Prince Imperial.—The London Standard of June 9th says: It has been observed that during his stay in England the Emperor of Russia has shown striking marks of consideration for the Prince Imperial. Shortly after his arrival in this country, His Majesty paid a visit to the widowed Empress at Chiselhurst, and on the following day the Prince Imperial returned the call at Buckingham Palace, where he was most graciously received. On Wednesday, at Woolwich, one hundred cadets, of which the Prince Imperial was one, were paraded before the Emperor, who commissioned the Grand Duke Alexis to invite the Prince to join his Majesty at luncheon. After a short conversation, his Majesty requested his guest to be seated in front of him. The Prince, whose modest dignity has won him the respect and esteem of all who have been brought in contact with him, rode, by the Emperor's desire, on his right hand during the review of the artillery, accompanied by General Fleury, formerly Grand Equerry of the Emperor Napoleon, who was present in the full uniform of a general of division, and wore the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honor. At the close of the day's proceedings, the Emperor and other illustrious personages present cordially shook hands with the Prince.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Great Flood in Connecticut.

A dispatch from Hartford gives the annexed account of a destructive storm which visited northwestern Connecticut on Sunday night, June 7th:

"The storm commenced at Norfolk at 9 P. M., and continued with terrific fury until 4 o'clock Monday morning. Blackberry river rose rapidly, and in a few hours changed from a peaceful and useful stream into a roaring and devastating torrent, and tearing away everything that impeded its course. Six valuable and important dams were carried away, and thirteen bridges in the town were destroyed. Hundreds of acres of the most valuable meadow land, much of it covered with growing crops of corn, tobacco, etc, are buried under sand and stones, washed over them by the overflow from the river. The Washnee dam was swept off and the Washnee mills with it. Gardens are destroyed, fences leveled, and over a mile of the Hartford and Albany turnpike is rooted up and gullied in all directions.

The extent of the damage done through the valley is very great. The destruction of property, in bridges, barns, fences and crops will be very heavy. Whole fields of grain are washed over and destroyed. Between Winsted and Grant's Station, for miles, on the Connecticut Western road, there were several breaks, where the embankment was washed out, some of them over eight feet deep and twenty or thirty feet long. At Brooks' Station two bridges were carried off and the roads cut and washed out so as to render them totally impassable. There are several bad breaks on the Connecticut Western road, between Norfolk and Canaan, some of them eight to twelve feet deep and twenty to forty feet long.

The tornado swept over Ashley Falls, about two miles from North Canaan, destroying a new school-house valued at $13,000, and several barns, uprooting trees, and making sad havoc with the crops, fences, etc. At Falls Village, on Saturday, the storm was awful; the rain poured for two hours in torrents. The track of the Housatonic road was washed out for about thirty feet, and but for the presence of mind of a gentleman waiting for a train who discovered the break, rushed up the track, waving his hat, and stopped the train, a serious accident, attended with great loss of life, must have occurred. The damage done in East Canaan valley is immense. Trees of all sizes are washed out by the roots and strewn the entire length of the valley. Dams, fences, barns, bridges, out-houses and trees are washed out.

Beyond Salisbury and at that place the damage done by the storm is perfectly awful. The Mount Rega dam broke away Monday morning, carrying the iron bridge, and filled the village with water, so that the inhabitants had to flee to the hills for safety. There were many narrow escapes from drowning. At Lime Rock three dams were washed away, and the old building of the foundry is carried away; at the new brick foundry the underpinning is washed out and the roof is broken so as to be unsafe. Several bridges were swept off, and two barns and several other small buildings shared the same fate. At Lakeville the railroad bridge was carried off and the lower part of the village was flooded, carrying away fences and washing out the gardens and fields. All the bridges on the highways below Lakeville and Canaan are swept off, and the roads washed out badly, so that there is no traveling over them. The abutments of the two bridges on the Connecticut Western Railroad at Salisbury are washed out, leaving the ties hanging to the rails. Nearly all the trestle work is gone. It will take several days to repair it.

Notices.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove-meeting at Kendall Mills, Orleans Co., N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. Eld. A. C. Newell, Sr. L. M. Stoddard, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is extended to all far and near. Those coming with teams will provide for themselves as far as possible, and those coming by R. R. will be accommodated with good homes near the grove. Leave the cars on the Niagara Falls R. R. at Holley, Saturday, 9 A. M., and conveyance at a reasonable rate will be furnished to the meeting, five miles distant. Come, brethren and sisters, and declare our faith in the name of the Lord. This is a new field, and much interest exists among the people to hear the truth concerning the day of the Lord. Let earnest prayer ascend for this meeting, that sinners may be "pricked in the heart," and obey the gospel ere it is too late.

In behalf of the people, L. M. Stoddard.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove meeting in Bro. C. W. Kimbal's grove, in Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, June 19th and 20th. Brn. B. P. Stevens and M. R. Miles are expected to preach the word of life. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come, as last year, to labor and worship with the "one spirit." Our meeting last year was a glorious success, and we desire this one to be even better than that. Come and meet with us. We will try and entertain all that come; but come Friday night or Saturday morning. Be early. Meeting Friday night at the school-house. Cars arrive here at eight in the evening and ten in the morning.

For the Brn., A. P. Moore.

New York State A. C. Conference.—The Annual Meeting of the New York State A. C. Conference will be held in Lockport, instead of Sodus Point, June 20th and 21st. The reason of the change of places is because our old tent cannot be repaired which we depended upon to hold the meeting in at Sodus. Let there be a good turnout at Lockport. Let every church be represented.

D. Cogswell, President,
A. P. Moore, Sec.

Alton Bay.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee will meet on the camp-ground Friday, July 3d, at twelve o'clock M. There will be preaching on the ground, the Lord willing, July 4th, at eleven o'clock A. M. There will also be preaching on the ground Sabbath, July 5th. J. Couch.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. Couch.

Vermont Campmeeting.—The Bethel Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) August 29th, and continue till Sept. 7th. H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Jer. Carr, Chairman.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. Mitchell, for Com.

If any desire a tent meeting in June, before our camp and tent meeting at Greenwich, let us hear soon, or there will not be time to make arrangements for one. The pledges for the tent are wanted immediately. Send to Bro. Goodrich, Crisis office. L. Boutell, for Com.

Connecticut Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, the Connecticut Campmeeting will commence in the grove near Plainville, Saturday, June 20th, and continue over Sunday, June 28th. Campmeeting tickets will be sold at reduced rates from stations on the New Haven and Northampton Railroad to Plainville. Brethren from Massachusetts can get campmeeting tickets at Westfield by coming that route; the usual conveyance from Plainville to the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates. We have changed the time of the meeting to accommodate brethren wishing to attend other meetings later in the season.

B. Hitchcock,
O. D. Woodruff,
H. P. Bradley,
L. Mills, } Committee.

P. S. Two or three tents 14×14 to rent if spoken for in season. O. D. W.

Conference.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Quarterly Conference of North Western Kansas will be held with the Adv. Chris. church at Solomon Rapids, Mitchel Co., commencing Friday evening, June 26th, and continuing over two Sundays. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us and worship the Lord in the grove. Let us lay aside all our hobbies, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. "Let brotherly love continue."

E. N. Bliss, Pres.
J. S. Thorp, Sec.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting at West Amesbury, Mass., commencing Friday evening, July 3d, holding over the 4th, and Sunday, July 5th, also through the week, and over Sunday, July 12th. We shall do the best we can to make this meeting profitable to all that come; and we would urge our brethren and sisters to come to this meeting and labor with us for the salvation of the perishing. Those coming over the Boston and Maine R. R. will change at Newton Junction for West Amesbury. We shall invite able servants of Christ to labor with us through the meetings. Enoch Morrill, Com.

The Maine Mission Tent.—Our tent is now in good condition, and we are ready for meetings. It is time to begin. We have engaged Bro. Thomas Rines as tent-master, and others as preachers. Who is ready to have a meeting at once? Any wanting the tent to come among them for meetings, whether able to do much or little to support it, if the prospect of good results warrant it, please notify me at Yarmouth, or Eld. Thomas Rines, at Mercer, Me., at once. We shall think it well to have a series of meetings in such parts of the State as will economise in travel as much as we can. The tent is now at Mercer.

I. C. Wellcome.

To the Churches of the New Hampshire Conference.—At the annual session of the N. H. Conference at Manchester, you chose for a protracted and tent-meeting committee, Enoch Morrill, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Fletcher. Now these brethren (like most of our preaching brethren) have families to support, and other expenses and demands to meet; and as the design of the tent is to go in new places where there is little or no interest in the coming of Christ, it needs money to carry on this mission work. But little has been done as yet by your committee in protracted meetings; but it is the desire of your committee that the tent be in the field, and faithful laborers with it. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have means with which God has blessed you to help in this mission work, whatever you send to either of your committee, specifying it for the tent and mission work, will be faithfully appropriated to that object, and God will bless the giver, and the means under God will result in the salvation of some poor lost sinner. Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., for the committee.

General Union State Conf. and Campmeeting of Iowa.—The General Union State Campmeeting will be held in Brooklin, Poweshiek Co., in Bro. R. L. Clark's grove, commencing Friday, July 3d (instead of June 26th, as per previous notice), and holding over Sunday, July 12th.

Brooklyn is on the Chicago and Rock Island R. R., fifteen miles east of Grinnell. Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonable rates. Large tents will be provided in which to hold meetings in case of rain. Let all of the brethren, sisters, and friends, east, west, north and south, make a general rally and come to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love to God and man; and as this is a union meeting, let all hobbies be left at home. Bring your bedding and tents if possible. The conference session will be held during the first part of the meeting; so let all be in attendance at the very commencement.

J. Ridley, Sec.

The June annual meeting will be held in the grove on the Morris farm, in Springwater, June 20th and 21st. We hope to see a good turn out, as this is probably the last, as mother Morris is dead, as well as her husband. Meetings to commence at two o'clock P. M., in the grove, on the 20th. Social meeting at half past nine A. M. Sunday, June 21st. Preaching at 10.30 A. M. and one o'clock P. M. on Sunday.

For the Com., C. F. Sweet.

A Quarterly Meeting will be held at East Creek, Huron Co., Ohio, on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in June. We would like to see all the brethren from the surrounding country at this meeting. For the church, D. T. Call.

Conference.—The Eastern Maine and New Brunswick Conference will be held in Milltown, Me., commencing Thursday, June 25th, and continue over the Lord's day. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come, and let us work for the advancing of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. M. W. Corliss.

Tent Meeting.—If the Lord will, there will be a tent meeting at Canaan Village, Vt., commencing Saturday, June 20th, and hold over two Sabbaths. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come and labor for the salvation of sinners. Let us lay aside all hobbies, and labor to prepare a people for the coming of the Lord. Will preaching brethren come and help us? Bro. and Sr. McKinstry are expected to be with us.

A. Gordon.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove meeting at Dayton, Me., in Hezekiah Buzzell's grove, Sat., July 4th (the same spot that was used last year for a like purpose). Brn. John R. Tripp, Franklin Haines, Jesse Gay, and J. Hill, will be there to preach the word. Time of meeting, ten A. M. Come, brethren and sisters, one and all, and enjoy the meeting with us.

For committee, Jer. Hill.

There will be a barn-meeting the 4th and 5th of July at Bro. M. Smith's place, in Rochester, N. H., near the chapel. We trust the Lord will send some one to preach the word. Come with the armor on to work for souls.

For the Church, S. Hawkins.

There will be a grove-meeting in H. Batchelder's grove, near Loudon Ridge, N. H., Sunday, June 28th. We hope to see a goodly number out to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love for Jesus. O. W. Kimball.

The fourth session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly meeting conference will meet with the church at Bath, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of your Master, and work for the good of the cause, and for the salvation of perishing sinners.

H. D. Reed, Pres.
H. S. Mitchell.

Conference Notice.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 24th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.

J. W. Burroughs, Sec.

MISSION CAMPMEETING.

There will be a campmeeting under the direction of the Mass. A. Conference, at Greenwich Plains, Mass., commencing July 1st, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

The unfinished business of the annual conference will be taken up at this meeting, according to the resolution of the conference; therefore it is important that every church in Mass. be represented by preachers and delegates. The meeting is located on the Springfield and Athol R. R., about thirty miles from Springfield, fifteen miles from Athol, in a beautiful grove, prepared for us by the R. R. Co., free of expense, situated about thirty rods from the depot, near a beautiful pond, and near a quiet village. It is expected that the fare will be reduced on the Springfield, Athol, and Vt. and Mass. R. R., and possibly on the Boston and Albany. Ample provision will be made to lodge all that come prepared to camp out. Board at 80 cents per day. Those that desire to board themselves, can purchase provisions on the ground at reasonable rates. Come, one and all. Let us put new life into the missionary work in Mass. We can if we will. Will you do it, brethren?

J. Hemenway, for Tent Com.

Hoosick Conference Tent.—The Tent Committee have settled on the following points: (1) To keep the tents in new fields the coming season, if funds are provided to meet the expenses. (2) To hold the first meeting at Pittston, N. Y., if desired. (3.) To employ C. W. Baker as tent-master, with a salary of $12 a week. (4.) That subscriptions and payments for this work are now in order, and should be sent at once to J. B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., who is the Conference Treasurer, and will acknowledge all sums received. This is an important enterprise, and should be sustained. Whether the tent shall be in service every week of this season depends upon the action of individuals within the conference. Prompt liberality will ensure early and steady work all summer. The committee do not care to issue a long begging appeal; we only say we think it the duty of this conference to support their tent mission, and expect "every man to do his duty." As we sow, so shall we reap.

Those who want meetings will write at once to H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt., stating how much they will raise toward the expenses, that we may know what provision to make in the case, and just what to depend upon. (5) We intend, as far as possible, to provide laborers within the conference; but will make any consistent arrangement with those who may desire preachers from abroad. (6) Any further information can be obtained by addressing either of the committee, and enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

H. K. Flagg,
A. W. Sibley,
W. L. Himes, } Committee.

Let delegates be chosen, and every church in Massachusetts be represented, at Greenwich, at our campmeeting, to commence the first of July. Come with tents. L. Boutell.

Campmeeting.—A campmeeting will be held at the Cheatham grove campmeeting ground, Winona Co., Minn., two miles southeast of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter R. R., commencing Tuesday, June 23d, at three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come and labor with us in the "one spirit." Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, so that all may be accommodated with something to eat. Those who can will please bring provisions and bedding with them. The state tent is expected to be on the ground. Teams will be in attendance at the station to carry at the camp-ground. We hope to see a large attendance both of ministers and laity. Cars arrive here at two P. M.

Philip Ramer.

District Meeting.—The third Dist. or Quar. Meeting of the Adv. Chris. Conf. of the Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, will be attended in the Melbourne District, and convene, D. V., at Danville, P. Q., at the Advent Church, on Thursday, June 18th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. A full attendance is urgently solicited, as these meetings are of great importance. Ministers and official members of this District are expected to be present; and also from other Districts of the Conference, so far as is at all practicable.

Chas. P. Dow, Pres. of Conf.

Nova Scotia Conference.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held, the Lord willing, at Bear River, Digby Co., N. S., commencing Thursday, June 18th, and continue over the following Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come ready to work for the Lord. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of New Brunswick and the United States. J. J. Woodworth.

Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Burns, Wis., commencing June 23d, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Clark from Illinois, Sheldon from Wisconsin, Fassett from California, and others will be in attendance. Committee.

I will hold the first quarterly meeting of the South Western Dist. A. C. Conference in connection with the above campmeeting.

Philo Hitchcock.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit.

I. Damman.
J. Emerson.

Meeting at Freedom, N. H.—The lovers of the "blessed hope" in that region have arranged to hold a meeting in the Second Advent Chapel, at Freedom, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A large gathering of those of like precious faith is hoped for. All are invited from far and near. M. Stevens, C. H. Sweet, and perhaps others, will be present to preach the word.

C. H. Sweet, for the Brn.

Those wishing the New Hampshire Mission Tent to be pitched in their vicinity, will please write immediately to Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., Chairman of Tent Committee.

The Lord willing, a grove meeting will be held in Albany, N. H., July 4th and 5th, in Geo. W. Bennett's grove, between the Bell and the red school-house. S. Bragg.

There will be a two days meeting held in the United States school-house, Bingham, Potter Co., Pa., Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to attend.

A. H. Briggs.
J. W. Taylor.

"A CUP OF COLD WATER."—Matt. 10: 32.

S. M. HODGDON.

The Lord of the harvest walked forth one day,
Where the fields were white with the ripening wheat;
Where those he had sent in the early morn
Were reaping the grain in the noon-day heat.
He had chosen a place for each faithful one,
And bidden them work till the day was done.

Apart from the others, with troubled voice,
Spoke one who had gathered no golden grain,
"The Master hath given no work to me,
And my coming hither has been in vain;
The reapers with gladness and song will come,
But no sheaves will be mine in the harvest home."

He heard the complaint, and he called her name:
"Dear child, why standest thou idle here?
Go fill thy cup from the hillside stream,
And bring it to these who are toiling near;
I will bless thy labor, and it shall be Kept in remembrance as done for me."

'Twas a little service; but grateful hearts
Thanked God for the water so cool and clear;
And some who were fainting with thirst and heat,
Went forth with new strength to the work so dear;
And many a weary soul looked up,
Revived and cheered by that little cup.

Dear Lord, I have looked with an envious heart
On those who were reaping the golden grain;
I have thought in thy work I had no part,
And mourned that my life was lived in vain;
But now thou hast opened my eyes to see
That thou hast some litte work for me.

If only this labor of love be mine,
To gladden the heart of some toiling saint,
To whisper some word that shall cheer the weak,
Do something to comfort the worn and faint;
Though small be the service, I will not grieve,
Content just a cup of cold water to give.

And when the Lord of the harvest shall come,
And the laborers home from the field shall call;
He will not look for my gathered sheaves;
But his loving words on my ear will fall:
"Thou gavest a cup of cold water to me,
A heavenly home thy reward shall be."
East Boston, Mass.

A TALK ON CONSECRATION.

I wish so to speak, that old, original self shall gain no advantage from my talk. Though small and feeble, I might have amounted to something in God's hands, for the good of the world, if I had consented from the first to have gone into God's hands without reserve. If I had with a godly sincerity taken the word and Spirit for my rule of being and doing, instead of looking to the popular sentiment of the church in so many matters; if in my faith I had held the Lord responsible, not only for the results but also for my reputation and good appointments, as he has promised, how much of anxiety, disgust and disappointment would have been saved to this poor mortal; and these are the least of the bad effects of trying to improve the Lord's plan.

But not in common with some others (not to say many), for years and years I lived and acted as though it were not safe for one who thought much of himself, of his good sense and refined taste, to come under the full control of the Infinite One;—that the Lord was so reckless of human greatness and human wisdom, that one's reputation would not be safe, at least with the first families, in such hands.

So, to be safe and sure, I kept a close look-out on the probable course or plan of my religious duties (for it was my purpose to obey the Lord); but when I found the word and Spirit required of me in a way that seemed rather spendthrift of one reputation for good sense and intelligent religion (as the spectators call it), I would just put in a proviso or modification of the plan. So after adjusting my course so as to guard personal rights, I cried to the Lord to come over into my plans and help me to do my duty. So for years I prayed and prayed, and teased, and looked and longed for the Spirit to come over and make me efficient in my work.

Now this was not hypocritical in me, neither was it imputed so wicked as it now appears. The fact is, I was fooled—was self-deceived; yes, friends, the world and self have played some shrewd games on me, but by the grace of God I hope they are played out. Probably my sins in the matter may be traced to a want of faith in God's remedy for the cure of the world; then, as a fruit of this unbelief, feeling and acting on the supposition that at least some of the views of religion set forth in the Bible are too old-fashioned for this state of society. So you see I had the work on hand of educating the All-wise in modern views of religion.

When simplified, the sin consists in being in bondage to the friendship of the world, which is enmity against God; fix it up as we may, with education, morals, baptism, beads, feathers, and Grecian bend, still it will be enmity against God, and that minister who dare be true to God will stir it up; so count your cost, ye holy ambassadors.

The reader is ready to inquire, How did you change your position in these matters? I just packed up my effects and went over to the Lord's side, and whatever refused to go, or went muttering, I left behind, with a vow never to look or long after it again. To tell the truth about it, I went rather empty-handed, leaving a deal of lumber behind. All this I counted loss for Christ.

You say, how do you view your duty now? As a theory or system, I look upon Christianity as none of my concern. I never invented it; and am not responsible for its origin or fashion. Evidently it is a root out of dry ground,—no beauty in it that an outsider should desire it. It is a stone of great stumbling, except to obedience, but that is nothing to me. But what I am now ashamed of is, that I was ever ashamed of Christ, either dead or alive; either in the mock robes, on the cross, or on the mount of transfiguration;—that my foolish heart ever felt obligated to so fix up and dress up the uncomeliness of God's salvation that a sinful soul should call it beautiful. I say it plainly, friends, this looks bad to me now; it is atheism, not by design, but it is a necessity of unbelief. Unbelief brings us so into bondage to the tastes and opinions of of men, that we dare not tell the whole truth in the spirit of truth.

To consecrate property, time and talents to the cause is a small thing, when compared to giving up our own way of doing it. We may go through quite a catalogue of articles without touching the dear thing of our life. With one proviso, refined depravity can flourish around God's altar as well as anywhere. Yes, man-show has ever been seen to loom high over the Cross, with Jesus dying far below the human dignitary. We might speak of giving up reputation, preference, or self-pleasure,—preconceived notions of the manner of doing duty, of the manner of the workings of the Holy Ghost, etc. But the abandonment of I, myself, over to God, without one proviso, takes all the catalogues with it. This is the casting of the strong man out of the house, when his goods follow as a necessity.

As a brother remarked, I am anti-rum, anti-mason, anti-slavery, and anti-tobacco; still my mind is dark. Brother, stamp your feet hard and say anti-self, and the strong hold of depravity shall give way.

O yes, consecration or sanctification would be quite popular, since it so augments our moral power and religious gifts, lifting us out of little servile self into holy daring, if the Lord would only allow us to pass over the disagreeables, taking us through on a magnificent plan, so that the world would say of us, There goes an intelligent and reasonable christian. No doubt he is holy, but too much of a gentleman to say much about it. He is none of your fanatical, vulgar sort of men, who preach about theatres, dancing, jewelry and feathers, freemasonry and tobacco, and all that sort of stuff. He preaches up the virtues of religion, without intruding himself into the personal rights of others. Then he talks so beautifully about heaven, and that our friends are waiting for us. O, he is such a beautiful man; we must all go and hear him next Sunday night, for the fashionable class attend his church. It is agreeable, no doubt, to all to be thus esteemed; that is, if our sense of responsibility is not against the pleasure.

But who am I, or my father's house, that the list of hard names with which the saints of all ages have been branded should end with me, and just here with my beautiful self should the greetings from the market begin?

Did the vow of my consecration stipulate for perfection in intellect and judgment? Was this the proviso in offering myself to God, that he should carry me clear of all inconsistencies, disadvantages and unloveliness in the estimation of a vain world?

What is my importance, that I should claim a favoritism with God, above Christ or Paul, with all the martyred hosts of saints? No! no! Put me among those whose holiness was so positive as to excite the hate of badness. Put me in the way the holy prophets went, though marked with sandals and blood. Yes, I covet brotherhood with the old sheepskin wearers, who, from the scorn of men and the dens of earth shall go into the kingdom of "Come, ye blessed of my Father."—Pomeroy.

2 PET. 2: 3.

J. F. MARQUAND.

"Whose judgment lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not."

This scripture, and its correlatives found in Deut. 32: 35; Ps. 149, Jude 4 and 15, and other places, speak of punishment, and this as the legitimate result of sin and disobedience. But while the Bible speaks in general terms of sin, it also gives the specific sin of these last days (now so prevalent), the denial of the divinity and lordship of Christ,—he who bought the race of mankind with his own blood, and suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, and was lifted up in order to draw all men unto him,—he who rose triumphantly from the grave, a conqueror, with the keys of death and hell in his hands;—this blessed One's claims are set aside to give place to an imaginary deity; his power and authority questioned; his divinity trampled in the dust; his righteous rule ignored and contemned. "Bring hither those men and women that would not have me to reign over them, and punish them before me."

Some persons might say that God was a cruel or vindictive being to administer correction to his subjects; but it is only the result or sequence of transgression and violated law according to fixed and eternal principles. God would cease to be just and good if he saved the sinner in his sins, or in rebellion against constituted law. But he has condescended to make a way of escape by opening a City of Refuge; and that Refuge is Jesus Christ; having delegated or clothed him with power to act as Mediator for the race of mankind. "For there is one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." Let us, therefore, carry all our sins and unbelief to him, asking for mercy and grace to help in time of need. He will not turn away, nor refuse forgiveness.

A striking type of Jesus Christ is found in Joseph, who was taken from a dark prison and raised to the right hand of king Pharaoh, invested with dignity and honor, and made the executive head over Egypt, unto whom all the nations were to submit. So our dear Lord was taken from the prison-house of the tomb, and raised to the right hand of God the Father, all principalities, powers and things in heaven and earth being made subject unto him. He was made the executive head of the universe. Those who love and serve him he will remember and bless with his covenant of love and friendship here, and when he comes again will recognize and own before his Father and the holy angels.

This Jesus is the way to God and reconciliation, and any other is wrong and abortive. Jesus is the door, and if we climb up some other way we are called thieves and robbers; while God is spoken of as being gracious and long suffering, full of tender pity, who will by no means clear the guilty. Let ungodly men and women fear, lest their feet slide, and they drop into the grave having neglected God and Christ, and their salvation not secured.

Furthermore, not only has there been a City of Refuge—Christ—provided for the poor, tried, tempted, sin-sick soul, but also the Holy Spirit has been poured out in mighty power, and freely given to man to help his infirmities and strengthen for the warfare against sin and evil, and enable him to overcome; but there are given about six or seven hundred promises whereby he can escape the pollutions of the world and become partaker of the divine nature. God has done all he could do to save mankind, and still be just and good: and now, serious obligation rests on the sinner to repent and return, and accept of life through a divinely appointed Mediator. If a man lives and dies in his sinful, natural state, he will assuredly be lost, and his damnation (or condemnation) be a fixed fact. O, poor, trembling mortal, can thy heart endure or thine hands be strong in the day of final reckoning, when God shall lay judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet? A beautiful country has been and will be fitted up for those who love righteousness and truth, and they shall live forever in eternal day, sinless, chaste, and spotless. Will you go?

NEXT to faith in God and his overruling providence, a man's faith in himself is his salvation. It is the secret of all power and success.

TRUTH PLAINLY SPOKEN.

The following from the pen of Dr. J. G. Holland, should be read by everybody.

WHAT THEY SAY.

This is the vigorous and wholesome way in which Dr. Holland, in the May Scribner's talks about the great temperance movement:

For years, and years, and weary, suffering years, multiplied into decades, have the women of America waited to see that traffic destroyed, which annually sends sixty thousand of their sons, brothers, fathers and husbands into the drunkard's grave. They have been impoverished, disgraced, tortured in mind and body, beaten, murdered. Under the impulse of maddening liquors the hands that were pledged before Heaven to provide for, and protect them, have withdrawn from them the means of life, or smitten them in the dust. Sons whom they have nursed upon their bosoms with tenderest love and countless prayers, have grown into beasts of whom they are afraid, or have sunk into helpless and pitiful slavery. They have been compelled to bear children to men whose habits had unfitted them for parentage—children not only tainted by disease, but endowed with debased appetites. They have seen themselves and their precious families thrust into social degredation and cut off forever from all desirable life by the vice of the men they loved. What the women of this country have suffered from drunkenness, no mind, however sympathetic, can measure, and no pen, however graphic, can describe. It has been the unfathomable black gulf into which infatuated multitudes of men have thrown their fortunes, their health, and their industry, and out of which have come only, in fire and stench,—dishonor, disease, crime, misery, despair and death. It is the abomination of abominations, the curse of curses, the hell of hells!

For weary, despairing years, they have waited to see the reform that should protect them from further harm. They have listened to lectures, they have signed pledges, they have encouraged temperance societies, they have asked for and secured legislation, and all to no practical good end. The politicians have played them false; the officers of the law are unfaithful; the government revenue thrives on the thriftiness of their curse; multitudes of the clergy are not only apathetic in their pulpits, but self-indulgent in their social habits; newspapers do not help, but rather hinder them; the liquor interest, armed with the money that should have brought them prosperity, organizes against them; a million fierce appetites are arrayed against them, and, losing all faith in men, what can they do? There is but one direction in which they can look, and that is upward! The women's temperance movement, begun and carried on by prayer, is as natural in its birth and growth as the oak that springs from the acorn. If God and the God-like element in woman cannot help, there is no help! If the pulpit, the press, the politicians, the reformers, the law, cannot bring reform, who is left to do it but God and the women? We bow to this movement with reverence. We do not stop to question methods; we do not pause to query about permanent results.

It becomes men to be either humbly helpful or dumb. We who have dallied with this quesiton; we who have dispassionately drawn the line between temperance and total abstinence; we who have deplored drunkenness with wine-glasses in our hands; we who have consented to involve a great moral reform with politics; we who have been politically afraid of the power of the brutal element associated with the liquor traffic; we who have split hairs in our discussions of public policy; we who have given social sanction to habits that in the great cities have made drunkards of even the women themselves, and led their sons and ours into a dissolute life; we who have shown either our unwillingness or our impotence to save the country from the gulf that yawns before it, can only step aside with shame-faced humanity while the great crusade goes on, or heartily give to it our approval and our aid. It is no pleasant, holiday business in which these women are engaged, but one of self-denying hardship, pregnant in every part with a sense of duty. It is the offspring of a grand religious impulse which gives to our time its one superb touch of heroism, and redeems it from its political debasement and the degredation of its materialism. It is a shame to manhood that is necessary; it is a glory to womanhood that it is possible.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

Messrs Editors:—I observe that one of your correspondents warmly advocates a seventh-day Sabbath. The response in your paper of June 13th offers good arguments for the first day of the week, but hardly sufficient to convince the brother. Allow me to say how the case looks to me. Jehovah created this world in six days, and last of all he made man. He rested on the seventh, and ordained it as a day of rest for man and beast. Of course Adam obeyed, and his descendants. But what day did Adam keep? Certainly that on which God rested. But that was to Adam the first day; the first of the year; the first of his existence. And thus it continued till Moses. Then mankind became separated into Jew and Gentile.

When the Israelites were led up out of Egypt, Moses called all Israel, and said to them, "Hear, O Israel, the statutes which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep them." He then rehearses the law given at Horeb; but let it be noticed that in regard to the Fourth, he assigns an entirely new reason for the particular day to be kept. See Deut. 5: 15: "Remember that thou wast a servant in Egypt, and the Lord brought thee out thence, therefore Jehovah, thy God, commandeth thee to keep the Sabbath day." Now here is a plain change of the day, and a reason given for it. Mankind, up to the exodus, had not been divided into Jew and Gentile, but now the Jews were to be a distinct people. In changing their worship-day they were made conspicuously such, and were preserved in a large degree from the universal idolatry.

But, when Christ came to establish a universal religion, alike for Jew and Gentile, the ceremonial law, and the seventh-day Sabbath, which was part of it, was abolished. The worship-day reverted to its original appointment, the first day of the week. On this day Christ rose from the dead; on this day he met his disciples, assembled for worship; and they continued to meet on this day. See 1 Cor. 14: 1–2. This day the whole Christian church, not only in apostolic time, but thenceforth, continued to set apart for rest and worship.

While traveling in various heathen lands, I found that everywhere their sacred time was kept by weeks, though their secular dates are marked by the new and full moon, and half-way between. The Jews, who are found everywhere, meet for worship on Saturday, while the natives worship on the same day with the Christian missionaries and churches.—Howard Malcom, in Standard.

WE SHALL SEE HIM AS HE IS.

J. A. GOODRICH.

Oh happy hour, oh joyful day,
When Jesus washed my sins away;
From Satan's bondage brought release,
And filled my soul with joy and peace.

Yet that glad time was not the last,
For still my Savior's love I taste;
As oft he comes my soul to bless,
While traveling through this wilderness.

And as he whispers in my ear
Sweet words of comfort, hope and cheer;
I long the face and form to see
Of Him who bled and died for me.

Our Lord no more in human guise,
Came forth to greet our longing eyes;
And though the way be dark as night,
We walk by faith, and not by sight.

But when I rise, I soar away
To bask in beams of heavenly day;
The matchless beauty I shall see
Of Him who bled and died for me.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Where shall we go? What shall we do? How shall we spend the day? are questions that instinctively come up for decision, as we near the time, and the few dollars we have to spare burn in our pockets to get out. Well, let us consider a little. If I go to the city to see the sights, it will cost from ten to fifty dollars, and I shall return home with a light pocket-book, weak nerves, a heavy heart, and a train of evils that unfit me for business for days.

Now, brethren in the city and out of it, if you wish to get the most for the least money, you had better pack up and start for Greenwich Camp the first of July, and you will find a beautiful grove, all prepared for you, seated, the Mission Tent pitched, and we hope a number of other tents, all ready for rest and recreation, that will do you and others much good. We inaugurate this meeting for a permanent institution every Fourth of July until the Lord comes.

No expense for fitting up the ground. The Rail Road prepare the ground, seat it, and give us half fare on the road. You can buy your provision on the ground, or board at the table at 80 cts. per day. Bring your blankets to camp out. We shall have tent room provided for all that come. If some of you want to try your hand at fishing for recreation, there is a large pond and plenty of fish, if you can get them to bite at your bait. If you want to fish for men, this is just the place. It is a new ground. The fish are hungry. Come with love, zeal, and a joyful heart, and the blessing of the Lord will attend you. JAS. HEMENWAY.

WOULDN'T DEBATE.

Professor Denton, one of the champions of Spiritualism, has been lecturing in San Francisco and other cities on this coast, on science, in which he has managed to drag in a vast amount of abuse of the Bible. He seems to think its prophets were moon-struck mad men, its apostles knaves, and Jesus Christ a myth. We have known the advocates of Spiritualism to assert that Christ was born at the expense of virtue, and that Mary was a prostitute, but we thought they generally acknowledged that Christ was a real person. We have seen a mutilated copy of what claimed to be the "New Testament corrected by the spirits," in which Christ was the controlling spirit. Just how they reconcile their differences, however, is none of our business, and we drop that part of the subject and hasten to what we intend to say.

Recently the friends of Elder Miles Grant sent Mr. Denton a challenge to debate the subject of man's origin, Mr. Denton having announced himself a defender of the Darwinian theory. The latter gentleman replied that he declined the challenge on the ground that Mr. Grant was not sufficiently "posted" on the subject! So much the better for Mr. Denton and his friends, we should say. But all who know Mr. Grant, know his superior ability as a public debater, he having had more than fifty public discussions with the opposers of the Bible. Hence one must look elsewhere for the cause of Mr. Denton's declination.

The S. F. Chronicle of May 4th, says: "Professor Denton's recent lectures on scientific subjects, were so highly appreciated by the anti-orthodox in this city, that the Spiritualists have resolved to hear more of him, and have made liberal terms with him to lecture twice on each Sunday at Mercantile Library Hall, their present head quarters. The first lecture was given yesterday afternoon to a well-filled house. He chose for his subject "The True Revelation," and proceeded to make one of the boldest attacks on the divine origin of the Scriptures ever given in this city. His arguments are not remarkable for depth; are based in great part on a firm belief in Denton, and have all been answered generations ago."—Napa City (Cal.) Register.

IDOLS.

What is your idol, my brother? my sister? I will tell you. It is that thing which you do not like to have any one speak of; it makes you feel a little unpleasant, and uncomfortable. The mention of it, in any way, to call your attention to it as an evil, always agitates you somewhat; and though you may perhaps endeavor to justify it, you get a little excited when you do so. Whenever a hand is laid on it, you are conscious that a sore spot has been touched, and you had rather it would not be done. It is that thing that you stoutly declare, "is not an idol;" you "do not make an idol of it." Yet, when you are told that you had better dispense with it, you are by no means willing to do so. It is that which you say you "care nothing about;" you regard it as a thing of "no importance whatever;" but when it is suggested that you had better give it up, you somehow discover that there is a great importance attaches to it, for you will by no means renounce it. It is that thing that comes up before you when you are praying, when you are giving your testimony, and want to make the best presentation that you can to God and your brethren; and if you are a professor of perfect love (for some of them are not fully cleansed from their idols), it is that which presents itself when you are endeavoring to testify to full salvation, and makes your testimony inexplicit and ambiguous.

You cannot unequivocally declare that you are saved from all sin, when you are not quite certain that you have renounced every thing that is sinful. You certainly did this when you attained this great blessing, as far as you knew; but there was something that you did not apprehend as evil at the time, hence it was not then in your way; but you have discovered it since, have become enlightened upon the subject, and instead of giving it up at once as the Spirit prompted you to do, you engaged in the hopeless task of trying to retain your experience in its richness and fulness, and the idol likewise. It is that thing which involves the soul in endless questionings with regard to its propriety,—labor to convince yourself that it is not sinful, and for the time you seem to succeed; but you cannot remain convinced. The question comes up again and again, and has again to be disposed of by the same forced process. The Spirit, true to his work, gives you no rest until you hearken to his gentle voice, or else, by resisting his light, your eyes become blinded, and your heart becomes hardened, and he lets you alone.

The idols of christians are many and various. I conceive that those that are working the greatest amount of evil at the present time, are not those of the greatest magnitude. They are the little things that are now doing the most mischief to God's heritage. They are the most injurious, from the fact that they are the hardest to reach. They are Satan's greatest stronghold; behind their insignificance he has intrenched himself, and is determined to hold his ground.

The great want of christians, who are waked up to a sense of these evils, is moral courage. They really desire to be cleansed from all their idols, but do not like to be first to renounce them; they dread being called fanatical. May God give them grace to be willing to bear reproach for Christ, in order that they may keep all his commandments, even the least of them, and thus show their love for him. These idols must be given up. "From all your idols I will cleanse you."—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

TO THE MEMORY OF LIZZIE BICKFORD.

ANNIE R. SHOREY.

Our dear Lizzie has gone down into death,
In anguish we watched the last lingering breath;
The cold earth now covers the lifeless form,
And we are left in sadness to mourn.
We spared no pains to save our dear child,
Who was noble and comely, meek and mild;
But death at last made the fatal thrust,
And has taken the life so precious to us.
Though in sadness and gloom she has passed away,
And the king of terror still holds his sway,
Yet a brighter morn will break o'er the tomb,
When the Lord of life in glory shall come
To awaken the sleepers now under the ground;
The day is hastening, oh! let the trump sound.
Then the living saints immortal shall rise,
And together with her mount up to the skies;
To meet our dear Lord who is coming with clouds,
Attended by angels, an innumerable crowd.
Then forever with Jesus the saints will dwell,
And songs of victory triumphant swell.

THE ROMAN SOLDIER.

Everybody has heard something of Pompeii. This small city of thirty thousand souls, which stood at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, looking out on the Bay of Naples, was overwhelmed and buried together with Herculaneum and Stabiæ, in one day. The eruption of Vesuvius that destroyed these towns took place A. D. 79. In the course of time orchards, vineyards, gardens, and woodlands, covered the ground above where these cities had once stood. Even the few learned men who knew Pompeii by name could not point out its site. After more than sixteen hundred years, in 1689, some ruins were noticed; and in 1755 excavations were commenced. To-day about a third of the city has been brought to light. The showers of pumice-stone that fell upon the doomed city were followed by streams of thick, tenacious mud which flowed over the sand and ashes, and filled up all the crannies that had been left. The objects over which this mud flowed were enveloped in it, as in a plaster mould; and where these objects happened to be human bodies, a mould was left as perfect as if it had been prepared for casting a bronze statue. Some of these cavities have been filled with liquid plaster, and casts have thus been obtained of several human bodies. One is that of a man of the people, probably a common soldier. He was of almost colossal size; he lay upon his back so as to die bravely; his clothing is very clearly defined. His greaves are visible, and fit closely; his sandals, the nails in the soles distinct, are laced upon his feet; he wears an iron ring upon his finger; some of his teeth are gone; but the mustache still remains. Perhaps, when almost all others were escaping, he refused to leave his post without orders, turning a deaf ear to the entreaties of his wife and child.—Oliver Optic's Magazine.

GIVING.

Religion has some admirers who do not relish the principle of benevolence when called upon to reduce it to practice. This is not only true of individuals, but also of some churches; and wherever this aversion to giving for the support of the gospel is imbibed, either by individuals or churches, moral declension is sure to follow. God's ministers must be supported, and God's gospel says, "They that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." The following remarks from the Central Presbyterian are good:—

"A minister of the gospel, who has closely watched the operation of giving among our churches, begs leave to note the following as the result:—

1. Churches in which a system of giving to the cause of Christ has been carried out, contribute most liberally to benevolent objects.

2. Such churches make the most sure and rapid progress in supporting themselves.

3. Churches which do little or nothing for others do the least for themselves; and those which do little or nothing for their own pastor's support, do little or nothing for others, and are not likely to become self-sustaining.

4. Churches which do most for Domestic Missions generally do most for Foreign Missions.

5. Those churches which plead that 'the applications are too many,' would be pleased not to have any.

6. Churches which plead that 'charity begins at home,' are the last to begin it anywhere.

7. Churches which are always pleading that 'the present is an unfavorable time to make an application,' never find a favorable time.

8. Those people who do not give often, and cheerfully, do not know the blessedness of giving.

9. Those who do not give as the Scriptures teach, cannot expect to receive the blessedness of Scripture promises.

10. One reason why so many give so little, and with fault-finding when they do give, is because they give so seldom.

11. No system of giving has, in its simplicity and efficiency, equalled that of the apostle Paul—'On the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him.'

12. The adoption of that plan would immediately give the church all the money it needs, and enable it to go forward in the work of the Lord.

13. Ministers who do not instruct their people in the duty of giving, and urge it upon them, for fear their own salaries will not be paid, are the most poorly supported, and thus reap what they sow."

JESUS PRECIOUS.

A Welsh woman, who loved Jesus, was talking with an Englishman about the Savior. She said Jesus was a Welshman.

"Oh no," said the Englishman, "he was not."

"Yes, he was."

"Why no; he was a Jew;" and he proceeded to prove it from the Scriptures.

She was convinced, and not a little crest-fallen to think that her loved country had not given birth to the Savior.

"Well," said she, "he understands our language, for when he speaks to me, he always speaks in Welsh."

She was right that time. He could be touched with the feelings of her infirmities. She went home comforted.

"To you which believe he is precious," as a sympathetic friend. Do you believe with all your heart? He cannot do much for you if you doubt him. Doubt will put you so far from him that you cannot hear his sweet voice of assurance and love. Doubt will break the cords of sympathy, and make him seem cold and strange. Draw near by faith.—Selected.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A WONDROUS CURE.

Having read the experience of Rev. J. Allen, answering a question in regard to the removal of sinful appetites, etc., in your paper sometime back, I will give you a little of my experience in this matter. I commenced using tobacco when twelve years old (I am now forty-two.) At the same age, I drank, and at times was so drunk I could not walk. I continued the use of both until my thirty-seventh year—a complete slave to these appetites. I tried many times to reform, and as many times failed. Had not God been merciful, I should in all probability have filled a drunkard's grave before this. Nov. 17th, 1868, by request of the minister's wife, I permitted them to hold a prayer-meeting at my house. I was half drunk at the time, and probably the minister saw it. Any way, he spoke about the grace of God being sufficient to remove all sinful appetites. That was all I recollect of what was said.

I paid no attention to what transpired that evening, but I awoke the next morning about four o'clock, and there seemed to come a voice that said: 'Trust in God.' I felt strangely, and thought some one must have spoken to me. Finally I got up and built a fire. Still the strange feeling continued. I went to the barn (being a farmer), fed my cows, took out my tobacco, as usual, to take a chew, and then I thought of what the minister said the night before. I said to myself, I will try it. I knelt down all alone in that barn, and asked God to remove the appetite for tobacco from me. I don't think it was a very eloquent prayer in the sight of the world, but bless God, it was answered. I felt that I was healed before I arose from my knees.

From that moment to the present I have never tasted nor wanted any tobacco or rum. That craving which tormented me for so many years has never returned. My business has sometimes called me into places where liquor is sold, and persons have smoked in my own house, but thank God I have no more appetite for it than if I had never used it at all! I was before this a very profane man; yet God not only removed the appetites as I asked him, but made me new all over, and wonderfully has he kept me. Bless his name!

Yours, washed in the blood of the Lamb.

WOMAN'S DRESS.

Dr. Dio Lewis remarks: "He who would labor for the physical redemption of woman in America, must begin with her dress. The prevailing modes constitute an insuperable obstacle to her physical development. Every humane physiologist has argued, expostulated, and implored. If American women should squeeze their feet until those members were in Chinese fashion, or should place a flat stone on the head until the brains were forced into the back of the neck, we might keep silent; but while they compress that part of the body which contains the organs of vitality—the heart, lungs, liver, and stomach—we must continue to resist their madness. In this part of the body is the fountain of life. The slightest pressure immediately reduces the size and activity of that fountain. He who has studied the inevitable results of the prevailing style of dress at the waist, will affect no surprise at those cold feet, that constipation, weak spine, short breath, palpitation of the heart, and congestive headache, which are the average characteristics of the health of American women. Give a live woman, a corset, the average tight dress, and the physiologist will deduce the morbid conditions I have named.

Near my residence are three shops—a rum-shop, a candy-shop, and a corset-shop. I do not know which is the greatest evil.

My practical suggestion is that, without corsets, the dress-waist should be full and loose, the skirt bands buttoned about the waist much larger than the body, supported by suspenders, such as gentleman wear, and attached to the bands at the same points. My own wife adopted many years ago that style that I advise, and is greatly delighted with the results. The dress is much more artistic and beautiful than the plain waist, with the hard, iron-like ligature at the band.

After twenty years study of the causes of disease, if I were permitted to select from our one hundred and one physiological blunders, that one which I most desire to see corrected, I should unhesitatingly name this particular feature of woman's dress.

SLEEP FOR FARMER'S WIVES.—A farmer's wife writes a letter to the "Rural New Yorker," which she wants the "men folks" to read. It is a plea for more sleep. Have you a wife, she says, who goes about in a listless, spiritless fashion, as though she could but just drag herself about? Or is she cross and fretful, and do you wonder how she came to have such a temper? Ten to one, all she needs to make her bright and happy, is rest, sleep, and loving words. Hire efficient help, that the wife who has passed a restless night may take advantage of baby's morning nap, and have one of her own, or, if she chooses, lie down in the afternoon and make up the lost sleep. You can afford it if you will. Do you begrudge a hundred dollars a year for your wife's comfort and health? Give women their home rights; help them to bear their burdens; give them a few kind, loving words every day, and you will have healthier and happier wives, children and homes.

LANCET'S PRESCRIPTION.

Dr. Lancet was a blunt old fellow, and an excellent physician; he never drove around an obstacle when there was need of going through it.

Matilda Jane had just come home from boarding-school, and was not feeling well. She was troubled with a rush of blood to the head, with dizziness, and loss of appetite. In this condition she called in Dr. Lancet, and asked him if he could help her.

"I have been trying to doctor myself," she said, languidly, as the old physician felt her pulse.

"What have you been doing?"

"Well—I have taken Limpshin's sarsaparilla, and Knave's anodine, and Hummer's pills, and Numbhead's balsam, and Fooler's tonic, and the Nonesuch Expectorating cordial, and Dr. Flathead's universal vivifying recuperator, and—and"

"Goodness, mercy!" gasped the doctor; "and haven't any of these things given you relief!"

"No," replied the pining fair one, "they have not helped me at all. O dear, doctor, what can I take that will be sure to do me good?"

"What can you take?" repeated the old man, moving back, and eyeing her from head to foot. "Take!" he exclaimed, with a flash from beneath his shaggy brows; "my dear girl, take off your corsets."—Sel.

WHICH WAS THE BRAVER?

Two young men joined a ship one day. Their names were Ellis and Jones. Now, Ellis loved his Bible, while Jones made all manner of sport of religion.

The first evening after supper Ellis took out his Bible and began to read. Jones laughed at him, called him a milk-sop, and tried to snatch away his Bible. But Ellis hung on to the blessed book in spite of the jeers of the young sailor, and his other wicked messmates.

One dark night, not long after, there came a sudden gale, which carried away the ship's main-top-gallant-yard. The spar hung by the rigging and dashed about so furiously as to threaten to carry the topmast itself. It was necessary to cut it away with a hatchet. It was a fearful task, almost certain death, to mount the rigging, and try to cut away the spar. Who would do it? The captain called for a volunteer, and seeing Jones standing near, said:

"Come, my man, there's work for you. I heard you boasting of your manhood the other day."

Just then Ellis, the Bible reader, stepped forward and offered to go aloft.

"No," said the captain, "I have made the offer to Jones."

But Jones shook his head, and after looking aloft said, "I dare not, sir. The man who attempts it is sure to lose his life."

"I will go," said Ellis, who had by this time fastened a hatchet to his belt.

The next moment the brave fellow was in the rigging, and lost in the darkness. For several minutes nothing could be seen of him from the deck. The men held their breath with anxiety for his safety. Presently, something was seen to fall. Was it Ellis? No. It was the spar cleared of the tackling. The men shouted. A minute later and Ellis stood safely on the deck.

"Thank you, Ellis," said the captain, "you did that work nobly. I think no man will venture to call you a milk-sop, or laugh at your Bible reading after this."

Then, after sending the watch aloft to shorten sail, the captain turned to Ellis again and asked:

"How did you feel while you were aloft, Ellis?"

"That I was in the hands of God, sir. I prayed for his protection, and I never felt my heart more light, or my courage more firm."

What a noble answer! What a proof that God makes the hearts of his children brave! Boys, do you want to be bold and do deeds of daring for the benefit of others? Behold the way! See it in the words of Ellis, "I prayed for his protection, and I never felt my heart more light, or my courage more firm."—Christian's Friend.

"A PLACE FOR EVERYTHING, AND EVERYTHING IN ITS PLACE."

Suppose the mechanic, as he uses one tool after another, should throw them all into a heap; how long would it take him to find a particular instrument when he had occasion to use it again? Suppose the physician should throw his medicines helter skelter into a drawer, or upon the shelves of his office; how long would he be in finding the article he needed in a particular case? Suppose the school-boy should scatter his books all about the house, just where he last used them; how much time would it take to collect them when the bell rang for school?

How often do you, children, experience difficulty in finding your Sabbath-school books to return them to the library, and your lesson leaves, because you have thrown them down you know not where, besides the injury or actual loss of them, which sometimes occurs through carelessness?

There is no remedy for all these inconveniences but a strict observance of the rule set at the head of this article. I advise you all to adopt it. Write it down, and paste it on your desk or on your bed-post, and practice it every day. If you go to the day-school, never leave your seat at the close of school till you have put up your books, slate, pens, inkstand, each in its own proper place; and when you get home hang up your hat, coat and gloves where you can find them at once when you want them again. When you have used any article about the house, put it exactly where you found it; and then, if it should be out of its proper place, you are not to blame.

Practice on this plan while you are young, and you will form a habit that will have saved you several years of your life when you get to be old, in addition to years of pleasure in seeing everything in is proper place.—S. S. Visitor.

DON'T HURT THE BIRDS.

"Little birds sleep sweetly
In their soft round nests,
Crouching in the cover
Of their mother's breast."

Don't hurt the sweet, beautiful songsters, little folks, not a hair of their heads, nor their nests or little ones; it would be cruelly wicked to do so. Hark! how sweetly they sing! Sing praises? Yes, they do. Turn to the 148th Psalm and see how everything above and everything below, animate and inanimate, praise the Lord, and the birds among the rest.

Learn a lesson from these merry, melodious songsters? Certainly we can.

"We learn a lesson from the birds
Of life from day to day—
The things we set our hearts upon,
Oft quickly pass away!"

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

CALL ON JESUS.

Art thou weary of burdens—
Footsore, tired, weak and faint?
Call on Jesus in thy trouble,
He will hear thy soul's complaint.

Dost thou hunger? Here's a table
Spread with bounties rich and free;
Ope thy heart, for he is able
Peace to give and purity.

Art thou thirsty? Oh! so fully Whosoever will may have;
All may drink of living water,
He delights to help and save.

Art thou lonely? He'll protect thee;
Art thou weak? His arm is strong;
Art thou weary in thy journey?
Cheer thy heart with holy song.

From all danger he'll deliver,
And will drive away our fear;
All the while if we but trust him,
He will all the while be near.

Why cast down? Be not discouraged;
Cast thy burden on his breast;
Trust him, praise him every moment,
And enjoy his perfect re t. —Ex.

TWENTY-EIGHT PLAIN PROOFS FROM THE SCRIPTURES

that Christ will personally appear again, to receive his church, and reign with her on the earth.

1. When false Christs and false prophets arise, declaring that Christ may be seen in this or that place, the word of the Lord declares that "as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24–27.

2. Who or what will put an end to the great tribulation spoken of by Daniel and Matthew? It is written, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days . . . shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. 24 : 37–39.

3. Did the waters of the flood overtake and destroy the unbelieving and mocking antediluvians? "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24 : 37–29.

4. Do servants receive gifts on the ascension of the Lord Jesus? It is that "After a long time the Lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them." Matt. 25 . 14 20.

5. Are all the nations to be called to account for their treatment of the messengers of God? "When the Son of man shall come in his glory . . . then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats," etc. Matt. 25 : 31, 32.

6. Instead of the kingdom appearing during our Lord's lifetime on earth, "The nobleman was to go into the far country," and receive the kingdom and then return, and having given his servants gifts to trade with during his absence, he said, "Occupy till I come." Luke 19 : 11–14.

7. If the Savior goes away to prepare mansions for his people, he says, "I will come again and receive you to myself." John 14 : 3.

8. The poor disciples were doubtless perplexed and much disappointed, that the glory they so much looked for had not been openly exhibited by the Lord; they therefore ask, at the last interview with him, if he would then restore again the kingdom to Israel. The Lord's reply is very significant. The time or the season for such an event, he declared, the Father alone had put in his own power, but he does not say a word about the gospel introducing the kingdom; on the contrary, it is stated, that "while they looked steadfastly toward heaven," two angels informed them that the same Jesus which they saw ascending thither, should so come in like manner as they had seen him go into heaven. Acts 1 : 6–12.

9. The Jews, whom Peter addressed at Jerusalem, were informed that God had not only raised, but glorified his Son Jesus, although they had denied, delivered up, and killed him. "Repent ye, therefore, he says, "and be converted, and he . . . shall send Jesus Christ, whom the heaven must receive until the time of restitution of all things." Acts 3 : 13–22.

10. Instead of any thought of the world being converted by the gospel, we have the plainest testimony to the contrary given by James. "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name;" and then adds, "After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David that is fallen down." Acts 15 : 13–18.

11. Speaking of the order of the resurrection, and to correct some of the melancholy errors of the Corinthian church, Paul declares that "all should be made alive in Christ." But "every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." Observe, he does not say that all the dead shall be raised when Christ comes, but only they that are Christ's. 1 Cor. 15 : 22–24.

12. Sin and death have each a victory now over the bodies of the saints, but when "the last trump" shall sound at Christ's second coming (1 Thess. 4 : 16), then, but not till then, "shall be brought to pass this saying that is written, . . . O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" "Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, even the redemption of our body." 1 Cor. 15 : 51–56; Rom. 8 : 23.

13. Mere professors walk as citizens of this world, and consequently make their "god their belly, glory in their shame, and mind earthly things." But our "conversation [or citizenship] is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body [or body of humiliation], and make it like to his glorious body." Phil. 3 : 18–21.

14. The power and character of Paul's ministry are seen in the fruits produced at Thessalonica. The believers there received the word "in power, in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," and amongst the many exceedingly blessed effects produced, we see them "turning from idols to serve the living and true God and to wait for his Son from heaven." Nothing is here put between their service and their waiting for Christ. 1 Thess. 1 : 5–10.

15. Is the holy and heavenly conduct of the christian, the subject in hand? It is "that he may stablish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Thess. 3 : 13.

16. The Thessalonian christians were evidently in doubt and perplexity with respect to their departed relatives. It would seem that they had doubts lest their friends, who had fallen asleep in Christ, should not be with him at his coming. The apostle leaves them in no uncertainty as to this point. "I would not have you to be ignorant," he says, "concerning them that are asleep . . . For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent [or go before] them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Not one word have we here about the unbelievers, either dead or living, for Christ's coming into the air had nothing to say to any but to his church. 1 Thess. 4 : 13–18.

17. The day of the Lord, or the personal appearing of Christ, when he shall be manifested with his saints to the world, will come as a thief in the night, and overtake the unbelievers at the very moment that they in their indifference and blindness are saying "peace and safety." "Sudden destruction" shall then come upon them and "they shall not escape." This, it is needless to say, will be a considerable time after the saints are caught up to "meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 5 : 2–4.

18. Believers in Christ have suffered all kinds of persecution from age to age, but this is not to last always. When shall it cease? "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, . . . when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." 2 Thess. 1 : 6–10.

19. False teachers and deceivers, led on by Satan, had taught the Thessalonians to believe that the day, or revelation, of Christ in judgment, had set in, and was then present. The apostle, in this second epistle, corrects this evil teaching, and re-states what he had already declared in his first epistle, namely, that Christ would first come for his church, to receive her to himself. This should have taught them that the judgment could not have set in, seeing that they had not yet been gathered to meet the Lord in the air. "We beseech you, brethren, he says, "by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind or be troubled . . . as that the day of Christ is at hand"—or, more properly, present. That the day, as we have said, could not come until after they were caught up, neither could it come until after the awful apostasy, or falling away, had set in, and the man of sin, with all his fearful features and doings, had manifested himself. Thus, then, is it taught, again and again, that his coming is that, and that alone, for which we are to be looking, and not for signs or circumstances connected with it. 2 Thess. 2 : 1–4.

20. Does Timothy receive a charge as to preaching, reproving, rebuking, exhorting, because the time was coming when they would not "endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," that solemn injunction is thus prefaced, "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4 : 1–4.

21. If Paul exhorts his "son Timothy" to "fight the good fight of faith," he can say himself, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith;" and then most blessedly and triumphantly can he add, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing. 2 Tim. 4 : 7–8.

22. In giving directions to Titus as to servants and others, the apostle exhibits the practical character of the grace of God. He says, "that it teaches us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world;" but it teaches yet more, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and Savior Jesus Christ." Titus 2 : 9–14.

23. The priests under the law were continually offering their sacrifices. Every year the high priest had to enter in once into the holiest with the blood of others; but Christ had not to offer the blood of any creature, either once or frequently, nor yet to offer himself "often," for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. But if Christ appeared once to bear and put away sin, "to them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9 : 24–28.

24. The elders or shepherds are exhorted to feed the flock of God and to take the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly, neither for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind. And they are further told, not to lord it over God's heritage, but to be ensamples to the flock. And now what is the motive put before them? And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. 1 Peter 5 : 1–4.

25. If any should doubt what the Lord Jesus meant to have conveyed by his transfiguration, they have only to turn to Peter's interpretation of it. "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty," etc. 2 Peter 1 : 16–17.

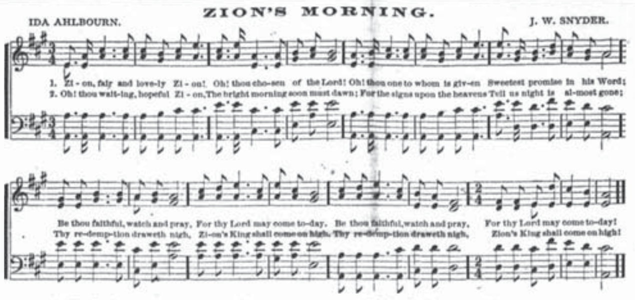
26. Scoffers walking after their own lusts, are made inadvertently by their infidel questioning, to prove that the coming of Christ was fully acknowledged as promised, or why ask the question, "Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Peter 3 : 4.

27. The very practical character of the second coming of Christ is found everywhere throughout the New Testament, but in no instance, perhaps, is it more strongly marked than by the apostle John. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John 3 : 2–4.

28. The Apocalypse or Revelation begins, it may be said, and ends with the second coming of Christ. In opening this book, amongst the cardinal and prominent truths of the first chapter are, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty. Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him," etc. And the last chapter speaks thus, "Behold, I come quickly. He which testifieth these things, saith, Surely, I come quickly." Rev. 1 : 7, 8; and 22 : 7-12-20. —English Tract.

ZION'S MORNING.

IDA AHLBOURN. J. W. SNYDER.



1. Zi-on, fair and love-ly Zi-on! Oh! thou cho-sen of the Lord! Oh! thou one to whom is giv-en Sweetest promise in his Word;
2. Oh! thou wait-ing, hopeful Zi-on, The bright morning soon must dawn; For the signs upon the heavens Tell us night is al-most gone;
Be thou faithful, watch and pray, For thy Lord may come to-day. Be thou faithful, watch and pray, For thy Lord may come to-day!
Thy re-demp-tion draweth nigh, Zi-on's King shall come on high. Thy re-demp-tion draweth nigh, Zion's King shall come on high!

3. Zion long has groaned and sorrowed,
Been an outcast from the world;
Been the mark whence all the wicked
All their poisonous darts have hurled;
But it cannot thus remain,
For the Lord will come again.

4. Zion, let no power deceive thee,
Satan comes in robes of light;
But thy God will guard and lead thee,
If thou askest him aright.
He will listen to thy cry,
Send thee aid from him on high.

5. Zion, be thou ever waiting,
Keep thy watchmen on the walls,
That thy lamps be brightly burning,
When thy Bridegroom for thee calls.
Be thou earnest, steady, true,
Keep his coming in thy view.

6. Zion, lift thy head in triumph,
Sing aloud a joyous song;
Tell to all earth's sinful nations,
That thy Lord will come ere long.
He will banish thy dark night,
Bring the everlasting light.

"WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?"

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

It is evidently the will of our heavenly Father that we should have not only a "knowledge of the truth," but an exact knowledge, an accurate knowledge. To the humble disciple who prayerfully seeks for the truth, it will surely be revealed. From such "no good thing" will be withheld. The truth may be hidden from the proud, the "wise and prudent," but it is revealed to babes.

But what is the truth? How are we to find the saving truth—the essential truth? Bible truth is truth concerning Jesus of Nazareth. Pride looks too high to see this. Science must spin out its fine theories, and weave its web of philosophical distractions, but cannot look for the plain and simple truth as it is in Jesus. To know what Christ has done for us, and to know what he would have us to do, is more important than to understand all human science, and be able to speak all the languages of the world.

There are many who would see the folly and uselessness of asking where Cain found his wife, who yet spend much precious time upon questions that are but little more to the purpose. "Foolish and unlearned questions" have always been plenty enough, but the apostle exhorts us to avoid them. For all who do not yet know this, the first great question is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" To some the answer would be "arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." In every case the answer would be appropriate, and exactly adapted to the individual requirements and powers.

Instead of commanding us to do some great thing (as Naaman seemed to expect of Elisha), it is extremely simple and easy. To one, "Go and wash," to another, "he that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise." To all it is, "let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." The gate is narrow, and the way is narrow after we have passed the gate. Very few besides little ones can get through the narrow gate, or walk in the narrow way. Pride and unbelief are sure to err, and can never see the truth, or if they see it, they will not obey.

HAS THE SANCTUARY TWO VAILS?

M. W. BALL.

We have the most direct and positive testimony in Heb. 6 : 19, 20, that our great High Priest entered "within the vail" at his ascension. In speaking of the hope of the gospel, the apostle says—"Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made a High Priest forever after the order of Melchisedic."

Here, then, it is clearly stated that Christ entered within the vail in Paul's day. But we are told by some that this was the first or outer vail, but the inner vail, dividing the holy and most holy, was not entered by him until the tenth day of the seventh month, in 1844, and that a knowledge of this change is absolutely necessary in order to be benefitted by his ministration. Hence it will be seen that the question heading this article is one of vital consequence.

If the sanctuary has two vails, the claim herein set forth may be true; but if only one, then the claim is false, and should be exposed as such. The Scriptures alone must determine this question, hence, I propose to briefly examine their teachings in relation to this subject.

I would first remark that a correct understanding of the earthly sanctuary is of the highest importance in settling this question, as the earthly was a true pattern of the heavenly. That the sanctuary built by Moses had two curtains of blue, and purple, and scarlet, one at the entrance of each apartment, no one with any knowledge of the Scriptures will attempt to deny. See Ex. 26 : 31–37; 40 : 3–9. But that these curtains were both called vails is not to our mind a Bible doctrine.

Inasmuch as the curtains were alike, with the exception that one had cherubim wrought thereon, while the other had not, it is argued that whatever one could be called, the other could be called also. If one could be called a vail, so could the other. We are told that Josephus calls the hanging at the door of the first apartment a vail just like the other. It matters not what the historian calls it, or what any one else calls it, we want something more than human testimony on this point. We want to know what God calls it,—what the Bible calls it. Testimony of this character is what must settle the question.

It does not follow because two vessels are built alike, and one is called Gen. Grant, that the other must be Gen. Grant also. I see no reason why one may not be called Gen. Grant and the other the Virginius, or some other name, providing the owners saw fit to name them such.

The Scriptures nowhere call the hanging at the door of the first apartment a vail (and Heb. 9 : 3, is the only text from which such an inference can be drawn); while the one separating the holy and most holy is always called such. The name which Inspiration has given to the curtain at the door of the tabernacle is a "hanging." See Scriptures already referred to.

But right here we are very gravely informed that the translators were at fault, that they both should have been rendered vails. What a pity it is that our translators were men of such profound ignorance. Had they been as wise as some of our day, we might have had something like a correct translation of the Scriptures. The falsity of such a claim will appear as we proceed in our examination of this question.

Having shown that the Scriptures recognize but one vail in the sanctuary built by Moses, let us see if they recognize two in the temple built by Solomon.

In the historical account given of this magnificent structure we read in 2 Chron. 3 : 14, as follows:—"And he made the vail of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen and wrought cherubims thereon." Mark, it does not say he made the vails (plural) but the vail, singular; showing conclusively that the temple had but one vail, so-called.

In support of this position we call the reader's attention to the testimony of three inspired writers—Matthew, Mark, and Luke. In their account of our Lord's crucifixion they tell us that "the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." Now, I inquire, how many vails do these inspired writers recognize the temple as having? Perhaps those who advocate the two vail theory and teach that Christ entered within the second vail in 1844, can tell us which of their two vails was rent at the crucifixion of our Lord. We have some curiosity to know.

The record does not say that the vails (plural) of the temple were rent; neither does it say a vail, or one of the vails, but "the vail" was rent in twain; showing beyond all controversy that the temple had but one vail, and that divided the holy and most holy place. The numerous expressions —"Within the vail," and "without the vail," prove that the Scriptures recognize but one vail, either in the sanctuary built by Moses, or in the temple built by Solomon. Therefore it is but reasonable to conclude that there is but one vail in the sanctuary above. And when our High Priest entered "within the vail" at his ascension, he entered the "holy of holies," "there to appear in the presence of God for us."

That the dwelling place of the Most High is between the cherubim overshadowing the Mercy-seat is conceded by all; yet we gave a few Scriptures on this point. "And David arose and went with all the people that were with him from Boale of Judah to bring up from thence the ark of God, whose name is called by the name of the Lord of hosts that dwelleth between the cherubim." 2 Sam. 6 : 2. We next call attention to the prayer of king Hezekiah—"and Hezekiah prayed before the Lord, and said, O Lord God of Israel, which dwelleth between the cherubims." 2 Kings 19 : 15; Isa. 37 : 16.

Let us now hear the Psalmist on this point—"Give ear, O shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock, thou that dwellest between the cherubim, shine forth." Ps. 80 : 1. Again, "The Lord reigneth, let the people tremble; he sitteth between the cherubim, let the earth be moved." Ps. 99 : 1. This testimony proves beyond all doubt that the dwelling place of the Most High God has ever been between the cherubim, in the holy of holies, of the heavenly sanctuary. Now if Christ when he ascended up on high, went into the immediate presence of his Father, there to appear, or minister in his presence for us, as taught by the apostle, how can it be true that he "came with the clouds of heaven and came to the ancient of days" in 1844, where he was already in his presence, seated at his right hand, as the Scriptures declare?

We have by no means given all the testimony which can be produced in favor of the position that Christ entered the most holy place more than eighteen hundred years since. In Heb. 10 : 19, 20, we hear the apostle speaking to his brethren about having boldness to enter the "holiest" by the blood of Jesus. How could Paul's brethren enter the "holiest of all" had not Christ entered there at his ascension? In order to dispose of this testimony, we are told that the word "holiest" in the original, is in the plural, and should have been rendered holy places. But this by no means helps the matter, for the language with such a rendering, would teach that the second apartment as well as the first could be entered by the blood of Jesus in the apostles' day.

We confess our lack of ability to harmonize the Scriptures with the view that our High Priest did not enter the holy of holies until 1844. If any feel qualified to do so, we are ready to lay down our pen and give the work into abler hands.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

E. L. DYER.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."—MATT. 24 : 29.

These signs are in the past, so we are past the papal persecution which was to last twelve hundred and sixty years. The first sign was the darkening of the sun in 1780, May 19th. It was supernatural. The moon was at the full, or nearly so, at the time; so the infidel cannot say that the sun was eclipsed, and it was a natural thing for the sun to be eclipsed. So it is, but not when the moon is at the full, for the two planets then are separated from one another. So this was an unnatural occurrence. The hand of the Almighty was placed over that luminous body, and at the right time to fulfill the Savior's prediction.

The next sign was, the moon should not give her light. Now the historian tells us that the night following this day was so dark that an object could not be seen six inches before one. I want you to keep in mind that the moon was full, or nearly so, at this time. What was the matter? was the moon eclipsed? No, for the same historian tells us that the moon would show herself at times, and that she looked as though she was traveling through a sea of blood. What does all this mean? O, natural consequences, says the skeptic; these things were always so. No, sir, we think not; but it was to fulfill that spoken by the Savior—"the moon shall not give her light."

The third sign was that the stars should fall from heaven in 1833, Nov. 13th. The shower was most brilliant on this continent. It was visible from the lakes to the equator. The scene was of the most stupendous grandeur. Lines swept over the sky like the flakes of a snow storm. The same historian tells us large meteors darted across the heavens, leaving luminous trains behind them that were visible sometimes for half an hour. They shed a soft, white light, while occasionally yellow, green, and other colors, varied the scene. Irregular fireballs, almost stationary, glared in the sky; one especially, larger than the moon, hung in mid air over Niagara Falls, and mingled its ghastly light with the foam and mist of the cataract. The shower commenced near midnight, but was at its height about five A. M. In many sections of the country the people were terror-stricken by the awful spectacle, and supposed that the day of judgment had come.

But, says the infidel, these star showers have always been, the same as we see them now; and the shower of 1833 was confined to this continent, so it was no sign to the inhabitants of the eastern hemisphere, and thus your signs have failed. But we can prove that the first star shower of any note was in Nov. 12th, 1799, and came at the right time, in the right place. Jesus says—"Immediately after the tribulation . . . the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven." Now the sun and moon were darkened in 1780, and the stars fell in 1799; and I will give the historian's own account of it. Humboldt says the "sky was covered with innumerable fiery trails, which incessantly traversed the sky from north to south. From the beginning of the phenomenon there was not a space three times the diameter of the moon which was not filled every instant with the celestial fireworks. Large meteors blended across the heavens their dazzling brilliancy with the long phosphorescent paths of shooting stars." Now the inhabitants of this continent did not see this star shower, for it was confined to the eastern hemisphere. Jesus meant that all the Christian world should see those signs; so it took the two to fulfill the prediction.

"TRINE BAPTISM" vs. "ONE BAPTISM."

T. M. PREBLE.

THANK GOD for the timely article in the Crisis of June 10th, headed—"One Baptism," by Bro. Grant. I have been solicited by several brethren to write an article on "trine baptism," and have been preparing to do so; but need not now. But I do most heartily endorse this article of Bro. Grant's. It is an important and instructive piece of historical facts relating to the "three-fold baptism of the Marcionites," and of the blasphemous heresy of Marcion, the author of "trine baptism." Hope all will read and ponder it, and also call the attention of those to it who most need to know the truth it contains. The article ought to be published in tract form, and circulated where honest ones are being deceived by the terrible heresy of Marcion, which is now being received by misguided men in these last days of peril. Marcion was such a shocking, blasphemous heretic, that he "was excommunicated by his own father, who would never admit him again into communion with the church, not even on his repentance. Strange indeed it is that men, pretending to be teachers of the Bible, can be so far bewildered as to receive the heretical delusions of Marcion and his followers, and thereby turn the truth of God into a lie!

What next will the devil introduce among Adventists to try to destroy the truth of God? What were some of the things which Marcion did? Answer—"He mutilated the gospel according to Luke, striking out all that relates to our Lord's nativity, and taking away many things from our Lord's discourses. . . . In like manner he curtailed the epistles of the apostle Paul, taking away those passages where the apostle plainly speaks of the Creator of the world as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and also his quotations from the prophetical writings that foretell the coming of the Lord. . . . Beside all these blasphemies, he maintained that Cain and the people of Sodom, and the Egyptians, and all the nations in general, though they had lived in all manner of wickedness, were saved (?) by the Lord when he descended into hell (or the invisible world, the receptacle of departed spirits); for they came to him, and he took them up into his kingdom (?). But that Abel, and Enoch, and Noah, and the patriarchs, and the prophets, and other righteous men, who walked with God, and pleased him, did not obtain salvation" (!!).

I sometimes think that we, as a people, are hardly half awake in our efforts to check the work of the devil among the people. But I feel that I am beginning to wake up a little more, and pitch battle anew with the old devil. I have been fighting this old "liar" for over forty-four years, and my courage was never better. Our battles are nearly at an end; for "the battle of that great day of God Almighty" is "at the door." "Come, Lord Jesus." Amen.

THE YOKE OF CHRIST.

C. MENDENHALL.

A beautiful and responsible feature in the plan of redemption is, that man is free to choose good or evil, life or death. He is not compelled to pursue either course, hence each individual is accountable for his personal actions, Our Savior invites men to serve him, showing the advantages which acrue therefrom. In Matt. 11 : 29, mankind are thus advised by this holy Teacher; —"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

What a depth of thought! what profound meaning, teaching, purity of doctrine and practice is couched in this beautiful language! The yoke is offered with all its accompanying blessings. It devolves upon man whether he will take or reject that which will eventually (if received) culminate in exaltation and reward. The word of God warns men, exhorts them to turn to Jesus, take his yoke, and be blessed now and evermore.

TAKE MY YOKE.—We have labored under the galling yoke of Satan; under the iron yoke of oppression imposed by sin and selfish human will. We have left that and taken Christ's yoke. We know by experience that it is easy, the burden light; then let us use our best energies, putting out all powers towards the grand object of inducing men to enter this glorious service. Now is the time for action.

Reader, are you under Satan's yoke, at hard labor, under unfavorable circumstances, and poor pay. If so, take Christ's yoke, and place yourself under his subjection. In a yoke two work together; so in this case, Christ becomes your true "yoke-fellow," helping, sustaining, and guiding in all good things. It is written, "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke." Will you not then take this yoke upon you? It is an individual work. You, as a person accountable for your own doings, must accept of the promises through faith. comply with the conditions, submitting to Jesus in all things, taking the yoke upon you in theory and practice. Jesus died for us. Surely we can cheerfully serve him, showing our love by obedience, feeling our weakness and ignorance. We must obey the injunction—"Learn of me." Learn to work under the yoke, to maintain "good deeds, to seek for immortality and eternal life, knowing that to know him, whom to know is life eternal, we must become as little children; meek, lowly, willing to be taught and to obey. Learn by taking Him for our pattern in all things; for "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him . . . He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2 : 4, 6.

"For I am meek and lowly in heart. Pride and true religion are antagonistic. "Blessed are the meek." Jesus was lowly; so must we be. He who was exalted, left the glory he had with the Father, before the world was, "and made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2 : 7, 8. He was lowly, not merely in form, or by profession, but in heart. Our hearts must be pure and right in the sight of God, ere our actions become acceptable. He strove not for the ascendancy, but was gentle and forbearing in all things.

The duty of taking the yoke of Christ has its reward;—"And ye shall find rest unto your souls." Weary ones, you who are tired of the world, turn to Jesus and find true rest. What a blessed assurance is here presented, a glorious hope embodied in these words. Rest in Jesus from danger, sin and guilt; spiritual rest now, and a joyous anticipation of that rest which remaineth for the people of God. How sweet is rest after toil; how delightful is peace after warfare; how blissful is calm after a violent storm. In the christian warfare, in the service which taking the yoke implies, we shall find safety and rest. Rest from the striving of the flesh, a respite from the attacks of Satan, and when Jesus comes the enjoyment of a never ending calm in Eden restored, after the storms and strifes of this present age are forever ended.

Brethren, let us cling to the promises, faithfully working in the yoke, looking for Him in whom all our hopes are centred.

Sinner, do you wish to be accounted worthy in that day? if so, heed these words; "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." May God help us all to be wise unto salvation. Amen.

THIS GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM.

The apostles naturally felt a very deep solicitude in relation to the future, for they had espoused a new cause, commenced to advocate new doctrines, to follow a new Leader, and it might seem from a certain standpoint, to be an experimental trial of a new religion. The old religious teachers—Jewish and heathen, had solemnly rejected it as untruthful and dangerous, and the popular classes of church and state were determined to exterminate it. Under these trying circumstances, the few followers of the unpopular Teacher felt exceedingly anxious to get all the knowledge they could possibly obtain of their future experiences, whether of defeat or triumph, grief or joy. They had confidence in the divinity of Christ's message and in his inspiration as a teacher and prophet sent from God; therefore, they had confidence that all he said to them about their future history would be experienced. They therefore embraced every opportunity to inquire of him about future events to take place, affecting the condition of that people and movement. Christ had very early taught them that great and glorious events awaited them, for he had said, "Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." He also said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." These assurances became, very early in their experience, the great stimulant of their hope. This caused them to embrace every opportunity to inquire after the time and circumstances connected with that grand event. It became the grand central theme of their preaching, prayers and songs.

The hope of the apostolic church was not that Christ had come, for that was admitted as already accomplished, but that he would "appear a second time." They understood that their real triumph and glory would not be experienced until his reappearing; therefore, Paul could say of converted idolaters that they had "turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." They were not expecting to receive the blessedness they had sought through the gospel, until the Son of God should come from heaven. This faith and hope caused them to watch every intimation Jesus gave of coming change, and apply it to his second coming and the triumph of the gospel.

When he predicted the utter destruction of the temple, they evidently supposed that he was foretelling events connected with the consummation of their hope. They, therefore, anxiously inquired "When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" Jesus kindly and definitely answered their question, showing clearly the order and nature of the events to transpire prior to the church's triumph. He was very explicit in explaining the events to precede and continue until his appearing. The preaching of the gospel of the kingdom as a witness to all nations is presented by Christ as an event to precede and continue to the end. This predicted preaching has two special qualifications. 1. It is preaching the gospel of the kingdom,—a special message. 2. That message is to be preached as a witness to all nations. The gospel of the kingdom is a proclamation that "the time is fulfilled, the kingdom of God is at hand." The special qualification that this message is to be preached as a witness to the nations, gives the idea that, as a witness testifies in court, so this message would be declared to the nations. Jesus says, "as a witness," showing that he illustrated the preaching by a witness testifying in court. We shall get his meaning best, by applying his figure in the case. The word witness signifies "to know," and applies to knowledge, or to its possessor, and would apply to the one who testifies, or to his testimony. In this case both are involved, for it applies to those who preach, and to their testimony given.

A witness is required to testify to his knowledge of some unsettled question taken from the court docket. What is the question in this case? How does it read on the docket? The question reads, "When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" This was the question under consideration when Jesus said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached as a witness to all nations." It follows, therefore, that in the last days, testimony will be given to the nations, of divine authority, for it will be "gospel," showing that the end of the gospel age is approaching; and this testimony will rest principally upon prophetic signs witnessed by those thus preaching. A witness in court is not allowed to testify to what he does not personally know. So in this case, those who preach that the "kingdom of God is at hand" must themselves see the foretold tokens and signs by which they may "know" that it is near. Jesus answered the disciples' inquiry of what sign should indicate the time of his coming, and having given a number, he said, "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Then it is quite certain that those who see the signs will witness to the nations that the end of the world is near, and the kingdom of God about to be established; for they will "know" by the authority of Christ that it is near. As court rules are often determined by precedents of former jurisprudence, so God has given typical examples of the Jewish history, by which we may learn the divine rules by which this testimony will be delivered to the nations, and the result of expecting it.

The Mosaic administration of the divine government ended by limitation at the first advent of Christ, when the gospel dispensation, according to prophetic announcement, was established. The gospel of the kingdom to the Jewish church was a proclamation to them that, according to the Scriptures, the time had come for the change of administration to take place. It was a notification from God that they should prepare themselves to joyfully accept the new government, and loyally submit to its authority. It required them to voluntarily yield their old associations and religious institutions for the new social status introduced by Christ. They were required to acknowledge the proposition for this change as having divine authority, because God was giving testimony by many predicted signs and evidences, that the new government was then due, and about to be established. The Jews as a nation rejected the proclamation, by rejecting all the signs and proofs God gave them, that the time was fulfilled for their Messiah to be manifested, and give to them, if they would prepare themselves to receive it, the kingdom of God. They chose to retain their old covenant and its institutions, in preference to the offered new administration, with its institutions and blessings. But as the old had failed to limitation, and disloyally to it on their part, and as God could not, according to his immutable purpose, offer them any government excepting that of Christ in the gospel, they were left without any covenant relations to God, and were thus broken off from the divine protection and communion of heaven. This act of rejecting God's most gracious and kind offer of everlasting love and good will to them—viz., that of presenting his Son as their Lord and Redeemer, and choosing Moses' ritual and Ceasar's wicked reign to be perpetuated, rather than Christ's gospel and Messiah's glorious reign, was the crowning act of their rebellion, resulting in their inglorious subjugation and ignominious vassalage.

In that history, God gives us a photographic picture or typical manifestation of the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom to all nations, as a witness that the last great change of the divine administration is about to take place. As the argument supporting that message rested principally upon prophetic signs given to that generation, so the Gentile or Christian message will rest upon signs given to the last generation. As the first message gave proof of Christ's first appearing, so the second will give proof of his second appearing. As the first was designed to prepare a people to receive him at his first coming, and the government he inaugurated, so the second is designed to prepare a people for his second coming, and the kingdom he will then establish.

As but few of the learned popular teachers would preach the first message, but it was published by a lower class generally, so it will be in the proclamation of the second message. The masses and aristocratic classes rejected the first because it was preached by an unpopular class, without any worldly show or parade. We may therefore expect it will be so with the second.

The first was connected with the typical second advent of Christ—the transfiguration; the second will be connected with the real second advent of Christ. At the first, Christ exercised his lordly power over the curse, by controlling the winds and waves, the power of devils and diseases; at the second, he will sweep the curse away and hush all the angry elements in eternal and heavenly peace. At the first he raised some of the dead out of their graves; at the second all "the dead shall hear his voice," and come forth to judgment.

Connected with the first message were grand and important scenes transacted, some elevating humanity to heavenly dignity and angelic associations, others exposing its hideous deformities and satanic corruptions; but a thousand times more grand will be the scenes at the second manifestation, when the vail, shadowing the world in darkness, will be removed, and the saints, all glorified, shall outshine the sun in heavenly effulgence, and the wicked, covered with the blackness of infamy, will sink forever under the wave of perdition. At the first, the mount of transfiguration was covered with the glory of God, but at the second the whole earth will be filled with his glory. The first was a dim outline picture of the second. That was a shadow; this will be the substance which cast it.

We believe the proclamation now being made to this generation, of Christ's speedy personal advent to our world, answers in every part to the Bible description of the second message. It is being proclaimed as a witness to all nations that the kingdom of God is about to be established. It is unpopular, like that, and rests upon the same argument of the signs of the times. Its advocates generally belong to the lower classes, as did those. If this doctrine of the speedy advent should prove to be the last God-sent message to this world, how important that all the servants of God should understand it. How important that it should be elevated to its own proper grade. How vastly important that it should be believed and obeyed. May the God of all grace anoint our eyes, that we may see his sacred truth in its infinite importance and wonderful adaptation to our world and race.

THE SEAL OF GOD.

"Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption."—EPH. 4: 30.

When a state document is examined and found to be correct, it then receives the state seal, and thereby becomes an official paper. When the manufacturer puts his seal on his goods, it shows they have been through the inspector's hands, and found free from imperfections, and worthy to be endorsed by his own name. It is not expected that the state or court will put its seal on incorrect documents, or that the manufacturer will impress his name on defective goods. Should he do so, he would soon ruin his business. The more valuable the document or the goods, the more important the seal, and the more careful the inspection before it is made. Nothing is sealed that has not passed through a previous preparation. Whatever is sealed is designed for future use. Before the fruit jar receives its seal, the fruit must be properly prepared, placed in the jar, and brought to a certain temperature. The sealing process is quickly done, when the preparation is complete. If the air is not properly removed from the fruit jar, the fruit soon spoils, and the seal is worthless.

In reference to "the seal of the living God," is it reasonable to believe he will seal persons while in their sins? Should he do so, it would show that no preparation was needed in order to be sealed, so far as character is concerned. If this were true, then the sealing must relate alone to doctrine. We think no one would advocate such a theory for a moment. As the seal of God is to be made by the Holy Spirit, it follows that the object sealed should be free from sin, otherwise God would be putting his seal on unholy things, which he could not do, without denying himself. Hence before the sealing by the Holy Spirit, the person should be made free from sin. The Lord has made full provision for the accomplishment of this work. He has said, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1: 9. We read: "All unrighteousness is sin." 1 John 5: 7. Then it follows, when we are cleansed "from all unrighteousness," we are cleansed from all sin. Again, the Scripture says: "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7. When thus freed from sin, we are then fit to be sealed by the "seal of the living God." Rev. 7: 2. It is quite evident that the seal of the Spirit, the gift of the Spirit, the baptism of the Spirit, and being filled with the Spirit, are different terms expressing the same thing. "Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit." 1 John 4: 13. Of all the seals of which man has any knowledge, to him there is none so valuable as the seal of the Spirit. But so long as he refuses to confess and forsake all his sins, and submit himself fully and unreservedly to Christ, to be his for ever; with a firm purpose to obey him in all things, so far as he knows his commandments, and to abstain from all that is sinful in word, thought, or deed, he cannot expect to be "sealed unto the day of redemption." The Lord cannot seal us in our sins, for if he should, he would thus sanction and perpetuate that which is evil. Sin is the only thing that fits a person for eternal destruction, and freedom from it is the only requisite to secure eternal life. Satan has the sinners, and the Lord the saints.

In Rev. 7: 1, we find it stated that just before the coming of Christ, four angels were seen "holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth" till the servants of God were sealed with the seal of the living God.

This Scripture intimates that a short time before the second advent of our Savior, there will be a time allotted for the special sealing of the Lord's children, in order that they may be fully prepared to meet him when he shall appear. This being true, when the time arrives for the sealing, all the faithful children of the Lord, in all denominations, will feel the importance of entire consecration to Christ, with an increased longing after purity of heart. This feeling is begotten by the Holy Spirit, thus inviting the bride to make full preparation for the bridal day. If the teaching and leading of the Spirit is followed, the seal is given, but if not, then those who refuse to yield all to Jesus, are liable to become bitter in their opposition against that which is needed most to fit them for eternal redemption. Do not treat this subject lightly.

STERLING JUNCTION CAMP-MEETING.

A National Campmeeting for the promotion of holiness is now (June 20th) in progress at Sterling, Mass. Thus far the weather has been unfavorable, being wet and cold; but quite a large number are present, and the meetings are of a very interesting character. It was our privilege to be present during most of the first four days of the meeting, during which time we heard several able and highly instructive sermons from Brn. J. A. Wood, author of "Perfect Love" (the best book on the subject we have ever seen), S. Coleman, John Allen, W. A. Harlow, Bristol, R. I., J. A. Lansing, and Wm. McDonald, editor of the "Advocate of Christian Holiness," a valuable monthly, now published in Boston, but soon to be moved to Philadelphia. Other able and devoted preachers are present from different parts of the country. It is a rare treat to listen to the men who are the most noted in the churches for their consecrated talent; men who, by the help of the Lord, are making the supporters of popular religion feel very uneasy, and tremble like Belshazzar before the writing on the wall. It is rare that worldly-minded ministers, and their patrons, receive more pointed rebukes than from those who preach at these National Campmeetings; yet it is done in love and kindness.

If one wishes to see men and women terribly in earnest in the service of Christ, let him attend one of these meetings. The praying, singing, exhortation and preaching are a sample of what we heard our fathers and mothers talk about forty years ago, as exhibited by the early Methodists, when they lived in the valley of humiliation at the feet of Jesus. We are confident that no one, who truly loves him, can attend one of the National Campmeetings for a few days, and participate in the exercises, without being satisfied of the special presence of the Holy Spirit; while at the same time he will receive much benefit by mingling in the heavenly company.

We met at the meeting quite a number of our Brn. and Srs. who are looking for the speedy coming of our dear Savior; also several of our preachers. Some of them had received great blessings before we left, and felt most abundantly paid for coming. Those who have never attended one of these National Campmeetings, and feel a prejudice against them, must have a very erroneous idea in relation to their character; or else their hearts must be opposed to Bible holiness. We are free to confess, that if the Spirit of Christ and a pure Christianity is not manifested in these meetings, then we have never seen it in any meetings. But there is no if in the case. God is in this movement on holiness, and manifesting his power in a wonderful manner. It is evidently the preparation for the coming of Christ. While many of them have not yet seen the evidence of his speedy coming, we believe it will not be long before the glorious event will receive their most earnest and cordial attention. This is already the case with some; and their sympathy with those who are looking for the blessed hope is continually increasing. Shall we not, as a people, show ourselves worthy of their fullest confidence by manifesting a kind, loving, gentle, meek spirit towards every one, friend or foe?

We would most heartily recommend all our Brn. and Srs. to attend as many of these meetings as possible, and thus help remove the sectarian walls that have separated the true children of God. We are too near the coming of Christ to think of building up sectarian interests. Let us have a platform broad enough to hold every true christian, whom Jesus has accepted, and nobody else.

GLASGOW REVIVAL.

The revival in Glasgow, Scotland, during the last three months, under the labors of Bro. D. L. Moody, of Chicago, assisted by Bro. Sankey, has been one of remarkable results. The latest news from there speaks of their closing meetings in that city as follows:

"Never in the history of Glasgow, or in the recollection of its oldest inhabitant, has there been continuously for a week such a remarkable series of religious meetings as have been held from May 12th to 17th. It seemed at first almost too sanguine an expectation to suppose that the Crystal Palace, distant from the heart of the city a mile and a half, and holding three or four thousand people, would be filled for six days consecutively to hear the simple preaching of the gospel by Messrs Moody and Sankey. And yet this is what has actually come to pass.

On Tuesday evening, May 12th, a complete army of young ladies, to the amount of several thousand, repaired to the Palace, and many, for whom there was no room inside, were addressed in the open air. On Wednesday evening there was a similar overflowing crowd of young men. On Thursday evening an immense mixed congregation; and on each evening two hundred or three hundred went subsequently to the adjacent church, as anxious inquirers about the way of salvation.

On Saturday evening there was another vast concourse to hear the preaching of the gospel. Again, on Sunday morning, at nine A. M., the Palace was filled with young ladies to hear a sermon by Mr. Moody; and finally, the greatest assembly of all was on Sunday evening, when it is computed that fifteen or twenty thousand had come together, and Mr. Moody addressed them outside the Palace in the open air. There was then an after meeting inside the building, and in response to an invitation for those to rise who wished to be prayed for, and to obtain salvation through Christ, upwards of two thousand are estimated to have stood up and thus openly testified their anxiety to become converted, and to yield themselves to Christ.

It is scarcely likely that Glasgow will ever again enjoy such a wonderful and unparalleled series of religious meetings, unless Messrs Moody and Sankey, on some occasion, are prevailed upon to revisit the city.

In some respects the Friday evening meeting of three thousand five hundred converts was the most remarkable. Who would have ventured to predict four months ago that such a vast number of conversions would ever have taken place? God has opened the windows of heaven and poured out a blessing almost greater than there is room to receive, and certainly much greater than many anticipated.

It was remarked by the Rev. I. Wells, at the noon-day meeting on Monday, that the full number of converts was most probably double that number, or seven thousand, and the Rev. R. Howie said he considered there were probably three times that number; about ten thousand altogether. Other estimates confirm this conclusion.—Signs of Our Times.

"Mr. Moody has an attractive style, and his earnestness commands attention and holds his hearers to the end without any effort. His illustrations are telling, but he employs simple language which the meanest capacity may follow. His manner is abrupt, and at times he rattles on a more rapid pace than we are accustomed to, but he makes out his meaning with sufficient clearness for all that. His illustrations are sometimes humorous."

"Dr. Alexander, of New York, said in his last illness, that if he had to live his life over again, he would preach more upon the great central, fundamental doctines of the gospel, and less upon those that were only collateral and indirect in their bearing upon the conversion of men's souls. Mr. Moody will have no occasion to utter a regret of the kind, as his discourses all contain the very marrow and kernel of gospel truth in its most concentrated form—his object being to take his hearers to God's word as much as possible, and to ground them in a knowledge of that book which alone can make them wise unto salvation."

It should be remembered that Bro. Moody tells the people that Jesus is coming soon. It is time every true follower of Christ was saying the same thing.

MINISTERIAL CONVENTION.—Those who approve of the suggestion made in favor of a ministerial convention, at Springfield campground, two days before the campmeeting, and who will endeavor to be present, are requested to send us a postal card expressing the fact. We think much good might result from such a gathering.

SCIENTIFIC RELIGION.

Satan is trying now to make the world believe that the Christian religion is worthless, but that a scientific religion is what is needed to reform mankind. He wishes to persuade the people to substitute science for Christ. Science can save no one; and this Satan knows full well; only Jesus forgives sin, and gives eternal life in the world to come.

Mrs. Victoria Woodhull says in her paper of June 6th, 1874, when speaking of christianity, compared with science as a reformatory power in the world:—

"Christianity, so called, can never effect it. As a means of regenerating the world and carrying it forward to the results that Christ is said to have desired, the commercial interests that make railroads and steamships a necessity are a thousand times more potent than all the priests the world ever produced. Religion alone is impotent for progress. The religion that has cursed the world has invariably stood in the path of progress. . . . But, thank God, this religion is fast losing its hold upon the hearts of men and women, and they are coming to know that scientific and commercial progress are prime factors in that evolution of humanity through which alone the millennium can be introduced upon earth."

THE MINISTERS' MEETING.

Allow me to suggest an amendment to the proposition by Bro. Munger for a ministers' meeting at Springfield, next August. Let the call include the preachers of Canada and the Middle States, as well as those of New England. The meeting would of course be informal, and its influence not legislative, but only moral—and none the worse for that: moral influences sometimes have more power than statutory laws.

I think it may be safely asserted that there is not now among the members of the Adventist ministry that good understanding, kindly confidence, and hearty co-operation essential to the highest usefulness and success. To quote Bro. Munger, if we can conclude "all to pull one way, we can draw a much larger load" than we now do. And even if unhappily we should find that we could not all pull one way, it will be better for us to agree to disagree, to have a good understanding even in our differences of opinions and methods of labor.

But I hail this call for a ministers' meeting as an omen of better days for us. If we can be assured of full delegations of representative men from all sections of the territory mentioned above, it will give us, perhaps, the best possible substitute, at present, for the General Conference suggested by Bro. Whitmore.

I propose that every minister in Canada, the New England and the Middle States, who can attend, and will make an effort to be present at such a meeting, if it shall be appointed, write at once to the Editors of the Crisis—it will cost only a postal card—and if there be a sufficient number of responses to warrant the call, that the Editors definitely appoint the meeting, in accordance with Bro. Munger's suggestion.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MISSION LABOR.

T. J. GREEN.

A. A. M. SOCIETY, BOSTON, MASS:—

Dear Brn:—I again attempt to give an account of my labor for the cause of the Master in this southern part of his vineyard.

Since I wrote you last I have had to encounter very strong opposition from various sources. I found my family much in want, and myself involved in debt about one hundred dollars for provision. I have been obliged to work some to keep from suffering. As soon as I went to work the devil began with more fury than ever to attack our glorious cause by every means that the artful fiend could invent. But, thanks be to God, he has still defended his cause and all those who trust him.

I have preached in several new places during the last quarter. A good brother of Olustee helped me by paying railroad expenses, and going with me into Nausau Co., where we remained a few days and preached the word. The Baptists would not let us have their house to preach in, but we had many kind-hearted friends who gave us their dwelling houses. Although the creeks and bridges were almost impassable, a goodly number turned out to hear our glorious message. The audience increased daily as long as we remained. On Saturday night I stopped with the Baptist deacon, who, although prejudiced against us, went with us on Sunday morning and remained all day; and his good lady furnished dinner for all. May the Lord reward her.

I preached three times on Sunday, and am sure not without effect, although none made public confession. I am sure we have them convinced. I scattered all the books and tracts I had, and could have distributed many more. The people are anxious for more light on the Scriptures. They say they have never heard any one preach before who explained the Bible so they could understand it.

I have traveled many hundreds of miles, through all sorts of weather, and preached the gospel to thousands of people, who perhaps might never have heard it unless the Lord had moved upon the brethren of the A. A. M. S. to aid your humble servant to do so. I praise the Lord for what he has done for us, and humbly thank every brother and sister who has in any way helped me to carry this message to so dark a section as is a portion of Florida.

I cannot tell you half the opposition I have been compelled to meet, but through all God has safely carried me; although sometimes I have been severely threatened, no one has as yet laid hands on me. Through much suffering I have been the means of the happy conversion of many; and to-day I may safely say, although there is much opposition, our cause is held in more respect by the masses than ever before, and I am made welcome in many families where once I could not enter. Many say the Advent doctrine is destined ere long to be the most popular of all others.

Since I wrote you last, the Lord has opened the door in many places all through the State. I am determined with the Lord's help to go forward in the path of duty; having put my hands to the plough, how dare I look back?

Dear Brn., I ask the prayers of all God's children in this Mission work. I need books and tracts. I am destitute of almost everything; my family in dirt and rags, while almost every one that is able to help me is quite against me. Surely this is the gospel that was preached to the poor in Christ's time; but amidst all I praise God that I have in any way been found worthy to suffer for his word.

I regret very much being obliged to leave the brethren in many places without preaching. You know that in all such cases they will grow cold and indifferent, if not worse. O! how much I pray God that some one may be found to arise and act the shepherd's part by feeding the lambs, and giving them meat in due season.

Dear Brn., the time is but short, the battle is nearly over; and shall we who have borne the burden and heat of the day be at last compelled to ground our arms? No; let every man and woman arise and buckle on the whole armor, with the sharp two-edged sword in hand, march forward into the hottest contest, do our duty fully, and we shall soon see the enemy flying in every direction, and our Captain coming with palms of victory and crowns of glory for all his faithful warriors. So may it be. Therefore, hoping that both reader and writer may soon meet in the kingdom, I subscribe myself your most obedient servant in the Lord,
THOS. G. GREENE, Missionary.
Olustee, Fla., May 12th, 1874.

ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM preached at West Newbury yesterday (June 14th). He gave the trumpet no uncertain sound, upon the resurrection and second coming of the Lord. He preaches three Sundays in Lowell, then goes to Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., to be there for some time. A. S. BURNHAM.

APPEAL TO THE CHURCHES OF MASS.

The unfinished business of the annual State Conference, in relation to perfecting our organization for more effectual work in the supply of preaching for the churches, and in carrying the truth into new fields, will be taken up at the Greenwich Campmeeting; therefore, it is necessary that all the churches in Massachusetts should be represented.

Dear brethren, do not neglect choosing and sending your delegates. Raise funds by collections in the churches to pay their expenses, and help pay the expense of your preachers. Let us not love the truth in word only, but in deed and truth. We must unite our strength and give the world to understand that we are terribly in earnest. We have the truth, men and means, to do a great work. The door is open, and calls are earnest for help in every direction. Let every church in Mass. wake up to the work, and God will bless us more than ever. Our churches languish, our ministers get discouraged, our means are wasted, our efforts are paralyzed, for want of system. The Lord will call us to an account of our stewardship soon.

Let us have a grand rally at the coming meeting, and on the Fourth of July, 1874, declare by our action in conference our purposes and principles, so that all may understand that we shall not be hindered in our special work by grumblers and fault-finders. We have been in the villages of "O—no" long enough. "Up and at it" will accomplish much. We expect a glorious meeting and glorious results. I am in hopes of arranging matters so that our preachers can have their board, and possibly fare on the R. R. paid back to them.

Now, brethren, pray over this matter; talk it up; get up companies from each church; bring a tent, if possible, but come any way. We shall have tent room for all. Bring your blankets, and camp out in one of the pleasantest groves in Mass., and spend a few days in getting and doing good. Grace be with you all.
J. HEMENWAY.

KANSAS.

The Advent Christian Conference convened at Melvern, Osage Co., Kan., May 15th, 1874, at ten o'clock A. M., pursuant to the By-laws and published call. The President and Secretary being absent, A. S. Corey was appointed President, and Levi S. Smith Secretary, pro tem. Quorum present. Opening prayer by Eld. J. C. Smith. Under the second order of business, the President, D. D. Hunter, and Secretary, Amos Sanford, entered and took their respective seats.

Ministers present:—Brn. E. N. Bliss, J. S. Thorp, J. C. Smith, N. J. Sade, R. F. Clark, Mrs. R. F. Clark, P. W. Rote, Orson Lewis, D. Webster, Virgil Hunt, D. O. Amos, Amos Sanford. The following were admitted as members of the conference: Mrs. W. Dunbar, Miss Susie Smith, Mrs. H. S. Webster, Mrs. J. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Bryan, Mrs. C. Crowell, C. D. Potter, H. R. Haines, Amanda McAfee, Susan Dunbar, C. Crowell, Wm. H. Snyder, Caleb Smith, D. O. Amos, T. J. Hay, W. H. Rich, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Benton, Jacob Rose, C. M. Collins, E. S. Chapman.

The following were elected as Directors for the ensuing year: J. C. Smith, W. Dunbar, J. S. Thorp, C. Crowell, A. S. Corey, D. Webster, R. F. Clark.

The Directors elected from their Board the following as officers for the year: President, A. S. Corey. Vice President, W. Dunbar. Treasurer, D. Webster. Secretary, R. F. Clark.

Opening discourse delivered by Eld. Virgil Hunt, from Rom. 8: 38, 39.

May 16th, 10 A. M. Conference convened according to adjournment. Prayer by E. N. Bliss. Many letters were read from different churches in the State, showing that the different organizations were in a prosperous condition and in good working order. Eld. J. C. Smith was elected Evangelist for the ensuing year. Mrs. J. C. Smith and Virgil Hunt were appointed assistants. Morning discourse delivered by Eld. J. S. Thorp, from Matt. 16: 27.

The following ministers reported their labors for the year last past: J. C. Thorp, D. Webster, Orson Lewis, N. J. Sade, Virgil Hunt, R. F. and M. J. Clark, T. J. Rote, D. O. Amos. Whole number of churches organized since last conference, fifteen. Number of members in full connection in the above, two hundred and seven. Only two of the above ministers are long preaching, the balance from three months to two years. The following were reported to be licensed and ordained: Virgil Hunt, J. S. Thorp, P. W. Rote, R. F. Clark, D. Webster, O. Lewis, N. J. Sade. For license: E. N. Bliss, Mrs. M. J. Clark, F. O. Cutler, J. C. Smith, H. R. Haines, J. H. Peck.

Secretary ordered to have printed one thousand copies of the report of the conference, and to be paid for by different churches represented at this conference.

May 17th, 10 A. M. Discourse by E. N. Bliss, from John 4: 22. 2 P. M., discourse by P. W. Rote, from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14. 8 P. M., discourse by Mrs. M. J. Clark, from Prov. 8: 21—"That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasure."

In summing up the proceedings, we have great reason to thank God that he has blest the word in this State so much out of his abundant fulness in the last year. Four years ago there was not one in the State proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom and the soon coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; but, thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory, to-day we have many who are willing to go forth, and have been called, not from other States, but have been raised up in our own State. Praise the Lord forever. He not only has called men, but he has taken handmaidens, as he said he would—"And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams. And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit, and they shall prophesy." Acts 2: 17, 18.

The work is going forward; hundreds are seeing the truth, and many will see, but the largest part are crying, "Peace and safety." God have mercy on such.

We expect to see much good done this year, if time continues and the Lord blesses the truth as he has in the past.

The financial condition of the Conference is at rather a low ebb, nevertheless the cause has gone on. Kansas is a large State. Her broad prairies are rich in wealth, and are settling up fast. The State boasts of nearly four hundred thousand inhabitants. Thirteen ministers are licensed by the Conference to preach the gospel, and they must have help. They must be supported.

Brethren and sisters, put your shoulder to the wheel and do all that is possible to further on the cause. Send in your pledges to be paid on or before the first day of October, 1874. Many can send now. We need some to start with. Money and pledges may be sent as follows: Daniel Webster, Treasurer Advent Christian Conference, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas. All of which is respectfully submitted.

A Visit to the Aroostook.—I saw souls reclaimed and erect family altars, sinners bow at the altar of prayer, others renew their covenant with the saints to live a better life, and prepare to meet the Savior. May the Lord send them laborers that shall not distract, but gather to Christ. If men preach Christ, they will see good done. May the Lord strengthen the hands of those who have started in this blessed cause, to fight the good fight of faith, and at last wear the crown of life. Israel Damman.

Obituaries.

Crandall. Fell asleep at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 7th, 1874, Sister Sally, wife of Bro. Daniel Crandall, aged thirty-eight years, three months, and four days.

Our brother C., just recovering from severe illness, left with seven children, the youngest only six weeks old, a sweet bud, to be so early deprived of a mother's care, is touching indeed. Her illness was short, and so very severe her mind wandered most of the time; but a few hours before her death, she sang clearly and distinctly the following verse:

"Show pity, Lord; O Lord, forgive;
Let a repenting rebel live;
Are not thy mercies large and free?
May not a sinner trust in thee?"

thus showing her faith and trust in a faithful Savior. We were in another town holding meetings, and knew not of her sickness until we were sorrowfully told of her death. This is the first death in our little church during our two years' sojourn here, and we "weep with those who weep," praying that those mourning daughters, the eldest of whom is a member of the church, may, by God's grace, be helpers of their stricken father in training their little brothers and sisters to meet their dear mother in the kingdom of God. Bro. O. R. Fassett coming in town at the time, attended the funeral, and spoke words of hope and comfort.

W. A. & M. L. D.

Ransom. At Fall River, Mass., Sunday, May 24th, 1874, of typhoid pneumonia, Henry W. Ransom, son of Dea. Levi Ransom, of North Carver, Mass., aged nineteen years, nine months, and twenty-three days.

Bro. Henry was a great sufferer in body for twelve days, but his mind was treasured full of Jesus and his love. He was unconscious the last two days of his suffering, but God had mercy, and restored him to consciousness the last hour, that his dying words might leave their lasting impression upon the large circle of mourning friends who loved him so dearly. He found Jesus to be a complete Savior from sin last April; and his christian experience was unusually bright. He hoped to come home to North Carver to be baptized, but alas! death cut him asunder. A large attendance of mourning friends followed him to his quiet resting place. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. J. R. Boynton.

Newton. In Yorkshire, N. Y., May 30th, Sr. Nettie Wilbur, wife of Wm. Newton.

Her illness was very protracted, but borne without a murmur. She embraced the gospel at the tent meeting in 1868, and has ever devotedly loved the truth. She was gifted with a talent for singing, and her loss is the more sensibly felt; not only by the new-made vacancy in our little worshiping band, but by her absence from the choir. We miss her pleasant face and gentle spirit, but we are glad she rests in assurance of speedy immortality at the Lord's appearing. At the last moment she exclaimed, "I love Jesus, and I know he loves me." A large assembly gathered at her funeral. Christian parents mourn a darling child, and a christian husband a dear companion.

C. Colegrove.

Langdon. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Lockport, N. Y., May 11th, 1874, Mrs. Mary Lavina Langdon, aged seventy-six years.

Sr. Langdon was a member of the Catholic church. In her every day life she manifested much of the fruit of the Spirit, and believed in the resurrection of the dead. I visited her a short time before her death, and her faith was firm in the Lord Jesus. In him she trusted without a doubt. She lived with her son-in-law and his wife, Bro. and Sr. La-France, who are Adventists, and members of our church. She requested of them that a Protestant minister officiate at her funeral. She died suddenly of old age. Was in her usual health the day before, and in the morning was dead in her bed. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Ps. 90: 10.

R. H. Bateman.

Reed. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Lockport, N. Y., May 18th, 1874, Mrs. Adeline Allen Reed, wife of James W. Reed, aged sixty-three years.

Sister Reed embraced the doctrine of the Lord's soon coming many years ago. Blest with a good supply of this world's goods, she was actively engaged in personally visiting the poor, and distributing to their necessities in temporal things. She was not identified with any church by membership, choosing rather to visit all. Her attendance was mostly with the Adventists. Her old and much valued friend, Dr. Wisenar (Presbyterian), preached her funeral sermon from Jas. 1: 27, assisted by Rev. Mr. Oort (Lutheran) and the writer. R. H. Bateman.

Severans. In Camden, N. J., May 29th, 1874, Katie, daughter of Ellwood and Margaret Severans, aged nine months.

Never before was it our lot to behold such beauty in a lifeless form. Her tiny limbs appeared as though chiseled by the skillful artist's hand from the purest marble; and those words of the poet—"O lovely appearance of death" came to mind with unusual force, as being so applicable to this case. We committed this little rose bud to the dust of the earth "with the full assurance of hope" that she would come up in the resurrection, and bloom a fragrant flower in immortal beauty in the paradise of God. The services were held in Westfield, in the Methodist chapel, which was kindly offered for the occasion.

Wm. Shepherd.

Reed. In Hinesburg, Vt., May 28th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Etta E. Reed, only child of Perry and Martha Reed, aged four years, nine months, and twenty-four days.

Etta, full of life and glee, is dead. Death unlooked for has pierced with deepest sorrow these stricken parents, but they mourn not as those without hope. H. F. C.

Hayward. Fell asleep in Jesus, at East Roxbury, Vt., June 9th, 1874, Lucretia, wife of R. W. Hayward, daughter of Julius T. and Keziah Edson, aged twenty-five years, four months, and nine days. She died as she lived, a christian.

L. Wheeler.

Smith. In Grantham, N. H., April 20th, 1874, Sister Rebecca Smith, aged seventy-five years.

Sister Smith was one of the pioneers in the Advent ranks. She has ever sustained a good christian character. Since the death of her husband, some two years and a half since, being very deaf, and the infirmities of years resting heavily upon her, she had often expressed a wish to die and sleep until the coming of Christ. She suffered much, but patiently in the last weeks of her sickness. Funeral services attended by the writer, assisted by Eld. Henry Eastman.

C. H. Fletcher.

Roselle. Fell asleep, in Salem, Oregon, May 17th, 1874, William Roselle, aged twenty-eight years.

He was one who for years had been religiously inclined, but had neglected the weightier matters of an open profession. However, his last hours were passed in sincere repentance, and faithful meditations on our Savior's precious promises. His last words were, "I am happy, I am forgiven," and then quietly went to sleep. He leaves a sister in New York City, and a brother in Brooklyn. His sister's name was Sarah Gritinger; and when last heard from, lived at 89 Liberty St., New York City. Particulars can be had by addressing the writer, at Salem, Oregon, Box 323.

J. G. Orchard.

Warner. In Abington, Ct., May 26th, Mrs. Rebecca Warner, aged twenty-five years and seven months.

She retained her mental faculties to the last, and passed away ripe in years. By her faithful discharge of duties, and her amiable disposition, she made many friends. They have hope in her death, and trust that when the trump of God shall sound, she will come forth to die no more. Bro. Albee Bellows preached the funeral sermon from 1 Cor. 15: 56–57. M. W. Arnold.

Dickenson. In Woodstock, N. B., June 4th, Sr. Clarissa, wife of Bro. S. D. Dickenson, aged forty-eight years.

Our sister years ago received into a faithful and honest heart the good news of the coming and reign of the Messiah. She sleeps in Jesus. Her flesh rests in hope awaiting the resurrection to eternal life at the coming of the Redeemer. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to the mourning friends, from 2 Tim. 1: 10.

J. M. Tozier.

Drew. In Brookfield, N. H., May 16th, Bro. Benjamin Drew, aged fifty-nine years.

He embraced religion many years before his death, lived a consistent christian life, loved the appearing of Jesus, and was enabled to say in his last hours, before reason was dethroned, "I know he will save me." C. C.

Famine in Jerusalem.—A grievous famine afflicts Jerusalem, and a measure of corn, which at twenty piastres would usually have been considered beyond the reach of all but the rich, is now sold for forty-two piastres. Jerusalem depends for its supply of bread upon the crops raised on the plains of Sharon and in the valley of the Jordan. But, this year, the Jordan overflowed, and all the plains on the western side were converted into swamps. The leading Jews of the holy city have sent to their co-religionists the venerable Sir Moses Montefiore, in London, an appeal which reads like a leaf from the Hebrew Scriptures, a new "Lamentations." Dating their appeal "29th Nisan, 5634," they say that they grieve to sadden his old age with their woes, but, they add, "the fearful necessities of the daughter of Jerusalem, and the cries for bread of the thousands of souls who have never before suffered from such sore need, urge us to cry aloud and spare not. We appeal to those feelings of pity and mercy which have their dwelling place in your heart. Oh, prince of our nation! as well as in the hearts of the people of the God of Abraham, who at your call will rally round to help Zion and to give bread unto the inhabitants thereof. For all her people sigh; they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things for meat to relieve their souls. A grievous famine has come upon us. We are become a reproach to our neighbors, who cry: 'Where are your brethren, your mighty ones, those who are of old, men renowned for benevolence? Let them arise and help, and do valiantly in Israel.' Sir, the eyes of the people of Israel turn unto you, who have ever been a father unto Jerusalem, that you may arise and save, by great deliverance, the lives of ten thousand inhabitants of Jerusalem, who faint from hunger, and whose souls are bowed down to the dust. May the cries of old men and women, the cries of babes and sucklings, and the groans of the famine-stricken, awaken your ancient love for Zion; may you not stand afar off and hide yourself in time of trouble! Arise, stretch out your arm and go forth to the salvation of the people, and the Lord will be with you and will have mercy on his land, and will spare his people."

New York, June 16. A letter from Rome states that a Masonic temple is to be built in that city, and that the order flourishes extensively there under the persecution of the Pope and priests. Count Piancianni, mayor of Rome, is a Free Mason.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove-meeting July 4th and 5th at Asseria Centre, Barry Co., Mich. Bro. James Ferris is expected to assist in speaking the word. We expect a large gathering. A word to brethren, and ministers especially. I have frequently witnessed at our grove and campmeetings too much levity and unguarded talk, especially from ministers. Let us be guarded. Brethren, the world as well as the Lord, are watching our every act, and we are to render an account for every idle word. Thus it becomes us to be sober minded, that no one may have any evil thing to say of us. I visited a small band of brethren a short time since, where there had been a quarterly meeting held; and it was said by outsiders, it appeared more like a common concert than a religious meeting. Brethren, let us be guarded. The world and enemies of the cause of Christ are ever ready to add much to the little they may get from us. Let us keep unspotted from the world. Let us make our calling and election sure, that we may have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom. Your brother in the patient waiting for the dear Savior,

Philip Holler.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove and basket meeting at Moosehorn Corner, in the north-west corner of East Greenwich, R. I., on land of David Tarbox, July 4th and 5th, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m. Brn. E. Card, J. Miett, Jos. Carpenter, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord will meet with us in very deed.

H. H. Shippee.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Rangely, on the shore of the Lake near the village, commencing Friday, July 3d, 2 p. m., and continue over Sunday. If the weather should be unfavorable, there is a large, convenient Hall at the village. This is a new field of labor. We hope the brethren and sisters from adjoining towns will attend and unite with us to make this meeting one of profit to all.

J. T. Jordan.

As arrangements have been consummated whereby I have consented to accept the call from the church in Stoneham, Mass., to settle with them for as long a period as may seem of divine appointment, the church desire to have notice of the same given through the Crisis; consequently in the future, until further notice, any business in connection with the society, or any brethren who wish to exchange, will please correspond with me.

Roland D. Grant.

The Maine Evangel Tent will be pitched in Chelsea, Me. (near Eld. Weeks') Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday, and longer, if thought best. H. B. Sevey.

P. S. Those wishing for meetings, please let me know, that I may arrange as best I can.

H. B. S.

New York State A. C. Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the New York State A. C. Conference will be held in Lockport, instead of Sodus Point, June 25th. The reason of the change of places is because our old tent cannot be repaired which we depended upon to hold the meeting in at Sodus. Let there be a good turnout at Lockport. Let every church be represented. D. Cogswell, President.

A. P. Moore, Sec.

Alton Bay.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee will meet on the camp-ground Friday, July 3d, at twelve o'clock m. There will be preaching on the ground, the Lord willing, July 4th, at eleven o'clock a. m. There will also be preaching on the ground Sabbath, July 5th. J. Couch."

Alton Bay Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. Couch.

Vermont Campmeeting.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (d. v.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced. H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Jer. Carr, Chairman.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. Mitchell, for Com.

If any desire a tent meeting in June, before our camp and tent meeting at Greenwich, let us hear soon, or there will not be time to make arrangements for one. The pledges for the tent are wanted immediately. Send to Bro. Goodrich, Crisis office. L. Boutell, for Com.

Acknowledgment.—For Sr. M. I. Herron.—A Friend, $1.50. Geo T. Adams.

Connecticut Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, the Connecticut Campmeeting will commence in the grove near Plainville, Saturday, June 20th, and continue over Sunday, June 28th. Campmeeting tickets will be sold at reduced rates from stations on the New Haven and Northampton Railroad to Plainville. Brethren from Massachusetts can get campmeeting tickets at Westfield by coming that route; the usual conveyance from Plainville to the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates. We have changed the time of the meeting to accommodate brethren wishing to attend other meetings later in the season.

B. Hitchcock,
O. D. Woodruff,
H. P. Bradley,
L. Mills, } Committee.

P. S. Two or three tents 14×14 to rent if spoken for in season. O. D. W.

Conference.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Quarterly Conference of North Western Kansas will be held with the Adv. Chris. church at Solomon Rapids, Mitchel Co., commencing Friday evening, June 26th, and continuing over two Sundays. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us and worship the Lord in the grove. Let us lay aside all our hobbies, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. "Let brotherly love continue." E. N. Bliss, Pres.

J. S. Thorp, Sec.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting at West Amesbury, Mass., commencing Friday evening, July 3d, holding over the 4th, and Sunday, July 5th, also through the week, and over Sunday, July 12th. We shall do the best we can to make this meeting profitable to all that come; and we would urge our brethren and sisters to come to this meeting and labor with us for the salvation of the perishing. Those coming over the Boston and Maine R. R. will change at Newton Junction for West Amesbury. We shall invite able servants of Christ to labor with us through the meetings. Enoch Morrill, Com.

To the Churches of the New Hampshire Conference.—At the annual session of the N. H. Conference at Manchester, you chose for a protracted and tent-meeting committee, Enoch Morrill, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Fletcher. Now these brethren (like most of our preaching brethren) have families to support, and other expenses and demands to meet; and as the design of the tent is to go in new places where there is little or no interest in the coming of Christ, it needs money to carry on this mission work. But little has been done as yet by your committee in protracted meetings; but it is the desire of your committee that the tent be in the field, and faithful laborers with it. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have means with which God has blessed you to help in this mission work, whatever you send to either of your committee, specifying it for the tent and mission work, will be faithfully appropriated to that object, and God will bless the giver, and the means under God will result in the salvation of some poor lost sinner. Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., for the committee.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove-meeting at Kendall Mills, Orleans Co., N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. Eld. A. C. Newell, Sr. L. M. Stoddard, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is extended to all far and near. Those coming with teams will provide for themselves as far as possible, and those coming by R. R. will be accommodated with good homes near the grove. Leave the cars on the Niagara Falls R. R. at Holley, Saturday, 9 a. m., and conveyance at a reasonable rate will be furnished to the meeting, five miles distant. Come, brethren and sisters, and declare our faith in the name of the Lord. This is a new field, and much interest exists among the people to hear the truth concerning the day of the Lord. Let earnest prayer ascend for this meeting, that sinners may be "pricked in the heart," and obey the gospel ere it is too late.

In behalf of the people, L. M. Stoddard.

A Quarterly Meeting will be held at East Creek, Huron Co., Ohio, on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in June. We would like to see all the brethren from the surrounding country at this meeting. For the church, D. T. Call.

Conference.—The Eastern Maine and New Brunswick Conference will be held in Milltown, Me., commencing Thursday, June 25th, and continue over the Lord's day. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come, and let us work for the advancing of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. M. W. Corliss.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove meeting at Dayton, Me., in Hezekiah Buzzell's grove, Sat., July 4th (the same spot that was used last year for a like purpose). Brn. John R. Tripp, Franklin Haines, Jesse Gay, and J. Hill, will be there to preach the word. Time of meeting, ten a. m. Come, brethren and sisters, one and all, and enjoy the meeting with us.

For committee, Jer. Hill.

There will be a barn-meeting the 4th and 5th of July at Bro. M. Smith's place, in Rochester, N. H., near the chapel. We trust the Lord will send some one to preach the word. Come with the armor on to work for souls.

For the Church, S. Hawkins.

There will be a grove-meeting in H. Batchelder's grove, near Loudon Mills, N. H., Sunday, June 28th. We hope to see a goodly number out to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love for Jesus. O. W. Kimball.

The fourth session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly meeting conference will meet with the church at Bath, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of your Master, and work for the good of the cause, and for the salvation of perishing sinners. H. D. Reed, Pres.

H. S. Mitchell.

Conference Notice.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 24th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.

J. W. Burroughs, Sec.

A Grove Meeting will be held in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, West Levant, Me., July 4th and 5th.

F. A. Baker.

There will be a meeting in Kingston, N. H., at the Christian Advent meeting-house, on the 4th and 5th of July next. Preaching by Bro. N. H. Barbour. R. W. Currier, for the Com.

The Maine Mission Tent.—Our tent is now in good condition, and we are ready for meetings. It is time to begin. We have engaged Bro. Thomas Rines as tent-master, and others as preachers. Who is ready to have a meeting at once? Any wanting the tent to come among them for meetings, whether able to do much or little to support it, if the prospect of good results warrant it, please notify me at Yarmouth, or Eld. Thomas Rines, at Mercer, Me., at once. We shall think it well to have a series of meetings in such parts of the State as will economise in travel as much as we can. The tent is now at Mercer.

I. C. Wellcome.

MISSION CAMPMEETING.

There will be a campmeeting under the direction of the Mass. A. Conference, at Greenwich Plains, Mass., commencing July 1st, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

The unfinished business of the annual conference will be taken up at this meeting, according to the resolution of the conference; therefore it is important that every church in Mass. be represented by preachers and delegates. The meeting is located on the Springfield and Athol R. R., about thirty miles from Springfield, fifteen miles from Athol, in a beautiful grove, prepared for us by the R. R. Co., free of expense, situated about thirty rods from the depot, near a beautiful pond, and near a quiet village. It is expected that the fare will be reduced on the Springfield, Athol, and Vt. and Mass. R. R., and possibly on the Boston and Albany. Ample provision will be made to lodge all that come prepared to camp out. Board at 80 cents per day. Those that desire to board themselves, can purchase provisions on the ground at reasonable rates. Come, one and all. Let us put new life into the missionary work in Mass. We can if we will. Will you do it, brethren?

Those coming on the Fitchburg and Vt. and Mass. R. Road will purchase regular tickets for Athol, and there call for campmeeting tickets for Greenwich. All coming by the way of Palmer on New London R. R., will call for campmeeting tickets at Palmer. Return tickets on Vt. and Mass. and Fitchburg R. Roads will be obtained on the camp-ground. Those coming from Worcester will buy tickets to Gardner, and from there to Athol. Return tickets will be given to Gardner. Those coming from the south on the New London R. R. will change cars at Barrett's Station.

J. Hemenway, for Tent Com.

Tremont Mass. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont will commence (the Lord willing) Monday, July 20th, and continue until the 30th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board, and those with lodging who cannot bring tents. Those who can are requested to do so.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, do make one more effort to devote a few days in meeting with his dear saints on this consecrated ground, for it will very likely be the last time we shall have to meet on this spot before our Lord will come. We intend having some of his servants who are prepared to give the evidences we have of our soon deliverance, and labor with us to secure the salvation of the lost, that some, at least, may share with us in the hope of eternal life.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Let delegates be chosen, and every church in Massachusetts be represented, at Greenwich, at our campmeeting, to commence the first of July. Come with tents. L. Boutell.

Those wishing the New Hampshire Mission Tent to be pitched in their vicinity, will please write immediately to Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., Chairman of Tent Committee.

Tent Meeting.—There will be a tent meeting in Upton, Me., as Brn. Coolage and Flint may arrange, commencing Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We invite all the lovers of Jesus to come and unite with us in saving sinners, and prepare a people for the coming of the Lord. Albert Gordon.

D. N. Chadsey.

A Tent Meeting at "Slab City," Chesterville, Me., under the Maine Mission Tent, commenced Sunday, June 21st, and will continue through the week, and over Sunday, the 28th.

A. W. Taylor.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit. I. Damman.

J. Emerson.

Meeting at Freedom, N. H.—The lovers of the "blessed hope" in that region have arranged to hold a meeting in the Second Advent Chapel, at Freedom, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock a. m., and continue over the following Sunday. A large gathering of those of like precious faith is hoped for. All are invited from far and near. M. Stevens, C. H. Sweet, and perhaps others, will be present to preach the word.

C. H. Sweet, for the Brn.

The Lord willing, a grove meeting will be held in Albany, N. H., July 4th and 5th, in Geo. W. Bennett's grove, between the Bell and the red school-house. S. Bragg.

There will be a two days meeting held in the United States school-house, Bingham, Potter Co., Pa., Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to attend. A. H. Briggs.

J. W. Taylor.

Hoosick Conference Tent.—The Tent Committee have settled on the following points: (1) To keep the tents in new fields the coming season, if funds are provided to meet the expenses. (2) To hold the first meeting at Pittston, N. Y., if desired. (3.) To employ C. W. Baker as tent-master, with a salary of $12 a week. (4.) That subscriptions and payments for this work are now in order, and should be sent at once to J. B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., who is the Conference Treasurer, and will acknowledge all sums received. This is an important enterprise, and should be sustained. Whether the tent shall be in service every week of this season depends upon the action of individuals within the conference. Prompt liberality will ensure early and steady work all summer. The committee do not care to issue a long begging appeal; we only say we think it the duty of this conference to support their tent mission, and expect "every man to do his duty." As we sow, so shall we reap.

Those who want meetings will write at once to H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt., stating how much they will raise toward the expenses, that we may know what provision to make in the case, and just what to depend upon. (5) We intend, as far as possible, to provide laborers within the conference; but will make any consistent arrangement with those who may desire preachers from abroad. (6) Any further information can be obtained by addressing either of the committee, and enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

H. K. Flagg,

☞ PRICE REDUCED.
A NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.
THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. Ag't.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

10 cts. Ag't.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

"The Broken Seal," or Personal Reminiscences of Samuel D. Greene, on the Abduction of Wm. Morgan by Freemasons in 1826. For sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis." Price 50c.

GIVE ME SOME WORK TO DO.

In the wide harvest-field, O heavenly Father,
Give me some work to do for thee, I pray;
Although I may not stand among the reapers,
I'd glean the handfuls scattered by the way,
Or e'en a cup of cooling water bear
To cheer some fainting, weary toiler there.

I know thou needest not my humble service,
Before thy throne myriads of angels bow;
But Jesus died for me, and all unworthy
I come to thee; O Lord, accept me now.
The day is spent, the evening shadows fall,
Some tribute I would offer howe'er small.

For how shall I behold in glory shining
That form that once was agonized for me,
Once crowned with thorns, and marred with cruel scourging?
How in his hands and feet the nail-prints see?
I cannot by a life of selfish ease,
Have blessings won through sufferings like these.

O eager spirit, thou hast passed unheeded
The work thy Father did to thee confide;
Go feed the hungry, cheer the heart of sorrow,
And lead the wanderer to the Crucified.
Behold, these wait for thee on every side;
Delay no longer, for the field is wide.

To scatter seeds of truth be thy endeavor,
Sow them in prayer and water with thy tears;
Falter thou not, for in the bright forever
The ripened sheaves shall crown the toiler's
Work on in faith until the Master come,
And thou shalt share the joyful harvest-home.

The time is short; already does the dawning
Light up the hill-tops with its golden ray—
The eventide of earth, the glorious morning
Which ushers in the glad, eternal day.
Press on with courage then, the end is nigh;
Ye weary ones, "there's resting by-and-by."

"Lo, these are parts of his ways; but the thunder of his power who can understand?"

J. P. MARQUAND.

The character of Job is not understood nor appreciated. His enemies charged him with being a hypocrite; but this was not true. He was a model man in that generation, retaining his integrity to good principles all through the changes of prosperity and adversity, and coming out bright and beautiful at last. Some men and women will adhere to truth and principle so long as they can have their selfish desires and wishes gratified, and be lifted up on the popular wave of honor and friendship; but let adversity or persecution come, and they will abandon principle and truth, and fall away. Not so with Job, whose heart was fixed and firm, trusting in God, irrespective of outside or outward things. Hear his language—"The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." And when his wife asked him to curse his God, he told her she spoke rashly and foolishly.

To a deep thinking observer, the book of Job affords a grand intellectual feast, full of noble imagery and lofty thoughts. Who can doubt that Job had an insight into the depravity of his carnal nature when he said, "I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes," and cast his al' on God for help and deliverance. He had been thoroughly tried, and now was able to bear the honors put upon him. No clearer conceptions of the power and greatness of God can be found anywhere than in Job.

We now come to our text—"The thunder of his power who can understand?" An exhibition of the power of God is seen in the creation of the heavens and earth, the planetary and solar system, bringing light out of darkness, order out of confusion, making all things work harmoniously and true. How beautiful are the exact revolutions of the earth and the heavens. Astronomers tell us they can foretell an eclipse in the future minutely, as to seconds of time, many years before they occur. Then we have the power of God in the formation of man, who is so "fearfully and wonderfully made," like a harp of a thousand strings. Then the wonderful strength given Joshua to subdue kingdoms and cities. Men that were tall like giants he destroyed by the power given him from above. Then we have Samson, who carried off the gates of the city on his shoulders, and afterwards slew one thousand men with a jaw bone of an ass. Then the wonderful exploits of David in his wars with the heathen nations, until the whole land was subdued under him. Then we have the slaying of one hundred and eighty-five thousand men in one night by an angel (2 Kings 19: 35). Then the birth of Jesus by divine power,—born of a virgin. When he became thirty years old he was filled with the Spirit of God, and exercised power over all unclean spirits and evils, healing the sick and raising the dead, having strength to bear crucifixion and death. Then we have an exhibition of the power given to the apostles on the day of Pentecost to discern between the good and the evil; and they told Ananias and Sapphira they had lied, and they both fell dead. Then the wonderful power of God in the conversion of three thousand souls (Acts 2: 41). Then we have the delivery of Peter out of prison, led by an angel. I might go on and cite other cases recorded in history, such as the Christians fleeing out of Jerusalem. When Titus, the Roman general, raised the siege for a few months, they fled into the mountains, and thus were saved.

The mighty power of God is seen in upholding every true christian in his onward and upward course; giving him strength to suffer if need be, and even to rejoice in martyrdom. Paul said he could do all things through Christ strengthening him, and that he was ready for death, believing that God would by his power raise him up again. We have all the glorious promises of the restitution, when Jesus will come again in majesty and power, to raise the dead and sit in solemn judgment. Among that throng we shall see the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and all the elect and pure,—Abraham, the father of the faithful, Enoch, Job, Samuel, Noah, Daniel, David, and millions of the redeemed from the North, South, East and West, from every kindred, people, and tongue, saying, "Blessing, honor, majesty and power be unto him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb."

Whatever may have been the displays of God's power in past ages, it will be nothing compared with that which is to take place in the future. We are told that the heavens will be rolled together as a scroll, the elements melt with fervent heat, and everything of an evil nature be consumed. The reconstruction of the entire heavens and earth will take place, the dead be raised to life, the separation of the tares and wheat take place, and the setting up of the eternal kingdom. O, who can describe those scenes of joy and bliss which are prepared for all who have lived in obedience to God's laws and commandments; or who can paint the despair and anguish of the selfish and wicked who have no right to the tree of life, but are without among "dogs, sorcerers, whoremongers, idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie"?

THE CURSE.

R. S. CRAIG.

As I look from my window this morning upon the glad and beautiful face of Nature, my very heart adores the bountiful Creator who hath so loved fallen mortal man; and yet as I contemplate his goodness and the beauty of his works I feel sad, for everywhere I see pictured as it were in letters of blood the "curse" in every walk of life; we see that which is loathsome to our Father's eyes, and I think sometimes that the hosts of heaven mayhap weep at the wickedness of men who spurn the mercies and the unspeakable gift of God.

I say I feel sad; it matters not which way I wend my course throughout this great city, I see the curse. Do I take the broad ways, I see fashion's devotees worshiping at their shrine, the gold and the precious stones, choosing rather the pleasures of sin, whose wages are death, than to inherit that which is incorruptible. Ah! I think sometimes, when I am jostled aside by the haughty and the proud, you do not know what a rich inheritance I am heir to; you do not realize that my prospective wealth is incorruptible, and that yours will soon fade away like dew before the morning sun. Ah! you do not know that my Elder Brother is to be King over all the earth, and I am to sit with him on his throne. And the precious thought that sheds a heavenly halo around it all is—I am expecting him soon; and not as an humble virgin's babe, but in great power and glory. O, would that the world could realize it!

But while I am musing I wander on. The scene is changed. Instead of the stately throng whose garments glitter, I see the wretched whose tattered and shapeless clothing scarcely covers the half-starved bodies. Want is pictured in the sunken eye, desperation seals the mouth, and the heart is ready to burst with envy at the wealth of his neighbor. O! my sunken brother, my sister, would that your ambition might be carried above your neighbor's worldly prosperity, that the scales might fall from your eyes, that you might see where true honor and true riches are exempt from the curse.

But the saddest rendering of the curse that pains me most is the little ones. Their infant lips learn in the street to curse the blessed Christ who died to save them, before they know that there is a better life for them, and their ears never hear the glad news that Jesus is coming soon.

My heart was touched as I walked down one of our business streets a few evenings since. The street was thronged with people, and upon a prominent corner sat a wretched woman whose face looked as if it never knew a smile. An infant of a year was upon her lap, while another a trifle older was crying with hunger, and while trying to quiet the little one she turned the hand organ; but in vain; no one noticed her, and her plaintive tune to me only said—"I'm starving! O, I'm starving!" There I saw the "curse." Away down through the vile haunts of the city my mind wandered to her miserable hut, where her protector (?) lay wrapped in intoxication; and while she starves, the wealthy dramseller passes her by enriched by the earnings that should have bought her bread. O reader! the heart turns sick from scenes and thoughts like these, and cries—"How long, O Lord, how long?" when shall the curse be removed, and the peaceable reign of righteousness begin?

THE TWO ADAMS CONTRASTED.

TIMOTHY WHEELER.

The first Adam lost the hope and prospect of immortality; the second Adam restored it. The first Adam brought physical death to some, and made it possible to all; the second Adam brings physical life to some, and makes it possible to all. The first Adam sinned; the second Adam obeyed. The first Adam destroys men; the second Adam saves men. The first Adam gives mortality; the second Adam gives immortality. The first Adam gives us corruption; the second Adam gives us incorruption. The first Adam sows us in dishonor; the second Adam raises us in glory. The first Adam sows us in weakness; the second Adam raises us in power. The first Adam is of the earth earthy; the second Adam is the Lord from heaven. The first Adam impresses his image upon all in this world; the second Adam impresses his image upon all in the world to come. The first Adam makes all in this world earthy; the second Adam makes all in the world to come heavenly. The first Adam gives us natural bodies; the second Adam gives us spiritual bodies.

The first Adam imputes sin; the second Adam forgives sin. The first Adam condemns the sinner; the second Adam justifies the sinner. The first Adam deals with us on the principle of justice, the second Adam on the principle of mercy. The first Adam cannot give life; the second Adam cannot give death. The first Adam cannot give immortality; the second Adam cannot give mortality.

The first Adam makes us hate our enemies; the second Adam makes us love our enemies. The first Adam confers upon us his fleshly and carnal nature, full of "adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings," etc.; the second Adam confers upon us his nature, which is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," etc.—Herald of Life.

THREE GENERATIONS.

During the month of May, 1874, there were five persons admitted to membership and communion in the Advent Christian Church, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; and in this addition there were three generations represented. A mother, daughter, and granddaughter, received the right hand of fellowship, and united with the church the same day. The church have reasons to rejoice and thank God for his wonderful goodness and mercies conferred. Since November last there have been twenty additions to the church with an increased interest in the Sabbath school. May God continue his blessings upon us, is our prayer.

REPORT

Of the Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York, held at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., May 28th to 31st, 1874.

The ministers present at this meeting were Elds. E. C. Cowles, Benj. Butler, Ira Slocomb, David B. Hunt, O. H. Briggs, J. H. Sawyer, J. W. Taylor. There was preaching Thursday evening by J. W. Taylor, from the words of Christ—"Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The congregation was rather small, on account of a series of lectures being delivered in the place; but the interest manifested was most excellent, which, by the way, was kept up during the entire meeting. Friday evening, preaching by Eld. A. H. Briggs, from 2 Pet. 3: 1, 2, in which the importance of clinging closely to the teachings of the prophets and apostles, and obeying the commandments of Jesus, was clearly set forth.

Saturday morning met for business. Brn. B. Butler, S. Gardner, and A. Mallory were appointed Devotional Committee; A. H. Briggs, D. B. Hunt, and M. Gardner, Business Committee; and J. W. Taylor, Benj. Butler and A. H. Briggs, Committee on Ordination. Several questions of deep interest were freely discussed, but as no business of importance was brought before the conference, it soon adjourned, subject to the call of the President. At two o'clock P. M., we listened to a discourse by Bro. J. H. Sawyer, from Job 21: 15, on the profit of prayer, after which we enjoyed one of the best conference meetings ever enjoyed in Westfield. After the social meeting a short business session was again held, when the Committee on Ordination reported the call of the church at South Creek for the ordination of Bro. James H. Sawyer, whose case they had examined, and thought the request should be granted; whereupon a committee was appointed to attend to his ordination after the Saturday evening services.

Saturday evening, preaching by J. W. Taylor, from 1 John 3: 3. At the close of the services the President announced the ordination of Bro. Sawyer, making some very appropriate and impressive remarks. The ordination prayer was made by Eld. Benj. Butler; the charge given by Eld. J. W. Taylor; the right hand of fellowship by Eld. David B. Hunt.

Sunday morning, at 9.30, we met for love feast. Preaching at 10.30 by Eld. E. C. Cowles, from Job 14: 10—an able discourse on the nature of man. After preaching the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered, when many joined in commemorating the death of our blessed Redeemer. Sunday evening, preaching by J. W. Taylor, from Matt. 25: 34.

Thus ended one of the best sessions of conference we have ever enjoyed since the organization of our new conference in this benighted region of country. May the Lord help us all to strive earnestly and arduously for the upbuilding of his cause in this part of his moral vineyard.

J. W. TAYLOR, Sec.

JESUS ONLY.

S. P. DEXTER.

Dear brethren and sisters, and readers of the Crisis, I feel like telling you what the Lord has done for me. Five years ago I enlisted under the banner of King Jesus. I enlisted, as I thought then, for life; but the way has been first bright, then cloudy. By neglecting duties, and by running around the cross, I got into the dark and forsook my Jesus that I loved so well; but, thanks be to God, I never have felt that Jesus had forsaken me; he is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

To-day I have a blessed hope in Christ; a hope big with immortality, and which reaches to that within the vail. Blessed be the name of the Lord forever. I mean, through grace, to overcome and reign with Jesus and the redeemed on the new earth. Oh! it is blessed to have full trust in God, to feel wholly saved through Christ. Bless the Lord, O my soul; let all that is within me bless his holy name.

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me.
The consecrated cross I'll bear,
Till death shall set me free."

DESCRIPTION OF CANDOR.

True candor is altogether different from that guarded, inoffensive language, and that studied openness of behavior, which we frequently meet with among men of the world. Smiling very often is the aspect, and smooth the words, of those who inwardly are the most ready to think evil of others.

That candor which is a Christian virtue, consists not in fairness of speech, but in fairness of heart. It may want the blandishment of external courtesy, but supplies its place with humane and generous liberality of sentiment. Its manners are unaffected, and its professions cordial. Exempt on one hand from the dark jealousy of a suspicious mind, it is no less removed on the other from that easy credulity which is imposed upon by every specious pretense. It is perfectly consistent with extensive knowledge of the world, and with due attention to our own safety.

In that various intercourse which we are obliged to carry on with persons of every different character, suspicion to a certain degree is necessary guard; it is only when it exceeds the bounds of prudent caution, that it degenerates into vice. There is a mean between undistinguishing credulity and universal jealousy, which a sound understanding discerns, and which the man of candor studies to preserve. He makes allowance for the mixture of evil with good, which is to be found in every human character. He expects none to be faultless, and he is unwilling to believe there is any without some commendable quality. In the midst of many defects, he can discover a virtue. Under the influence of personal resentment, he can be just to the merit of an enemy. He never lends an open ear to those defamatory reports and dark suggestions which, among the tribes of the censorious, circulate with so much rapidity and meet with so ready acceptance.

He is not hasty to judge, and he requires full evidence before he will condemn. As long as an action can be ascribed to different motives, he holds it as no mark of sagacity to impute it always to the worst. Where there is just ground for doubt, he keeps his judgment undecided; and during the period of suspense leans to the most charitable construction which an action can bear. When he must condemn, he condemns with regret, and without those aggravations which the severity of others adds to the crime. He listens calmly to the apology of the offender, and readily admits every extenuating circumstance which equity can suggest.

How much soever he may blame the principles of any sect or party, he never confounds under one general censure all that belong to that party or sect. He charges them not with such consequences of their tenets as they refuse and disavow. From one wrong opinion he does not infer the subversion of all sound principles; nor from one bad action conclude that all regard to conscience is overthrown. When he beholds the mote in his brother's eye, he remembers the beam in his own. He commiserates human frailty, and judges of others according to the principles by which he would think it reasonable they should judge of him.

In a word, he views men and actions in the clear sunlight of charity and good nature, and not in that dark and sullen shade which jealousy and party-spirit throw over all characters.—Sel. by T. Foote.

BUILT ON THE ROCK.

IDA ALBBOURN.

Built upon the rock Christ Jesus,
On the rock firm and sure;
Though the tempest howl around us,
Still this rock stands secure.

Though in our creeds we may differ,
Though we wage wordy strife,
On this rock must we be founded,
Would we inherit life.

We may build of gold or silver,
Of stubble, wood, or hay;
If on this rock we are founded,
Eternal is our stay.

Though our views were all mistaken,
And stand not the fire-test,
If Christ be our hope and refuge,
We may enter his rest.

In the atonement of Jesus,
Yes, here we all agree;
He has shed his blood for mankind,
And made salvation free.

Oh, love of Christ that pervadeth
All who have that new birth!
Oh, love divine that uniteth
All christian sects of earth!

May that love take full possession,
Control each christian heart;
Then our rock is sure, abiding,
Our hope cannot depart.

OLD MOSES.

M. B—— was a merchant in Baltimore, and did a very heavy business, especially in grain. One morning, as he was passing over the vessels at the wharf, he stepped upon the deck of one, at the stern of which he saw a negro man sitting, whose dejected countenance gave sure indication of distress; and he accosted him with:

"Hey, my man, what is the matter with you this morning?" The negro lifted his eyes, and looking at Mr. B——, replied, "Ah, massa, I's in great trouble." "What "What about?" "Kase I'se fotched up here to be sold."" "What for? What have you been doing? Have you been stealing? or did you run away? or what?" "No, no, none o' dat; it's becase I didn't mind de audes." "What kind of orders." "Well, massa, I tell you. Mass Willum werry strict man, and werry nice man too, and ebery-body on de place got to mine him; and I break trew de rule; but I didn't tend to break de rule; I forget meself, an I got too high." "It is for getting drunk, then, is it?" "Oh, no, sah, not dat nother." "I can get no satisfaction from you. Tell me what you are to be sold for." "For prayin, sah." "For praying! that is a strange tale indeed. Will your master not permit you to pray?" "Oh, yes, sah; he let me pray easy; but I hollers too loud." "And why did you holler so in your prayers?" "Kase de Sperit come on me, and I gets happy fore I knows it; den I gone; can't trol meself den; den I knows nuthin bout massa's rule; den I holler if ole Sattin hisself come, wid all de rules of de 'quisition." "And do you really suppose your master will sell you for that?" "Oh, yes, no help for me now; all de men in de world couldn' help me now; kase wen Mass Willum say one ting, he no do anoder."

"What is your name?" "Moses, sah." "What is your master's name?" "Massa's name Colonel Willum C——." Where does he live?" "Down on the Easin Shoah." "Is he a good master? does he treat you well?" "Oh, yes; Massa Willum good; no better massa in de world." Where is he?" "Yander he is, jis comin to de warf."

As Mr. B—— started for the shore, he heard Moses give a heavy sigh, followed by a deep groan. Moses was not at all pleased with the present phase of affairs. He was strongly impressed with the idea that B—— was a trader and intended to buy him. Mr. B—— introduced himself to Colonel C——, and said, "I understand you wish to sell that negro man yonder on board the schooner." Colonel C—— replied that he did. "What do you ask for him?" "I expect to get seven hundred dollars." "How old is he?" "About thirty." "Is he a good hand?" "Yes, sir, he is the best hand on my place. He is honest, and industrious. He has been my foreman for the last ten years, and a more trusty negro I never knew." "Why do you wish to sell him?"

"Because he disobeyed my orders. I built his quarter within a hundred yards of my house; and I have never rung the bell, night or morning, that his horn did not answer in five minutes. But two years ago he got religion, and commenced what he termed family prayer; that is, prayer in his quarter every night and morning; and when he began his prayer, it was impossible to tell when he would stop, especially if, as he termed it, he got happy. Then he would sing and pray and halloo for an hour or two together, so that you might hear him a mile off. And he would pray for me and my wife and children, and all my brothers and sisters and their children; and sometimes when we would have visitors, Moses' prayers would interrupt the conversation and destroy the enjoyment of the whole company. Even after I had retired I could not sleep. I bore it as long as I could, and then forbade his praying so loud any more. Moses promised obedience, but he soon transgressed; and my rule is never to whip, but when a negro proves incorrigible, I sell him. I pardoned Moses twice for disobedience in praying so loud, but the third time I knew I must sell him, or every negro on the farm would disregard my orders."

"You spoke of Moses' quarter; I suppose from that he has a family."

"Yes, he has a woman and three children —or wife, I suppose he now calls her, for soon after he got religion, he asked me if they might be married, and I presume they were."

"What will you take for her and the children?"

"If you want them for your own use, I will take seven hundred dollars; but I shall not sell Moses nor them to go out of the State."

"I wish them all for my own use, and will give you the fourteen hundred dollars."

Mr. B—— and Colonel C—— then went to B——'s store, drew up the writings and closed the sale, after which they returned to the vessel; and Mr. B——, approaching the negro, who sat with his eyes fixed upon the deck, seemingly with the most awful fore-bodings, said, "Well, Moses, I have bought you."

Moses made a very low bow, and every muscle of his face worked with emotion as he replied, "Is you, massa? Where is I gwine? Is I gwine lo Georgy?"

"No," said Mr. B——, "I am a merchant here in the city; yonder is my store. I want you to attend on the store; and have purchased your wife and children too, that you may not be separated."

"Bress God for dat. And, massa, kin I go to meetin sometimes?"

"Yes, Moses, you can go to church three times on the Sabbath and every night in the week; and you can pray as often as you choose, and get as happy as you choose, and every time you pray, I want you to pray for me, my wife, and all my children; if you are a good man, your prayers will do us no harm, and we need them very much; and if you wish to, you may pray for every-body of the name of B—— in the State of Maryland. It will not injure them."

While Mr. B—— was dealing out these privileges to Moses, the negro's eyes danced in their sockets, and his full heart laughed outright for gladness, exposing two rows of as even, clean ivories as any African can boast; and his heart's response was, "Bress God, bress God all de time, and bress you too, massa! Moses neber tinks bout he gwine to have all dese commondationers; dis make me tink bout Joseph in de Egypt."

And after Moses had poured a few blessings on Colonel C——, and bidding him a warm adieu, and requesting him to give his love and farewell to his mistress, the children and all the servants, he followed B—— to the store, to enter upon the duties of his new office. The return of the schooner brought to Moses his wife and children.

Early the next spring, as Mr. B—— was one day standing at the store door, he saw a man leap upon the wharf from the deck of a vessel, and walk hurriedly towards the store. He soon recognized him as Colonel C——. They exchanged salutations, and to the Colonel's inquiry after Moses, Mr. B—— replied that he was up stairs measuring grain, and invited him to walk up and see him. Soon Mr. B——'s attention was arrested by a very confused noise above. He listened and heard an unusual shuffling of feet, some one sobbing violently, and some one talking very hurriedly; and he determined to go up and see what was going on. When he reached the head of the stairs, he was startled by seeing Moses in the middle of the floor, down upon one knee, with his arms around the Colonel's waist, and talking rapidly, while the Colonel stood weeping. So soon as the Colonel could sufficiently control his feelings, he told Mr. B—— that he had never been able to free himself from the influence of Moses' prayers, and that during the past year he and his wife and all his children had been converted to God.

Moses responded, "Bress God, Massa C——; dough I way up hea, I neber forgit you in my prayers; I ollers put de ole massa side de new one. Bress God! dis make Moses tink about Joseph in de Egypt agin."

The Colonel then stated to Mr. B—— that his object in coming to Baltimore was to buy Moses and his family back again. But Mr. B—— assured him that was out of the question, for he could not spare him; and he intended to manumit Moses and his wife at forty, and his children at thirty-five years of age.

Moses was not far wrong in his references to Joseph. For when Joseph was sold into Egypt, God overruled it to his good, and he obtained b'essings that were far beyond his expectations; so with Moses. Joseph eventually proved the instrument in God's hands of saving the man's soul who sold him.

Old Moses is still living, and doing well. He long since obtained his freedom, and at present occupies a comfortable house of his own; and I suppose sings and prays and shouts to his heart's content.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

There is never an interchange of royal courtesies between the representatives of the great powers in which something is not said about "the peace of Europe." At the banquets given to the Czar on the occasion of his recent visit to England this was the great theme, and every one present seemed to agree that it was the mission of Russia and England to "preserve the peace of Europe." Similar expressions find frequent utterance in Parliament; they are echoed by the English journals and indorsed on the Continent. One would think that the chief desire of all Europe was to preserve the general peace. And yet it is a singular circumstance that nearly all of the great powers of Europe, in spite of these voluble protestations of friendliness and amity, are engaged at the present time in extensive preparations for possible war. Never before, in time of peace, was there such a universal arming of the nations, such strenuous endeavors to multiply and perfect weapons and munitions of war, or such a vast increase in standing armies. The total army of Germany includes now over a million and a quarter of men. The French army has been largely increased, and though not so large as that of Germany, is still, according to the London Times, much larger than the army with which Germany could make the attack. The standing army of Italy has been doubled within fifteen years, and she has now a defensive force of over six hundred thousand men. But the force of Germany out-ranks that of any of her neighbors—is double the offensive force of Russia, and nearly equal to the combined offensive armies of France, Austria and Italy. The force of Great Britain is completely dwarfed by these Continental armies. She has but three soldiers for every thousand of her population, while Italy and Belgium maintain twelve, France and Austria fifteen, and Germany twenty-one.

These warlike preparations suggest the thought that the next European war—whenever it may come, and on whatever pretext—is likely to be a general engagement, in which most of the leading powers will be ranged on one side or the other. No distinct ground for controversy has as yet been developed. France, however humbled and irritated, will not be in condition, for some years, to take up the gage of battle, unless assisted by some other power. The quarrel at one time imminent between England and Russia over the Eastern question seems to have subsided, for a time, at least. But that subtle and shifting thing, the "balance of power," has been disturbed by the recent astonishing growth and conquests of Germany. That nation has now become too powerful to make an agreeable neighbor. Jealousy and fear of her strength are the prime motives in these warlike preparations. All Europe is anxiously watching her course. The London Times, usually a cautious prophet enough, predicts that she will be the one to begin the impending conflict, and that her aim will be the extension of her conquests.

The International Peace Congress meets next month at Brussels; but all that is hoped for from it is the establishment of an international code to regulate the usages of war, detail the rights of belligerents and neutrals, specify the classes of arms that may be legitimately used in war, and make regulations for the treatment of prisoners. Even this, if it is accomplished, will be a long step in advance. The dream of universal peace is far enough from fulfillment. But if there must be wars, they can be made less barbarous and cruel by the adoption of a distinctly drawn and universally recognized code of principles such as it is hoped may result from the deliberations of this Congress.—Boston Journal.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE BEST FOOD FOR THE MIND.

D. P. NEWTON.

What do you mean by this, Mr. Editor of the——? Do you tell parents and children that novels or religious lies are the best food on which to feed precious souls? How large a portion of your weekly is made of fiction, or religious lying? silly things to excite the fool's laughter? Look and see. Do you publish these to please the Master, or to fill your coffers?

By doing what you are doing, is it what the blessed Redeemer would do? Could you possibly put your hand and heart to anything more pleasing to the old serpent, the devil? You call yourself a christian? What is a christian? To be like Christ. When about to send forth these religious or white lies to hundreds of thousands of families, do you bow the knee to the mercy-seat and implore the Lord to bless these silly tales or white lies to the conviction, conversion, and sanctification of parents and children?

If you feed little folks and great folks on lies, will they not be converted to lies? Will it add to your comfort, consolation, or joyfulness at the final day, to see and know you have been instrumental in leading multitudes to perdition? What avail then your "ill-gotten gains?" the love of filthy lucre? Hear James, from the mouth of inspiration: "Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days." James 5: 2-3.

You are the christian man that tells us we must have good stories, good tales, good novels, to counteract the bad ones; that is, you give your readers good, or white lies, to keep out the bad or black lies. How long, friend, think you, after feeding on your silly, nonsensical white lies, ere the little folks swallow greedily the black lies—the blackest of the black, the most devilish. Do you tell us, religious editors advertise and puff your novel sheet that caters to a corrupt taste?

The taste for strong drink, the cup that intoxicates, the poisonous, degrading "Indian weed," you are aware is unnatural, vicious, obstinate, deeply rooted; and nothing will effectually destroy the relish for these poisons but miraculous or superabounding grace—God's infinite mercy. So it is with the reading or mental taste—a taste formed for the light, frivolous, fictitious and vicious. The forming of this unnatural and vicious taste, in both these cases, is the work of Satan, the old serpent, the devil, to decoy, entrap, and ruin both soul and body. It is a question, yet unsolved, whether the enemy of all good succeeds in taking more souls to perdition through the instrumentality of rum and tobacco or that of the light, frothy, popular literature—novels and romances. Both are intoxicating, dissipating, soul ruinous.

How is this to better the matter? this putting shoulder to Satan's wheels unitedy? Stop this wickedness. No, you won't, friend. It's popular to serve the devil, money is made by it, and you go it with your compeers. What we say to you we say to the editor of the——, and others, not a few, treading in your steps, and who doubtless will receive the same reward. "Beware! your sins will find you out."

LONGEVITY.

Long life comes of inheritance and good habits. We rarely see a very old person who is not descended from a long lived ancestry. But this old man may have brothers and sisters who die early. For the most part, this difference comes from differing personal habits. In order to live long we must inherit the capacity, and this inheritance must be supplemented by good habits. No matter though a man's parents may have lived a hundred years, if he is a glutton he will not probably survive seventy years.

The person who promises long life is of medium size, good lungs, slow pulse, good digestion, strong teeth, firm muscles, tough skin, coarse hair, with smallish head, and quiet, cheerful temper.

It is rather too late to advise a man with reference to possessing these qualities, or with reference to the parents of whom he shall be born, but it is not too late to advise any and every man with regard to his personal habits. These constitute the most important facts.

Among the more important habits I name the following: One must live in the strong sunlight. Even a slight shadow means bad digestion to plants, animals and man. A plant removed from the window to the back end of the parlor, even though it be light enough to read, soon becomes pale and sickly.

Good air is important. An unventilated house produces an irritable condition of the tissues. Then instead of that unconscious, perfect working of the several parts, there is a feverish friction which prematurely exhausts the vital forces.

Temperance is vital. Temperance in food is especially important. One may drink wine, or beer, or spirits to occasional intoxication, and live to old age, but a big eater rarely reaches seventy years. A bottle of wine will make a man stagger, and talk like a fool, but it will not clog and foul his system like a thanksgiving dinner.

There is no system of diet or class of food, which can justly present special claims; it is moderation, temperance, and no definite rules can be given. Thr food must be adapted to the individual and to his occupation. A young man is at work upon a farm mowing, digging and perspirating. Two pounds of solid food is needed. But he changes to the house-life and sitting of college. His food, as to quantity and quality, must be reduced at least fifty per cent. The food, I repeat must be adapted to the person and his occupation. But I am again asked for some rules. The larger my experience, the more extended my observation, the less become my confidence in definite dietetic rules. It is safe enough to say that we eat too much; that our food is too rich, in too great a variety, and badly cooked. Beyond this I do not venture. Every person must observe his own experience, and conscientiously regard their suggestions. A man who won't do this is not likely to follow any definite rules given by another, and at best is hardly worth living.

Another important condition of longevity is regular and abundant sleep. I have never read the details of a remarkably old person's life in which "early to bed" was not a feature. One may seem to thrive for a while on six hours sleep, but his life will not be a long one. To reach ninety years you must have at least eight hours sleep. More than two hours should come before midnight.

A certain amount of exercise is necessary. Neither hard work, nor great muscular development are needed. Indeed it is doubtful if they are not unfavorable. Great moderation here, as in food, is most favorable to length of life. Gentle labor, in the country, as in moderate farming, is, on the whole most favorable. It is particularly desirable that the occupation should be an agreeable one, adapted to the tastes, and that it shall satisfy the ambition.

Marriage, with its home-loves and moderate excitements, is particularly favorable to long life.

The absence of all unholy ambitions, of anger, hatred, jealousy, and the presence of an amiable, cheerful, hopeful temper, contribute greatly to our stay in this world. —DR. DIO LEWIS, in Household.

A DISGUSTING FASHION.—In viewing the alarmingly prevalent habit among women in the wearing of long trails to their dresses, that sweep up and concentrate about their under garments and ankles the filth of our sidewalks and crossings, I am often tempted to doubt the purity and cleanliness of females which is usually accorded, and I have gradually learned to associate disgust with my estimate of womankind in consequence of this vile habit. In my intercourse with others of the male persuasion, I find the sentiment quite prevalent that such a laxity of the attribute of cleanliness must cover other deformities, even the tendency to moral laxity, which, indeed, seems possible. What beauty is evolved in a trailing skirt is beyond my comprehension, leaving out of the question the impropriety of its performance as an offal collector, which is needless in a city so well provided with officials of this character as is this, and it is likewise impotent in deceiving people into a belief that the wearer is a lady, for persons of this class rarely subject themselves to the sneers or aspersions of men.—Boston Globe.

HOW TO SHORTEN LIFE.—An eminent physician says: "If an end were put to the drinking of port, punch, and porter, there would soon be an end to my worldly prosperity. Physicians, surgeons, and apothecaries would be ruined, and disease would be comparatively rare, simple and manageable. Twenty years' experience has convinced me were ten young men, when of age, to commence and continue daily drinking one glass of ardent spirits or a pint of port or sherry, the lives of eight of them would be abridged twelve or fifteen years."—Selected.

THERE is a great difference between the two temporal blessings, health and wealth; wealth is the most envied, but least enjoyed, health is frequently enjoyed, but the least envied: and the superiority of the latter is still more obvious when we reflect that the poorest man would not part with his health for money, but that the richest would gladly part with his money for health.—Health Reformer.

UNSEEN, YET LOVED.

A kind mother had once been talking to her little girl about the duty of loving God. The child replied, "Mother, I have never seen God; how can I love him?"

The mother made no reply then. A few days after, she received a package from a friend a great way off; and in the package was a beautiful picture-book for the little girl. The child took the book, and was entirely occupied in looking at the pictures; but soon she exclaimed,

"O mother! how I do love the good lady that sent me this book!"

"But you never saw her, my dear," said the mother.

"No," answered the child; "but I love her because she sent me this beautiful present."

"My child," said the mother, "you told me the other day that you could not love God, because you had never seen him. And yet you love this kind lady whom you have never seen, because she has given you a present. You have all around you the presents which God has given you. Why cannot you love him for his presents?"

FALSE COURAGE.

"See how hard that boy dares strike his pitcher against the post," said a mischievous lad to an associate. The boy, who stood tapping a pitcher softly against a post, regarding this as an appeal to his courage, at once began to strike it a little harder and harder, till by and by the pitcher was broken.

Now the poor fellow's courage forsook him in a moment. His fault and the anticipated punishment flashed upon his mind, and he gave himself up to bitter weeping.

When will boys learn that true courage is to do what is right and refuse to do what is wrong? Suppose a wicked youth dares you to blaspheme the name of your Maker; must you utter an oath to show that you are a boy of courage? Utter that oath and you are a coward. What, afraid to refuse to do a thing which you know to be wrong! Afraid to do what you know is right, lest you should be called a coward!—Wayside.

TELLING LIES TO CHILDREN.—When I was a little boy I was told that if we destroyed a bird's nest or killed a bird it would make the cows give bloody milk; and, as I was fond of milk, you can be pretty sure that the birds remained unmolested. Now it is not necessary that we should teach our children a falsehood, but if we impress upon their minds the truth in regard to the feathered tribe, they will remember and respect our teachings.—J. G. Greenleaf.

A LADY applied to a gentleman on behalf of a little orphan boy. After he had given liberally she said, "When he is old enough, I will teach him to name and thank his benefactor." "Stop," said the good man, "we do not thank the clouds for rain. Teach him to look higher, and thank Him who giveth both the clouds and the rain."

JESUS IS NEAR.

MRS. ELLA M. MILES.

TUNE.—"Jesus loves me."

I am so glad that the prophets of old,
Of Christ's appearing and kingdom foretold;
Of all the promises which we hold dear,
This is the sweetest, that Jesus is near.

CHO.—I am so glad that Jesus is near,
Jesus is near, Jesus is near,
I am so glad that Jesus is near,
Soon in a cloud he'll appear.

Sweet will the song of the ransomed ones be—
"This is our Lord, we have waited for thee;"
"Lift up your heads, your redemption is here,"
Then herald the tidings that Jesus is near.

Those who revile him, and laugh at his word,
With Satan and death shall receive their reward;
Standing before him, they tremble with fear,
Then list to the warning that Jesus is near.

In the new song with the angels we'll sing
Of glory and life that is won by our King;
But we will sing till we get over there,
And join in the chorus that Jesus is near.

BISHOP BICKERSTETH UPON THE SECOND ADVENT.

"The burden of Dumah. He calleth to me out of Seir, Watchman, what of the night? The Watchman said, The morning cometh, and also the night: if ye will inquire, inquire ye: return come." Isa. 21:12.

There is some degree of obscurity in this passage which attracts curiosity to ascertain its true meaning. The literal interpretation appears to be this: Dumah was the same country as that of the Edomites, and Seir was one of the principal towns of the land of Dumah. One of the inhabitants of Seir is represented as asking of the watchman, who is the Lord's messenger, "Watchman, what of the night?" The question may have been asked in a tone of derision, and in a spirit of unbelief, as if to inquire —"Watchman, what of this tribulation, this judgment, of which you have so often spoken? We see no sign, no appearance; tell us, watchman, what of the night?" Or it may have been asked in a spirit of honest inquiry, by one desiring to know whether the predicted tribulation or judgment was nigh. But whatever was the mind of the inquirer, the answer of the prophet is the same—"The morning cometh and also the night; if ye will inquire, inquire ye: return, come."

Now, the literal kingdoms or countries, or peoples in Scripture that were notorious for their wickedness or hostility to the Lord's chosen people of Israel, were typical of those who in every age are actively opposed to God and the truth. For example, the names of Assyria, Babylon, Egypt, and Edom were all names of literal kingdoms or countries, the inhabitants of which were opposed to the children of Israel and were the enemies of God's chosen people. Hence it follows that the judgments which overtook these literal kingdoms may be regarded as symbolical of the judgments which will overtake the unbelieving and impenitent in the present age. That being so, the language of the text may be accommodated to the case as it now stands between God and his church on the one hand, and the unbelieving world on the other. Taking this as the interpretation of the text, let us consider the truth it unfolds and the lessons it suggests.

The purport, or, in prophetic language, the burden of Dumah was the message to the earth which has been delivered and heralded down from the earliest times. Again and again has it been reiterated; even our blessed Lord himself, though the messenger of mercy, declared the wrath which must overtake those rejecting the offer of the gosgospel. In the meantime, however, the question is asked, "Watchman, what of the night?" There are many who affect altogether to disbelieve the warnings of coming tribulation. They ask "What of the night," what of this tribulation so often spoken of, these coming judgments by which you so often try to persuade men? We see, as yet, no indications of the approaching consummation. The sun still shines in the heavens; the moon and stars still cross the vault of the mighty sky; where is the sign then of this coming tribulation? Where is the evidence that these judgments will overtake a slumbering world? Here is the reply, "The morning cometh." What is the morning? The advent of the Son of man in his glory. The coming of the once crucified Savior, now the glorified Emmanuel. The coming of the same Jesus, who once trod this earth, who was rejected, crucified, and slain by ungodly men. He will appear in his glory, and will reign in his majesty over a regenerated world.

"The morning cometh," but the scoffer replies, Where are the signs of his coming? All things continue as they were from the foundation of the world. But do all things continue as they were? Does not science itself—the chosen vantage ground from which the unbeliever hurls his fiery darts against Christianity—does not science teach that changes have occurred, and are, up to this very day, in progress, which refute the idea that all things continue as they were at the creation of the world? As by the word of the Lord, the old earth perished by the overflowing of the waters—and no one dare dispute that at least one world had perished by the deluge,—so even by the same word is the present earth now kept in store, reserved unto the fire and the judgment of the great day. "Watchman, what of the night?" may however, be asked not only by the scoffer and the sceptic, but by the true believer in Christ. It is now the world's long night. The personal presence of Him who is the light of man, and the Sun of righteousness, is withdrawn. The ark of the church is tossed to and fro by the storms of the sea. The waves of infidelity and of heresy dash against her sides in all their fury. As yet we cannot hear the sound of Christ's chariot wheels. Is the Lord slack concerning his promise? Will yon heavens ever open and disclose the Son of man returning in his glory; the Messiah, who once came as the world's Redeemer? Yes, "the morning cometh." The promise will be fulfilled. Wait, for it will surely come. "Surely I come quickly."

There are prophecies which render it essential that the Redeemer should return in his glory. In many prophecies the sufferings and triumphs of the Messiah are linked together, and as the sufferings have been literally fulfilled, is it not necessary that the triumphs should be accomplished also? And the anxious inquirer naturally asks of the watchman, "Is the night far spent? Is the day soon about to dawn? Is there any streak of light in the sky which indicates that the day is about to break, and that the Son of righteousness shall be revealed in his majesty?" The word of God states that it will break on the world suddenly, as a thief in the night. When all things are going on in their accustomed order; when men are pursuing their accustomed avocations, the senator occupied with legislation, the merchant busy in commerce, and the tradesman engaged in the affairs of trade; then suddenly the sound will be heard of the archangel's trump, and the Son of man will appear in the heavens, and Jesus will return in his glory. There are signs given by our blessed Lord himself, from the appearance of which his believing people may gather when the end is near. And surely these signs would not have been given if it were not intended that we should carefully mark and look for their occurrence. It is our duty to study these signs; so let us look at some of them to which our Lord has pointed attention.

1. When our Lord was speaking of the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem, the apostles asked him what should be the signs of his coming, and of the end of the present age or dispensation. One of our Lord's replies was, "that the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." Our Lord did not say that the gospel must first everywhere prevail, so as to cover the whole earth with a knowledge of the Lord, but only that the gospel shall be everywhere preached for a witness. And how does it stand with respect to this at the present day? No period since the time of the apostles has been more remarkable than the present century for the extension of the Redeemer's cause. For a long time previously the church was culpably indifferent to the great duty of striving to evangelize the world, but with the commencement of the present century she seems to have awoke from her slumbers, and marvellously put forth, and more marvellously succeeded in her efforts to preach the gospel throughout the globe. There is hardly a kingdom on the earth where the message of the everlasting gospel has not been proclaimed, and there is hardly a language on the face of the globe into which the word of God has not been translated. Through the labors of one society alone—the British and Foreign Bible Society—the word of God has been translated into nearly two hundred different spoken dialects; and is not this something like hastening the fulfillment of this sign, "that the gospel shall be preached in all the world for a witness?" Matt. 24:14.

2. Again, in the book of Daniel we are told that many shall run to and fro, and that knowledge shall be increased at the time of the end. Is not one of the characteristics of the present age a remarkable facility for running to and fro, as evidenced by the extraordinary powers for locomotion? Probably it would be true to say that even in this empire in twenty-four hours millions run to and fro. We have girdled the earth with our iron highways, and if there is one marvel more than another, it is the way in which multitudes from the very ends of the earth are availing themselves of this rapid locomotion. Then, knowledge must be increased: and is not this also a characteristic of our own time? What prodigious strides have been made in the march of science! Nature seems to have unfolded her secrets to the research and diligence of those who have applied their energies to scientific knowledge. Science has pierced the planetary world, has cast a measured line round the circumference of the earth, taught men to paint with the sunbeam, and to use the lightning of heaven as the means of conveying messages with the speed of thought. Surely the characteristics of the present age are a running to and fro and an increase of knowledge. Dan. 12:1-4.

3. Another sign of the time of the end is predicted in Dan. 12:1, to be "a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time;" and in Luke 21:25, 26—"Distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear; and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." And what is passing at the present day? Public commotion and tumult, perplexity and distress, men's hearts failing them from fear—the overthrowing of dynasties, open rebellion against constituted authority, and an indifference to all lawful governments. Some men say that we are on the eve of a great crisis; that we are approaching some great consummation; and Scripture informs us that this great consummation is the coming of Christ in his triumph and glory.

The apostle Paul when writing his first epistle to the Thessalonian christians, insisted at length (in every chapter) on the Lord's second coming. The prominence thus given to this doctrine led to a mistake and misapprehension. The Thessalonians thought that Christ was then about to reappear. To correct this mistake, the apostle wrote his second epistle, and in the second chapter he gave a remarkable prophecy of the great mystery of iniquity which had already begun, but which he declared must be fully developed ere the Son of man would return in his glory. Consequently the remarkable development of the Papal Apostasy is a very noticeable sign of the times, for it might be concluded that it had been greatly developed when they found the head of the Roman Catholic Church arrogantly assuming to himself one of the inherent qualities of Jehovah, and blasphemously laying hold of the attribute of infallibility. It seemed almost the culmination of the mystery of iniquity, which the apostle declared must come to an end before the Son of man should return in his glory. In the meantime God was accomplishing the number of his elect from distant parts, and from many parishes in our own dear land they are being gathered, and soon the day will come when the Son of man shall reappear—"Behold the morning cometh." The numbers who have thus been awakened in recent mission services, might be taken as an indication of the gathering together of God's elect, which was to be the harbinger of the return of the Savior in his glory.

Let the anxious believer therefore take courage, "The morning cometh," and He "whom not having seen, we love" will ere long return in his majesty; "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." But the night also cometh. Ah! what of the night? the dark, black and horrible night. Listen to the message that sounds in your ears, "If ye will inquire, inquire ye: return, come." Inquire of the book which says, "Come now, and let us reason together saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life; and him that cometh unto me, saith the Savior, I will in no wise cast out." John 3:18: 6:37.—Signs of our Times.

THE HIGHER LIFE.

Many disciples of our Lord are content to live upon a low plane of religious experience. Their life is marked by no steady faith, bright hopes, or cheerful conversation. They talk in a gloomy way about duty, trials, and bearing the cross, and they speak of all christian labors as though the yoke of their Master were grievous to be borne. They unconsciously repel those whom they would draw to Christ, and they bear little fruit to the praise of God. Living in the church and sincerely desiring salvation, they are yet half starved for want of spiritual food, self-reproachful, restless and unhappy.

From this low plane of religion we are invited forth to nobler devotions. There is no need of our wandering in obscuring fogs when overhead is the light and assurance of noonday. God's sunlight is exhaustless, and it streams from heaven, shining into dark corners and filling the earth with its glory. Water is abundant, springing forth from the hillside, rolling through the meadows, filling great lakes and seas, quenching the thirst of man and beast, driving our mills and floating our commerce, in abundance supplying every demand. God meets us everywhere in nature with unfailing fountains. He offers us floods of light, oceans of water, and unmeasured granaries of food. And surely, he who abounds in physical blessings will not fail in spiritual gifts.

The gospel assures us that the saving mercies of God are abundant and complete. Jesus says, "Blessed are they which hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me, shall not abide in darkness, but shall have the light of life." "These things have I spoken unto you, that your joy may be full. "Be of good cheer." "My peace I give unto you." "And when I go away, I will send you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever."

The apostles received such joy from their Master, as to affirm amid great persecutions the blessed privileges of the christian life. Their writings abound in expressions of triumph such as these: "The peace of God which passeth understanding;" "filled with joy and peace in believing;" "rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory;" "exceeding joyful in all our tribulation; "rejoicing in hope;" "rejoicing in the Lord always."

These testimonies assure us that very high attainments are possible to the christian believer. The hungry soul may be filled, the weary seeker find rest, and the gloomy barren disciple may become happy and fruitful through the presence of an indwelling Christ.

Greater usefulness is secured by this higher life. Success in our Master's service depends upon the sweetness of our temper, the purity of our conduct, and the transparent Christlike spirit which the grace of God produces in our life. Men of the world are quick to detect false piety. They quit the church when a dead formality reigns within. They avoid the approaches of those who assume a gloomy sanctity. But mark the happy fruits which they bear, who have attained an inward experience of the gospel. Filled with the Spirit, glowing with the love which God bestows, they go forth to their tasks with cheerfulness and success. Duties are easily borne. Irksome tasks become pleasant, and whether they preach, pray, visit, or labor, in private or public life, they everywhere manifest such sweetness of temper as to draw men by an irresistable power to Christ.

This state of grace is produced in the soul in answer to faith. The christian first believes such an inward grace possible, then trustfully submits to the fashioning work of the Spirit. One can not throw light upon his own darkened heart. He can not purify his thoughts, or sweeten his uncongenial temper. The only way to a holy, peaceful life within, is to look for help from above, to think less of self and more of Christ.—J. H. Nason, in Christian Standard.

HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

J. W. THOMAS.

Talk it, pray it, sing it, preach it, write it, live it. It is a Bible doctrine. Heaven is holy; God is holy; Christ is holy; angels are holy; the Spirit is holy; the Bible is holy; and all men who believe the Bible and possess the Spirit are holy. Without "holiness . . . no man shall see the Lord." Sinners are unholy. All men by nature are sinners; hence God commands "all men everywhere to repent." All men—the young, the old, the rich, the poor, the sick, the well, the learned, the ignorant, the black, the white, the bond and free—all men of every grade, color and distinction, are commanded to repent. "Go ye into all the world"—Europe, Asia, Africa, America; go, cross the seas, the mountains, the valleys; visit cities, towns, villages, hamlets; "preach the gospel to every creature"; call upon men everywhere to repent. Preach the gospel; the plain, old-fashioned, unvarnished, all-conquering gospel; the gospel of the grace of God; the blessed gospel, the glorious gospel, the gospel of peace, the gospel of salvation, the gospel of the kingdom. Preach it with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Men need salvation. Tell them of the love of God; that he "is long-suffering, . . . not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." Tell them that "Christ . . . loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."

It is a most reasonable thing that God requires: that men should be humble and acknowledge their sin and guilt before him; that they should break off from their sins by righteousness, and their iniquities by turning unto the Lord; that they should confess and forsake their sins, that they might obtain mercy; that they should come out from the world, and touch not, taste not, and handle not, the unclean thing; that they should cleanse themselves from all unrighteousness and filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God; that they should present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is their reasonable service, being not conformed to this world, but transformed by the renewing of their minds, that they might prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God; that they should accept "the grace of God that bringeth salvation," denying themselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, "looking for that blessed hope"; that they should live henceforth not unto themselves, but unto "Him who died for them and rose again"; that they should love the Lord with all their heart, might, mind and strength, and their neighbor as themselves.

These things are reasonable; and it is wonderful what God promises to do if the requirements of his word are complied with. He "is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Can sinners be made holy? Yes. "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Can the hard, stony heart of unbelief be taken away, so that we shall be tender-hearted and Christ-like? Yes. "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean; from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you, and a new heart will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them."

Salvation is of the Lord. "It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure"; but we are to work out our "own salvation with fear and trembling." We cannot draw water from on empty well, but from a living spring the water gushes out spontaneously. Jesus said, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow streams of living water. . . This spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive." To the woman at Jacob's well he said—"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

It is easy to serve God when we are filled with his Spirit. The way to obtain this Spirit is to be humble, penitent, and believing. Give up to God. Be sorry for sin. Confess and forsake it. Consecrate everything to the Lord. By faith take your stand by the cross of Calvary, and their gaze upon the dying Lamb.

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride."

O that precious cross! how can any heart remain impenitent in contemplation of it! Was it for me that Jesus died? O yes, it was for me, a poor sinner. Fain would I bow at his feet, and give vent to my sorrow in floods of tears;—

"But drops of blood can ne'er repay
The debt of love I owe;
Here, Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do."

O reader, if you want holiness, get near the cross of Jesus.

"See from his hands, his feet, his side,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down;
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?"

Glory to God for salvation through the blood of the Lamb.

"Here I give my all to thee,
Friends, and time, and earthly store;
Soul and body thine to be,
Wholly thine forevermore."
"Still I'm trusting, Lord, in thee,
Dear Lamb of Calvary;
Humbly at thy cross I bow,
Save me, Jesus, save me now."

ENTHUSIASTIC FAITH.

The old Romans showed their faith and courage when they sold to each other the land on which the enemy stood without the gates. And we need more faith in our mission. We too readily tremble for the ark of God. Our courage flags as we hear of giant sons of Anak, and cities walled up to heaven in the land we are invading. But God has not sent us on a doubtful expedition, nor is it on a "peradventure" we build our hopes. And the Church must have more thoroughness and earnestness in the prosecution of her mission.

There is a common prejudice against religious earnestness; and the men who admire enthusiasm in other departments, in music, in painting, in science, in politics, despise it in religion. Be real and earnest in all other spheres; but when you enter church, when you come to religion, hide your real self, be too respectable to be earnest, "faultily faultless, icily regular, splendidly null." Chemists speak of heat being converted into motion; and the power by which the railway train takes you to the most beautiful country in the world, to Wales, is simply the heat of coals transformed into motion.

In the church there can be no true progress without spiritual earnestness, without glowing love, fervent zeal, the fire of the Holy Ghost. Men laugh at us because we are so cold in talking about divine realities. Better far let our earnestness provoke the taunt of Festus, "Thou art beside thyself." This alone will overcome the difficulties in the way of the church. While a timid faith is measuring the obstacles, the work is done by enthusiasm. While little faith is discussing what kind of matches and fuel to use, enthusiasm has kindled a fire that is roaring like a furnace. While little faith is counting the hosts of the Midianites, enthusiasm is in the night, breaking the pitchers, and brandishing the lanterns, and raising the battle cry, "The sword of the Lord and Gideon." While little faith is looking for a bridge, or questions the prudence of crossing, enthusiasm plunges into the flood, and crosses the Rubicon, sword in hand. Apostles and martyrs were inspired by this enthusiasm, and the church must have it in order to fulfill her mission. "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."—Rev. John Owen.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

There are many now on the earth who are looking for the second coming of Christ, as something near at hand, and there always have been, since he left this earth. Who can blame the Bride for looking for the return of the Bridegroom—for longing for it —for putting a favorable construction upon every sign of his return, especially when we are told that a "crown of righteousness" awaits all that love his appearing?

But though it is easy to see that those in past ages were mistaken who looked for his speedy coming, are those mistaken who look for it now? Though there is much uncertainty about his coming there are some things certain.

1. To the most of the world he will come unawares—like a thief in the night—they will be eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, just as they were in the days of Noah. Nay, many will be scoffing and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" but

2. Those who are looking for him will know when he is coming—not the exact hour, probably, but near enough for every necessity. Our Lord told his disciples, "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies . . . let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains." No doubt it was far from clear to their minds then, how any could escape after the Roman armies had invested the city, but it was clear enough when the time came. The city was surrounded by the legions of Cestius Gallus, but, on account of some disturbance, not far off, he withdrew his troops, for a short time, thus giving the christians opportunity to escape, and not one perished in the siege which followed under Titus. So the wise virgins will have timely warning and all be found with their lamps trimmed and burning.

3. If it is not certain that it is near at hand, it is certain that it cannot be very far off—so certain that it becomes every one to see that he is in readiness—that nothing is left undone which he would wish done in case of such an event—that when the Master comes, he will find nothing in their houses and nothing in their hearts which they would not have him see. Some house cleaning and some heart cleaning will be necessary to this end. Let us heed the admonition: "Be ye also ready."—E. S. N., in the Chicago Foundlings' Record.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

R. R. LADD.

It has seemed good to our kind Father to suffer me to be laid away from active life for several months past, and for many weeks I have been confined to my room and bed. Being very weak and prostrate, mentally and physically, I could not read much, nor converse; and having a somewhat active brain that "would run on," I have accomplished a good deal of thinking; and of course the most natural current of my thoughts has been that which has occupied my mind for the many years of active life in which I have been engaged in the cause of Christ as a believer in "his near coming."

It has always been an unsolved mystery to me how the commonly received explanation of the formation of the toes of the "great image of Nebuchadnezzar" could be so out of all proportion to the other parts of it; and I have therefore never been fully satisfied with the current view. It cannot be doubted that all the elements that entered into the construction of the image existed long before they appeared upon the field of prophecy. Thus Babylon, the "head of gold," was a strong, wealthy, powerful kingdom for centuries before it was selected by the "God of heaven" to be the beginning of the "time of the Gentiles"—after the overthrow of the Jewish polity, the captivity of the ten tribes and two tribes, and the breaking up of the "kingdom of God" upon earth. So also of Media and Persia, Grecia and Rome. The latter kingdom was a great and rising power when Babylon first appeared as the head of the image, and yet it has no place in prophecy until it comes into its position in the image, which could not have been until near the beginning of the christian era; but by common consent these kingdoms take date from the time of their becoming "universal empires" and parts of the image.

This term "universal" must be taken in an accommodated sense, as, in reality, they took in but a very small portion of the earth or its inhabitants. The immense domain of Russia and her tributaries, and all of Eastern Asia with its teeming population, extending back in its history to the time of the flood, form no part of the image, nor have they any conspicuous place in prophecy. The field upon which is displayed the history of the "image" is really very limited; the southern part of Europe, from the eastern shore of the Atlantic Ocean, on both sides of the Mediterranean Sea, and eastward to the Euphrates and the Dead Sea, takes in most of its area, and is now known as the "Old Roman World," which in its zenith embraced more territory than any of its predecessors.

The date of Rome in prophecy therefore commences about the beginning of the christian era, or, to be precise, about thirty-one years before, when, at the battle of Actium, she became mistress of the world, and took her place in the image as the "legs of iron."

Now we come down to the "age of iron rule" which the prophet described as belonging to the legs as follows (Dan 2:33): "His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay." 40-42. "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things, and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise. 46. And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. 42. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken" (margin, brittle).

Now there is no fact better sustained by history than that of the strong, unbroken, iron character of the Roman Empire for more than fifteen centuries of the christian era. The two divisions indeed had their contentions, and were often in collision with each other, sometimes the advantage being with the Eastern or Greek division, whose capital was in the ancient Byzantium, or the present Constantinople, so named after the famous Emperor Constantine the Great, and at others, with the Western division or leg, whose capital was at Rome in Italy. They also had their internal factions and quarrels. But as against all other nationalities they remained, under one form or another, Pagan or Papal, Imperial or Priestly, "strong as iron," until about the period of the Reformation, the commencement of the 16th century; since which time the clay element has so mingled itself with the iron as to leave no doubt that the feet of the image have been forming.

CHARITY.

Charity is a much abused word. It is applied oftentimes to traits of character which are as void of true charity as a rushlight is void of sunbeams. Sympathetic tears are considered tears of charity, and whining excuses for sin and deviltry are the excuses of charity, and the voice that pleads in behalf of men who are continuing in a career of crime is the voice of charity. Men hunt amid the characters of the depraved, and finding one spot less foul than the rest, demand an acquittal in the name of charity. When men's passions are at rest, and a pleasing surface is presented, we are told not to go beneath to discover the foulness of sinful lusts hidden there, lest we lack charity.

True charity is from God, and sees as God sees, and deals as God deals. He has no charity to save sin, but plenty to save sinners who quit their sins. He has sympathy for all who in their hearts hate sin, and pardon for those who repent, and turn away from sin.

Heaven's charity hides sin when it is separated from man, but never hides the sinner. It brings him to the light, probes him that he may be relieved of the foul matter, and does not hide the condition of the heart. It is the surgeon who amputates that which would cause death.

Charity covers a multitude of sins, but never covers a single sinner. Men seek to cover sin by covering the sinner, and calling him a saint. They gather around him, throw over him their false robe of charity, and say to all around, "behold a saint."

Men seek to bury sin within their own breast. God seeks to separate it from man, and bury it in a land of forgetfulness. Men make society the burial place of sin, and cover it with earthly charity, and it sprouts and grows, and produces tenfold evil in their midst. God would strip sin from society and bury it in a barren wilderness, never to be seen again. God's scapegoat goes into the wilderness and remains there. Men's scapegoats with all their sins on their heads covered by the mantle of false charity, go bleating about the camp, calling on all to admit their innocence.

God's sin offerings were to be burned outside the tabernacle. Men's dead carcasses of sin are left within the tabernacle, covered by their charity until they rot, and send forth their pestiferous oder to sicken all within.

Let heavenly charity abound. Let it ride triumphant in the church of Christ. Let it purify the people of God, and give to all the sweet fresh odor of the smiles of heaven. Let the camp be cleansed, and let the tombs of sin be unknown among us. Let walking sepulchres be cleansed, and in their stead become receptacles of charity that "rejoiceth in the truth."

We need less of earth and more of heaven. Heaven weeps over men and seeks to save them from their sins. Earth weeps and seeks to save them with their sins. Heaven's charity is blessed in its effects. Earth's charity is a curse to all. Heaven's charity, the love of God, makes the sinner godly and thus saves him. Earth's charity, the love of man, puts a false face on sinners, and thus damns them.

"He that covereth his sins shall not prosper, but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—Advent Christian Times.

FANATICISM.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

It may not be possible to correct the abuses (or misuses) which attach to this word; yet we will try to give a few hints at some of them, and those who read the same with care may (if not already well instructed), gain somewhat, or at least learn the proper use of the word. Those who are always perfectly cool and calm, and who are never earnestly engaged in anything pertaining to religion, may consider themselves free from this evil, and without doubt they are. But the icy coldness of death is an extreme as far removed from the natural and normal condition of living men, as the inflammation and delirium of fever.

The cold and formal professor cries "fanaticism," if he sees one so much engaged and so zealous as to respond, Amen, heartily; and if a meeting is continued fifteen or twenty minutes later than nine o'clock in the evening, all who take part in such meetings are equally liable to the same charge. And I have heard this epithet applied to those who hold campmeetings over a full week, by one who thought it no harm to have a four or five days meeting. But we believe with Paul that "it is good to be zealously affected, always in a good thing," or cause.

The true definition of fanaticism as given by Webster is nearly as follows: "Wild and passionate enthusiasm. Religious frenzy." But it seems not so much a matter of reproach to be passionately engaged in the service of the world, or to spend whole nights in dancing and revelry. A man may "do evil with both hands earnestly," and if he can keep clear of the clutches of the law, he may hold his head as high as the proudest. But the lowly, meek, and humble disciple of Jesus must be called a fanatic if he devotes his time and means and all his powers earnestly in the service of his blessed Master. If this is so, let us welcome the term of reproach. For "if ye be reproached for the name of Christ happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you. On their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified." 1 Pet. 4:14.

— As sunshine seems brightest after rain, and calm is most welcome after storm, so joy is never so welcome as after sorrow; the truest joy is that poured into a broken heart.

THAT WATCHMAN.

The position occupied by the suddenly celebrated watchman at the dam of the Mill River reservoir, of sad memory, threw upon him great responsibilities. The mighty body of water suspended in a threatening position over the wealth, homes, and lives of a multitude of toiling citizens, held by an unsafe dam, made his position one of great importance. The safety of hundreds of human lives, and the accumulated wealth of long years of patient toil were thrown into his hands for protection. His position demanded that his whole mind and heart be interested in watching for the first signs of approaching danger. He was charged to watch for the first appearance of escaping waters, which might be forced under the foundation stones of the fated dam.

While he kept himself in a position to see every indication of the treacherous workings of the threatening element, and saw no development of coming danger, he stood acquitted before his employers and the public as a faithful man, without giving any warning or sounding an alarm to those whose interests he was guarding. But when he saw waters issue forth, in small but powerful streams from the foundation walls, the real signs of approaching calamities were before him. This new development radically changed his duty as a watchman. He could no longer be justified to march on his wonted beat, looking for signs of approaching danger as formerly, for the knowledge he had gained made it his duty to hasten with all possible speed to warn the exposed people of the coming flood.

When the news of this terrible disaster flashed over the world, the first question asked by the excited multitude was, "Did the watchman do his duty? Did he see the signs of danger as soon as they appeared, and did he give the warning as soon and as faithfully as possible?" The principle requiring this is so plain, that every intelligent mind demanded it of him; therefore, the first effort of the public was to be assured of his faithfulness or unfaithfulness in the matter. When the rumor spread that he hastened with all possible speed, jeopardizing his own life to give the alarm, every voice sounded his praise; but when report came that he hesitated a little, and was stopped ten or fifteen minutes on his way by his overseer, the public were ready to call him a fool and a devil; and some of the sufferers armed themselves to assassinate the man who detained him. These circumstances show how men judge of the responsibilities of a watchman when danger approaches.

So it is with God's watchmen. They are stationed between the dangers and the people exposed, charged by God to give warning of the snares which threaten them. They are instructed to first watch for the signs of their approach, and when they are seen, to hasten to warn the people of the danger.

The principles demanding such watchcare are connected with the entire economy of God, and are produced by eternal justice and mercy. God will, therefore, never see his creatures exposed to danger without exercising his fatherly care over them through some agency.

When the waters of earth were held in vast reservoirs, to be poured in an overwhelming flood upon the rebellious antediluvian generation, Noah was stationed by God as his watchman, to warn the world seasonably, so that all might find safety. Noah manifested his loyalty to God and faithfulness to the people by preaching a coming flood, and preparing for it. So have all the servants of God, through the Old and New Testament history, been appointed as watchmen to watch for all the ensnaring insinuations of Satan, and the wicked influences of the world which threaten men in their christian experience, and also to watch for signs of approaching judgments from God upon the wicked. These are, in the nature of the case, the most responsible duties God ever called mortal men to perform. They are not only required to guard their own interests, but the welfare of others, thus multiplying the importance of their work. It was necessary that the watchman at Mill river dam should be a faithful man in his family, and seek to protect their lives; but the lives of many wives and children were put into his care, which were just as precious in the sight of God and of men as his own. Could he have been justified by any human or divine law, after he had seen the spurting water coming up through the opening soil, which was the very thing he was stationed there to look for, and not hasten to give the warning? Or, could he have been justified to have had the water thus pour forth and not observe it as an indication of coming trouble, and thus, through his culpable ignorance, neglect to give warning? All will answer, "No, he could not be acquitted for neglecting so important a duty for any of these reasons." How then can the servants of God be justified or sanctified, while they are neglecting and persistently refusing to warn the present generation of the last judgment, if it be true that there are signs now before their eyes, and sounded in their ears, just such as predicted, showing that it is impending? We would judge no man, but we fear for the safety of those who occupy such a position, and would in christian kindness warn them that God has, in his divine arrangement, given signs to precede every judgment upon men sent by him, and has required his servants to watch for their occurrence, so as to give men seasonable warning of their approach.

The importance of the watchman's faithfulness at the dam, to the exposed villages below, was very imperfectly realized, until the fatal hour came, when hundreds of precious lives depended upon a warning of approaching death, and a few minutes to escape its terrible grasp. So it has ever been with God's servants. No one realizes the importance of Noah's or Lot's position, until the destroying elements burst forth upon the heedless millions, who did not heed God's warning message sent them, until the precious time had passed in which they would have escaped the overwhelming ruin. Jesus says, speaking of those scenes, "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." By this we learn that God will instruct his servants in the closing days of the gospel to watch for the signs of the last judgment, and when they are seen, to hasten with all possible speed to warn the world of the swift approach of the day of general doom. He then makes it a specialty in their christian duties, and will hold them responsible for the destruction of the people, if they are not seasonably and faithfully warned.

As the instincts of the people held the reservoir watchman responsible for the safety of the inhabitants of the valley, until he had promptly used every means within his power to notify the exposed citizens of approaching ruin, so God, angels, and men will hold Christ's watchmen responsible for using all the means given them to warn the world that the day of God's wrath is nigh at hand.

If a man, appointed by men to watch over the temporal interests of a few citizens, is justly condemned for not faithfully attending to their welfare, what will be the condemnation of one who is called of God to watch for the evidence of the approach of the last terrible judgment, who shall carelessly, or willfully neglect to look for the signs of coming danger, or to give the warning when the people are about to be swept away in the flood of eternal perdition? Jesus says:—"The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." It seems to us that God never gave to his servants of any generation so many clear and evident signs of coming danger, as those of this age. He has taxed the heavens and the earth to produce evidences of speedy judgments, and forced them upon the attention of the people; and through his word, which clearly predicts them into their hands and minds, so that they could have no excuse.

O, that God would assist his servants of the present time to comprehend the situation, and see the millions of the human family now busy in their mills and fields, unconscious of the pent-up fire ready to burst forth and sweep them away in hopeless destruction. Untold responsibilities rest upon them. They should devote all their time, talents, and means in warning this generation of divine judgment about to burst forth upon their unsheltered heads. O that our eyes could be opened to view the approaching scenes of world-wide dissolution! Great empires and nations with their busy, scoffing millions, about to be engulfed in eternal perdition. Watchman, for the sake of Christ, who died for the rescue of a ruined world, and for the sake of perishing men, sleep not a moment at thy post! Look upon the treacherous waters, bursting forth from every foundation stone of our cursed world, threatening to tear the frame of a convulsed earth, and shake down the pillars of thrones and kingdoms, dissolve and scatter churches, break the harmony of families, and sweep with the besom of utter ruin a blighted and rebellious world! Then arise, ye servants of the great God, and rush into the midst of excited and confused humanity, and cry aloud, spare not, tell them in the name of the Crucified that the foundations of the great deep are breaking up, and the fires of Sodom are rekindled! Tell them to hasten to the "Ark," and flee to the "Little City" of refuge, for the day of God is upon them! Ye faithful in Christ, be not detained a moment by any side issues, or distracting questions, or childish contentions about men or names, in your efforts to sound the alarm and guide some bewildered souls to the eminence of safety. Stand up unselfishly, and occupy a noble and manly position! Strike for God and truth! Stretch out your arm to rescue the precious perishing ones for whom Christ died! Waste not a moment! O hasten, hasten, for the last hour lingers not! The clock of time is about to strike the end—the end of your toil, the end of salvation. O Christ, help thy people now! Help! for the mighty are fallen. Help! that a remnant may be found, when thou comest, worthy of thy eternal salvation!

SUGAR HILL.

Sugar Hill is a beautifully elevated tract of farming land in the easterly part of the town of Lisbon, Grafton Co., N. H., lying one hundred miles north from Concord, the capital of the State. It is located near the range of the White Mountains, and from its summit a grand view of the stately old pyramids is obtained, with the Franconia section near at hand, and Mt. Washington and Jefferson standing on guard, in commanding grandeur, at an eastern post. It is soul-inspiring to stand on this charming eminence, on one of these lovely June mornings, fanned by invigorating breezes, perfumed by the flowers and rich fragrance of a thousand fields, and sweep the feasting eye over the varying landscape; towering mountains with gaping gorges, interspersed with cultivated hills and green-lawn meadows, dotted with clusters of farm buildings, large tracts of woodlands variegated with the dark-shaded evergreen, the silver-leaved poplar, and green-leaved maple. Nature all around seems dressed in its loveliest robes, deceiving with her enchanting smiles those who do not remember that the curse is here, and that in a few days the beauty and fragrance of her flowers will have gone, and the leafless forests will sound the requiem of her departed glory.

The inhabitants of this place, doubtless, present as high a standard of moral character, and as much literary and religious refinement as can be found in any agricultural district, or any other location in the country. We think the Advent Church of this place, now enjoying the pastoral labors of Bro. N. Wheeler, is one of the largest, most spiritual and truly prosperous that we are acquainted with. Bro. Wheeler is a man of God, we think, and well qualified to lead this flock of Christ to an elevated position of christian faith and devotion necessary to meet her soon coming King in glorious triumph.

We came here to rest a little, feeling a necessity to relax our mind from the strain of overwork and anxiety to which it has been subjected for the last year. We are stopping with the family of Bro. C. B. Parker, where we are enjoying the most sweet and undisturbed christian associations, and where the altar fires never go out, and the light of present truth never ceases to illuminate. Thank God, for such pillows to rest our weary heads upon, and such greetings to relieve from the disheartening sounds of complaint and strife. We attended the quarterly session of the N. H. Conference, which met June 11th at Whitefield, Coos Co., twenty miles north of this place. The meetings were very good, and well attended considering the rainy weather. Six of the preachers of the Conference were present, and all seemed to enjoy the most perfect love and fellowship for each other, and expressed deep conviction that the end of our toils is very near at hand.

The church at W. is in quite a prosperous condition under the pastoral labors of Bro. W. M. Harmon. Bro. H. is a young preacher, and a young man; but his labor there and elsewhere has given ample proof of his divine call and qualification for the responsible work in which he is engaged. We are more and more strongly convinced, by visiting these churches and many others, that God's arrangement to give his churches pastoral care and labor is better than any substitute men may devise.

The social meeting at Sugar Hill last Sunday evening was a spiritual, deep-toned meeting. Seventy-eight exhortations were delivered in about as many minutes. There were no ten or fifteen minute speeches to destroy the spirit or tone of the devotion, as they always do; but they were rapid, devout, and expressive. Such worship always results in the increase of spirituality, firmness of purpose, and holy zeal in the cause of Christ. It is far better calculated to convict and lead sinners to Christ, than long prosy exercises can possibly be. May God give us wisdom to labor so as to accomplish the greatest possible amount of good to saints and sinners.

Sugar Hill, June 23d.

FRANCE.—Things in France look very squally. Those who are considered close observers, and of sound judgment, feel confident that scenes of terror are about to be opened again upon an extensive scale. Men's hearts begin to be filled with fear on account of what is apparently coming on the earth. We are evidently about passing into the closing scenes of the present dispensation. The signs thicken all around us, and speak in the most positive language that Christ is coming soon.

Wickedness and infidelity are making alarming progress in all directions. The Bible and Christianity are scouted as things that are "played out," and of no further use. Those who claim to be scientifically wise are assuming to be able to supplant the Sacred Scriptures and those who defend them. They may expect about the same success as the dog that runs out to stop the express train by barking, or the boy who should attempt to stop the Niagara with a mud dam.

The following is late news from France:

"A DARK PREDICTION.

New York, June 22nd. A Paris letter of the 10th inst. to the World says that if there is any truth in the old proverb that 'coming events cast their shadows before,' we ought to be on the very eve of some terrible political eruption in this most volcanic country. That the end cannot be far off, is the opinion of all thinking men; but after we have got rid of this state of things, who can say what will follow?"

DISCUSSION.—We have arranged to hold a discussion in the Baptist church in Lynn, with Mr. W. F. Jamieson, commencing Monday evening, July 6th, to continue four or five evenings. We are to debate the following: "RESOLVED, That the spirits of departed human beings have communicated and do communicate with the inhabitants of earth."

"VISIONS AND PROPHECIES."

In a former article we have referred to "visions and prophecies," showing that they should be received with great caution, as they are a means by which Satan attempts to deceive people in these last days, and by which he has often led them into error and darkness. This is most apparent in Spiritualism, which is crowded with visions and prophecies. From the early ages of the world to the present time, Satan has been producing counterfeit visions and prophecies, with which to seduce the Lord's children, and it is not reasonable to suppose that in these last days he has quietly retired from his deceitful work. He has had great success in this business, and often led honest souls to follow his false visions and prophecies, and thus form a new religious party. This was the case with Joanna Southcott, Ann Lee, Joseph Smith, Swedenborg, and many others that might be named.

MRS. WHITE'S VISIONS.

The question here arises, is Mrs. Ellen White, of Battle Creek, Mich., a true prophetess of the Lord, and are her visions from him? Recent developments demand that this question should be candidly and fully answered. If the Lord has chosen her as a prophetess to lead his people in these last days, the fact should be known in all the world, and all the saints should listen to her voice, and rely upon her visions; but if she is a false prophetess and visionist, the disciple of Christ should be faithfully warned against putting any confidence in her visions and prophecies. The interests involved in this matter demand a thorough investigation. We would that this unpleasant duty could have fallen upon some other person, but we feel assured that the Lord would not have us remain silent on this subject any longer. It is well known that Mrs. White's visions and prophecies are endorsed by the Seventh-day Adventists, whose headquarters are at Battle Creek, Mich. They have voted in conferences the acceptance of her as a true prophetess of the Lord. Of course this vote does not settle the matter. The True Israelites would vote that Joanna Southcott was a prophetess of the Lord; the Mormons would vote that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the Lord, and Swedenborgians would vote the same of Swedenborg, and so on to the end of the chapter.

We think all candid, Bible-loving people will be ready to admit that prophecies and visions given by the Lord are invariably true. He makes no mistakes, and teaches no false doctrine. Prophecies and visions from him do not contradict facts; they do not contradict themselves, nor the Sacred Scriptures. Then it follows, that if it can be clearly shown that Mrs. White's visions and prophecies do contradict facts, themselves, and the Bible, the conclusion will be inevitable, that they do not come from the Lord, and are therefore of no more consequence than those from any other false prophet.

In the "Advent Review and Herald of the Sabbath," July 2nd, and 9th, 1874, we find articles headed "Visions and Prophecies," from which we make some extracts. Before doing so, we wish to say that in these articles, it is claimed that the "Seventh-day Adventists" are the "remnant church," referred to in Revelation, "the last of the true church." They make this claim, because they "keep all the ten commandments," and "have the spirit of prophecy in exercise among them." The writer says: "In regard to the spirit of prophecy, it is a remarkable fact that from the first of their existence as a people, S. D. Adventists have claimed that it has been in active exercise among them. . . . It is a fact that for nearly thirty years, Mrs. Ellen G. White, the wife of Eld. James White, both of them pioneers in this movement, has had visions which are generally regarded by those in sympathy with this church as being from the Lord; and it is freely admitted that they have exerted a large influence in making Seventh-day Adventism what it now is."

We would also say, it is a fact, that many honest christian men and women, who once had confidence in her visions have none at all at present. Why is this? We shall see soon.

The writer of the articles to which we have referred says, in the language of Scripture, "Try the spirits," "prove all things, hold fast that which is good;" and then says: "We take the very rules the Scriptures give us, and they prove the visions of Mrs. White to be genuine." He goes on to say: "We boldly affirm that there is not a single rule in the Scriptures given to show the distinction between true and false manifestations that will not prove hers to be from a good source, when fairly applied."

Let us apply the Bible test to Mrs. White's visions: "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; thou shalt not be afraid of him." Deut. 18: 22. When we try Mrs. White's "Visions and Prophecies" by this rule, we find the word "tekel" written against them. Take for instance her vision and prophecy which declared the door of mercy was closed on the tenth day of the seventh month, in 1844. Had that vision been from the Lord it would have been true; and no sinner could have obtained pardon since. Was that vision and prophecy true? The whole christian world, angels, Christ and God would thunder forth an emphatic NO! Then the vision was not from the Lord. She also had a vision showing that Christ did not go within the veil, into the holy of holies, in the presence of his Father, till the 10th day of the seventh month in 1844; whereas the Bible positively teaches that Christ was "within the veil," in the holy of holies, in the presence of God, when the apostles were living.

We now see why many honest, christian people, who once had confidence in Mrs. White's visions, have given them up, as unworthy of their confidence; and if facts were fully known, we believe all others would do the same. There are three reasons why they cannot be accepted as coming from the Lord:

1. They contradict FACTS.
2. They contradict THEMSELVES.
3. They contradict the BIBLE.

Either of these reasons existing would afford positive proof that they do not come from the Lord; but the evidence is abundant to show that they all apply to her visions, and that they are no more reliable than those of Joanna Southcott, Ann Lee, Swedenborg, or those coming from the Spiritualist mediums of the present time. We are bold to say that not a single prophecy or vision of hers can be produced that may not have been given by a demon.

We do not doubt Mrs. White's honesty and sincerity; and the same could be said of Joanna Southcott or Swedenborg, and many others that might be named, who have had "visions and prophecies." We have not, and have never had, a particle of unkind feeling toward Mrs. White or her supporters, but when we see honest people being led astray by the cunning artifices of Satan, we feel it to be a christian duty to sound a note of alarm, hoping, that by so doing, we may be instrumental in keeping some from falling into the snare.

Mrs. White had her first visions and prophecies in 1844-5. At that time she was living in Maine, her native state. She was then unmarried, and her maiden name was Ellen Harmon. Her visions and prophecies were well known, and much talked about at that time. Many believed them at first, who afterwards were forced to reject them, when it was fully shown that they were contradictory, and opposed to facts. These points may be as clearly proved by the most reliable witnesses, as that she ever had any visions, or ever uttered any prophecies. We have only room for a few testimonies among the multitude that might be given.

Bro. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me., a faithful minister of Christ, says: "I was often in meeting with Ellen G. Harmon [now Mrs. White, ED.] and James White in 1843 and 45. I several times caught her, while falling to the floor, at times when she swooned away for a vision. I have heard her relate her visions of these dates. Several were published on sheets, to the effect that all were lost who did not endorse the '44 move, that Christ had left the throne of mercy, and all were sealed that ever would be, and no others could repent. She and James taught this one or two years. Recently, in her published visions, called 'Testimony,' her visions differ widely, and directly contradict flatly her former ones."

Bro. Israel Damman, of Corinna, Me., another faithful minister of Christ, and his devoted wife, testify as follows: "We were formerly acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. White, and for a time had confidence in her visions, but for a good many years have had none at all. When we saw that they conflicted one with another, we renounced them altogether, and betook ourselves to the word of the Lord.

"It has been some twenty years or more since we were associated with Mrs. W., but we remember very perfectly that her first visions, or vision, was told both by herself and others (especially by Mrs. W.) in connection with the preaching of the 'shut door,' and went to substantiate the same. While under that influence, and preaching the visions, she, in vision, saw N. G. Reed, and I. Damman, in the kingdom, in an immortal state, and crowned. After that, she saw them finally lost. How could both be true? I think one was just as true as the other, and that God never told her any such thing."

Bro. John Megquier, Saco, Me. (formerly of West Poland, Me.,) a farmer, noted for his upright character, and christian integrity, says:

"We well know the course of Ellen G. White, the visionist, while in the State of Maine. About the first visions that she had were at my house in Poland. She said God had told her in vision that the door of mercy had closed, and there was no more chance for the world, and she would tell who had got spots on their garments; and those spots were got on by questioning her visions, whether they were of the Lord or not. Then she would tell them what to do, or what duty to perform to get into favor with God again. Then God would show her, through a vision, who was lost, and who was saved in different parts of the State, according as they received or rejected her visions. She could put herself under their influence, just the same as any mesmeric person would.

The Advent people in the State of Maine have no confidence in her course, nor visions, and she has but a few followers in this State, which is her native State, but she has succeeded in raising up quite a number of followers in some of the western states. They will go into new places, and like to go best where the Advent doctrine has been introduced. They will preach the Advent doctrine first; then will introduce the seventh-day; and last, and most important, they must receive Ellen with all of her different messages, which is a perfect snare of the devil. If persons would only take pains to read the history of Ann Lee, the founder of the Shakers, they would see a perfect similarity between the two. Ann commenced to form the Shaker Society through visions, which, she claimed, were from God. She got some followers, and they have increased to quite a large society, and some of them still have visions, directing what to eat, and wear, just the same as Ellen does for her followers. No doubt it is one of the last day signs, and a perfect snare of the devil. . . . There are a large number of living witnesses that can testify to these things."

JOHN MEGQUIER.

The following is from Sr. L. S. Burdick, San Francisco, Cal., formerly wife of Elder John Howell, an able and devoted minister of Christ, who lived in Maine when Mrs. White was there having visions. Bro. and Sr. Howell were well acquainted with Mrs. White. Sr. Howell has held her head in her lap while she was having her visions. Sr. Burdick says:—

"I became acquainted with James White and Ellen Harmon (now Mrs. White) early in 1845. At the time of my first acquaintance with them they were in a wild fanaticism,—used to sit on the floor instead of chairs, and creep around the floor like little children. Such freaks were considered a mark of humility. They were not married, but traveling together. Ellen was having what was called visions;—said God had shown her in vision that Jesus Christ arose on the tenth day of the seventh month, 1844, and shut the door of mercy; had left forever the mediatorial throne; the whole world was doomed and lost, and there never could be another sinner saved. She very soon pretended to see that Saturday must be kept for the Sabbath. Her visions were something new, and there seemed to be at first no decided opposition to them in the different churches where they traveled. They caused a great deal of discussion and excitement, and all seemed disposed to investigate. But after a little while, her visions began to conflict one with the other. It was ascertained by myself and others who saw her in vision, that she could not only throw herself into vision when she chose (this she confessed), but that James White could control them and bring her out when he pleased.

There were also many failures. She pretended God showed her things which did not come to pass. At one time, she saw that the Lord would come the second time in June, 1845. The prophecy was discussed in all the churches, and in a little 'shut-door paper' published in Portland, Me. During the summer, after June passed, I heard a friend ask her how she acounted for the vision? She replied that 'they told her in the language of Canaan, and she did not understand the language; that it was the next September that the Lord was coming, and the second growth of grass instead of the first in June.' September passed, and many more have passed since, and we have not seen the Lord yet. It soon became evident to all candid persons, that many things must have been 'told her in the language of Canaan,' or some other which she did not understand; as there were repeated failures. I could mention many which I knew of myself.

Once, when on their way to the eastern part of Maine, she saw that they would have great trouble with the wicked, put in prison, etc. This they told in the churches as they passed through. When they came back, they said they had a glorious time. Friends asked if they had seen any trouble with the wicked, or prisons? They replied, None at all. People in all the churches soon began to get their eyes open, and come out decidedly against her visions; and just as soon as they did so, she used to see them 'with spots on their garments,' as she expressed it. I was personally acquainted with several ministers, whom she saw landed in the kingdom with—'O, such brilliant crowns FULL of stars.' As soon as they took a stand against the vision, she saw them 'doomed, damned, and lost forever, without hope.'

Their traveling together, as they did, before marriage, brought a great scandal upon the cause. People generally felt that such intimacy should not exist between unmarried persons, and begged him to leave Ellen at home, and go himself and preach the gospel. He met them with insult and abuse, declaring that he never would bow to man. The churches all through the State of Maine (which is Ellen's native State) lost confidence in them. There was occasionally here and there a family, or individual, whom they seemed to hold under a kind of mesmeric influence, that stood by and defended them. They were after awhile married, and worked West, where they were not much known; and perhaps she learned to be more cautious, and have more consistent visions. If these visions which she now has are of God, the first were; and if the first were of God, the door of mercy was closed in 1844, and woe to the poor sinners this side of there. We know that God does not lie; and some of them did lie, to my certain knowledge. God does not contradict himself, and her visions have contradicted each other. I have been told that they deny on this coast that she ever saw the door of mercy closed; but there are thousands of living witnesses who know that a blacker lie could not be invented, and I am one of the number."

TRINE IMMERSION.

We clip the following from The Time Appointed, of June 20th:—

"BRO. GRANT:—I am much pleased to learn that you have of late turned your attention to the apostolic mode of baptism, and if indeed, as you claim, you have found the man and given the name of him who invented trine immersion, you are now prepared to give the light. Then in order to to this, we open to you a large door; that is, if I humbly consent to meet you in a public discussion, in the largest hall in the city of Boston, and thus give all our brethren and sisters the opportunity to exhibit the truth. Not that I can claim to be able to hold a discussion with you, but if I take pleasure and do glory in having all my errors exposed that we may exchange them for the truth, I am not afraid of the light. And if in a public discussion you are the best in the world, you are the very man we want to lead us out of the darkness into light; for if we be dead with Christ, or having lost sight of self, truth—the whole truth and nothing but the truth—be our object, we have nothing to fear; for though the scale may turn against me, or the truth be found on your side, when you give me the light, I have achieved the victory; for with me this is of more real worth than all the honor of men. If, then, you are willing to give us the light, please let me know soon.

WILLIAM C. THURMAN."

We are ready to meet Bro. Thurman, if proper preliminaries can be arranged.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. & Sr. Durand.

BRO. EDITORS:—As we are having so many letters, asking for appointments, board, etc., we think this the best way to set the matter at rest and save ourselves and others trouble. We have ourselves been boarding since May 1st, as it is cheaper as well as less care for us to do so, as, in consequence of physical inability, we are obliged to keep hired help when housekeeping.

As to appointments here, there is no place to hold evening meetings now, since we have no rooms for that purpose, and the price of the hall we have had is so much advanced this year, and times so hard for the working class here, the brethren only engage it as needed.

We submitted our resignation as Pastors of the church, to take effect June 7th, 1874, having so many calls to labor in "the region round about"; and, after much hesitation on the part of the dear little church, it was accepted; "Only because," said the brethren, "we are not able to sustain you here properly." So after almost constant labor here for two years and one month, our labor is formally closed with the people, and we are for a few weeks, at least, at liberty to respond to calls not too far away, as this is still our home place, and P. O. address. Our youngest son has a situation here in a store, at No. 2 Friedlander Block, opposite the Continental Hotel, Washington St., his boarding place, and ours when in town. Our P. O. address is "Box 561, Saratoga Springs, N. Y."

We expect to be at the Campmeeting at Springfield, and then can arrange with those churches whose calls we have received, either as permanent or occasional Pastors. Want of time and opportunity has prevented a preparation of our "Annual Letter" of statistics and labors, but we have not been "idle," and, we trust, wholly "unfruitful in the vineyard of the Lord."

Expecting eternal life when Jesus comes, which cannot be far away, we are your, watching.

WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

N. B.—This paper is not an advertising medium, nor are we agents, but we wish to say for the information of friends desiring board at the "Springs" among the Hotels, one of the best, and the only one that was a temperance Hotel in the years past, and kept in as good style, and the location as desirable as others which have a bar, and the terms reasonable, room and time for family devotions, and within five minutes' walk of the depot,—is the Continental, Washington St.

From Sr. M. A. Crandle.

BRN. AND SRS.:—I have been a reader of the Crisis for a number of years. I prize it next to my Bible. It is encouraging to read the many letters from those of like precious faith. I am striving by the help of the Lord to ever be a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, who died for me; and I am looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who will change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his most glorious body. I believe that the coming of the Lord is near, even at the door. The signs that are in the past tell us plainly that we may know that our redemption draweth nigh. Some tell us we do not know anything about it, but there is enough in the Bible that convinces me we are very near the judgment, and I hope by the grace of God to live in constant readiness to meet Jesus in peace.

My heart goes out after sinners. I want to see all saved in God's everlasting kingdom; but except we repent and become as a little child, we cannot enter into the kingdom. I feel that eternal life is worth more to me than all the riches of this world. I am willing to forsake all for Jesus. I hope that some poor sinner who reads these lines will resolve to be a christian.

From Bro. S. C. B. Williams.

We desire to express our gratitude through the columns of the Crisis to those who have responded to our request, as published in several numbers of the Crisis during the month of April last. Since that time we have received many tracts and old papers from different offices and individuals, which we are circulating judiciously. The papers and tracts are raising quite an interest in the Advent doctrine in this vicinity, and we hope much good may result from their circulation. We shall be pleased to distribute any other papers or tracts that may come to our office; and as a token of our gratitude, we shall send as many subscribers for the Crisis as possible. No doubt many of those who have sent these papers and tracts will see the fruits of their efforts when they stand on the banks of everlasting deliverance. Yours in hope.

Denver, Worth Co., Mo., June 23d.

IN the cross is salvation, in the cross is life, in the cross is protection against our enemies, in the cross is infusion of heavenly sweetness, in the cross is strength of mind, in the cross joy of spirit, in the cross the height of virtue, in the cross the perfection of sanctity.

Obituaries.

Harlow. Fell asleep in South Carver, Mass., June 13th, 1874, Benjamin Harlow, aged sixty-four years, eleven months.

A truly good man has fallen here. Bro. H. had been for many years a firm and consistent christian, looking for the Lord and the resurrection of the dead. He was beloved by many, and respected by all who knew him. His religion was neither a fanatical nor dead one. He labored anywhere and everywhere that he found work to be done for Christ, letting his faith be known, and all behold his good works, which has led others to glorify God. He had a strong faith in the promises of God. The coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead were the great events for which he looked; but not to the exclusion of other doctrines of the Bible did he hold these. Christ in all his work was his theme. He saw salvation, not in one act alone, but in all the work of Christ, done, and to be yet done. All the plan of redemption had a place in his heart. A widow and five grown up children mourn the loss of one that was faithful and good. Burial services were held in the Methodist Chapel, conducted by the minister in charge, Bro. Williams. A discourse was given by the writer. Subject—Will all live again? May the event and remarks be blessed of God to all who witnessed and heard.

I. I. Leslie.

Colomy. Fell asleep in Jesus, at New Durham, N. H., May 3d, 1874, Daniel Colomy, aged eighty-one years and eight months.

He died as he had lived, in full enjoyment and assurance of the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of the dead. He was calm and patient in all his suffering; and although he had desired to live until the coming of the Just One, yet he could say, "Nevertheless thy will, not mine, be done." He embraced the Bible hope many years since, and has found no sacrifice too great for him to make, or burden too heavy for him to bear, for the truth's sake. He was one of those men who dared to stand for the truth. He was a man of steady and industrious habits, cheerful and liberal, and had a large circle of friends. He died in the triumphs of faith, leaving a dear wife, six sons, and two daughters, with many friends to mourn; but not without hope. Words of comfort were spoken by J. G. Smith.

T. M. R.

Converse. In Dysart, Tama Co., Iowa, May 30th, 1874, Bro. Enoch Converse.

His last words were, "I love Jesus." We laid him away to "rest from his labors" until Jesus comes. He was loved by all that knew him. He leaves a wife and two little ones, and a large circle of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. His hope was bright, especially the last few months of his life. His companion says, "he was ripening up for the kingdom." All of the ripe fruits will be gathered when Jesus comes. Sermon by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 20.

J. W. Burroughs.

Kellogg. In Ferrisburgh, Vt., May 25th, 1874, Gardner Whitford, youngest son of Josiah and Cynthia Kellogg, aged fourteen years, ten months, and eleven days.

Gardner loved the Savior, and was not afraid to die, for he believed that Jesus died and rose again, and all that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. He told his mother some four weeks before his death who he wished to preach his funeral sermon, and the text, which will be found in John 11: 23. Yes, he sleeps, but not forever. We mourn, but not as those that have no hope. Funeral attended by Rev. W. W. Collenes, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Vergennes, Vt.

J. Kellogg.

Leach. In Biddeford, Me., June 11th, Samuel L. Leach, aged twenty-four years and eight months.

Samuel was an upright young gentleman, a warm-hearted friend, and a dutiful son. His moral character was blameless, and without stain, although he never embraced Christ publicly. He was taken away unexpectedly, after a very brief illness, leaving an aged father and one brother to mourn his untimely death. They have the Spirit and power of God to help them in their great affliction. We attended the funeral, and spoke words of comfort to the assembled relations and friends.

E. S. Moulton.

Smith. In Scipio, N. Y., May 10th, 1874, Bro. Elijah Smith, aged fifty-eight years.

He was a christian. The writer spoke at the funeral from 1 Cor. 15: 22, in the Baptist house. The pastor assisted in the services.

C. F. Sweet.

Gerardy. At Sherman Township, Washington Co., Kan., June 6th, 1874, by drowning, George Washington Gerardy, youngest son of Peter and Caroline Gerardy.

Georgie sleeps, but not forever, and we shall see him in the new kingdom. Sermon by the writer, from Isa. 49: 10.

F. O. Cutler.

Boutwell. In Bridgewater, Vt., June 9th, 1874, Huldia Boutwell (of scrofulous tumor on the neck), widowed sister of Bro. Alford Hubbard, aged seventy-seven years.

It is believed that she sleeps in Christ. Services attended by the writer.

Allen Damon.

Salter. In Bridgewater, Vt., June 16th, 1874 (of consumption of the liver), Polly Salter, wife of Orin Salter, and mother of Bro. Perry Salter, aged seventy-four years and eight months.

Thus has passed away a kind and affectionate wife and mother, whose loss can never be made up in this world only in Christ. She gave evidence of her acceptance with Christ, and was ready to go to rest until the trump of God shall sound and wake the sleepers under ground. Services attended by the writer.

Allen Damon.

Brown. In Lakeville, Conn., June 5th, 1847, Bro. Nicholas Brown, aged fifty-seven years.

He leaves a wife, three sons, and three daughters to mourn his loss. Funeral services attended at the M. E. Church, by Dr. Stevens, pastor.

M. A. A.

Hanson. Fell asleep in Effingham, N. H., May 28th, 1874, Abigail W. Hanson, wife of John Hanson, aged seventy-two years and twenty-five days.

She leaves a husband and five children to mourn, but they sorrow not as those without hope. We believe she sleeps in Jesus. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. T. W. Piper from Rev. 21: 4.

"Sleep, dearest mother, sleep,
Death shall not hold thee long;
And in the morning thou shalt rise
And join the blood-washed throng."

B. W. Hanson.

Parker. Fell asleep at Somerville, Mass., June 1st, 1874, Herbert F., son of Jonas and Margaret Parker, aged three years and six months.

Christ will bring him again.

J. Parker.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, June 23. A Florence journal says the Pope has been presented with a copy of the address sent from the United States to Archbishop Ledochowski of Posen. The holy father in replying spoke most cordially of America, and said: "The United States is the only country where I am really Pope in the eyes of the government. I am always afraid lest European governments shall oppose or control my acts, whereas I can freely send pontifical documents to the United States without fear of opposition on the part of its government."

The Pope showed himself at one of the windows of the Vatican, at Rome, and was seen by sympathizers in the street below, who shouted: "Long live the Pope, our King!" They were at once arrested.

Rome, June 23. Several persons were arrested Sunday for taking prominent part in the papal demonstrations and have been variously sentenced to imprisonment for six, twelve and eighteen months.

Paris, June 23. The vigorous efforts made by Bonapartists to influence public opinion and turn it to their own account, causes much uneasiness. The party is well organized in every department and is establishing newspaper organs and distributing political documents and petitions urging the restoration of the empire. There are rumors that the assembly will adjourn at the end of July.

Constantinople, June 20. Intelligence has reached here of a terrible disaster in the sea of Marmora. The British vessel Kars, en route for Salonica, was run into yesterday by an Egyptian vessel named Beharia, and sunk in a few minutes. The Kars had 340 persons on board, including the passengers and crew, and of the number 320 were drowned.

Political Feeling in a French Village.—M. Sarcey has just written, observes the Pall Mall Gazette, an article on the manner in which internecine war is carried on in the provinces. It appears that the town of Montrichard is divided in opinion, half the inhabitants being clericals and the other half Republicans. The clericals got up an institute to attract the people, so the Republicans immediately ran up a theatre on the other side of the street, and announced the opening of this place of amusement by sound of drum. To counteract the influence of the stratagem the clerical party proclaimed a grand display of fireworks for the evening on which the theatre was to open its doors, and there was every chance of an empty house. The Republicans, nothing dismayed, next purchased the field in which the clericals made preparations for their pyrotechnic exhibition, and proceeded to demolish the frames, etc. This led to a personal encounter between the opposed parties, in which both the gendarmes and the priest took part. Next came an action brought by the Republicans, who obtained a verdict against all the ring-leaders with the exception of the priest, who was evidently sheltered by his cloth. Both parties now claim the victory; the Republicans because they obtained several condemnations, and the clericals because the priest, who fought in the forefront of the scrimmage, was acquitted.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 23. An appalling accident occurred here to-night. A strawberry festival was being held in the parlor of the Central Baptist church, when, without any premonition, the floor gave way about half-past nine o'clock, precipitating the room full of people into the story below. The parlor was on the second floor, and the rooms underneath were also full. A fire alarm was immediately given, and the firemen hurried to the scene. Some ten thousand people were there, and tremendous excitement prevailed. It is impossible to give particulars at this hour. Five dead bodies have been taken out, and the work has hardly commenced. Probably a hundred persons are more or less injured, many very seriously.

J. Couch.

There will be preaching on the Alton Bay camp-ground, the Lord willing, July 4th, at eleven o'clock A. M. There will also be preaching Sabbath, July 5th.

E. A. Stockman.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th.

J. Couch.

Vermont Campmeeting.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced.

H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Jer. Carr, Chairman.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. Mitchell, for Com.

Alton Bay.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H.

J. Couch, for Com.

Edwin Burnham will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, from the second Sabbath in July till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer.

E. Burnham.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting at West Amesbury, Mass., commencing Friday evening, July 3d, holding over the 4th, and Sunday, July 5th, also through the week, and over Sunday, July 12th. We shall do the best we can to make this meeting profitable to all that come; and we would urge our brethren and sisters to come to this meeting and labor with us for the salvation of the perishing. Those coming over the Boston and Maine R. R. will change at Newton Junction for West Amesbury. We shall invite able servants of Christ to labor with us through the meetings.

Enoch Morrill, Com.

To the Churches of the New Hampshire Conference.—At the annual session of the N. H. Conference at Manchester, you chose for a protracted and tent-meeting committee, Enoch Morrill, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Fletcher. Now these brethren (like most of our preaching brethren) have families to support, and other expenses and demands to meet; and as the design of the tent is to go in new places where there is little or no interest in the coming of Christ, it needs money to carry on this mission work. But little has been done as yet by your committee in protracted meetings; but it is the desire of your committee that the tent be in the field, and faithful laborers with it. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have means with which God has blessed you to help in this mission work, whatever you send to either of your committee, specifying it for the tent and mission work, will be faithfully appropriated to that object, and God will bless the giver, and the means under God will result in the salvation of some poor lost sinner.

Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., for the committee.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove-meeting July 4th and 5th at Asseria Centre, Barry Co., Mich. Bro. James Ferris is expected to assist in speaking the word. We expect a large gathering. A word to brethren, and ministers especially. I have frequently witnessed at our grove and campmeetings too much levity and unguarded talk, especially from ministers. Let us be guarded. Brethren, the world as well as the Lord, are watching our every act, and we are to render an account for every idle word. Thus it becomes us to be sober minded, that no one may have any evil thing to say of us. I visited a small band of brethren a short time since, where there had been a quarterly meeting held; and it was said by outsiders, it appeared more like a common concert than a religious meeting. Brethren, let us be guarded. The world and enemies of the cause of Christ are ever ready to add much to the little they may get from us. Let us keep unspotted from the world. Let us make our calling and election sure, that we may have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom. Your brother in the patient waiting for the dear Savior,

Philip Holler.

There will be a meeting in Kingston, N. H., at the Christian Advent meeting-house, on the 4th and 5th of July next. Preaching by Bro. N. H. Barbour.

R. W. Currier, for the Com.

A Grove Meeting will be held in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, West Levant, Me., July 4th and 5th.

F. A. Baker.

There will be a meeting at Barrington, N. H. (France school-house), Sunday, July 5th. Also at West Deerfield, N. H., July 19th.

Rufus P. Brank.

A meeting will be held the 4th and 5th of July, in Briggs' grove, at Hail Hollow, Plymouth, Vt., four miles from our place of worship in Bridgewater.

A. Damon.

Those wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., please correspond with Bro. Henry J. Hicks.

MISSION CAMPMEETING.

There will be a campmeeting under the direction of the Mass. A. Conference, at Greenwich Plains, Mass., commencing July 1st, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

The unfinished business of the annual conference will be taken up at this meeting, according to the resolution of the conference; therefore it is important that every church in Mass. be represented by preachers and delegates. The meeting is located on the Springfield and Athol R. R., about thirty miles from Springfield, fifteen miles from Athol, in a beautiful grove, prepared for us by the R. R. Co., free of expense, situated about thirty rods from the depot, near a beautiful pond, and near a quiet village. It is expected that the fare will be reduced on the Springfield, Athol, and Vt. and Mass. R. R., and possibly on the Boston and Albany. Ample provision will be made to lodge all that come prepared to camp out. Board at 80 cents per day. Those that desire to board themselves, can purchase provisions on the ground at reasonable rates. Come, one and all. Let us put new life into the missionary work in Mass. We can if we will. Will you do it, brethren?

Those coming on the Fitchburg and Vt. and Mass. R. Road will purchase regular tickets for Athol, and there call for campmeeting tickets for Greenwich. All coming by the way of Palmer on New London R. R., will call for campmeeting tickets at Palmer. Return tickets on Vt. and Mass. and Fitchburg R. Roads will be obtained on the camp-ground. Those coming from Worcester will buy tickets to Gardner, and from there to Athol. Return tickets will be given to Gardner. Those coming from the south on the New London R. R. will change cars at Barrett's Station.

J. Hemenway, for Tent Com.

Tremont Mass. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont will commence (the Lord willing) Monday, July 20th, and continue until the 30th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board, and those with lodging who cannot bring tents. Those who can are requested to do so.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, do make one more effort to devote a few days in meeting with his dear saints on this consecrated ground, for it will very likely be the last time we shall have to meet on this spot before our Lord will come. We intend having some of his servants who are prepared to give the evidences we have of our soon deliverance, and labor with us to secure the salvation of the lost, that some, at least, may share with us in the hope of eternal life.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Acknowledgment.—For Sr. Caroline Tuller, from B. R. Fellowes, $5.00.

Geo. T. Adams.

Let delegates be chosen, and every church in Massachusetts be represented, at Greenwich, at our campmeeting, to commence the first of July. Come with tents.

L. Boutell.

Those wishing the New Hampshire Mission Tent to be pitched in their vicinity, will please write immediately to Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., Chairman of Tent Committee.

The Evangel Tent will be pitched in Wiscasset July 7th. Meetings will continue over Sunday. Those coming will bring food and bedding for themselves. Room can be had in tent for lodging, etc. Brn. and Srs., come and help.

H. B. Seavey.

The annual meeting will be held in the grove on the Morris farm, in Springwater, July 5th and 6th (instead of the previous announcement.) We hope to see a good turn out, as this is probably the last, as mother Morris is dead, as well as her husband.

For the Com., C. F. Sweet.

The Lord willing, there will be a two days meeting at the Button school-house, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing evening of July 17th, and over the Sabbath. All are invited.

For the Brn., E. H. Eggleston.
E. A. Keeler.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Rangely, on the shore of the Lake near the village, commencing Friday, July 3d, 2 P. M., and continue over Sunday. If the weather should be unfavorable, there is a large, convenient Hall at the village. This is a new field of labor. We hope the brethren and sisters from adjoining towns will attend and unite with us to make this meeting one of profit to all.

J. T. Jordan.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove-meeting at Kendall Mills, Orleans Co., N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. Eld. A. C. Newell, Sr. L. M. Stoddard, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is extended to all far and near. Those coming with teams will provide for themselves as far as possible, and those coming by R. R. will be accommodated with good homes near the grove. Leave the cars on the Niagara Falls R. R. at Holley, Saturday, 9 A. M., and conveyance at a reasonable rate will be furnished to the meeting, five miles distant. Come, brethren and sisters, and declare our faith in the name of the Lord. This is a new field, and much interest exists among the people to hear the truth concerning the day of the Lord. Let earnest prayer ascend for this meeting, that sinners may be "pricked in the heart," and obey the gospel ere it is too late.

In behalf of the people, L. M. Stoddard.

Quarterly Meeting.—The next quarterly meeting of the first Christian Church of Wayland and Loon Lake, called the Church of God, will be held at Wallace, N. Y., commencing July 11th, at one o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come in the name of the Lord. Eld. D. Cogswell is expected to assist in preaching the word.

For the church, E. C. Cowles, Pastor.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove and basket meeting at Moosehorn Corner, in the north-west corner of East Greenwich, R. I., on land of David Tarbox, July 4th and 5th, commencing at 9 o'clock A. M. Brn. E. Card, J. Miett, Jos. Carpenter, and others, are expected to be present to preach the word. Come, brethren and sisters, praying that the Lord will meet with us in very deed.

H. H. Shippee.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting on the Mechanic Falls camp-ground, Me., July 4th and 5th. Bro. Jer. Whitman will be there to preach the word. All are invited to come and help carry on the work of the Lord.

G. L. Tracy.

The second tent meeting of the Penn. Mission Tent will be held at Morton's Corners, Erie Co., N. Y., commencing July 4th, and continue two weeks, or as duty may demand.

C. F. Sweet.
J. T. Ongley.

P. S. We may be addressed as above until July 15th.

Tent Meeting.—There will be a tent meeting in Upton, Me., as Brn. Coolage and Flint may arrange, commencing Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We invite all the lovers of Jesus to come and unite with us in saving sinners, and prepare a people for the coming of the Lord.

Albert Gordon.
D. N. Chadsey.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit.

I. Damman.
J. Emerson.

Meeting at Freedom, N. H.—The lovers of the "blessed hope" in that region have arranged to hold a meeting in the Second Advent Chapel, at Freedom, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A large gathering of those of like precious faith is hoped for. All are invited from far and near. M. Stevens, C. H. Sweet, and perhaps others, will be present to preach the word.

C. H. Sweet, for the Brn.

The Lord willing, a grove meeting will be held in Albany, N. H., July 4th and 5th, in Geo. W. Bennett's grove, between the Bell and the red school-house.

S. Bragg.

There will be a two days meeting held in the United States school-house, Bingham, Potter Co., Pa., Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to attend.

A. H. Briggs.
J. W. Taylor.

There will be a barn-meeting the 4th and 5th of July at Bro. M. Smith's place, in Rochester, N. H., near the chapel. We trust the Lord will send some one to preach the word. Come with the armor on to work for souls.

For the Church, S. Hawkins.

Grove Meeting.—There will be a grove meeting at Dayton, Me., in Hezekiah Buzzell's grove, Sat., July 4th (the same spot that was used last year for a like purpose). Brn. John R. Tripp, Franklin Haines, Jesse Gay, and J. Hill, will be there to preach the word. Time of meeting, ten A. M. Come, brethren and sisters, one and all, and enjoy the meeting with us.

For committee, Jer. Hill.

The Evangel Tent will continue in Chelsea, Me., over the 4th and 5th of July.

H. B. Seavey.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE CALL.

List! can it be,
The Master of the vineyard calleth me?
Life's sunset shadows mock me as I stand,
Bent with the burden of my idle years,
Bearing base fruitage in my shriveled hand—
Sin, shame and tears.

"Go, work to-day."
I heard the morning call, but answered, Nay;
I will not labor in the fresh, bright hours;
And when the moon was high, the need was great,
I would not heed; now, night dews chill the flowers;
Ah me—how late!

What have I lost?
What pleasures purchased, and at what a cost?
Make answer, soul of mine. Hark! can it be
The vineyard gate swings open, free and wide,
And the Master is calling still to me,
At eventide?

Weak, tremblingly,—
Yet Thou didst call me. So I come to thee,
So late for service, and so stained with sin;
Yet now I lift my puny hands, and cry,
"If still a lifelong idler may come in,
Lord, here am I!"

—Sel. by E. I. Crouse.

TRUTH THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTIC OF CHRISTIANITY.

The question, "What is true?" ought to stand on the threshhold of every religious inquiry. If the question, "What is true?" be asked only in the second place, it is likely to receive a very different answer from what it would if it had been asked in the first place. That which is true and right loses, incalculably, its beneficial influence on the mind, when received on any ground other than because it is true and right.

Truth is, in such an especial manner, the characteristic of the religion of Christ, that, in our Lord's reply to Pilate, he points it out as defining the very nature of his kingdom, of his objects, and his claims: "For this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." And on other occasions, asserting his claims, he says, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "When the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth." "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth." Thus, too, the apostles repeatedly use the words "truth" and "faith" to designate the Christian religion. It is truth resting on evidence, requiring faith in it, on the ground of its truth.

The Christian religion made its appearance as the common disturber of the peace of the world, because it put an end to the tranquil influence of custom, authority, credulity, sentiment, and imagination; forced men upon the disagreeable task of examining evidence, searching records, and proving all things; and arrayed, in opposite opinions, children against their parents, subjects against their princes, and the people against the priest.

Christianity, contrasted with the Jewish system of emblems, is truth in the sense of reality, as substance is opposed to shadows; and, contrasted with the heathen mythology, is truth as opposed to falsehood. "The truth as it is in Jesus" was to supersede the heathen idolatry, by destroying it; and "the law and the prophets," not by destroying, indeed, but by fulfilling them.

The heathen mythology not only was not true, but was not even supported as true; it not only deserved no faith, but it demanded none. The very pretension to truth—the very demand of faith—were characteristic distinctions of Christianity.

To believe in Christianity, without knowing why we believe it, is not Christian faith, but blind credulity. The word knowledge, strictly employed, implies three things, viz., truth, proof, and conviction.

To say that there is the more virtue in Christian faith the less it is founded on evidence, is to forget that the Lord Jesus himself—he who "taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes"—he who said not, as the prophets of old, men sent from God, "Thus saith the Lord," but, as Immanuel, God dwelling with his people, "I say unto you"—appealed to his works as bearing witness of him, and claimed the divine "power to forgive sins" on the ground that he had the no less divine power to bid the palsied cripple "take up his bed and walk."

The apostles come forward rather in the character of witnesses than as authoritative guides; and they work miracles and appeal to Scripture, not so much for the purpose of establishing their own right to deliver doctrines, as to prove the doctrines which they teach. And as with their first teaching, so also is it with the subsequent propagation of their religion. Though the authors of the gospel wrote, under the extraordinary superintendence of the Holy Spirit, those four distinct statements of evidence of matters of fact, yet it is not as the organs of inspiration they come forward. Their language is not, "Thus saith the Lord;" but, "He that saw it bare record." These things were "delivered unto us by those who, from the beginning, were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word." They have so shaped their writings as to avoid what the method of authority would require, and force forward what the method of examination would demand; and have thus shown pretty clearly their intention that the religion which they preached upon the ground of evidence, should be maintained and propagated also upon the same ground. "These things," says the Evangelist John, speaking of Christ's miracles wrought in the presence of his disciples, "were written that ye might believe . . . and believing, that ye might have life through his name."

It has been said by a modern writer, that "the poor, ignorant, uninstructed peasant who says, 'I believe my religion because I have been told so by those who are wiser and better than myself: my parents told me so, and the clergyman of the parish told me so,' comes nearest to the answer of the gospel"—to that answer which the apostle Peter directs us to be ready to give "to every one that asketh a reason for the hope that is in us." And yet it is manifest this answer could have been given, when the gospel was first preached, by no Christian; but might be, and was, given by every one of his pagan neighbors.

This is to represent the apostles of Christ as saying to those of whom they would make converts, "Let every succeeding generation receive quietly the religion handed down by its fathers, but let this generation act otherwise. Take up novelty for this once to oblige us, and ever after adhere to antiquity."

He who professes adherence to the national religion of England, on the ground that "it is the religion of his fathers," forgets, as do the hearers who applaud the sentiment, that, on this principle, the worship of Thor and Woden would claim precedence.

In these our days, there are an immense number of persons who, professing faith in the gospel, and zeal for its support, yet assure us that inquiries into its evidences are likely to lead to infidelity. What would such a person say of some professed friend coming forward as his advocate, and saying, "My friend here, is a veracious and worthy man, and there is no foundation for any of the charges brought against him; and his integrity is fully believed in by persons who thoroughly trust him, and who have never thought of reasoning or inquiring about his character at all; but, of all things, do not make any investigation, for the more you inquire and examine, the less likely most people will be to believe in his integrity!" Surely a man so defended would exclaim, "Deliver me from my friends, and I fear not my enemies."

Those who boldly stand out and court inquiry, and bring forward cogent reasons for their conviction, are reproached, by a certain modern writer, with infirm faith and timidity. Timidity, of all things! One is reminded of the story of some Indian savages serving as allies to the British in America, who, when the allied force was attacked by the enemy, ran and took shelter in the woods, while the British troops stood firm under a heavy fire, and repulsed the assailants. It was expected that their Indian friends would have been full of admiration at this display of superior valor; but, on the contrary, their interpretation of it was that the British soldiers were such cowards that they were too much frightened to run away. Almost every chapter of the New Testament convicts the Lord Jesus and his followers of that "timidity," in appealing to the evidence of miracles and prophecies, which is censured and derided.

The danger of decrying all appeal to evidence is not confined to a mere want of adequate evidence of the truth of the Christian religion, but something distinct from, and beyond this; the danger, namely, of a contrary presumption arising. It is not merely that men, to whom sufficient evidence has not been furnished, will be likely, themselves, to reject what has been proved to them; but that men of all classes—the learned as well as the unlearned—will be likely to regard it as a positive evidence against the religion, that it professes to be calculated for mankind in general, and designed to claim their rational belief, while its defenders themselves confess that the object cannot be accomplished.

To labor to prove the truth is to imply the possibility of doubt, and to challenge inquiry; therefore an appeal to truth, as resting on evidence, is the characteristic of a true religion, which alone can satisfy doubts, or stand the test of inquiry.

The kingdom of truth the Lord came to establish, is a kingdom whose subjects should have been admitted as such, in consequence of their being "of the truth;" that is, not mere adherents of truth by accident, but votaries of truth. "Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice."

He only is "of the truth" who, with reverential love, is seeking in candor and simplicity to learn God's truth, and, in earnest self-devotion, to obey it at all seeming hazards, after the example of Him who "came into the world to bear witness unto the truth."—Archbishop Whately, in Rainbow.

THE ART OF WINNING SOULS.

Let no one suppose at the outset that it is going to be easy work. You may, indeed, be hopeful as to results, you may even be sure of success directly or indirectly; but the road to success may prove anything but smooth.

There is, in the first place, no set way of approaching people. There are a thousand different avenues to as many different hearts. These avenues are crooked or straight, broad or narrow, winding in and out with many a strange, intricate turn; in a word, they vary according to the character of the individual. Just how to make the first approach is an all-important step. A little manœuvre may accomplish the whole thing, or it may be that some study will be required.

The idea of putting directly and abruptly to all people alike the question of their souls' salvation is neither practicable nor wise. There are times when one may be in a peculiar mood, bristling with irritation, harassed with care, divided between many interests and anxieties. All these things combined will, for a time, render them unfit for calm reasoning, for responsible action. And perhaps just one reason why so many fall off so soon after professed conversion is, that they have been suddenly appealed to and exhorted at such unfortunate moments, thus forcing the question when the soil was not ready to receive it.

A single word, look, or touch, accompanied by prayer, may lead to the conversion of a soul, while in other cases a whole system of strategy may have to be employed.

A tract distributor was once cautioned against a certain woman on her district, who was said to be unapproachable on the subject of religion. The visitor's feet may have been somewhat heavy, but her heart beat freely as she entered the house of the godless one.

Sure enough she encountered a hard, bitter woman, who resolutely set herself against all appeal.

For some time the case seemed hopeless, the subject only replying in short words to all conversation. At last, as the tract distributor, in her growing despair, lifted her heart to God, at the same moment she raised her eyes and saw, hanging upon the wall, a portrait of the woman's dead brother. It was anything but a work of art, but fortunately a pair of good dark eyes were there to be commented upon. Very adroitly was the thing managed. The dark eyes of the woman filled with tears. She began to speak of her dead, and then the visitor spoke of like losses which she had sustained. Then the wedge was thrust in; gently and cautiously religion was mentioned, as the only thing upon which one could rely in time of all trouble.

The hardened woman admitted this. The ice was melted; the waters began to flow. The troubled soul promised to attend church, and did, for the first time, in many years, find her way to the house of God.

Lay down no rules for your work; go freighted with the Holy Spirit, and speak as you shall be moved, and be sure of your own entire consecration, and keep up constant supplies of grace. No barren heart has anything to give to another; it is only when its banks overflow that it will bless the land as a fruitful harvest.—Christian at Work.

EFFECTS OF PREACHING HOLINESS.

There are those who think that the subject of holiness should not be made a common theme in the church; that it should be used very much as you do your Sunday clothes; or, as a kind of a religious sweetmeat, on very rare occasions, and very sparingly at that. Some preachers have this notion, and hence very rarely present the doctrine in definite terms. But after bestowing much thought upon the subject, and having considerable opportunity for observation, I have come to the conclusion that holiness should be made a frequent theme in pulpit discourses, and be kept almost constantly before the church in the prayer and class meetings. The effects of such a course are very salutary. Earnest sermons on holiness set persons thinking. There are many in the churches who never think much. They come and go from the house of God very much as a door swings on its hinges, without thought or reflection. They expect to hear the same laudations of religion in general, the same rhapsodies about heaven, the same hints about morality and fair dealing, and to see the same pictures of hell. So they sit down under the sermon and dream, with eyes open or shut, as the case may be, but rarely, truly think. Such are a kind of religious machines, very much like the praying machines in India, that are turned with cranks.

But let a man get up with his soul flaming with perfect love, and tell these thoughtless dreamers that they must be holy, must be perfect, must be entirely sanctified, and they will do more than dream—they will think. Perhaps they will think this a new, and a false doctrine; and the preacher a fool, a fanatic, or a hobby rider. Well, let them think on. Thinking in this way will not harm them so much as dreaming. And they will have better thoughts after awhile. It is very hard for any one to think long on the above line, with the word of God so explicit on the subject of holiness. They will think, after awhile, that they had better get down on their knees and draw a little nearer to God. I would not like to have a stagnant pool of water before my door, turning green, and exhaling miasma every hour. Neither would I have a puddle of thoughtless souls before my pulpit. God has sent me to them to make them think.

Preaching holiness shows dead souls their true state. A dwarf may think himself quite a man until measured by the standard of a man. I have met with many in my various fields of labor, who had never dreamed how lean and poor their souls were, until they saw the standard of perfection raised before them. In the light of that great doctrine, they saw they were not even justified. Some have great fear that under the preaching of holiness, persons that have fallen from the state of justification will become interested in the subject of entire sanctification, and in seeking it will regain their justified state, but think themselves sanctified. I do not think this can be. An unconsecrated man cannot, while praying for purity, receive pardon, and yet think himself purified. God does not deal in that way. The Holy Ghost leads the sincere seeker not into a lie, but into "all truth." If an unconverted soul should sincerely seek entire sanctification, the Holy Ghost would soon show him his true condition. And this is in accordance with my observation, at least. I have seen many backslidden souls aroused under the preaching of this doctrine, but they first went to work to regain their justification, and then sought perfect love. The cleaner the mirror, the more perfect the reflection. Let dead professors look into the doctrine of perfect holiness, and they will start at their own dirty faces.

Preach this doctrine sweetly, with your own example to recommend it, and it will do much to prevent backsliding. A great deal of paper has been used in showing how to prevent backsliding in the —— church. Much philosophy has been employed in determining the cause. But the standard of holiness kindly and wisely set up will, no doubt, in most churches, lead the people on so rapidly that they will not go back. Of course all young converts are told that they must "go on unto perfection," "grow in grace," "add to their faith virtue," etc., but then they are led to suppose that all this contemplates a slow and gradual work, that is to be accomplished very much as apple-trees grow; they are not made to understand that it is not only their privilege, but their duty, to get down on their knees at once and pray and believe for immediate and instantaneous sanctification. Hence they do not get under concern to have the work done speedily; and as we are prone to neglect what we feel there is no hurry about, so the "going on" is neglected, and an imperceptible going back becomes the order of the day, so that in a few months the pastor wakes up to the painful fact that his church is fearfully backslidden.

"How are you getting along in your church?" said a minister not long since to a layman in the town of F——, N. J. "O, we are in a very low state; only one class meets, and very few attend that," was the answer. "But," said the minister, "did you not have a revival last winter?" "Yes." I do not suppose that the above church has had one clear sermon on the subject of holiness, as taught in the Bible, for years.

Let me speak of another church. Its present pastor, when appointed to it last spring, found it yet warm from the fires of a revival effort just closed. A number of young men and women, with a few more advanced in life, had just been brought into the church. They were fervent in their first love. The new pastor felt it to be a critical period in the history of the church. He saw these young converts shedding tears as they bade adieu to the minister under whom they were brought to Jesus. How easily under a strange pastor, and in the reaction that commonly follows the overwork of a revival, might these backslide and the whole church drop into a worse state than before! The new minister felt this; but he looked to God, asked for light and love, and prayerfully set up the standard of holiness, told the young converts and all the other members that they might attain to it—not at some indefinite time in the future, but at once—now, now, NOW, was the word. God prospered him in this work, and these young christians, instead of their glorying over the fact of their conversion, were influenced to press on toward the point of purity. Some have already reached that onward stage of experience, and others are nearing it. Old members, too, who have been a good while down in the deep pits of formality, are evincing some desire to get up on the highway of holiness, that they may not be left too far behind by these young racers. A young converts' prayer-meeting was established during the revival last winter; but though such meetings are often very short-lived, yet this meeting is more largely attended, and much more spiritual and interesting, than at first. God is now visiting said church with revival influences, many more having been added thereto, while others are now seeking the Lord.

It is hardly possible for any considerable part of a church to backslide if the doctrine of holiness is frequently, faithfully and lovingly preached, especially if efforts are at the same time made in prayer and class-meetings, and during pastoral visits, to lead souls into the blessing. Just as much attention should be bestowed in directing him who is seeking purity, as guiding those who may be asking pardon. Preaching holiness! It is the great need of the church. Can the crops mature without the latter rain or harvest sun? So neither will many young converts "go on unto perfection" without the preaching of holiness. Indefinite talk about "going on," and "growing in grace," is only as clouds without water, or as the moon without the sun. Show the people purity as the mark, and that to "grow in grace" is to get down on the knees and pray right up to it. May God help the leaders of the people to lead them forward, and not round and round in a circle, to glory over their conversion, until they die in the wilderness and never get over into the land of perfect love. Other salutary effects follow the preaching of holiness, but I have not room to name them now.—Earnest Christian.

TO MRS. H. E. M.

C. H. SWEET.

Alas! dear Amy sleeps—
Her varied life is o'er;
No more she prays—no more she weeps—
No longer toils up life's rude steeps,
Nor counts the muses more.

As the untimely bloom
Of spring flowers soon doth fade;
So early in the silent tomb,
Where nought can light or cheer the gloom,
Your darling one was laid.

She now reclines full low,
'Mid darkness, death and gloom;
But soon she will be freed we know,
And her you loved and valued so,
Will triumph o'er the tomb.

Steep Falls, Me

"THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL."

You, gentlemen, who hold to the contrary, go where night is the blackest, and poor weary hearts are slowly breaking under their weight of woe. Tell them you have joyous news. Tell them that, for all this bitter desolation, your palm is filled with gold. Tell the smitten victims of the household, that out of their mouths, off their backs, and from their blighted fields, you and your chosen instruments have gathered a harvest of gold. Tell the pale, wasting wife and mother, that you have a paltry percentage of all that was noble in the husband or kind in the father, in yellow gold. Tell the drunkard as he dreams, perchance, that he can yet beat back the red billows which toss and consume him, that for his poor body's death and soul's damnation you have gold. Stand at the threshold of the poor-house, and mockingly taunt the squalid, the deformed, and the idiotic, with the news that, out of all their ruin, you gathered gold.

Stand by the prison door, and as the remorseless hinge shrieks after the victims it entombs; peer through the grating, and cheer the living dead with the news that you sold them to crime and infamy for gold. Hail shelterless orphanage in the streets, and tell them that you sold them to be crucified, and robbed them of bread, education, parents and home for gold. Tell the murderer that you made him a murderer for gold. Stand by the new graves of the last twelve months, and whisper to the fifty thousand sleepers—victims of your "regulated" traffic—that you slew them for gold. Enter the vestibule of perdition, and with Bible in hand read that no drunkard can inherit eternal life; and as the flitting ghosts of uncounted thousands charge you with their deep damnation, comfort them with the assurance that you did it for gold. Follow your slaughtered hosts to the judgment, and when He who called the first fratricide to account shall call for your brother, answer that you slew him for gold! "For gold!" the angels shall echo and weep. "For gold!" shall mocking devils catch up the cry, and taunt earth that "in all hell there is nothing so damnably unrighteous as this system of financiering on earth, and in a Christian land."—Newark American.

AUTHENTICITY OF THE GOSPELS.

The Rev. Geo. B. Cheever of New York, in a recent sermon, uttered the following remarks on the authenticity of the Gospels: "No invalidation of the testimony of the Gospels has ever yet been accomplished; but men have attempted it unsuccessfully a thousand times. They have been struggling for centuries to conquer some post of absolute contradiction, but they cannot do it. It is just a war, renewed generation after generation, to get possession of Gibraltar; and now and then a fishing smack belonging to the fortress is run down and sunk, or possibly a frigate is burned in the harbor, or an invading party succeeds for a short time in getting a lodgment on the mole. But the rock remains under England's government, and not one of its guns is silenced, nor a street nor a house captured, nor even a garden disturbed. Even so does our Christianity hold every inch of ground, and every coign and vantage of defence that it had when Christ delivered it to Peter, John and Paul, and the other disciples, for the conquest of the world in truth and love.

So many minds have been employed with microscopic acuteness, diligence and accuracy upon the Gospels, separate and in unison, and so many of the apparent discrepancies disappear on a patient and minute investigation, that the remnant presents no more real difficulty than the unresolved or unanalyzed nebulæ of the starry universe. But even if there were many, so long as they leave the character of Christ and his reasonings untouched in their supernatural simplicity and majesty, and the great truths that he came to reveal unquestioned, the confined perplexities would be so immeasurably outweighed by the overwhelming pressure of realities, that they can no more be admitted as a rational ground of doubt or hesitation than the discovered spots in the sun can be admitted as grounds for denying the divineness of the sun's light. They cannot be taken as legitimate seeds of unbelief, or admitted as contrary witnesses. Like what is called in science the 'parallax of assymptotes,' growing out of and necessitated by the nature of truths to be recorded, they are really greater proofs of the absoluteness of those truths. Therefore, the admitted variations in the Gospel narratives are the necessary and only absolute method of coming to the perfect truth. There is a balance and average of different views, owing at once to the myriad-sidedness of the object viewed, and the inevitable single-sidedness of each of the observers. Each one at the circumference cannot possibly look along the same radius to the centre. And there may be different worlds in the field of vision. No one witness could tell all the things concerning Christ. The four together could not; nor could they tell exactly the same; but the comparison and balancing of the whole makes up an exact and full-orbed reality.

LETTER FROM BRO. J. G. ORCHARD.

Little ones of the household of our blessed Father:—Permit me, as a brother, who is deprived of the society of any who are of a kindred faith, and who is pulling hard against the current of a heartless and formal world, to delicately tender a weak and humble brother's sincere and heartfelt expressions of gratitude to the writers of those dear letters of "correspondence" published from week to week in our dear Crisis. O what blessed seasons of holy joy and gladness are afforded me by their weekly perusal! And I am always happy in the anticipation of its arrival, after wending its way through the long and meandering journey from Boston, Mass., to Salem, Oregon.

It fills my heart with unutterable joy to tell you that the blessed Lord is still perfecting his heavenly work of love and peace in my poor sin-sick heart. What a help and precious feast of good things are the well-filled columns of the dear Crisis to my hungering soul! Dear Brn. and Srs., do continue to write those rich, blessed letters of "experience" and "correspondence," for they are truly "meat in due season," being filled with so much comforting and strengthening edification; and many is the hungry soul that is fed thereby. Insomuch as we are warned of the many and wily devices of the tempter, and that he "as a roaring lion goeth about" through the wilderness of sin, "seeking whom he may devour"; and that his course is not limited to any stated line or mode of action, but is always at hand, and ever ready with the utmost feasibleness possible to catch the weary traveler at the most unguarded point of his journey, and to ensnare and "deceive if it were possible the very elect"; therefore none are exempt from his unwearied efforts at deception and delusion, even transforming himself at times "into an angel of light" for the purpose of carrying on his pernicious work of deceit.

Therefore, beloved ones, let us diligently heed this solemn exhortation, for it is most especially adapted to these perilous times in which we live; let us take home every word to our hearts, and study well their import: "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." 1 Cor. 15:58.

"I love to wait, and watch, and pray,
And trust his living word;
And feel the coming of that day
No longer is deferred."

O that the Lord would raise up more willing laborers, and send them out to this remote corner of his vineyard; for there is much good to be done here. That happy trio, Bro. and Sr. Reed and Bro. Wilson, who traveled through our State last year scattering the good seed, have left a wake behind them that is diffusing far and wide; and the truth, I am told, wherever it has been proclaimed, is fast disseminating itself into the minds of many old professors who are unbiassed in principles; and many heretofore non-professors are eager to hear the good tidings. Each one of us so earnestly reecho the plaintive Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," that it is impossible but that some help should be extended.

Could not the Missionary Board do something for us in this direction, and at least influence one worthy laborer to come and make his home among us? I am quite sure he would meet with many warm and open hearts and willing hands, to help and encourage in building up the gospel faith and primary doctrines of the church.

In closing, let me exhort all to "be not weary." The bright, eternal morning will soon be here.

"E'en now the distant rays appear,
To chase the gloom of night;
The Sun of Righteousness is near,
And terrors take their flight."

"May the God of peace sanctify you wholly," both reader and writer, is the sincere prayer of an humble brother in Christ; so that we may each be prepared for the dawning of that eternal day. Amen.

Salem, Oregon, May 23d.

"THE TIME IS SHORT."—1 Cor. 7:29.

W. F. FAHNESTOCK.

Do we realize it as we should? Are we dead unto the world, and alive unto Christ? Are we living out our faith, being "living epistles, seen and read of all men"? Are we shining lights, holding forth the word of truth; or are we hiding our light under a bushel? Do we heed the apostle's injunction—"they that have wives be as though they had none; they that buy as though they possessed not"? "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made unto God." Phil. 4:5, 6. "Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant"; "and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. . . . . Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." 1 Pet. 5:4-8. "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." "Rejoice in the Lord alway; and again I say, Rejoice" (Phil. 4:4); "for his loving kindness and tender mercies are over all his works." Lift up your heads, ye who are depressed and downcast, for your redemption draweth nigh. In hope of eternal life.

CONSECRATION.

The meaning of the word is suggestive. It is the act of setting apart a person or thing to the service of God. It does not give to God any right to person or thing thus set apart, which he did not always possess. It is simply a relinquishment on our part of a usurped right to that which is consecrated, and a devout acknowledgment that it belongs wholly to God, and is to be used in his service.

The consecration of the soul is a voluntary act. It springs from a heart conviction of the sin of prostituting the soul's activities to the service of Satan, and the sole and indisputable right which God has to use all its energies for his own glory. Its language is—"I am not my own, I am bought with a price; I, therefore, give myself to God to worship him in my body and spirit which are his." It involves a complete surrender of self to God. Our thoughts are no longer our own. They are consecrated to sacred uses. No evil imagination must taint them. No corrupt desires must lead them away from purity and holiness. We must employ them for God's glory—send them forth on tours of exploration throughout God's work, to note and reverence his displays of wisdom, goodness and power; occupy them with sacred themes begotten by the story of the cross, and in devising Christlike schemes of beneficence and love. Our affections, loosed from their sinful hold on earth, must fix themselves on things above where Christ sitteth. On all our activities must be written in letters seen and read by all men, "For Christ—consecrated."

The church requires, on the part of her members, a purer consecration, a firmer hold on Jesus, a closer imitation of his character. The powers of darkness were never more strong, active and effective than now. Their human agents are single-hearted, earnest, and devoted. They lose no opportunity to entrap and ruin souls. "They sleep not except they have done mischief; and their sleep is taken away unless they cause some to fall. They devise mischief upon their bed. They are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. They devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds. When the morning is light they practice it, because it is in the power of their hands."

Such is the earnestness of the wicked. They are wholly consecrated to the service of their master, and nothing turns them from their fixed purpose to do evil. Christians are battling daily with these determined foes of God and man, and their success depends on their entire consecration to the service of their Divine leader. There is no place for double-mindedness in this conflict. Earnestness, perseverance, determination, love for Jesus and his salvation, and a martyr spirit, must characterize his followers, else they will never subdue the world.—Methodist Recorder.

HOME AND HEALTH.

MUSCULAR STRENGTH.

Stimulation always weakens muscular power, as has been amply demonstrated by extensive experimentation of some of the most eminent savans of Europe. In view of this fact, the conclusion is inevitable that animal food must be prejudicial to the attainment of the highest degree of physical development, since we have already shown that it is stimulating in its character.

Not only is this true in theory, but the principle is well sustained by facts. Among the lower animals we find the strongest individuals are of the vegetable-eating class. We hardly need mention the enormous strength of the elephant, the rhinoceros, the horse, the ox and other animals of like character. The whole class of carnivorous animals does not furnish so fleet an animal as the reindeer, nor so graceful and agile a one as the gazelle.

What is true concerning the lower animals is found to be equally true with man. The early Grecians, especially the noble Spartans, subsisted almost entirely upon the fruits of the earth, as did also the Persians during the period of their greatest strength and prosperity, as may be seen from the following paragraph respecting the latter people from Rollin's Ancient History:—

"The only food allowed either the children or the young men was bread, cresses, and water, for their design was to accustom them early to temperance and sobriety; besides, they considered that a plain, frugal diet, without any mixture of sauces or ragouts, would strengthen the body, and lay such a foundation of health as would enable them to undergo the fatigues and hardships of war to a good old age."

Success in war at the time when the Persians and Grecians were prominent actors in the arena of political strife depended almost entirely upon personal strength and prowess, and not so much upon strategy and ingenuity as at the present day. When we find these nations arising from very small and obscure beginnings, and successively becoming masters of the world, we cannot question their superiority over their enemies in the physical development necessary to enable them to compete successfully with all opposition. And in view of the facts already cited, who can doubt that the frugal diet to which they restricted themselves was the principal agent in securing to them the hardihood and bodily vigor which they possessed.

Another fact which is strikingly confirmatory of this view is the well-authenticated statement of historians that, as the Persians became prosperous and masters of the whole world, they allowed themselves to depart from their simple mode of life, especially in respect to diet. As the result, they soon began to decline in strength, and their armies were no longer able to withstand the attacks of the more frugal but hardy Grecians. The Grecians, in turn, after a time also became addicted to the use of animal food, and so became enervated, and in time were forced to give place to another and more hardy nation. We would not presume to say that the use of animal food was the only cause which operated to bring about the decline and final overthrow of each of the nations mentioned, but we do not hesitate to claim that it was one of the chief causes which, acting both directly and indirectly, served to bring about that result.

Nearly all the nations of modern Europe subsist almost entirely upon vegetable food. At least such is the case with the laboring classes—those who constitute the bone and sinew of any nation. The lower classes of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Poland, Russia, Germany, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Switzerland, Scotland, and Ireland, eat very little meat, frequently tasting it not more than once a week; yet when not addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, a more hardy, robust set of people cannot be found. The inhabitants of Greece, who live upon coarse bread made from unbolted meal, are remarkably powerful and agile. In truth, from two-thirds to three-fourths of the whole human race have always subsisted upon vegetable food, and yet when they have been well supplied, and other habits have been approximately correct, they have been well sustained.—J. H. KELLOGG, M. D., in Health Reformer.

HOURS FOR RECREATION.—No one should work or study hard within half an hour of a regular meal. The time for profitable and efficient study is in the early part of the day, certainly before noon, because sleep is the rest of the brain; and while it is thus resting, nature is depositing new particles upon which it is to feed the next day. To engage in severe study in the after part of the day leads to an injurious exhaustion, over straining of the brain, and is as unwise as for a man to engage in hard work at sundown, when the strength of the body has already been used up in the ordinary occupations. The best time for recreation, as to body or brain, is the after-part of the day, when the main business of life has been attended to; thus resting the working faculties, while exercising those which have been idle; thus giving occupation each day for the whole man.—Ex.

SOMETHING FOR CHILDREN TO DO.

The most lasting joys we can confer on children are those which, under most circumstances, they are able to provide for themselves. These most obviously spring from a cultivated and practiced ingenuity. I am certain that a child's sense of pleasure is vastly increased by the knowledge, and in the hope, that whatever he is employed upon is is subservient to some good end. Give a boy a handful of tools, and tell him to go and amuse himself with them, and he will not know what to be about. But tell the same boy that you, his mother, are sadly inconvenienced for the want of a little box to keep some article in; describe minutely the shape it is to be, and tell him that you would be really pleased if he could manage to make such a thing for you, and he will set to work in real earnest to carry out your wishes. The result may possibly be such a production as was never seen before, unfit for any imaginable purpose, but still it must be accepted as the best piece of workmanship. From such awkward beginings, and under the influence of such encouragement as an intelligent mother would bestow, the bungler might develop into an amateur mechanic of the highest order.

Again, with little girls. Send them to fetch and carry, to do this and that about a house, and they will regard their employment as irksome; but ask them to help their mamma in household affairs; tell them that there is no one else to whom she wishes to trust her keys, and confide the care of pets and flowers, and instantly a monotonous drudgery becomes invested with a responsibility which is truly enjoyable. Directed in the right channel, the amusement of children may not only render themselves, but all around them, hereafter happy.—Ex.

JUST FOR FUN.

In a country town, many years ago, some children were met for a social evening at an old farm-house, and while the sport was at its height, a little boy thought it would be funny to draw a chair out from under a little girl, and let her sit down on the floor.

He watched his opportunity, and made the attempt; but the little girl seeing what he was doing, jumped back into the chair, and striking her spine upon one of its projections, broke her back. For seven years, from fourteen to twenty-one, she lay upon her bed, and during all that time was carried from her chamber to the parlor but once.

Thirty years have passed; I have just returned from a visit to her sick chamber. Thirty years of disability and pain as the consequence of a thoughtless deed by a little boy. A few strangers minister to her daily wants, without whose aid she would be sent to the poor-house, or home for the wretched and homeless poor.

Terrible consequences to follow a thoughtless act. Let boys be careful. Let all remember that consequences walk hand in hand with every deed, and that for all our deeds, God will bring us into judgment.—Christian Era.

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.—A gentleman relates that many years ago he was on a visit to the Isle of Man, and, during his walks, he strolled into the quiet churchyard, where repose the bodies of many faithful and humble christians. Near a grave in a corner of the churchyard, he noticed a lady with a little girl (the latter about twelve years of age), to whom she was relating the story of the "Dairyman's Daughter," whose remains lay beneath their feet. As the lady proceeded with the narrative, he observed the little girl lift up her eyes filled with tears, and heard her say that she would try and be as good as the Dairyman's Daughter had been. After planting a beautiful lily on the grave, they walked slowly away. The gentleman, upon making inquiry, found that the lady was the Duchess of Kent, and the little girl her daughter. The latter is now Queen of England.

CHILDREN, and especially those of consumptive parents, or in whose family veins, in whatever branch, the consumptive taint is sure to run, should be early and perpetually guarded against stooping or getting contracted chests. They should be trained to the habit of full, deep breathing, of carrying their persons erect, of expanding their lungs and keeping their chests large and full. All this can be done with any child by proper care and attention on the part of its parents.

"HOW LONG?"

J. R. LLOYD.

Sad sorrow waits with tearful eyes
  To see her end draw near,
Weary with pain and grief and sighs,
  And agony and fear.

And sin, too, waits with hateful face,
  And bent with loads of shame;
The ransomed of a tainted race
  Shall trample down her name.

Pale death, too, waits with ghastly smile,
  To yield his long-kept prey;
From ocean depths and caverns vile,
  They'll come at break of day.

Love waits to wipe the tearful eyes,
  To soothe the anguished heart;
To change to peace these weary sighs,
  And bid all woe depart.

Joy waits a glorious song to raise,
  To shout the victory won;
To glorify with ceaseless praise
  God's well-beloved Son.

Eternal truth has waited long,
  Hidden beneath the dust;
Mighty and clear will be her song,
  For triumph soon she must.

Then come, O Christ, for thou art Love,
  Joy springs at thy command;
And peace, with thee, like holy dove
  Shall visit every land.

Westfield, Mass.

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING AND MILLENNIAL REIGN THE TRUE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS.

With no propriety can the closing utterings of Haggai be applied solely to the governor of Judah: "Speak to Zerrubabel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth, and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen, and I will overthrow the chariots. In that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, will I take thee, O Zerrubbabel, the son of Shealtiel, saith the Lord, and will make thee as a signet: for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord of hosts." Haggai 2: 21-23.

The type must here lose itself in the antitype; the threefold overthrowing here is the threefold overturning of Ezekiel 21: 27, which the dispensation in which we live must witness (and is it not indeed witnessing its commencement in the present unparalleled upheaving of nations?), "until He comes whose right it is"—whose right it will be to enter in due time on "a kingdom which shall never be destroyed;" not to be constituted by the peaceful process of the submission of nations evangelized under a preached gospel; but a kingdom founded on the ruin of earthly kingdoms, the governmental arrangements of which, being in direct antagonism thereto, are now ripe for judgment, to be broken in pieces and consumed by the "Stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which shall stand forever." Let Joel 3, be contrasted with Isa. 2. "The word that Isaiah saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and all nations shall flow unto it. And the Lord shall judge among the nations, and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

This glorious promise has never been realized, neither is its fulfillment to be effected in the present Gentile dispensation. "The preaching of the cross" for more than eighteen centuries, while it has "visited the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name" (Acts 15: 14), has left outside the church of God a gospel-hardened or a gospel-rejecting Christendom as its result, more the theatre of war than ever. In Europe every nation is putting forth its energies to prepare for an apprehended coming struggle. Anything approximating to the blissful state of things here foretold, is a thought far from the mind of the most cursory observer of the course of events. Instead of men learning war no more, it is the great science of the age. The high pressure with which the brains of men bear on the resources of nature, to fill earth's armory with newly-invented instruments for the destruction of human life, rather induces an expectation of the near advent of the epoch when the converse of Isaiah's prophecy shall, according to Joel, be fulfilled: "Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears."

The "shaking of the heavens and the earth" in Haggai is that indicated by Joel; when in the day of the Lord's proclamation of war among the Gentiles, "mighty men" shall be bid to "wake up," and "men of war to draw near;" when "the sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining," expounded by our Lord to be immediately at the tribulation of the days of the lightning-coming of the Son of man. Matt. 24: 27; Haggai 3. "For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Yet once it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land: and I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come (a coming which, being associated with what is yet future, must itself be future), and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of Hosts; the glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former." Haggai 2: 6, 7, 9.

In the generally received acceptation of the term, Christ was not the desire of all nations before his first coming. But it may be interesting and instructive to evolve from actual human experience, in the light of Scripture, in what sense Christ may be said to be the desire of all nations. Together with the groan, which even the patient expectancy of a redeemed body is unable to stifle; we read of an intelligent groaning and travailing in animate and inanimate nature, which witnesses to the fact of a sin-stricken, curse-bearing creation—"The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now;" and so it will be throughout the animal and vegetable departments, until the period of Christ's second coming and reign during the millennium, the day of the Messiah's rule over the redeemed and renovated world, which shall see the wolf, the lion, and the bear laying aside their savage propensities, and accompanying the lamb, the calf, and the cow, while "the sucking child shall play on the hole of the" then stingless "asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the den" of the harmless "cockatrice, no hurting, no destroying in all God's holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." "Instead of the thorn shall then come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar the myrtle tree." "The cedar tree shall be planted in the wilderness, the shittah tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree;" and then shall men "see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of Jehovah hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it." Then, before the Lord of the whole earth, shall cease the groan of creation; and, in the rapture of the raised dead and the translated living, shall cease the groans of the once hoping, waiting church of God.

But, in addition to this twofold groaning, earth's bosom may be said to heave with a groan which speaks of utter failure in all social and governmental effort to reach that ultimatum of good which man in his wisdom, and, it may be added, in his benevolence, would secure for his fellow. Republican, despotic, constitutional forms of government have essayed their best, but, weighed in the balance, they have been found wanting; and still outstanding and unattained is the goal which they fain would reach; hopes disappointed, and desires fulfilled, leaving, among the various nations of earth under their respective sway, an aching void, and the longing yearning of unsatisfied hearts, which find expression in one universal cry—"Who will show us any good?"

America, assuredly, cannot point to its vaunted Republic to give the needed answer. Monarchical Italy, freed from the pressure of the heel of Bourbon bigotry, notwithstanding all its new-born liberty and unification, cannot supply the answer. Republican France and Constitutional Britain, with their seaboards bristling with ordnance, vieing with each other as to the number and calibre of iron-clads, which at their bidding Vulcan is to transfer to the dominions of Neptune, while war, in either country, is become the great science of the day, and the inventive powers of man are more and more than ever taxed to forge weapons for the wholesale destruction of his fellow—France and England, thus grimly confronting each other across the channel, and bound over, in terrorem, respectively to keep the peace, though the latter boasts of a national prosperity without a parallel on the earth, must still swell the cry of other nations—"Who will show us any good?" if that good is to involve the sitting down of every man under his own vine and under his fig-tree, none making him afraid. Micah 4: 4.

Let commerce, with all its cogent arguments for peace, with all its mighty spell over the self-aggrandising spirit of man, come to the rescue of the failing warrior and statesman. Let Bright, the great apostle of commerce, be heard in his speech at the opening of the New Exchange at Birmingham, giving forth, with all confidence, his prophetic utterings on the certainty of the final triumph of its appeal to self-interest as the strongest motive which can sway the actions of nations, and thus bind them over to keep the peace with each other. He said, "In all Europe the commercial spirit is extending, and producing great and beneficial results. War is much less possible than it used to be; the very greatness of armaments, so provocative of war, has induced the strongest disposition for peace among the nations of the world. Wars of conquest are gone into the past, and peace is seen to be the true interest of nations. On the commercial class depend our hopes for the future of our country; for it is by their intelligence and energy, and their capital, that populations are raised to a high level, darkness and barbarism are driven away, light and civilization enter, war recedes into the past, and peace comes before us, promising to bless the future; and thus, when I am in what I should call my happier mood of thinking, I think that I discover that the world, slowly, it may be, but still sensibly, moves on towards a happier time."

Let us now listen to the summary, if not scornful, mode of dealing with the vaticinations of Mr. Bright by the Times. "Commerce he exalts, glorifies, and deifies; commerce he makes the restorer, the savior, the governor of the world. In his raptured vision, races and states rise and fall by commerce; commerce brings peace, goodness, and happiness; commerce governs the world; is our glorious future; her triumph is at hand; a reign of universal peace is approaching. Whatever the piety of the aspiration, the facts of the case show that commerce is very little security for peace, and has its positive influence for war. Large exports and imports are no sufficient protection against the master of iron-clads and half a million of armed men. The prospects of peace just now are most indifferent; and commercial prosperity is no more a security against war than plate chests are against burglars, or a great balance at the bank against unnecessary suits at law. There is nothing whatever to show that commerce makes people just, considerate, forbearing, forgiving, mutually respectful, or desirous to make real sacrifices for the sake of amity. All Europe has made immense strides in commerce, and the other pursuits of peace; but of late years the wars in America and Europe show what may happen any day without warning, and what may be soon repeated next year, as suddenly, and with more terrible consequences." —Signs of Our Times.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.

BY ADAM CLARKE.

The word "sanctify" has two meanings. 1. It signifies to consecrate, to separate from earth and common use, and to devote or dedicate to God and his service. 2. It signifies to make holy or pure.

Many talk much, and indeed well, of what Christ has done for us; but how little is spoken of what he is to do in us! and yet all that he has done for us is in reference to what he is to do in us. He was incarnated, suffered, died, and rose again from the dead: ascended to heaven, and there appears in the presence of God for us. These were all saving, atoning, and mediating acts for us; that he might reconcile us to God; that he might blot out our sin; that he might purge our consciences from dead works; that he might bind the strong man armed—take away the armor in which he trusted, wash the polluted heart, destroy every foul and abominable desire, all tormenting and unholy tempers; that he might make the heart his throne, fill the soul with his light, power, and life; and, in a word, "destroy the works of the devil." These are done in us; without which we cannot be saved unto eternal life. But these acts done in us are consequent on the acts done for us; for had he not been incarnated, suffered, and died in our stead, we could not receive either pardon or holiness; and did he not cleanse and purify our hearts, we could not enter into the place where all is purity; for the beatific vision is given to them only who are purified from all unrighteousness; for it is written, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Nothing is purified by death;—nothing in the grave; nothing in heaven. The living stones of the temple, like those of that at Jerusalem, are hewn, squared, and cut here, in the church militant, to prepare them to enter into the composition of the church triumphant.

This perfection is the restoration of man to the state of holiness from which he fell, by creating him anew in Christ Jesus, and restoring to him that image and likeness of God which he has lost. A higher meaning than this it cannot have; a lower meaning it must not have. God made man in that degree of perfection which was pleasing to his own infinite wisdom and goodness. Sin defaced this divine image; Jesus came to restore it. Sin must have no triumph; and the Redeemer of mankind must have his glory. But if man be not perfectly saved from all sin, sin does triumph, and Satan exult, because they have done a mischief that Christ either cannot or will not remove. To say he cannot, would be shocking blasphemy against the infinite power and dignity of the great Creator; to say he will not, would be equally such against the infinite benevolence and holiness of his nature. All sin, whether in power, guilt, or defilement, is the work of the devil; and he, Jesus, came to destroy the work of the devil; and as all unrighteousness is sin, so his blood cleanseth from all sin, because it cleanseth from all unrighteousness.

Many stagger at the term perfection in Christianity; because they think that what is implied in it is inconsistent with a state of probation, and savors of pride and presumption; but we must take good heed how we stagger at any word of God; and much more how we deny or fritter away the meaning of any of his sayings, lest he reprove us, and we be found liars before him. But it may be that the term is rejected because it is not understood. Let us examine its import.

The word "perfection," in reference to any person or thing, signifies that such person or thing is complete or finished; that it has nothing redundant, and is in nothing defective. And hence that observation of a learned civilian is at once both correct and illustrative, namely, "We count those things perfect which want nothing requisite for the end whereto they were instituted." And to be perfect often signifies "to be blameless, clear, irreproachable;" and, according to the above definition of Hooker, a man may be said to be perfect who answers the end for which God made him; and as God requires every man to love him with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and his neighbor as himself; then he is a perfect man that does so; he answers the end for which God made him; and this is more evident from the nature of that love which fills his heart; for as love is the principle of obedience, so he that loves his God with all his powers, will obey him with all his powers; and he who loves his neighbor as himself, will not only do no injury to him, but, on the contrary, labor to promote his best interests. Why the doctrine which enjoins such a state of perfection as this, should be dreaded, ridiculed, or despised, is a most strange thing; and the opposition to it can only be from that carnal mind that is enmity to God; "That is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." And had I no other proof that man is fallen from God, his opposition to christian holiness would be to me sufficient.

The whole design of God was to restore man to his image, and raise him from the ruins of his fall; in a word, to make him perfect; to blot out all his sins, purify his soul, and fill him with holiness; so that no unholy temper, evil desire, or impure affection or passion shall either lodge or have any being with him; this, and this only is true religion, or christian perfection; and a less salvation than this would be dishonorable to the sacrifice of Christ, and the operation of the Holy Ghost; and would be as unworthy of the appellation of "Christianity," as it would be of that of "holiness, or perfection." They who ridicule this are scoffers at the word of God; many of them totally irreligious men, sitting in the seat of the scornful. They who deny it, deny the whole scope and design of divine revelation and the mission of Jesus Christ. And they who preach the opposite doctrine are either speculative Antinomians, or pleaders for Baal.

When St. Paul says he "warns every man, and teaches every man in all wisdom, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus," he must mean something. What then is this something? It must mean "that holiness without which none shall see the Lord." Call it by what name we please, it must imply the pardon of all transgression, and the removal of the whole body of sin and death; for this must take place before we can be like him, and see him as he is in the effulgence of his own glory. This fitness, then, to appear before God, and thorough preparation for eternal glory, is what I plead for, pray for, and heartily recommend to all true believers, under the name of christian perfection. Had I a better name, one more energetic, one with a greater plentitude of meaning, one more worthy of the efficacy of the blood that bought our peace, and cleanseth from all unrighteousness, I would gladly adopt and use it. Even the word "perfection" has, in some relations, so many qualifications and abatements that cannot comport with that full and glorious salvation recommended in the gospel, and bought and sealed by the blood of the cross, that I would gladly lay it by, and employ a word more positive and unequivocal in its meaning, and more worthy of the merit of the infinite atonement of Christ, and of the energy of his almighty Spirit; but there is none in our language, which I deplore as an inconvenience and a loss.

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, . . . before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left."—MATT. 25: 31-33.

The traveler in Palestine will often have his attention arrested by its every day familiar customs, as they are the reminders of the parables which our Savior made use of to illustrate his lessons of instruction to his disciples, thus using familiar objects as figures of comparison to impress upon their minds his teaching respecting "the kingdom of heaven";—in short, that the modern method now obtaining in our popular schools, as best adapted for teaching and training the rising generation of youth,—"object teaching,"—was the inspired method which the Divine Mind led the "Master of Israel" to use as most effective for his scholars.

The thirteenth chapter of Matthew's Gospel contains seven parables or likenesses of "the kingdom of heaven"—or of the heavenly order, in contrast to the earthly order of Moses—after this manner: verses 34 and 35 explain why he had thus taught the people—"All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet [David], saying, I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world"—doubtless alluding to the scene in the garden of Eden, when the promise was given, in allegorical language, that "the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head," and that Anointed One should kill the devil's brood. See Ps. 78: 2-7.

But the fitness of these lessons of Jesus may be best illustrated by here relating an incident which happened before our own eyes while sojourners in the Holy City, bringing forcibly to our minds and hearts how very apt was this plan of the Master's teaching. It occurred on this wise. One afternoon, at the sunset hour, just before the time for shutting the gates of the city for the night, we were sauntering along the western slope of Mount Olivet, and approaching the "St. Stephen Gate." Immediately preceding us, however, was one of the many flocks of sheep and goats which graze all day on the hillsides near the city. The shepherd led the way. Our readers may not all be advised of the fact that, in Oriental climes, the sheep and the goats of pastoral flocks are mixed together while out grazing; and that it is only when they are to be folded, at nightfall, that the shepherd separates them, and "divideth his sheep from the goats." Well, when the shepherd before us reached the outer gateway he came to a stand-still, and, facing his approaching flock, he called aloud some names, in Arabic of course, pointing with his hands in opposite directions; and, behold, the leading sheep and the leading goat understood their keeper's "voice," and straightway defiled by his right hand and his left, each followed by its own kind separating from the before mingled flock, and went into their respective folds beyond on either side. The one whole flock was thus separated into two. We were at once vividly reminded of Matt. 25: 31-33.—Rainbow.

TRINE IMMERSION.

H. H. TUCKER.

We are told that trine immersion is the door by which we enter into the fold, and none are saved only those who enter through this way (trine immersion). But Jesus says, "I am the way" (John 14: 6); and he says, "I am the door" (John 10: 9); not trine immersion.

Great stress is laid upon Jesus' words in Matt. 28: 19—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This is the foundation text and to prove that those in the past have received the three dips, being, as W. C. Thurman says, the true baptism, and perfectly apostolic. We are told by him in his paper—"Time Appointed"—dated May 20th, 1874, that the Jews as a nation were all baptized "into Moses"; hence from this the Jews as a nation were recognized as members of the church of God, for, says he, they (the Jews) were baptized in their fathers in the same sense in which Levi paid tithes in Abraham (Heb. 7: 9) many years before he was born, and in this way he proves (in his way) that the three thousand on the day of Pentecost received their third dip. This is baptizing people very young. They must have been baptized before they understood what they were baptized for.

Paul says—"Beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." Col. 2: 8. Now if it be true that those whom John baptized had been baptized in the name of the Father, and he (John) baptized in the name of the Son, and trine immersion is apostolic, and it be needful to dip the candidate three times in order to fulfill the language used by Jesus (Matt. 28: 19), why did Paul tell those disciples at Ephesus to be baptized in the name of Jesus? He must have made a mistake, for if W. C. Thurman is right, he (Paul) should have told those disciples to be baptized in the name of the Holy Ghost; for this was all the baptism needed to make out the three.

In the "Time Appointed," May 20, 1874, we read John was limited to those that had a baptism of the Father; all those that John baptized in the name of the Son received two-thirds of the full ordinance of the church; that is, having received the baptism in the name of the Father and of the Son, he says further, all they lacked was a baptism to the guardian care of that Holy Spirit which raised Christ from the dead, which we call the burial with Christ. Now if John did not baptize only those that had been baptized in the name of the Father, and was limited to them, who baptized Jesus in the name of the Holy Ghost? But, say you, we were not commanded to be baptized in the name of the Holy Ghost until Jesus had been raised from the dead; hence John knew nothing about baptizing in that name (Holy Ghost). Very true; but you say none can be saved only those that enter through this door (trine immersion). Now if this be true, I ask, how are those to be saved who died before Jesus gave this commandment? Some may say the Jews are to have another chance of salvation in the "age to come," and may be baptized then.

Our attention is called to Rom. 6: 3—"Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" To be baptized into his death, we are told the candidate must be dipped forward, because Christ bowed his head and died. But Paul does not say this is the way we are to be baptized into Christ's death. Rom. 6: 4. Paul says, "therefore," which is to say, for this reason; for what reason, Paul? For the reason that we are baptized into his (Christ's) death; we are buried with him by baptism into death. Here Paul tells what it is to be baptized into his death. What other reason does Paul give that to be buried with him is to be baptized into his death? Hear him—"That like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father"; so in baptism, as the candidate is buried beneath the wave by the administrator, that buries him with his face up and his back down (as all civilized people bury their dead), so the administrator raises the candidate by his power. But how different when the Trine-dippers lead a candidate down into the water. They just place one hand on the head of the candidate and say, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and then the candidate buries himself or herself face down, and raises himself or herself out of the liquid grave. We are told by this same class that in the christian pathway we are not to go backwards, but it is always press forward; this is one reason given why the candidate is dipped forward.

In the "Time Appointed," dated May 20, 1874, we are told that the children of Israel went forward, not backward, or on their backs; thus they denounce the way in which we "fanatics," as they call us, baptize, because we bury the candidates with the face up. But they forget that all of their candidates are raised out of the liquid grave backwards, and in this way they enter into newness of life backwards. Jesus says (Matt. 23: 24)—"Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

To prove that the candidate should bow forward, this text is quoted (Rom. 6: 6)—"Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him [not buried], that the body of sin might be destroyed." If this proves the candidate is to bow forward because Paul says "crucified" with him, and because Christ bowed his head and died while on the cross, why do they not carry out the figure and nail thair candidates to the cross? Paul says (Gal. 5: 24),—"They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts"; so if we are dead to sin we have been crucified with him.

Again. Did God bow his head and die? If not, why dip forward when baptizing in the name of the Father? And did the Holy Ghost (God's influence) ever die? But, say you, if Christ did not mean by the language used in Matt. 28: 19 to have the candidates baptized three times, what did he mean? It is claimed by Deacon Brown in the "Time Appointed" that Paul was talking to the Romans, and they burned their dead and buried their ashes in urns, so that our reasoning from the form of the English burial has no weight. But Paul says, "buried with Christ" (not buried with or like the Romans).

Again, they forget that they draw their argument from Christ's death and bury their candidates in the likeness of the act before death; hence they baptize into the act before death, instead of death itself, for Christ bowed his head and then gave up the ghost, or expired; so being dipped forward because Christ bowed and died is not being baptized into his death. If God the Father did not die, and the Holy Ghost did not die, we have no reasons for being baptized for them.

Hear Paul (1 Cor. 15: 29)—"Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead [not for the living, but in their name], if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" Rom. 6: 5—"For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Not planted in the likeness of the act (bowing his head) before death, but in the likeness of death itself. Hence we are baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; but only immersed once, because we are planted together with Christ and in his likeness, for we are baptized for the dead, and not for the living. Col. 2: 12—"Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." And it is all shown forth by the one baptism. Reasoning from the standpoint that W. C. Thurman does, supposing trine immersion to be the true baptism, we do not need to be baptized but once, for if the three thousand that were baptized at Pentecost were baptized in the loins of their fathers before they were born, in the same sense that Levi paid tithes in Abraham (Heb. 7: 9), so we in the same sense were baptized in the loins of our fathers at John's baptism. Hence all we need down in this age is one baptism to fill the picture. But our fathers received their one baptism when they were baptized unto Moses, and those in John's day received their one baptism. And Paul says (Eph. 4: 5) "one baptism."

Thank God for his word. May we live by it until Jesus comes in his glory. May we then hear the "Well done."

SYSTEM—A NECESSITY.

J. M. BUCKLIN.

When we contemplate the physical universe in all its endless variety of forms and phases, from the grandest of the ever-circling constellations to the minute particle of matter, and realize that God in the morning of creation established all the mighty laws which govern them, from the smallest to the greatest, in all their endless convolutions and infinitely varying courses; assigning place and limit to each; saying, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no further";—when we remember that for so many thousand years these millions of worlds, planets and systems have implicitly obeyed the Heaven-appointed laws, and now, after so many ages, still sweep on through pathless space, keeping perfect rythm as when "the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy";—when we consider the eternal fitness of things even in what seems most trivial and insignificant, and how wonderfully adapted and wisely arranged to minutest detail are all his orderings, from the grandly beautiful, ever-changing, and ever-recurring seasons, producing, maturing and ripening the bounteous harvest, to the tiny insects, our atmospheric scavengers,—we find each has its place, its work to do, laws to obey, and all is harmony complete.

Does not this teach most emphatically that God is a lover of order and system in all things? that only by perfect obedience to, and a thorough knowledge of, his laws concerning us, and our own adaptability and capability, can we do acceptably the will of our heavenly Father, whose children we desire to be? If it were within the limit of human imagining, or possible to suppose for a moment, that God, grown careless of the work of his hands, had suffered these wondrous laws by which worlds are kept in their orbits to be repealed, and the mighty influences by which matter is controlled to become powerless, and each sun, star, system, and every created atom, left free without law or limit unto their own impulses,—can we not readily see that in an infinitesimally short space of time all creation would be hurled to that chaos from whence it came?

Is not what is true of the physical, also true of the moral universe? Has it not been proven by actual experiments, many and varied, that wherever there are intelligences, masses of mind, there must be law, not only made, but executed; a system of action that shall regulate and control,—the one mind must to a great extent govern the many? And in the instances that history records, where law and order have been for a season suspended, how quickly has followed the most direful, inextricable confusion, bringing bloodshed, anarchy and ruin! And is not this which seems incontrovertibly true of the physical and moral, also equally true of the religious world? Have we not all seen, and are we not seeing from day to day, the terrible results of this inefficiency of law and order, this lack of system and a controlling hand at the helm, among our own people? There must be a nucleus—something to gather about and cling to, if there is strength.

Where each church stands alone, and each individual member of each church also alone, responsible to no one; where, if there may have been an attempt at systematizing, there is no one to carry out and execute the work begun; why, the church becomes merely a net to catch the human drift-wood that is everywhere floating, coming and going with equal readiness; weak, vascillating, unstable; sapping the true strength, without fail.

We hear a great deal said about "iron-bedstead creeds," and fettering men's consciences; but is there not an extreme in the other direction, and may not liberty become license? When I hear ministers saying from the pulpit they are thankful they are free, and responsible to no one as to what they believe or preach, feeling and declaring themselves at liberty to drag their opinions and beliefs, unsupported by Holy Writ, into peaceful churches, thereby causing dissension, division, and in many cases eventual ruin, it seems that the time has come when these liberty-loving people should be given still more extended freedom, and we as a church cease to answer in any way for the dogmas they promulgate, or the character they bear; while men of strength and integrity put their shoulders to the wheel, hoping, praying that the ship Zion may yet be anchored in her "haven home."

I read with interest the articles in the Crisis from brethren who are feeling our great need, and I give them God-speed in their effort to remedy this evil, and pray that the time may soon come when we shall be an order, as well as a liberty-loving people.

THE NEW HEART.

A leading denomination, some time ago, stated in one of its annual reports, that there had been an average of a little more than one conversion to each church. Millions of dollars for ministers' salary. Millions of dollars for choirs. Millions of dollars for church-buildings. Where is the return for the investment? You say that one soul saved is worth more than all that money. True enough; but be frank, and confess that, considering the great outlay, the religious advantage reaped was insignificant.

What is the matter? I think, in trying to adapt the gospel to the age, men have crippled the gospel. Starting with the idea that the people will not come to church if the old-fashioned doctrines of grace are presented, they have not sufficiently insisted upon the first theory of the gospel—namely, the utter ruin and pollution of the natural heart. The inference in many of our churches is, "Now, you are a very good set of fellows; not as good as you might be, and, in some respects, indeed—if we must say it,—quite wrong. But, then, we are hoping everything from education, refinement, the influence of the nineteenth century, and a genteel religion." And so we have gone to tinkering the human heart with soft solder, and putting a few patches on the coat of morality, when it is all worn out. We have harped on the theory of development, and hoped that man who, according to the scientists, began as a monkey, will go on improving, until after a while, under each arm will be felt sprouting the feathers of an angel's wing. Sin has been represented as only a little pimple on the soul which needs a piece of court-plaster.

My friends, depend upon it, that is all wrong. It is a mistake to try with human quackery to cure the cancer of the soul. The reason that more men are not saved is because we do not know their infinite need, their ruin—yea, the rottenness of the human heart. If I am very sick, and I call in a docter, I do not want him to begin telling me that there is nothing special the matter with me, and that all I need is a little panada, or gruel, or catnip-tea—when I want the most radical and thorough treatment, or in a week I am a dead man.

The Bible is either a truth or a lie. If it be a lie, cast it out and shut up your churches. If it be true, listen to Paul in Ephesians, where he says, "We are by nature children of wrath;" to Jeremiah, who says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked;" to Moses, who says, "The imagination of a man's heart is evil from his youth:" to the Psalmist, who says, "They are all gone aside. They are altogether become filthy." Eph. 2: 3; Jer. 17: 9; Gen. 8: 21.

Ah! sin is no half-and-half thing. The human heart is not in a tolerable condition. The Bible, in the most uncomplimentary manner, says that we are poor, and wretched, and blind, and naked. And if God should send his Spirit upon us to-night, making revelation of our true state, how many quick-beating hearts! how many blanched cheeks! And some soul in this audience, no longer able to keep silence, would cry out, "What must I do? Whither shall I fly? God, be merciful to me, a sinner!" It is not one screw loose, or one rivet dropped out; it is a rail-train at Revere run into by a Bangor express, telescoped and crushed, amid the shrieking horrors of death.—T. De Witt Talmage.

WE are in the safe path during our pilgrim state while we are in the valley of humiliation. There also the river of everlasting life divinely flows.

CHARITY.

Charity is a divine attribute, a characteristic, social element, controlling all heavenly beings. It is the regulator of all perfect associations, and the producer of all perfect happiness. It is divine love—the love of God—given by him to all his intelligent creatures who submit to be governed by his perfect law. It is the first, the highest, the controlling and all-adorable attribute of God. It designs nothing but good in creating, preserving, and ruling. It provides for happiness, but never for misery. It makes provisions for peace, but never for war. It seeks to relieve wants, but never to produce them. It binds in heavenly sympathy the Creator and the creature. It magnifies justice and rejects oppression. It rejoices in truth, but despises error and falsehood. It moved the mind and hand of Deity to create all things for the welfare and happiness of his creatures. Nothing was designed to detract from the peace and blessedness of life to any creature he purposed to create. It is the opposite of hatred, producing exactly opposite results. It causes all who possess it to love and obey God as the rightful ruler of all worlds and beings. It rejects Satan as the enemy of God and all his creatures, and as the author of all the evil in our world.

As love is the attribute which characterizes all the designs and acts of God, so hatred is the characteristic attribute of Satan. The works of each may be known by the application of these principles. The works of God are designed to result in the safety and happiness of all his creatures. The works of Satan are designed to result in injury and destruction. All men are actuated by a spirit received either from God or Satan, which produces in them this love or hatred, and their acts and influence result in good or evil. Those who receive the Spirit of God which conveys this love to the heart are called "The children of God;" while those who receive the spirit of Satan through which they are filled with malice and revenge are called the children of the devil.

Love is the essential principle in producing social happiness. No intelligent being can be made happy by associating with those he does not love. God evidently designed that all his creatures should enjoy social happiness, therefore he gave to all a social nature, with a strong love for all who were graded for their associates. This is clearly seen, even in this deranged state of the fall, among all God's creatures, from man down to the crawling insect. Social happiness is always graded in degree and quality according to the kind and degree of love producing it. Heavenly love produces heavenly happiness; worldly love produces worldly happiness. Strong love produces much happiness, weak love little happiness. Divine love is the same in man that it is in God, and is governed by the same laws, producing the same union between the lover and the loved. This love was reciprocal between the Father and the Son, which resulted in a heavenly oneness. The same love possessed by two christians, governed by the same laws, must produce the same oneness. Jesus expressed this when he said—"That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Christ became the pattern and representative of our race, under the power and control of the divine nature, the leading element of which is love. What he loved, the true believer will love. The union that it produced between him and the Father will exist between the christian and the Father. It has a wonderful affinity for itself. Being opposed to partition or separation, it draws with a mighty power to produce one grand and eternal unity centered in the Godhead. Therefore, when it exists in two hearts, they feel a hidden power, not controlled by any external circumstances, drawing them into christian fellowship and heavenly union. This union will not consist merely in emotions, but it will develop itself in intelligent harmony: for it will cause them to love the same God and Christ,—the same word of God and divine worship,—the same kingdom of God and future life. It will turn their feet into the same narrow way, and cause them to flee from the world in the same direction. It will cause each to turn his eyes to watch for the signs of Christ's returning, according to his instructions. Each will pray, "thy kingdom come," and exhort sinners to prepare to meet their Judge in peace. It will make their hearts so much alike in all they love and hate, that they will as naturally and fully blend together in holy sympathy, as will two drops of water from the same fountain. It loves no man after the flesh, that is, it does not produce the union which naturally exists between relatives and those enjoying a worldly association, but it attracts the christian's heart to the Christ manifested in his believing brother; making them "one in Christ Jesus." It will not dwell in a heart where hatred resides, or has any control, for Christ has no partnership with the devil. Its promptings are never to envy, jealousy, or strife; but always to kindness, benevolence, and forbearance. It moves God to love all men;—the pure in heart with social sympathy, and the sinner with compassionate pity. The love of God in the christian heart will cause him to love them the same. It will move man to purpose to do nothing but what he understands will result in the benefit of all connected. It can never design to injure any being. It caused God to pity a fallen world, and give his Son to die for it; so it will cause men to pity the perishing, and for their salvation part with honor, wealth and friends. It produces peace and harmony among all holy beings in heaven, and it will produce the same among the holy on the earth.

To suppose that we are controlled by charity while we are envious, seeking for mastery, striving to injure our fellows, or destroy those for whom Christ died, is to be fatally deceived. Charity emanates from the heart of Deity, and is manifested in all his works, giving harmony, beauty and life. It produces justice, mercy, and equity in all his laws, and faithfulness and fidelity in their execution.

As it is the representative attribute and very essence of Divinity, it must be immutable, the same on earth that it is in heaven. Therefore when Satan and his hatred are driven out of the world, and Christ and infinite love come to take their place, the will of God, which is controlled by his perfect love, will be done as perfectly on the earth as it is now in heaven. As God has purposed that love shall control all his saints in the eternal kingdom, he gives it to the believer here, so that his submission and obedience to it may be tested in his christian experience here. We may understand that we are under the control of charity, when the only purpose of the heart and desire of the mind is to faithfully obey God's word and Spirit in all things. It is this love, and this alone, which enables us to keep the law of God. No professed christian should rest satisfied a moment with his religious experience, until he is assured that charity has so established this purpose of obedience in his heart, that no earthly contingency "of things present, or things to come" can destroy that love so as to change that purpose.

If we enjoy a fulness of this love it will be as desirable for us to keep the commandments of God, as it is for a hungry man to eat his food. Compulsory acts cannot be reckoned obedience to God. He accepts of our service when it is produced by love to him, or through the action of his love. God will have the honor of producing all that is good in man, in purposes and deeds. We are only to work out what he works in, both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Charity will cause us to desire to do just what he wills us to do; so that we do not serve God as slaves, to do what we are compelled to do against our will, but as freemen, what we choose to do. The law and love of God must be in harmony, so that he who possesses both will have the love by which to fulfill the law, "For love is the fulfilling of the law." It is in this most glorious christian grace that the image and likeness of God is seen. Divine and infinite love is the grand moving, centralizing principle, which will ultimately bring all beings and creatures into universal harmony and eternal concert, each heart and voice praising and adoring its glorious Author, the Creator of all.

MARK OF THE BEAST.

In the Revelation given to St. John by Jesus, we find frequent reference to a certain beast and his mark. Beasts in symbolical prophecy represent political powers. The one that gives the mark is the two-horned beast of Revelation 13. The leopard and beast, described in the first part of the chapter, most certainly represent the political powers that supported the church at Rome. When that had accomplished its terrible bloody work, John saw in vision the two-horned beast "coming up" to do his work, which evidently continues to the coming of Christ. As the two horns were short, like a lamb's, they indicate the beast will continue but a short time; yet his power will be strong. This beast represents a power specially anti-christian; and whoever receives the mark of the beast must thereby deny Christ; for there is no salvation for those who accept that mark, their portion is in the lake of fire and brimstone. The mark must be some sign, badge, or number, by which the wearer will show that he accepts and endorses the infidel principles of the government. This appears to be the last test devised by Satan, and presented to the people for acceptance, before the appearing of the Son of man.

We do not now propose to show when, where, or how this beast will be manifested, but to examine a theory that has been put forth by some in relation to what will constitute the mark. It is this: It is said the mark of the beast will consist in keeping the Lord's day, instead of the seventh-day observed by the Jews under the old covenant. One thing is certain, the Scriptures teach no such thing, nor even hint that such will be the mark; hence the proof must come from some other source than the Bible. What is not taught in the Sacred Scriptures is not Bible doctrine. When we inquire for the reason of the belief that keeping the Lord's day will constitute the mark of the beast, we find it consists mainly in the visions of one who professes to be a prophetess of the Lord. But when her visions are examined, they are found to contradict facts, to contradict themselves, and the Bible; hence the inevitable conclusion that they do not come from the Lord. For this reason, they are of no weight in helping us to ascertain what will constitute the mark of the beast.

To those who expect that keeping the Lord's day will constitute the mark of the beast, we would say, "Come, let us reason together." (1) It is a fact that the christians in the first century did observe the Lord's day—the first day—as a day of rest and worship, set apart to commemorate the resurrection of Christ; hence all such honored the Lord, and accepted him as their resurrection and life, their all in all, their Savior and Redeemer. In doing this they honored the Father. Therefore keeping the Lord's day in the first century did not constitute the mark of the beast, but showed a special love and sympathy for Christ, and trust in him for salvation. None but christians observed it as the Lord's day.

(2) This same day has been observed by the faithful disciples of Jesus for the same reason, from the first century to the present, and it has not yet become a cursed day, so that he who keeps it in honor of his Lord, does by so doing receive the mark of the beast, and thus fit himself for a place among the most wicked. The more one loves the Lord, the more he delights to honor his day, that commemorates the beginning of the new creation unto eternal life and glory. The creation of man for temporal life was a great event, but when our Lord rose from the dead, and then opened the way to life eternal, it was an event still more wonderful.

(3) Does it look reasonable that after the dear friends of our Lord have kept and honored his day for eighteen hundred years, and enjoyed his special blessings century after century, as they have met on that day for his worship, working as freely on Saturday as any other day without feeling any condemnation, that all at once the keeping of this same day, for the same reason, by those who love Christ, and accept him as their only Savior, should by so doing receive the mark of the beast, or government, that utterly denies Christ as a Savior? Does this look reasonable? Is it scriptural? Has it any foundation in the word of the Lord? Nay, verily. Shall we heed visions that lead to such strange conclusions, and only serve to divide the flock of God? We think it is high time that every true friend of Jesus should lift his warning voice against such heretical visions and teachings, and turn his back on them forever.

STERLING JUNCTION CAMPMEETING.

We are again at Sterling Junction campmeeting, having just arrived this Monday evening, June 22nd. Yesterday, we had a good day with the church at Lynn, Mass. Several decided to take an advanced position in the service of the Lord. By so doing they received special blessings. The Spirit of the Lord was present in a gracious manner, to comfort the saints, and convict those who are out of Christ. The prospect was decidedly encouraging. A large number expressed a positive and earnest desire for the gift of the Holy Spirit, and some made a full surrender to the Savior, and found themselves occupying a most desirable position. The Spirit is impressing all the true disciples of Christ with the importance of being wholly consecrated to him, standing ready to do or suffer without a murmur anything that may be required. The bride of the Lamb is truly preparing for the great marriage festival of the King of kings. O, blessed thought!

"Hail, happy day!"

In a little while we hope to see the One altogether lovely, who died for our salvation.

On arriving at the camp-ground, we learned that there had been no abatement in the interest. The preaching and social meetings were spoken of as being of a superior character. An intelligent Sr. in Christ, whose faith is the same as ours, and who came to the meeting somewhat prejudiced, but after carefully watching the progress in all its departments for some days, said to us, "Why did you not say more about this meeting in the Crisis, and urge our people to be present?" She had been so specially blest, she was anxious that others should enjoy the same favor. Many others of our Brn. and Srs. who were present would gladly give expression to similar feelings. We esteem it a rare privilege to attend one of these National Campmeetings for the promotion of holiness. We consider our accounts of these meetings far below what might be truthfully said. While we may consider their theology as defective in some points, yet the spirit and religious tone of these meetings, together with the positive good accomplished in the conversion of sinners, and the complete cleansing of those who have previously made a profession of religion, are seldom equaled. At these meetings there is a gathering of some of the most devoted people in the Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist, and other denominations, who have been and are the life of the respective churches to which they belong. After they get together, it would be quite difficult to assort them by their spirit, songs, prayers, or testimonies. And the longer they are together, the closer the union, and the more they seem like one family. We think there has been no movement for a thousand years, better calculated to bring about that for which the Savior prayed when he asked his Father that his children might all "be one." We see this oneness manifested at these meetings, as we have never seen it any where else. The only way to assort them would be by some theological iron-bedstead creed, that contained dogmas not essential to salvation.

It may very properly be asked, What is coming out of this movement? Our answer would be, we believe it will result in a pure church, the church of the living God, made up of all the christians in every church, which will constitute the bride of Christ, that will be all ready to meet him at his coming. It will be a church baptized into one spirit, not one creed; a pure-hearted church, loving God with all the heart. It will not be a Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, Presbyterian, Advent, or Episcopalian church, but the church of Christ—a real christian church, that will be unitedly loving the appearing of Jesus. The members will be all filled with the Holy Spirit, "dead indeed unto sin," and separate from all the foolish fashions and customs of the world, kept by the power of God, anxiously waiting for the coming of the heavenly Bridegroom. To us, it is a very bright omen that we are in the immediate neighborhood of the great day of the Lord, when all the saints will begin to live forever. Glory to God! Hallelujah!

CONSECRATION.

To consecrate an object is to set it apart for some specific purpose. When any person or thing is consecrated to the Lord, it is devoted to his service, and for no other. If properly consecrated, it can never be appropriated to any other use. When an individual consecrates himself to the Lord, he ceases to be his own. It is not for him to choose his way after that, or to say where he will go or stay, what he will do, or what he will not do; neither should he murmur about anything that he may be called to suffer or endure. His only aim should be to know and do the will of his divine Master. If losses and crosses come, it is his business to bow submissively, and bear them patiently, even glorying in what he may have to bear for Christ. But human nature cannot do this. It requires something beyond what is in man naturally to rejoice in tribulation, and be pleasant and sunny in all situations. Mere consecration will not produce this result. This leads us more fully to notice other things that are necessary to produce the blessed result to which we have referred.

Consecration is a work of the creature, prompted by the Spirit of God. It consists in giving consent to be wholly the Lord's. It is letting our will come into harmony with the will of the Lord, so that we can say, deep down in the heart, "Thy will be done." Having taken this position, we are then fully in the hands of our Savior, to be used as may seem good in his sight. After the full consecration, there is usually an emptying of self; a complete overhauling of the furniture of the heart; a searching and cleansing quite like the house-cleaning that follows when a neat family moves in where a filthy one has been living. This cleansing is not an agreeable and delightful process; and is unpleasant in proportion to the amount of bad habits and other evils that must be removed before we are fit to be filled with the Holy Spirit. The work of discipline and preparation may take some hours, or days; during which period the consecrated one lives by naked faith, without any joyful emotion, or assurance of acceptance, except in the fact that he is the Lord's because he has given himself to him in the act of consecration.

This period of cleansing and discipline is the favored time for Satan to make his attack, by saying, You do not feel any better, nor quite so well as you did before you thought you made your consecration; and then whispers, You have not made a full surrender, for if you had, you would be greatly blest. By this means he introduces doubts, then darkness, followed by bewilderment, and a temptation to believe that the whole thing is a delusion, and a fanatical idea; and that it will be useless to pursue the subject any further; whereas, if the person would simply say to the Deceiver, I have given myself to the Lord by an everlasting covenant, to be his, and to do and suffer his will, feeling or no feeling, just as may seem good in his sight; he may be sure of receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit, when he will know what it is to love God with all the heart. Then he can feel as never before that all things work together for his good. Then he can glory in tribulation, and bear all things patiently, because of the power of the Spirit that fills him. Then he feels ready to meet Jesus at any moment. Then all doubts of his acceptance are gone. No fears remain. Then he feels "clean"—"whiter than snow." All this comes as the result of entire consecration to the Lord.

Do any object to this? Is it not our "reasonable service"? Is it not all profit, even in this life? Does it not secure eternal life in the world to come? Then why not do it at once? Say, why not? Think this over when alone in prayer, and then answer honestly.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

For good and satisfactory reasons, the National Campmeeting appointed to commence at Springfield, Mass., Saturday, Aug. 15th, is changed to begin Saturday, August 8th.

M. G.

The discussion advertised to be in Lynn this week is abandoned by the request of Mr. Jamieson.

M. G.

Ocean Grove Convention.—The second National Convention for holiness will commence July 15th, at Ocean Grove, N. J., about six miles from Long Branch, and continue ten days. This convention is entirely unsectarian. All persons, without regard to denominational creeds, who are interested in the spread of holiness, are cordially invited to attend. Ocean Grove is a lovely place for such a meeting, more suitable than any other with which we are acquainted. There are good accommodations for board and lodging. Christians who wish to spend summer days on the ocean beach, will probably find no other place so agreeable. No doubt, it will be a real feast for the friends of Jesus. Best route from Boston: Take cars at the Old Colony depot at 4.30, or 5.30 P. M., for New York, via Fall River boat, which lands near the steamer to be taken to Sandy Hook, thence by cars to Long Branch, then by stage six miles to Ocean Grove.

PLAINVILLE CAMPMEETING.

We arrived at the Plainville (Ct.) Campmeeting Thursday evening, June 25th. The meeting commenced June 20th. There had been preaching by Brn. A. Ross, H. C. Smith, E. Morrill, and R. K. Stark; and afterwards by Brn. A. A. Phelps, H. Munger, and the writer. The camp-ground is about two miles from Plainville Station, in a pleasant grove, where meetings have been held some five years. It was a common remark that the meeting this year was the best ever enjoyed on that ground; and some of the old soldiers of the cross said it was the most blessed meeting they ever experienced. Some were converted, two baptized, and many consecrated all to Christ, and received special blessings. The subject of christian holiness was made prominent in the conference meetings. We found an ardent desire kindled in the hearts of most of those who are looking for the coming of Christ, to be filled with the Spirit of God, as an important preparation to be ready to meet him at his appearing. This feeling is spreading rapidly, and continues to afford bright evidence that the coming of Jesus is near at hand. Members of different denominations were present, and were delighted with the spirit of the meeting.

We think there has been no time for twenty-five years when there was so wide a door open for the glorious truths we love so well, or when they were more cordially received by the christians in other denominations, than at the present time. Sectarian walls are tumbling down in all directions.

M. G.

Lowell. We had a blessed day with the church in Lowell yesterday, July 5th. The Spirit of the Lord was present in power. Quite a number decided to consecrate themselves unreservedly to him It is becoming more and more apparent that the bride of the Lamb is really getting ready to meet him at his coming. The Holy Spirit is impressing the christians everywhere in all countries with the importance of a full, unconditional surrender to Christ, in order that they may receive the gift of the Spirit. Happy is the man who heeds the call, and submits all to Jesus, that he may be completely fitted up for translation at the coming of the Son of man.

M. G.

Advent Christian Times.—We learn the Advent Christian Times is now removed to 91 South Green St., Chicago, under the "Green St., Tabernacle," where a spacious room is furnished free by Bro. Billings, who for several years has also provided a free chapel for the church in Chicago, besides expending thousands of dollars for the benefit of those who meet there for worship. The continued success of the Times now appears to be well established. Bro. F. Burr is editor, and gives good evidence that the Times will not depreciate in his hands. It is a good paper, and deserves a hearty support from christian people. We commend it to all our readers. We esteem it as a brother to the Crisis in the fullest sense, advocating the same things. May the Lord bless it, and give it great prosperity.

M. G.

The Herald of Health for July contains a number of very strong articles, among which are the following: "Tobacco a Foe to Marriage," by Rev. George Trask; "Pulmonary Consumption," by Dr. Barker; "Clothing and its Relation to the Air," by Dr. Pettenkoffer; "a very rich paper on "The Child becoming Boy or Girl," by Thomas Inman, M. D.; "Treatment of Catarrh," "Hygiene for Old Folks," "Turning Points in Life," "How to go up Stairs," and fifty other papers. Address Wood & Holbrook, Publishers, 13 and 15 Laight Street, New York.

Correction.—In Bro. I. C. Wellcome's Statement, relative to Mrs. White's visions, the date should read "in 1844 and 1845," instead of 1843 and 1845.

Entire Consecration.—Our readers will find an interesting article in this paper from the pen of Dr. Adam Clarke, on the subject of "entire consecration."

M. G.

"Bible Echo" is the name of a new weekly paper, published at 78 Newgate St., London, E. C., England, by Bro. Wm. Kellaway & Co. It is a valuable paper, and should have a wide circulation. American subscribers can have it for $3.00 a year. Bro. K. is overworking himself in his efforts to spread the truth. We are acquainted with no one who deserves and needs a lift more than Bro. Kellaway. Are there not some, who have the good things of this world, who will send him aid? He should be sustained in his arduous labors. We give below some extracts from a private letter just received.

M. G.

"For myself, I feel the way to be one of excessive labor, but my faith is settled, and my hope assured. It may, perhaps, be of interest to you to know what I am doing for Jesus, and for man in this period of my mortal life. I am keeping a Repository, at which I publish books on the themes of life and salvation through our princely Jesus. I have to read the proofs of everything, and arrange its appearance, besides partly filling orders, etc., which is quite enough of itself for one to do. But in addition to this, I have to provide matter—original and selected—for a 16-paged weekly newspaper, which I am publishing in the interest of grace and truth. You know what this means, having been long an editor. It is, as you will have found, no child's play to get up such a paper as will satisfy and benefit a studious people like those we have to address, who, in their entirety, know the Scriptures from beginning to end. This extra work takes me usually into one or two o'clock in the morning. And then I have to be up early again to serve; so that no wonder back, head and fingers ache in this employment. But, I think of the blades of truth which will spring out of the seed, and I look on to the harvest, and I see the heavenly harvest-home, and nothing can hinder me from redoubling my efforts. My premature decrepiture is renewed with youth, and all my springs of thought become living waters.

'Bible Echo' is the name of my weekly, and I rejoice that it is doing great good. Yesterday I had a brother call at my office, who is among the Plymouth Brethren. He is one of their great and acceptable preachers. He told me that, two years ago, he was very bigoted against the truth. He confessed with sorrow that he had helped to silence brethren who had avowed their conviction as ours. But now, he is a different man. He sees light in revelation, and darkness in Platonism; and, dear fellow, he is about to let his brethren know of his belief. There are many like this. I hear Bible Echo is helping the good movement. It is scattering the truth. I therefore rejoice.

The publication of Bible Echo is a work of faith and hope, as well as labor. And often my faith is put to a sore test. I have some difficulty in publishing it, for want of means. I am not going to say what any should do; but I think if my dear brethren of America could only see what a large missionary field is open to Bible Echo, they would feel that they had a special vocation to help its establishment. I intend sending it to the States, to the Crisis office, to the Bible Banner office, and to Messrs. Brown and Busch, in monthly parts, and the brethren will be able to get it at $3.00 per year in advance. I trust the three hundred that will be sent will be immediately subscribed for.

I ought to say that your work, 'Spiritualism,' is making a great stir here; and I believe if you could come and raise your voice, you would find not units nor tens, but hundreds ready to take a bold stand for God. The cry is from all parts of the country—'Is there a speaker to be had?' O, may God open the way for you to pay us a visit. The Bible Echo will stand by you and multiply your words of truth.

I am much straitened at present; but yet I know whose I am, and whom I serve, and whose cause it is that I work in, and I look to Him."

"What a vast multitude there is in this country who in the last thirty years have heard the cry, 'Come out of her, my people,' and with the sacrifice of pleasure and popularity have heeded the voice, and have bid farewell to the shackles of creed-dom! They have seen the truth on the nature and destiny of man, the inheritance of the saints, the nature and imminence of the second Advent, the time and location of Christ's kingdom, and many other kindred doctrines, that shine out in the divine word as glorious rubies of choicest value. But where is that people to-day? Riven into fragments, and scattered, here a few and there a few, into sections and parties. We incline to the opinion that this is all wrong. There should be only one fold. This great host, having the same common experience, should be a unit in fellowship and labor."

REPORT OF TENT MEETING.

STATE OF KANSAS.

The Kansas Mission tent was pitched at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., the 27th of May. The tent not being ready for meeting the evening of the 17th, we occupied the school-house. By request I spoke in the evening. We had a fair turnout. The next evening, the tent being ready, I spoke to a good audience. The following night Bro. J. C. Smith spoke. The evening following, Sr. Clark spoke. Considering the objections to women speaking in public, we had a good attendance. Sr. Clark left for Burlington Tuesday evening.

Bro. J. C. Smith and myself remained to continue the meeting in Ottumwa. The interest increased, and we had good congregations each night. There was some little opposition manifested by the so-called Orthodox sects, still I must say to the credit of one of our bitterest opposers, that he was present at every meeting.

We had prayer and conference meeting each afternoon, at 2 P. M. We continued the meeting over two Sundays. Five were baptized during the meeting; one aged brother, over eighty years old, who had been a Methodist most of his life, I think, being dissatisfied with sprinkling for baptizing, and not believing with them in many other things, came out on the side of Bible truth. Sunday afternoon we organized a church of twenty-three members. We closed the meeting Sunday evening, and then came the saddest part of our meeting. Monday morning we bid farewell to many loved ones while tears rolled down the faces of many as we gave them the parting hand. May the Lord bless them abundantly.

We long to meet to part no more. May we be faithful unto the coming of the Lord. To-day (June 10) we pitched the tent in Pleasanton, Linn Co., where, the Lord willing, we will remain over two Sundays. Pray for the prosperity of truth. In hope of eternal life,

V. Hunt.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

A. W. Sibley, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

Correspondence.

From Bro. R. H. Gresham.

Dear Brn.:—I have now been here for nearly three months, and have been doing what I could by tracts and by my conversation to get the people to earnestly investigate the writings of the apostles and prophets, and to learn for themselves about the things mentioned in Acts 8: 11, assuring them, those who will listen, that there is but one right way,—but one road leading to endless life; and that, if it were important that the Samaritans should believe those things before they could be fit subjects for baptism, then there has been the same necessity since that day in relation to all other persons. We are told that "without faith [and may we not with divine authority say the faith?] it is impossible to please God." Now I ask, If we must needs have a valid faith, the one faith, be moved and drawn by the one God and Father of all through the one Spirit, with full faith in the one Lord Jesus the Christ, in order to be made partakers by promise of the one body; then is it not as important that we accept the one baptism in water before we can be scripturally identified as a member of the one body, and become entitled to the one hope which is as an anchor for every true christian.

This is a very brief outline of what I am trying to teach the people; and while there are a goodly number of the inhabitants who are intelligent and learned (learned in man's wisdom), yet they have been accustomed from their infancy to listen to the sectarian preachers with more or less error in their sermons mixed up with the word of truth, and many (in fact nearly all) have become so rooted and grounded in those errors, that they do not seem to know how to receive the truth as it is revealed by Inspiration. They think it wondrous strange that their learned preachers "giving their whole time and attention to the ministry" can be in such gross errors and mistakes; and that a layman like myself can have attained to such a correct knowledge of the Scriptures as I profess.

Those who will listen find that they cannot refute my arguments (for I answer in Bible language), and they seem to look upon me in bewilderment, and some seem to think me partially deranged.

I have found here a few persons who really seem to want to learn, and who seem willing to receive as good little children the pure, unadulterated word of truth. Their progress seems slow for the present, but I can scarce expect it to be otherwise, as there is such a tremendous outside pressure of sectarianism and superstition brought to bear against their progress in the truth.

Many of the people here are very honest, sincere, and devoted to what they vainly suppose to be the truth, and my heart yearns to do them good if I can; but what can I do when their ears are so dull of hearing, or their reasoning dimmed by the errors in doctrine imbibed in their youth. They are so filled with the vain notion that each and every human being is a part of Deity himself and cannot die, and other kindred dogmas, that they seem to have no room in their hearts and minds whereby the truth as it is in Jesus can find a lodgment.

Can you not send Elder Peyton G. Bowman, or some other man intelligent in the word of truth, full of love and of good works, and who is a good and pleasant speaker, to hold a meeting here about the 15th to the 25th of September? It might result in much good, but I doubt whether the people here would donate enough to pay his traveling expenses.

Faithfully yours in love of the truth.

Asheville, N. C., June 13th.

From Bro. W. S. Dibble.

Bro. Grant:—Feeling that you and all others interested in our common cause would like to hear how we are prospering in San Francisco, I thought I would give you an account of our meetings since you left us, May 3d. Bro. Hook commenced meetings May 4th, and continued them until June 14th, preaching and giving lectures on the Prophetic Chart every evening in the week, except Mondays and Saturdays.

Our congregations have varied somewhat in numbers, sometimes small and sometimes quite large; but, praise God, the Holy Spirit has been present with us in power in all of our meetings. O! they have been so rich and sweet. Seven have united with the church, two have been baptized that have not as yet joined us, and several backsliders have been reclaimed and are now rejoicing in God's boundless love and mercy. I have only one new conversion to report,—a man fifty years of age. Bro. Hook baptized him last Sunday, and he came up out of the water shouting and praising God, filled with the Holy Spirit. O! it was good to witness this scene, and it caused our hearts to rejoice. He requested that he might speak, and said that he had been a very wicked man, a rum-seller, and a rum-drinker; "and now," said he, "you can see what God can do even for a rum-seller." Bless the Lord! Jesus came "to seek and to save that which was lost."

Bro. Hook has improved very much in health, and has now gone to hold meetings with the Vallejo church. We are all much pleased with Bro. Hook, and hope he may decide to make California his home, if the Lord will. He is much needed on this coast as an evangelist. He has been preaching for several Sundays past at Meigg's Wharf and in front of the What Cheer House, to large crowds of people, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. They are much pleased with him, and have not found a word of fault about his preaching Advent doctrines, although he has proclaimed them fearlessly and nobly. How I love Jesus and his appearing, and how I love to tell my hope to others. God helping me, I mean to be faithful so that I may see him when he comes, and be saved in his kingdom. Your Bro. in Christ.

San Francisco, June 18th.

Bro. A. A. Hoyt writes from Plainfield, Vt.:—"I am heartily in favor of the proposed 'Minister's meeting,' two days prior to the National Campmeeting. We need it. I will try to attend it. May God grant it a success for the cause' sake. Yours in Christ."

Ordination.—This is to certify that Bro. Cyrus Mendenhall, of Wilmington, Del., was duly set apart for the gospel ministry in the Second Advent Church, at the corner of 9th and Spring Garden Sts., Phila., on Sabbath evening, March 22nd, 1874, by the laying on of hands by the following Elders: Geo. A. Brown, William Ashman, John M. Stetler, and H. T. Taylor. Bro. Mendenhall is well known to the readers of the Crisis through his writings, and is hereby cordially recommended to all who desire his labors. H. T. Taylor.

DEFINITION OF CHRISTIANITY.

Christianity is Christ-likeness. A christian is a man who, in his disposition and purposes, resembles Jesus Christ. The elements of christianity are not intellectual beliefs about anything whatever; they are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Christianity is simply the highest form of manhood produced by the divine influence upon the soul. It includes every kind of excellence; not only gentleness, but courage; not only devoutness, but good citizenship; the care of the body as well as of the soul; fidelity to the truth as we see it, together with the utmost respect and kindness for those who see it differently. It includes humility, a profound sense of our own weakness and ignorance and faults; and it includes the very highest self respect—a sense of the absolute sacredness of our own nature, as the child of God and the temple of his Spirit. It looks downward, making reverent account of the humblest form of human life, and of every created thing. It looks upward, recognizing with veneration the unseen Power of the universe, and resting in its arms with peace unspeakable. It rejoices in hope, and lives in strong and joyful consciousness that good is mightier than evil, and that the universe is absolutely safe in its Father's hands.

But why try to put in words all that belong to a perfect life? Look at everything that is best in men and women; at every sweet and noble quality that shines in life; add all that the past has recorded of human excellence; add all that the imagination can conceive of attainment in character; and let all that go into the picture—that is christianity. "Finally, brethren," says the apostle, "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Selected.

Tidal Wave.—At eight o'clock A. M., on the 8th inst. (June 1874), a most remarkable commotion of the waters of Lake Michigan was observed at the mouth of the Kalamazoo river. The superintending engineer of the harbor works informs us that the waters in the lake, at the mouth of the river, at the above named hour, the weather at the time being perfectly calm, rose one foot eight inches above the average low water summer level in ten minutes; and then fell two feet below the average summer level in the short space of eight minutes, making a total difference in the lake level during the paroxysm of agitation equal to three feet eight inches.

The fishermen who have lived at the mouth of this river for many years say they never before observed such an agitation of the waters of Lake Michigan. The incoming wave overwhelmed the wharves, upon which they have erected their storehouses. Some of them were fearful that their houses would be carried away by the overflowing current, but luckily no harm attended them. The current of outflow was rated at ten miles an hour. During this outflow of water the Unites States boom, in which the timber and piles of the harbor works were secured, gave way, and portions of the timber were carried into the lake, but afterward secured. We also learn that the water rose about eighteen inches at Saugatuck, situated two and one-half miles from the Lake, during the time the wave occurred at the mouth.

The sudden and unparelleled commotion of the waters is attributed to the thunder storms which occurred on the Lake on the morning prior to the agitation, coming from a westerly direction, and the immediate recurrence of a heavy east wind.

The agitation of the waters did not cease during the day, but kept oscillating, rising and falling from one and one-half to two feet at intervals of thirty minutes, from eight o'clock A. M., till six P. M.—Saugatuck Commercial.

Obituaries.

Morse. At Springville, Vernon Co., Wis., after a short but severe illness, Bro. W. A. Morse, in the fifty-seventh year of his age.

An exemplary christian and a believer in the speedy coming of Jesus, honest and upright in all his business transactions, his loss will be deeply felt. He was one of the first to espouse the cause of the late W. Miller, and remained faithful till the hour of his death. His dear wife, the partner of years of toil and privation in the cause of Christ, looking into the open grave while the coffin was being lowered exclaimed, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." He is laid to sleep in the full assurance of a glorious resurrection through the blood of the atonement. W. H.

Markham. Fell asleep in Jesus, May 3d, John Markham, aged eighty-two years.

His family and the whole community have met with a great loss. He was a kind husband, an indulgent father, and a faithful public servant. He served eight sessions as a representative in the Legislature of this State, and one in the Senate; eighteen years first selectman of the town of Chatham, and town treasurer for a great number of years. He was a meek and humble follower of our divine Redeemer. He embraced the faith of the speedy coming of Christ to set up his kingdom under the whole heavens on the new earth, and reign forever; the sleep of the dead, and kindred truths; and was not ashamed to talk it in the high circles in which he moved. Words spoken at the funeral from Job 19: 25.

M. M. Markham.

Downs. Fell asleep May 8th, 1874, in Rochester, N. H., of consumption, Geo. H. Downs, aged thirty-two years.

He sought the Lord in early life, but by neglecting duty lost the saving grace; but in his last days, he found the Lord to be precious. We trust he fell with the armor on. J. T. Libby.

Chadwick. In Palermo, Me., May 13th, 1874, of typhoid fever, my father, Francis C. Chadwick, aged sixty years and six months.

He was a firm believer in the second coming of Christ. He suffered much in his last sickness. We believe he sleeps in Jesus. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss.

Jane M. Bowler.

Emers. In Kennebunk, Me., June 18th, 1874, Susan Ella, daughter of B. F. and Susan Emers, aged fourteen months.

Grieve not with hopeless sorrow,
Jesus hath felt thy pain;
He did thy lamb but borrow,
He'll bring her back again.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, June 30. The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs from Rome that the Pope is growing weaker daily, and several foreign representatives have notified their Governments to that effect.

The latest Russian papers received in this city contain reports of very destructive fires at Berditcher in the Government of Volhynia, a town inhabited mostly by Jews. A fire one day destroyed 600 houses; the next day there was another conflagration, involving a loss of nearly as many more buildings. The two succeeding days the town was again visited by fires, by which whole streets were laid in ashes, and thousands of persons were made homeless.

Berlin, June 29. The North German Gazette in an article under the heading of "Fresh Complications in Asia," says: "Caravans arriving from Central Asia bring reports that Takoob Bey is arming against Russia. It is believed he is prompted to this by agents of Great Britain. There is also a possibility of a collision between Russia and China."

Bayonne, June 29. The following account of the recent fighting before Estella and the death of Gen. Concha is derived from Carlist sources: The Republicans made their first attack on the left bank of the river Ega Thursday, and followed it up Friday, on the eve of which day they had forced the Carlists from their first line of defences. The next day, Saturday, they attempted to carry by assault the heights immediately commanding Estella. In the attack they failed and were driven back in disorder. Their retreat became a rout, when Gen. Concha was mortally wounded. The total loss of the Republicans in killed, wounded and missing is four hundred. Gen. Echagnes's entire division narrowly escaped capture, and was saved only by the extraordinary exertions of the artillery. The assault was made during the night, under cover of which the Republicans succeeded in withdrawing all their cannon.

Paris, June 29. The death of Gen. Concha is considered here an event of great political importance. It is believed that Concha intended to proclaim Prince Alphonso King as soon as the campaign against the Carlists was brought to a successful issue, and the Madrid Government deeply mistrusted him.

Cheap Excursion.—The agents of the European lines of steamships began selling steerage tickets to-day for $12 50 each. Excursion tickets to Europe and return are sold for $28. The connecting railroads have so arranged with the steamer companies that the price of tickets from Chicago to Europe is fixed at $17.

New York, June 27. A New Mexico letter states that the Rio Grande river has overflowed the valley from Albuquerque to El Paso, making great havoc, destroying grain crops, orchards, vineyards, etc. It made a new channel in the rear of the town of Albuquerque, threatening it so badly that its inhabitants fled to the mountains. Several settlements have been destroyed, and thousands having their homes wrecked, starvation is imminent. The damage done is estimated at $2,000,000.

Notices.

I would say to all the brethren and sisters in the State of Kansas, that I am now traveling with the Advent Christian Mission Tent of Kansas, with Bro. and Sr. Smith. I expect to go with the tent until the last of September; after which time, I will visit and hold meetings with all who may write to me, and inform me of their whereabouts. If it is the Lord's will, and the people desire it, I will devote Oct., Nov. and Dec., to holding meetings from place to place, as the interest demands. Let all who want me to visit their neighborhoods during those three months, and preach the word, write to me, and inform me when they would like me to come. Direct to Virgil Hunt, Wellington, Sumner Co., Kansas, Box 104.

Kansas Campmeetings.—The Northern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Clyde, Cloud Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Sept. 10th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been appointed as committee of arrangements, and are prepared to be on the ground the day appointed, to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: Frank Wilson, Chairman, Clyde, Cloud Co.; W. H. Rich, Clifton, Washington Co.; T. J. Hay, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; J. Roberts, Lake Sibley, Cloud Co.; C. M. Collins, Bransford, Washington Co.; B. S. Conley, Glen Elder, Mitchell Co.

Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. Let your baskets be well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

Kansas Campmeeting.—The Southern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Topeka, Shaunee Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 13th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been appointed as committee of arrangements, and are expected to be on the ground the day appointed to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: A. S. Covey, Chairman, Ployboy, Shaunee Co.; J. H. Peak, Mont Cenis, Dick. Co.; Orson Lewis, No. Lawrence, Douglas Co.; C. Crowell, Pleasanton, Lim. Co.; Levi R. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co. Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Bring your baskets well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Wash. Co., Kansas.

Kansas.—Notice is hereby given that the Kansas Mission Tent will be pitched at Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas, August 27th, if the Lord will. Services will commence at eight o'clock P. M., and continue over two Sundays. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come; and let us work for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. Come one, come all.

R. F. Clark, Sec. Adv. Chris. Conf., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

Alton Bay.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. Couch, for Com.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. Couch.

Vermont Campmeeting.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced. H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Jer. Carr, Chairman.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. Mitchell, for Com.

Edwin Burnham will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, from the second Sabbath in July till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer.

E. Burnham.

Tremont Mass. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont will commence (the Lord willing) Monday, July 20th, and continue until the 30th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board, and those with lodging who cannot bring tents. Those who can are requested to do so.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, do make one more effort to devote a few days in meeting with his dear saints on this consecrated ground, for it will very likely be the last time we shall have to meet on this spot before our Lord will come. We intend having some of his servants who are prepared to give the evidences we have of our soon deliverance, and labor with us to secure the salvation of the lost, that some, at least, may share with us in the hope of eternal life.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

There will be a team in readiness upon the arrival of the 9.30 A. M. train from the North and Troy, and the 6.30 P. M. from Troy and the North, at the Bennington depot, when brethren and sisters will be taken to the meeting free of charge. W. O. Higley.

Dedication.—Providence permitting, the Advent Christian chapel in Woodford, Vt., will be dedicated for the worship of God, Friday, July 24th. The services will commence at two o'clock P. M. Eld. A. W. Sibley, of Sandy Hill, will deliver the dedicatory sermon. It will be seen that this service is in connection with the quarterly meeting of the Hoosick Valley conference. We hope it will be a glorious meeting, fruitful of good results. Brethren in the ministry, let us lay aside all malice, envy, and evil speaking, likewise joking and jesting, and come to this meeting with the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, and while one plants and another waters, we may confidently expect that God will give the increase.

For the church, W. O. Higley.

N. B. As there is to be a change in the running of the trains, we are unable to state at what time the team will be at the depot, but will give due notice. W. O. H.

Tent Meeting.—The tent meeting at West Amesbury will continue through this week, and over Sunday, July 12th. There has been good attendance and good interest. We expect Bro. Stockman and the Haverhill church to be with us Sunday, July 12th. Other laborers are expected during the week. Here is a good field of labor. Let all who can, come and help us in the work.

Enoch Morrill.

Quarterly Meeting.—The next quarterly meeting of the first Christian Church of Wayland and Loon Lake, called the Church of God, will be held at Wallace, N. Y., commencing July 11th, at one o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come in the name of the Lord. Eld. D. Cogswell is expected to assist in preaching the word.

For the church, E. C. Cowles, Pastor.

The Evangel Tent will be pitched in Wiscasset July 7th. Meetings will continue over Sunday. Those coming will bring food and bedding for themselves. Room can be had in tent for lodging, etc. Brn. and Srs., come and help.

H. B. Sevey.

The Lord willing, there will be a two days meeting at the Button school-house, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing evening of July 17th, and over the Sabbath. All are invited.

For the Brn., E. H. Eggleston,
E. A. Keeler.

Dedication.—The new chapel at Westfield, Mass., will be dedicated to the Lord Sunday, July 12th, P. M., as a place of worship for the Advent Christian Church. J. Hemenway, Pastor.

Take Notice.—Those living in the southwestern district of Wisconsin A. C. conference, wishing quarterly meetings held with them, will please correspond with the writer at Arena, Iowa Co., Wis. The first one is past, the third one is engaged. Philo Hitchcock.

To the Churches of the New Hampshire Conference.—At the annual session of the N. H. Conference at Manchester, you chose for a protracted and tent-meeting committee, Enoch Morrill, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Fletcher. Now these brethren (like most of our preaching brethren) have families to support, and other expenses and demands to meet; and as the design of the tent is to go in new places where there is little or no interest in the coming of Christ, it needs money to carry on this mission work. But little has been done as yet by your committee in protracted meetings; but it is the desire of your committee that the tent be in the field, and faithful laborers with it. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have means with which God has blessed you to help in this mission work, whatever you send to either of your committee, specifying it for the tent and mission work, will be faithfully appropriated to that object, and God will bless the giver, and the means under God will result in the salvation of some poor lost sinner. Enoch Morrill, South Deerfield, N. H., for the committee.

Hoosick Conference Tent.—The Tent Committee have settled on the following points: (1) To keep the tents in new fields the coming season, if funds are provided to meet the expenses. (2) To hold the first meeting at Pittston, N. Y., if desired. (3.) To employ C. W. Baker as tent-master, with a salary of $12 a week. (4.) That subscriptions and payments for this work are now in order, and should be sent at once to J. B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., who is the Conference Treasurer, and will acknowledge all sums received. This is an important enterprise, and should be sustained. Whether the tent shall be in service every week of this season depends upon the action of individuals within the conference. Prompt liberality will ensure early and steady work all summer. The committee do not care to issue a long begging appeal; we only say we think it the duty of this conference to support their tent mission, and expect "every man to do his duty." As we sow, so shall we reap.

Those who want meetings will write at once to H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt., stating how much they will raise toward the expenses, that we may know what provision to make in the case, and just what to depend upon. (5) We intend, as far as possible, to provide laborers within the conference; but will make any consistent arrangement with those who may desire preachers from abroad. (6) Any further information can be obtained by addressing either of the committee, and enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. Ag't.

THE BIBLE BANNER.

This paper is edited by Elds. John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, Miles Grant, and others, and is published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of the Crisis three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free.

All orders for the Banner and Crisis should be addressed to Geo. T. Adams, 160 Hanover street, Boston, Mass. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner alone, should be addressed to H. A. King, P. O. Box 2289 New York.

PAPAL ROME.

BY ELD. S. S. BREWER.

This work states the predictions concerning the Papacy in its glory, its gloom, and destruction, together with the most reliable points of history showing their fulfillment, with a graphic statement of her present dying state. The widowhood, the moaning over her fate, the dying struggles under her afflictions, losses, poverty, and burning, are brought out in present history. It is a work of value for its historical quotations, which will be wanted by all interested in this subject.

Single copy 15 cts. by mail; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per hundred by express.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

For sale at this Office. Ag't.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. Ag't.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

"YEA, LET HIM TAKE ALL."

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee.
Take my hands, and let me move
At the impulse of thy love.
Take my feet, and let them be
Swift and beautiful for thee.
Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only for my King.
Take my lips, and let them be Filled with messages from thee.
Take my silver and my gold—
Not a mite would I withhold.
Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.
Take my intellect, and use
Every power as thou shalt choose.
Take my will and make it thine;
It shall be no longer mine.
Take my heart—it is thine own,
It shall be thy royal throne.
Take my love—my Lord, I pour
At thy feet its treasure-store!
Take myself, and I will be
Ever, only, all for thee!

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

R. R. LADD.

(Concluded.)

From what has been said in my former article, the "thoughtful" may begin to anticipate where my difficulty with the commonly accepted theory has been. I know of no exception among Second Advent writers in America, who have adopted William Miller's rule of interpretation and explanation of the "prophecy of Daniel" in their application of that prophecy, concerning the division of Western Rome into ten kingdoms, as being the fulfillment in the formation of the ten toes of the image, and as it has revolved in my mind, I have involuntarily smiled at the credulity with which every one of us accepted that theory as being "strong as holy writ," and true beyond successful contradiction.

I have before me now an author, writing upon this prophecy as late as 1857, who says: "Rome was divided into Eastern and Western by Constantine A. D. 328, where the feet of the image began." Was not that rather early in the history of Rome, as connected with the great image, for the "feet" to be formed? It looks to me more like the formation of the "legs of iron," especially when we consider that now at this date, and onward, her mighty "iron strength" was manifested; but no one ever disputed the statement that I am aware.

The same author goes on to say that "the ten barbarian kingdoms" were the toes, etc., and gives their names and dates as follows: "The first ten kingdoms were as follows: 1. The Hunns in Germany, A. D. 356. 2. The Ostrogoths in Mysia, A. D. 377. 3. The Visigoths in Panonia, 378. 4. The Franks in France, A. D. 407. 5. The Vandals in Africa, A. D. 407. 6. The Sueves and Alans in Gasconia and Spain, A. D. 407. 7. The Burgundians in Burgundy, A. D. 407. 8. The Heruli in Italy, A. D. 476. 9. The Saxons and Anglo in Britain, A. D. 476. 10. The Lombards in Germany, A. D. 483;" and then adds, "If in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established, then this point is abundantly proved;" and no one dissents from this statement, to my knowledge.

The same author to whom I have referred says farther on: "It has been commonly supposed that Christ set up his kingdom over the whole earth at his first coming, but the image was not then complete. How could he smite an image before it was made? The feet were not on until three hundred years after Christ, and the toes were not on until near five hundred years; but he was to smite the image on his feet, not on his head of gold, nor on his legs. How could he smite the feet three hundred years before they were in existence?" And again, "This last, fourth, Roman, universal kingdom, is evidently now in existence. It is now fifteen hundred years since the toes were first formed." It would be a very fair question to ask our author in his own language, How could the feet be formed before the legs had appeared? as it will soon be seen that at this date, A. D. 328, the legs had just begun.

Now I propose to my "thoughtful" readers, to give them a lesson in drawing. If any of them have a "creative turn of mind," go with me to the blackboard or slate, and with crayon or pencil we will sketch the image as described by our author, and almost, if not quite universally accepted by the Second Advent body in this country. We will commence with the "head of gold," the Assyrian kingdom. This is numbered and finished in its fair and correct proportions. Now the "breast and arms of silver," the Medo-Persian, we complete in symmetry with the head. Then the belly and sides of brass, the Grecian, is made to conform with the rest. (And here let us remark that the Grecian division was very much shorter than either of the others, and should occupy but little space in the image).

Now we will begin the "iron" division, and as we know that Rome was consolidated for centuries after she became "mistress of the world," we must begin her history above the hips, or in the loins of the image. Our author informs us, and we have no reason to doubt his correctness, that Rome was divided into Eastern and Western in 328 A. D. So in our drawing, we place all the image from the loins and hips to the thighs, in that space. Observe, that the image to this point is in fair proportion, each point with the others; the body is perfect and complete. Now commences the difficulty which has always stumbled me. We begin to draw the "legs of iron" and come down twenty-eight years to three hundred and fifty-six, and commence to form—not a leg, not a foot, but a toe; but we are obliged to do it to be consistent "with our faith." Twenty-one years after we begin another toe; one year later another toe; twenty-nine years later we begin four toes; sixty-nine years later two more toes; seven years later and we start the last toe; and all this time our legs, or leg, rather, grows very slowly, for all the toes begin between A. D. three hundred and fifty-six, and four hundred and eighty-three, or a period of one hundred and twenty-seven years; and a singular inconsistentcy is, they are all on one leg, or what ought to be a leg, but does not reach near the knees.

Now we draw our line, representing the toes, down through a period of from fifteen thousand to sixteen thousand years, to the present time, or more than twice the length of the whole body of the image, and we are surprised to find that we are drawing a perfect monstrosity, out of all proportion with the rest of the image, and begin to feel that it is time it should be smitten by a stone or something else, and stop its growth. I ask my "thoughtful" brethren if the picture is not drawn correctly, more in harmony with our unquestioning faith? Now had we not better re-examine the ground of our belief, and ascertain if there is not a better explanation for that prophecy? I think we have been too hasty in our conclusions, and too credulous in accepting theories that were merely assumptions.

Let us look at two or three things that have escaped our notice. 1. In Dan. 11: 2, in describing the image, the prophet never mentions any division until he comes down to the feet and toes. This is important; and it fully settles the question that the image, as presented to the Gentile monarch, who was its head, and as explained by the prophet of God, remains intact in all its fair proportions until the feet are formed, which could not have been earlier than the great Reformation of the sixteenth century.

2. Dan. 7, presents us with a vision seen by the prophet himself, corresponding in its general features to that of chap. 2, which he interpreted. Here we have the remarkable characteristics of the fourth beast described minutely, and among other things are mentioned the ten-kingdom division, and here began our error in applying these divisions to the unbroken, stalwart image of Nebuchadnezzar, for which we have no reason or authority.

Let us take a look at the "great and terrible beast," as seen on all our charts. His body is perfect, all well proportioned, but has the most unnatural and hideous "headship" that was ever conceived, and upon the head are placed horns which we have interpreted as representing the ten or eleven divisions of the Western Empire. But it will be observed that it does not divide the body of the beast, but only adds new instruments of cruelty to the sanguinary and awful power which controls them. Now look at those horns on the head, the seat of power of the great and dreadful beast of chap. 7, and see if we can reasonably conclude that they are the toes of the image described in chap. 2, which are the very embodiment of weakness, being represented by miry clay.

My thoughts are before you, dear brethren, and if they are worthy of perusal, I hope you will give them candid attention. I believe, most devoutly, that we are in the formative time of the toes which must be the last thing formed to complete the image, with two legs of iron, with foot and toes on each in harmony. They are rapidly developing, and will soon be complete, and then the "Stone of Israel," the "tried and precious Stone," the "chief corner Stone," will smite to utter destruction the image in all its parts, and become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth. "Even so. Come, Lord Jesus. Come quickly."

SHOWING PITY.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Be pitiful."—1 Pet. 3: 8.

The christian character is not made up of a few great acts, during one's life-time, but is interwoven throughout from beginning to end with unnumbered little deeds of kindness. The man who conquers a nation, or discovers a planet, may have a world-wide fame, and yet be destitute of the smallest christian virtue. That poor old widow, living in yonder cottage, scarcely known five miles from home, may have a name written with angel fingers in the Lamb's book of life. Though poor herself, yet all her life long she has been full of sympathy, pitiful to the poor, and abounding in deeds of kindness. It is not the tall oak on yonder hill, with wide-spreading branches, that makes the hill beautiful and useful to the farmer; but unnumbered thousands of little blades of grass, giving food to his cattle and pasturage to his flocks. It is not one great, mighty Amazon, running through the centre of the earth, that waters it and makes it fruitful; but ten thousand times ten thousand little springs, and rills, and brooks, gushing up on the hill-sides and in the valleys, that causes the flowers to bloom, and the meadows and orchards to flourish. It is not one great, eloquent sermon, or one great donation, or one great act of self-denial, that makes up the sum of the christian life; it is the love of Christ in the heart, showing itself in unnumbered loving words, and acts of tenderness and benevolence toward the poor and suffering ones of humanity.

Nothing but faith in the Holy Scriptures, through the agency of the Divine Spirit, can change the natural heart, making it tender, pitiful, and Christ-like. The religion of Christ is beautiful in itself, and the more it is examined and exhibited, the more its beauty and richness appear. One who knew its fulness has exhorted us to exercise this one important element—"Be pitiful."

A SCOURGE.

B. F. FRENCH.

For the last few years, all kinds of plagues, and every description of evil and calamity, seem to have been let loose upon this old earth. Earthquakes, fires, floods, tornadoes, pestilence, famine, and disasters on sea and land, have all been employed in the terrible work of destruction. Away up here in Me., we have escaped many evils which have visited other localities; and notwithstanding the winters have been long and severe, and the crops have been light from various causes, and farmers have been obliged to work hard to obtain a livelihood, yet we felt that we were a favored people. But now a scourge has come from which there seems to be no escape. "For a nation has come up upon our land, strong and without number, whose teeth are like the teeth of a lion. The land is as a garden before them, and behind them is a desolate wilderness. They march every one on his way, . . . they run on the walls, they climb up upon the houses and enter in at the windows like a thief; . . and before their faces the people are much pained." Joel 1 and 2.

In short, we are beset and overrun by caterpillars, or, as many think, the army worm. They are larger and more destructive and harder to destroy than any caterpillar we have ever known before. The farmers have been battling them for weeks, and have destroyed them by the bushel, and still they come. Whole orchards, which a few days ago were beautifully decorated with green leaves and white blossoms, now look sere and dead as in midwinter. Destroy all you can find on a tree to-day, and to-morrow your work will need to be done over. They are crawling on the ground, rocks, fences, buildings, and hang on the trees in great bunches like swarms of bees. Many of them come from the woods, for the forests are alive with them. We can see from the top of a hill near by hundreds of acres of woodland, which looks as though fire had run through; for not a green leaf is left. After stripping one tree, they march to another, and now they are attacking the potatoes.

What the end will be we cannot tell, but the outlook is dark for those who cannot see the gleam of morning light; but to those who are watching, this state of things is only another evidence that this earth is waxing old like a garment, and as a vesture it must soon be changed. And when that change takes place, all the evils which annoy and trouble us here will be forever banished from this earth, now so heavily burdened with the curse. Now men have to toil and strive and dispute every inch of ground with some inveterate foe. Not only does poor fallen man have to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and dig his sustenance from mother earth; but everything he tries to raise is beset by some scourge. But after the change, when redemption's glorious morning is ushered in, all the foes which man has battled with so long, and all the effects of the curse, will be cleaned out forever. Then let us try and be patient; the sun will soon break through the clouds, and light and joy be ushered in, and darkness shall never more gather around the redeemed of our God.

Norway, Me., June 22nd, 1874.

UTTERMOST.

The very thought of an "uttermost" salvation thrills my soul. How far does that extend—beyond the reach of temptation? No; but above the power of sin. Sin pardoned, Satan dethroned, guilt washed out by the blood, and the heart made pure—yes, whiter than snow.

The saved one, however, is still exposed to temptation. In many unexpected forms, and often with redoubled energy, the adversary will pursue and strike; but our Advocate is an invulnerable fortress. In him the believer is secure; but only while abiding in him.

Do those who are saved to the uttermost feel their helplessness and constant need of Christ? Most certainly. With this consciousness of perfect deliverance we feel our own nothingness.

Safety, success, victory, all depend on a life of faith—the faith of the Son of God. Each moment covered with his righteousness, upheld by his might, and permeated by his presence, the "wicked one" cannot harm us.

But this is not merely a condition of delightful exemption from annoyance, it is an exercise of the will—always in exact harmony with, and submission to the will of God, and the employment of all our time, talents, energies and influence, obedient to the dictates of the Master's voice, which comes to the soul asking—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

If the command should be, "Leave all and follow me," it will be hailed with as much delight as if no sacrifice or suffering is required. The latter will cause no murmur. Heaviness may at times fall upon the spirit. Overflowing joy may be a stranger to the soul, and storms of sorrow may successively beat upon our house; but it falls not; for it is founded on a rock. . . .

To the weary and heavy-laden with sin, and all the train of evils it has propagated in our nature, and the world around us, the glad tidings of an uttermost Savior, come, and whosoever will, may by simply looking, live. If we interpose no objection, but let him save, he will, and to all the lengths, and breadths, and depths and heights of human need, if we "come unto God by him."

When saved, how may we know the fact? "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits," and the fruits of the Spirit will be in us and abound—"love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, charity." —Methodist Home Journal.

KINDLING HEAVENLY FIRES.

D. F. NEWTON.

The Bible holds the first place among the means of implanting and promoting divine life in the soul; and the christian who fails to keep in some way the great truths of the Bible steadily before his mind, will find the vigor of his graces departing. No other reading will serve as a substitute for reading the Bible. No other study or meditation will answer the purpose of the word of Christ, dwelling in us richly in all wisdom. If we look for religion to be revived, our expectation will be realized, only by the mind of the church being brought in steadier contact with the lively oracles. When the christian mind awakes from its comparative coldness to a higher state of vitality and devotedness, the word of God invariably does the work of an instrument of the quickening. And when conviction of sin, and those struggles of mind which are wont to precede conversion, are experienced by the impenitent, it is the contents of the Bible which have introduced them; and that religious experience which holds the Bible at a distance, or that does not stand immediately connected with some fact or principle of the divine word, is spurious.

The habitual reading of the Bible, joined with prayerful meditations, becomes then a duty of the first importance. That eminently devoted and faithful servant of Christ, Cotton Mather, born 1762, to kindle heavenly fires in his soul resorted to a method similar to that of George Muller, musing and meditating on God's word, prayerfully, till his whole being was gospelized. Christ was ever present with him—"The way, the truth, and the life." "The fairest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely." He says: "The thoughts of Christ have become exceedingly frequent with me; I meditate on his glorious person, as the eternal and the incarnate Son of God; and I behold the infinite God as coming to me, and meeting with me in this blessed meditation. I fly to him on multitudes of occasions every day, and am impatient if many minutes have passed without some recourse to him. Every now and then I rebuke myself for having been so long without any thought of my Savior; how can I bear to keep at such a distance from him? I then look up to him, and say, O my Savior, draw near unto me! O, come to dwell in my soul, and help me to cherish some thoughts wherein I shall enjoy Thee; and upon this I set myself to think of what he has done, is doing, and what he will do for me. I find the subject inexhaustible, and after I have been thus employed in the day, I fall asleep at night in the midst of some meditation on the glory of my Savior; so I fall asleep in Jesus, and when I awake in the night, I do on my bed 'seek him whom my soul loveth;' on awaking, the desires of my soul still carry me to him who was last in my thoughts when I fell asleep." "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." Psa. 37: 37.

GOOD COUNSEL.

C. C. DARLING.

"To all the saints in Christ Jesus scattered abroad. Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. I desire that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God. And this I pray, that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; that ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ, being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God.

"I beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."

REPORT OF WISCONSIN CONFERENCE.

Met at Merrimack, June 4th, 1874. Eld. G. W. Barnes was elected President, and Wm. Sheldon, Secretary. The following brethren were chosen as a Business committee: Wm. Sheldon, N. A. Hitchcock, and O. Thomas. Also a committee on ordination was appointed as follows: E. P. Graves, Geo. Howard, N. A. Hitchcock, H. Hitchcock, and Wm. Sheldon. The following new churches were received into the conference: Belville, Williamsburg, Gilmanton, and Menomonee.

Heard reports from the various ministers belonging to the Conference, and also from its numerous churches, too lengthy to repeat in a newspaper, indicating a degree of prosperity in the State.

Our afflicted Bro. Thomson came upon the ground, being carried on a bed. As he submitted his report in writing, we here append it.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Conference Assembled: Not being able to attend the sittings of the Conference conveniently, I beg leave to submit a brief report in writing. I have no special labors to report, having preached but three times since the last Conference, and then sitting in my chair or lying upon my bed, but I assure you, my dearly beloved brethren in the ministry, that my desire has been intense to co-operate with you in your noble and glorious work of proclaiming the last message to a judgment-bound generation. I am glad that I still am counted worthy to have a name and a place with you. And when I hear and read of your successful labors in preparing a people for the Lord, I feel that I would gladly give up everything for the privilege of standing up with you in the battle fray. God in his infinite goodness has permitted me to come upon this camp ground, and I have been greatly blessed, and I feel that I shall receive still greater blessings if the brethren still continue to pray for me. Dearly beloved brethren and sisters, my heart is with you in this work, and if we should not be permitted to labor together, let me exhort you to be true to your calling, true to your Lord, true to his cause, and when Jesus comes we shall reign together with him, gloriously in his kingdom. Still pray for your unworthy brother, waiting for the Life-giver to come. Your brother in Christ,

George Thomson.

The conference elected the following brethren to take supervision of the four quarterly meeting districts of the State: Southern District, Geo. Howard; Eastern District, E. P. Graves; North Western District, G. O. Turner; South Western District, Philo Hitchcock.

The following preamble and resolution was presented and passed:

Whereas, the W. A. C. P. Society, from causes which we do not feel it necessary to mention, has become crippled to a great extent in its finances, we, the Advent people of the State of Wisconsin, in conference assembled, Resolve, That we will do what we can to sustain the publication of the A. C. Times, feeling that it is the organ of the Advent people in the West, and so long as it is conducted on its present basis, it is worthy of our support.

The following brethren were elected as a campmeeting committee for 1875, if time continues: Wm. Sheldon, H. M. Jones, and O. Thomas.

The conference was held in connection with our State campmeeting. The meeting was harmonious. Some few were converted and reclaimed, and five were baptized. Brn. H. L. Hastings, from Boston, and D. S. Clark, from Ill., besides a goodly number of our home ministers, were present to preach the word. A good influence will go out from the meeting into remote parts of the State.

On the last day of the meeting, Bro. Anson Brown, and Bro. Byron Meigs were ordained as ministers of Christ. The meeting closed with the Lord's Supper. Many are impressed with the conviction that we are within a few months of the judgment.

Wm. Sheldon.

He who giveth the most light to the world, will always be able to discover his own darkness.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A STORY AND ITS LESSONS.

I read a story, and the words
Fell on my heart as silver chords,
Like those a sweet-voiced harp affords.
Of time nor place it did not say;
It seemed a land far, far away,
Where rich and great a king held sway.
The winter spread its robe of snow
O'er palace proud and cottage low,
And iced the streamlets in their flow.
One day a woman left her door,
Weary with toil and sorrow sore,
While very scanty was her store.
A tender child lay drooping there,
Whose paleness made it seem more fair
To her fond heart of love and care.
And so she wandered out, to seek
Some dainty bit, for her whose cheek
Told more of want than words can speak.
Against the cold, but thinly clad,
She weary walked alone and sad,
If she might make her sweet child glad.
At length she reached a palace gate,
Where passed the royal and the great,
In all the pomp and pride of state.
Proud arches spanned the royal way;
She saw sweet crystal fountains play
Where paths of beauty winding lay.
But where she chanced at length to pass,
She saw beneath a roof of glass
Sweet flowers in bloom, and plots of grass.
Charmed with the view she asked consent,
And through the fairy bowers she went;
It gave her weary heart content.
She saw a grape vine rising high,
And there before her wondering eye
A cluster hung most temptingly.
"O, could my darling have but this;
Could her pale lips those dainties kiss,"
Thought she, "'twould give her perfect bliss."
Within her purse was half a crown;
'Twas all that she could call her own;
And thus she said in modest tone:
"O gardener, sir! pray will you sell
This bunch of grapes? the price please tell;
My poor sick child would love them well."
"I'll give you half a crown," she said;
"I know we need it all for bread;
But I would cheer my child instead."
"Nay!" said the gardener, "hence! away!"
And rudely turned her out that day,
To bear a heart like heavy clay.
At home she searched her scanty store,
And looked her wardrobe o'er and o'er;
What might she sell for something more?
She thought at last to spare her shawl,
And sold it for a pittance small;
For her sick child she could give all.
And thus did she her steps retrace,
Until again within the place
She stood before the gardener's face.
"I bring thee now a crown," she said,
And anxiously the mother plead,
Until he turned with anger red,
And drove her from the place once more;
With heart still sadder than before,
She weeping turned to leave the door.
A daughter of the king unseen,
Had stood behind a leafy screen,
And heard the words that passed between;
And coming from her hiding place,
She stood with mild, benignant face,
And reaching forth her hand with grace,
She plucked the cluster from its stem;
A richer gift than any gem
That sparkled in her diadem.
She laid it in the woman's hand,
And spake with loving words and bland,
Though born to govern and command.
"My father is a king," she said,
"And not a merchant born or bred,
Who by his traffic must be fed.
My father is a king, and he Gives like a king right royally;
Then take this gift for thine and thee."
O lighter than the snow-flakes fall,
She sought her treasure and her all
Within her dismal cottage wall.
But sweeter than the cluster fair,
Those royal words made music there,
And soothed that home of grief and care.
And so I hear a sweet voice say,
As in my wintry paths I stray,
"Not as the world give I away."
Thou canst not buy the grapes divine
That hang upon the living vine;
Ask but the clusters—they are thine.
God like a king gives evermore,
And he invites the sad and poor
Within his royal temple door.
A king he is, and in his hands
Are more than houses, more than lands—
To give them all he waiting stands.
Just in the shadows by the way,
The royal Savior stands to-day,
To see thy need, and hear thee pray.
What wilt thou, soul! which shall it be,
Or rich or poor, o'er death's dark sea?
To ask or not, tells all for thee.
Restrain thy lips from prayer no more;
The fruit of love is running o'er—
Ask and receive the boundless store.

THE BEGGAR BOY.

The following story beautifully illustrates the power of kindness.

"Go away from there, you old beggar boy! You've no right to be looking at our flowers," shouted a little fellow from the garden where he was standing.

The poor boy who was pale, dirty, and ragged, was leaning against the fence, admiring the splendid show of roses and tulips within. His face reddened with anger at the rude language, and he was about to answer defiantly, when a little girl sprang out from an arbor near, and looking at both, said to her brother:

"How could you speak so, Herbert! I'm sure his looking at the flowers don't hurt us." And then, to soothe the wounded feelings of the stranger, she added: "Little boy, I'll pick you some flowers if you'll wait a moment," and she immediately gathered a pretty boquet, and handed it through the fence.

His face brightened with surprise and pleasure, and he earnestly thanked her.

Twelve years after this occurrence, the girl had grown to a woman. One bright afternoon she was walking with her husband in the garden, when she observed a young man in workman's dress, leaning over the fence, and looking attentively at her and at the flowers. Turning to her husband she said,

"It does me good to see people admiring the garden; I'll give that young man some of the flowers;" and approaching him she said, "Are you fond of flowers, sir? it will give me great pleasure to gather you some."

The young workman looked a moment into her fair face, and then said in a voice tremulous with feeling: "Twelve years ago I stood here, a ragged little beggar boy, and you showed me the same kindness. The bright flowers and your pleasant words made a new boy of me; ay, and they made a man of me too. Your face, madam, has been a light to me in many dark hours of life, and now, thank God, though that boy is still a humble, hard-working man, he is an honest and a grateful one."

Tears stood in the eyes of the lady as, turning to her husband, she said, "God put it into my young heart to do that little kindness, and see how great a reward it has brought."—Amer. Agriculturist.

PARENTS' PARADISE.

We were much impressed lately by the orderly behavior of a large family of children, particularly at the table. We spoke of it to our host; and he pointed to a paper pinned to the wall, on which were written some excellent rules. He said he gave each child who obeyed the rules some reward at the end of each month. We begged a copy for the benefit of our readers. They were called rules and regulations for parents' paradise.

1. Shut every door after you, and without slamming it.
2. Never shout, jump, or run in the house.
3. Never call to persons up stairs or in the next room; if you wish to speak to them, go quietly where they are.
4. Always speak kindly and politely to the servants, if you would have them do the same to you.
5. When told to do, or not to do a thing, by either parent, never ask why you should or should not do it.
6. Tell of your own faults and misdoings, not of those of your brothers and sisters.
7. Carefully clean the mud or snow off boots before entering the house.
8. Be prompt at every meal hour.
9. Never sit down at the table or in the parlor with dirty hands or tumbled hair.
10. Never interrupt any conversation, but wait patiently your turn to speak.
11. Never reserve your good manners for company, but be equally polite at home and abroad.
12. Let your first, last, and best, confidant be your mother.—Wayside.

ANTI-TOBACCO.

Who has not heard of George Trask and his life-long campaign against tobacco? Burned out at Boston, he arose from the ashes young as ever, and strong for renewed life. In his quarterly speeches he speaks of the redemption from this slavery on this wise:

"We shall be told that good men use tobacco. Who doubts it? Good men in olden times dabbled in polygamy, held slaves and drank rum, but, thank God, light has come and such men have risen pretty much above all that sort of thing, and is it not high time that good men should trample tobacco under foot, and no longer allow it to have dominion over them? We have an excess of soporifics in Zion. Hence we have a prodigious amount of church members who are stolid and inactive. Alas! we have members not a few, who have a name to live, but upon whose foreheads you might write, dead, but not buried, with no very flagrant violation of the ninth commandment. Now we maintain that men who are for the 'higher life,' who live near God, are not slaves to this lethean influence. What devoted missionary in this, or other lands? What evangelist, what revivalist sounding the gospel trumpet amidst the churches? What preacher, what pastor of any spiritual eminence can be named who is the victim of this narcotic?

But however unable irreligious men may be to renounce tobacco—whatever difficulties some professedly good men may experience, still it should be said with gratitude to God, that there are men of the 'higher life,' men whose wills are identified with Christ's will, who have little or no trouble of this sort. Such we have, and they are meek and beautiful examples of christian consecration. They have relinquished this idol—the idol of two hundred millions—almost without an effort, and what is more, they have been raised superior to all vexatious hankerings for it.

Are we asked how this is done? We answer, they have fully surrendered their will to the divine will; they have no will of their own in this matter, irrespective of Christ's will, for their "life is hid with Christ in God." They abandoned this idol, not so much by reasoning, by argument, or by natural judgment, or by a divine consciousness in the soul, that it was the Lord's will that they should do it, and it was gladly done. "My yoke is easy—my burden is light."

APPETITE.

The craving of the stomach for articles of food and drink, as to time, and quality, and quantity, should always be viewed from an enlightened position.

The brain being placed above the stomach, is of itself an evidence that the brain should of course dictate to the appetite, not the appetite to the brain. Many say they will eat when hungry; and on this principle, the children eat little at the regular hours of partaking of food, but at almost every other hour of the day they are seen partaking of various articles of food and drink.

Reason teaches us that the Creator never intended his noblest work, man, to be constantly ministering to his appetite. The horse may eat at every hour of the day and night, and no law of nature be broken; not so with man. Man was originally created to fill a sphere but little below the angels. Man partakes of food but seldom, and at regular periods of time.

Nothing operates more unfavorably upon man than wrong modes of life and habits of diet. As an evidence of the mischievous effects of fast living, look about you. See this man all out of shape from rheumatism (he smokes and chews); here is another, bowed with palsy (he is a cigar maker); here is another, bloated with dropsy (he is a devotee to pork and coffee); here is another ready to fall into the earth, a consumptive (her family live in luxury, and she has for years spent her time over the cook stove).

Everywhere we see the sickly countenance of the dyspeptic, the bloodshot eye of the glutton and the drunkard, the swollen joint of the crippled victim of rheumatism, and disease in every form. Hygiene presents a preventive and a cure. Who is so self-denying as to practice it?—Jos. Clarke, in Health Reformer.

Temper and Health.—Good temper, with the majority of mankind, is dependant upon good health; good health upon good digestion; good digestion upon wholesome, well prepared food, eaten in peace and pleasantness. Ill-cooked, untidy meals, are a great cause of bad temper and many a moral wrong; and a person of sensitive physique may be nursed into settled hypochondria by living in close rooms, where the sweet, fresh air and sunshine are determinedly shut out, and the foul air as determinedly shut in.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

BY AND BY.

IDA ALBORN.

By and by, yes, by and by,
Our waiting eyes shall see
Christ descending from on high,
Zion, to ransom thee.

By and by, yes, by and by,
Shall be no wrong or strife;
For all sin shall cease and die,
When comes the Prince of Life.

By and by, yes, by and by,
Each weary heart shall rest;
No bosom shall heave a sigh,
When all are loved and blest.

By and by, yes, by and by,
From friends we shall not part;
For there sorrow comes not nigh,
It cannot touch the heart.

By and by, yes, by and by,
Sweet peace shall hold her sway;
With God's laws shall all comply,
Delighting to obey.

By and by, yes, by and by,
We'll see the land of light;
Oh! its beauty shall outvie
All our dreams and visions bright.

By and by, yes, by and by,
We'll see in clouds above,
Christ descending from on high,
Coming to reign in love.

THE RESURRECTION BODY.

H. BRITTAIN.

I purpose, the Lord helping, to send to you as opportunity presents itself, a series of extracts from a work treating on subjects of the greatest interest to those who accept the Scriptures as the word of truth. The careful and impartial consideration of the reader is desired as to the statements to be put before them, so that increased knowledge may abound of the ways and purposes of God, to the honor and glory of his name. It is true that many wander into regions of speculation when treating of scriptural subjects; but speculation should not be put forth as a barrier to sober thought. We should try not to pass beyond the mark, not below the mark. The requisite for us is, that we should rise to the level of the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus, both in doctrine and in deed. The extracts will comprise the examination of three distinct portions of the truth given to us concerning the resurrection body. 1. Its materiality. 2. Its aspect. 3. Its powers.

1. ITS MATERIALITY.

"Man's resuscitated, or resurrection body will be essentially MATERIAL." "It is perfectly astonishing how slow many are to acknowledge this truth; and among them there are some from whom we should have expected exactly the reverse, from the fact that they have treated kindred subjects in a way that one would suppose would have insured right views on this; but such is not the case. A striking instance is afforded in that very valuable work—The Religion of Geology, by Dr. Hitchcock. The talented author has been at great pains to show at considerable length, in one part of his work (ch. 11), that this earth will be man's future abode. He quotes largely from several other authors in favor of this view, and among them he gives a long extract from Dr. Chalmers' discourse 'On the New Heavens and the New Earth.' One would have supposed, therefore, that when he came to speak of the nature and condition of man's body hereafter, he would certainly regard it as material and physical; seeing that this would appear to be necessarily called for by the nature of his habitat or abode. A material earth calls for a material body to inhabit it. The nature of the one determines the nature of the other. There must always exist between them the same or a similar relation that there is at present. But what does Dr. Hitchcock suppose may be the nature of man's body hereafter? To those who are unacquainted with it, the answer must be extraordinary indeed, coming from such a source. He conceives that, very possibly, the resurrection body may consist of a 'luminiferous ether.' He should, however, speak for himself. After treating of the last conflagration, as described by St. Peter, and of certain imaginary difficulties which this may be supposed to place in the way of the earth being again inhabited by man, he proceeds as follows:—

'But is it not possible that our difficulty of conceiving how the spiritual body can enter at once upon its residence in the new heavens and earth, while yet the globe is only a shoreless ocean of fire,[*] results from a mistaken conception of the nature of the spiritual body? Do we not judge of it by our present bodies, and imagine that it must necessarily possess such an organization as would be destroyed by the extremes of heat and cold? and are authorized to draw such an inference? The Scriptures have, indeed, left us very much in the dark as to the specific nature of the future glorified body, which Paul calls a spiritual body. He does not mean that it is composed of spirit, for then it would not differ from the soul itself, by which it is to be animated. He certainly means that it is composed of matter and spirit. But of the existence of such a substance we have no positive evidence; and therefore must conclude the spiritual body to be matter; called spiritual, probably, because eminently adapted to form the immortal residence of pure spirit.

'Yet we learn from the apostle's description that it is not composed of flesh and blood, which, he says, 'cannot inherit the kingdom of God,' neither is it capable of decay, like our present bodies. Indeed, the illustration, which he derives from the decay and germination of a kernel of wheat, shows us that the future body will be as much unlike the present as a stock of wheat is different from the seed whence it sprang; and in appearance scarcely any two things are more unlike.

'Hence we may suppose the resurrection body of the righteous to be as different from that which the soul now animates, as matter can be in its most diverse forms.

'Now, the question arises, Do we know of any form of matter in the present world which remains the same at all temperatures, and in all circumstances, which no chemical or mechanical agencies can alter? a substance which remains unchanged in the very heart of the ice around the poles, and in the focus of a volcano; which remains untouched by the most powerful agents which the chemists can apply, and by the mightiest forces which the mechanician can bring to bear upon it? It seems to me that modern science does render the existence of such a substance probable, though not cognizable by the senses. It is the luminiferous ether, that attenuated medium by which light, and heat, and electricity, are transmitted from one part of the universe to another, by undulations of inconceivable velocity. This strange fluid, whose existence and action seem all but demonstrated by the phenomena of light, heat, and electricity, and perhaps, too, by the resistance experienced by Encke's, Bida's, and Halley's comets, must possess the extraordinary characteristic above pointed out. It must exist and act wherever we find light, heat, or electricity; and where do we not find them? They penetrate through what has been called empty space; and, therefore, this ether exists there, propagating its undulations at the astonishing rate of two hundred thousand miles per second. They emanate in constant succession from every intensely heated focus, such as the sun, the volcano, and the chemical furnace; and therefore, this strange medium is neither dissipated, nor affected by the strongest known heat. Both light and heat are transmitted through ice; and, therefore, this ether cannot be congealed. The same is true of glass and every transparent substance, however dense; and even the most solid metals convey heat and electricity with remarkable facility; and, therefore, this ether exists and acts with equal facility in the most solid masses as in a vacuum. In short, it seems to be independent of chemical or mechanical changes, and to act unobstructed in all possible modifications of matter; and, though too evanescent to be cognizable by the senses, or the most delicate chemical and mechanical tests, it possesses, nevertheless, a most astonishing activity.

'Now, I am not going to assert that the spiritual body will be composed of this luminiferous ether. But, since we know not the composition of that body, it is lawful to suppose that such may be its constitution. This is surely possible, and that is all which is essential to my present argument.'

"He proceeds to show that, 'admitting its truth,' certain conclusions follow; as for instance, that 'the spiritual body would be unaffected by all possible changes of temperature,' and be 'unharmed by chemical and mechanical agencies,' etc. (Ch. 9.)

"We learn from a subsequent page that this theory is not properly his own, but was suggested by another[*]; and that 'a similar view' had also been previously presented by Mr. Isaac Taylor, in his 'Physical Theory of Another Life.' But what strikes one as so astonishing is this: that such a view of the subject should for a moment be entertained by such a man as Dr. Hitchcock; and more especially, seeing that he has even laboriously sought to prove the materiality of that 'new earth' which man hereafter is to inhabit; and to establish, in short, its identity, so far as its substance or matter is concerned, with the present earth which is now inhabited by him. We shall presently see what the teaching of Scripture is upon the subject; but the nature and analogies of the case ought surely to have prevented the adoption of such a view as that which this theory presents.

"A material earth calls for a material body. We see this necessary connection between the present earth and its present material inhabitants; but of what use would it be to bodies composed of 'luminiferous ether'? They may reside in 'empty space,' one would suppose, as well as on a solid globe like this; nay, we see not why they should not dwell 'in airy nothing,' and find therein 'a local habitation and a name.' But the idea is too extravagant to be soberly discussed, and it would not have been noticed here at all, except for the purpose of showing what has actually been put forth by men of eminence and men of science, and that too at a most recent date; and to justify, moreover, the remark before made, that, notwithstanding all that may be said or proved with regard to the material nature of man's future inheritance, it would be still necessary to show that his resurrection body will be essentially material, and therefore in harmony with it. The case may also serve as a warning to all, who like the writer are engaged in the investigation of subjects of this kind, how they ever allow empty speculation to fill the place of proofs derived either from the facts of Nature, or from the words of revelation. When we have these to guide us, we may proceed with confidence; but without them we can do nothing.

"In the present case, however, we are not left without a guide, nor without positive data to reason upon. The Scriptures abound in references to the subject, and in positive declarations upon it, and these all alike imply THE MATERIALITY OF THE FUTURE BODY.

"There are a few passages, however, which are supposed not to do this, but rather to teach the contrary, and to a misapprehension of their meaning is doubtless, in a great measure, to be attributed the very prevailing idea that the resurrection body will be a kind of spiritual substance, very different, if not essentially so, from that of our present material frames. The following is the leading text of the kind:—'It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.' 1 Cor. 15: 44. On this a recent author,[*] who stood deservedly high in the world of science, remarks: 'If there be one point clear in their [the apostles'] declarations, it is that the resuscitated body will not be material. "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body"! (soma psychikon . . . pnumatikon.) 1 Cor. 15: 44.' Had this statement been reversed, and had it been affirmed that one of the clearest points in the apostolic writings, and in the New Testament generally, is, that the resuscitated body will be, what the present body is, essentially material, the assertion would have been somewhat nearer the truth. But a very little consideration of the above passage must readily convince any one that it determines nothing whatever as to the materiality or non-materiality of the body, but simply shows what will be the principle of life, or the animating principle, in the resurrection body of the believer in Christ, whose soul has already been in this life regenerated by the Holy Spirit. Rom. 8: 11.

"In the case of our present bodies, that principle is the psyche; in that of the resuscitated body, it will be the pneuma, or Holy Spirit. But if the arguments of Prof. Baden Powell were correct, it would prove that our present bodies are 'not material,' any more than our future ones will be, as maintained by him; for the psyche which animates them is no more material,[†] according to his view, than the pneuma is. It seems strange that this should not have recurred to him, and also to others who have argued much as he has done.

"But as this is a point of the first importance, and one on which very much depends, and one, moreover, on which much misconception prevails, it will be desirable to examine it somewhat more at length.

"Our English version of the above passage does not convey an adequate or correct idea of the meaning of the original; nor indeed does it appear to be in our power to give an exact rendering of it in English, for we seem to have no term which precisely corresponds with psychikon, nor any which will fully and definitely convey its meaning to the English reader. The words, however, are, I conceive, more fairly rendered as follows, than in any other way: 'There is an animal body, and there is a spiritual body.' This is Whitby's term. The Latin, too, gives 'corpus animale' (animal body). Coverdale [‡] has 'soulish.' Psychikon is derived from psyche—breath, life, soul, and is employed in the New Testament for that which is merely natural, or corrupt, as distinguished from that which has been produced by the Holy Spirit.[§] Thus: 'But the natural [psychikon] man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God,' etc. 1 Cor. 2: 14. 'Sensual [psychikon], having not the Spirit.' Jude 19. Psyche, from which, as before observed, psychikon is formed, exactly corresponds in meaning with the Hebrew nephesh, which is the term that occurs in the passage quoted by the apostle (ver. 45); viz., Gen. 2: 7—'And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, man became a living soul' [‖] (nephesh).

"What the apostle asserts, therefore, in the passage we are considering (1 Cor. 15: 44) is, in effect, this: that there is a body which, being animated by the psyche, must be called an animal, or soulish body (soma psychikon); and that there is (e. g., in the person of Christ), and will be (in the person of himself and people) a body which, because it will be animated by, or instinct with, the Holy Spirit, must be called a 'spiritual' body (soma pnumatikon). But it must be remembered, that it is THE SAME BODY IN BOTH CASES, only altered in condition; and that the difference consists in, or is caused by, the animating principle. The psyche is a perishing thing, or substance, whatever it may be, and hence the body which is animated by it is mortal; but the Holy Spirit is not so, and therefore the body which will be animated by Him will never perish."

[*] It may well indeed be difficult to conceive how a "spiritual body," or any other body, could do this; but it seems amazing that this talented author should not have seen the error of supposing that the earth will be inhabited at all after the conflagration, before all things have been made new. (Rev. 21: 5.) We have here, however, a striking illustration how a mistake on one subject leads us astray on another; and how constantly it is the case, that we are found laboriously engaged in endeavoring to meet and remove difficulties, which are purely of our own creation.

[§] It is used only in the following places: 1 Cor. 2: 14; 15: 44, 46, in all of which it is rendered "natural" in our English Version. Again, in James 3: 15, and Jude 19, in both of which it is rendered "sensual." But it will be observed, if reference be made to the Greek of 1 Cor. 2: 14 and 15, that St. Paul uses the two very same adjectives, viz., psychikon and pneumatikon, to distinguish respectively the regenerate and unregenerate man, as he does to describe the two kinds of body; and it is certain that he must do so in both cases on the very same ground, or for the very same reason; namely, because in the natural man, as in the natural body, the Holy Spirit is wanting, and because in the spiritual man, as in the spiritual body, the Holy Spirit is present. Comp. Rom. 8: 11. This, I conceive, is sufficient to decide the question.

[‖] It is a great mistake to suppose that the passage tends to prove, or that it in any way asserts, the immortality of the soul. It does nothing of the kind. It might with equal propriety have been rendered "man became a living creature" (nephesh), which is employed in a great variety of senses, is the term used to designate the lower animals in Gen. 1: 21, 24, and 2: 19,—"Every living creature." It is also used for "body," and even where a "dead" body is meant, e. g. Lev. 21: 2; Num 9: 6, 7, 10. Yet its most usual meaning, perhaps, is life, as is that of psyche.

YOU, who are so much on the mount with God on the Lord's day, ought to show it as Moses did, by the shining of your faces in all instances of wisdom and grace the week after.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.

Why then are there so many, even among sincere and godly ministers and people, who are so much opposed to the term, and so much alarmed at the profession? I answer, Because they think that no man can be fully saved from sin in this life. I ask, where is this, in unequivocal words, written in the New Testament? Where, in that book is it intimated that sin is not wholly destroyed till death takes place, and the soul and the body are separated? Nowhere. In the Popish baseless doctrine of purgatory, this doctrine, not with more rational consequences, is held; this doctrine allows that, so inveterate is sin, it cannot be wholly destroyed even in death; and that a penal fire, in a middle state between heaven and hell, is necessary to atone for that which the blood of Christ had not concelled; and to purge from that which the energy of the almighty Spirit had not cleansed before death.

Even papists could not see that a moral evil was detained in the soul through its physical connection with the body; and that it required the dissolution of this physical connection before the moral contagion could be removed. Protestants, who profess, and most certainly possess, a better faith, are they alone that maintain the deathbed purgatory; and how positively do they hold out death as the complete deliverer from all corruption, and the final destroyer of sin, as if it were revealed in every page of the Bible. Whereas, there is not one passage in the sacred volume that says any such thing. Were this true, then death, far from being the last enemy, would be the last and best friend, and the greatest of all deliverers; for if the last remains of all the indwelling sin of all believers is to be destroyed by death (and a fearful mass this will make), then death, that removes it, must be the highest benefactor of mankind. The truth is, he is neither the cause nor the means of its destruction. It is the blood of Jesus alone that cleanseth from all unrighteousness.

It is supposed that indwelling sin is useful even to true believers, because it humbles them and keeps them low in their own estimation. A little examination will show that this is contrary to the fact. It is generally, if not universally allowed, that pride is of the essence of sin, if not its very essence; and the root whence all moral obliquity flows. How then can pride humble us? Is not this absurd? Where is there a sincere christian, be his creed what it may, that does not deplore his proud, rebellious, and unsubdued heart and will, as the cause of all his wretchedness; the thing that mars his best sacrifices, and prevents his communion with God? How often do such persons say or sing, both in their public and private devotions,—

"But pride, that busy sin,
Spoils all that I perform!"

Were there no pride, there would be no sin; and the heart from which it is cast out has the humility, meekness, and gentleness of Christ implanted in its stead.

But still it is alleged, as an indubitable fact, that "a man is humbled under a sense of indwelling sin." I grant that they who see, and feel, and deplore their indwelling sin, are humbled; but is it the sin that humbles? No. It is the grace of God, that shows and condemns the sin that humbles us. Neither the devil nor his work will ever show themselves. Pride works frequently under a dense mask, and will often assume the garb of humility. How true is that saying, and of how many is it the language—

"Proud I am my wants to see, Proud of my humility."

And, to conceal his working, even Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. It appears then that we attribute this boasted humiliation to a wrong cause. We never are humbled under a sense of indwelling sin till the Spirit of God drags it to the light, and shows us, not only its horrid deformity, but its hostility to God; and he manifests it, that he may take it away; but a false opinion causes man to hug the monster, and to contemplate their chains with complacency.

"It has been objected to this perfection that the persons who profess to have been made thus perfect are proud and supercilious, and their whole conduct says to their neighbor, 'Stand by, I am holier than thou.' No person that acts so has ever received this grace. He is either a hypocrite or a self-deceiver. Those who have received it are full of meekness, gentleness, and long-suffering: they love God with all their hearts, they love even their enemies; love the whole human family, and are servants of all. They know they have nothing but what they have received. In the splendor of God's holiness they feel themselves absorbed. They have neither light, power, love, nor happiness, but from their indwelling Savior. Their holiness, though it fills the soul, yet is only a drop from the infinite ocean. The flame of their love, though it penetrates their whole being, is only a spark from the incomprehensible Sun of righteousness. In a spirit and in a way which none but themselves can fully comprehend and feel, they can say or sing,—

"I loathe myself when God I see,
And into nothing fall;
Content that Christ exalted be;
And God is all in all."

It has been no small mercy to me, that in the course of my religious life, I have met with many persons who professed that the blood of Christ had saved them from all sin, and whose profession was maintained by an immaculate life; but I never knew one of them that was not of the spirit above described. They were men of the strongest faith, the purest love, the holiest affections, the most obedient lives, and the most useful in society. I have seen such walking with God for many years; and as I had the privilege of observing their walk in life, so have I been privileged with their testimony at death, when their sun appeared to grow broader and brighter at its setting; and, though they came through great tribulation, they found that their robes were washed and made white through the blood of the Lamb. They fully witnessed the grand effects which in this life flow from justification, adoption, and sanctification; namely, assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, increase of grace, and perseverance in the same to the end of their lives. O God! let my life be like that of these righteous! and let my end be like theirs! Amen.

If men would but spend as much time in fervently calling upon God to cleanse the heart that he has not cleansed, as they spend in decrying this doctrine, what a glorious state of the church should we soon witness! Instead of compounding with iniquity, and tormenting their minds to find out with how little grace they may be saved, they would renounce the devil and all his works, and be determined never to rest till they had found that he had bruised him under their feet, and that the blood of Christ had cleansed them from all unrighteousness. Why is it that men will not try how far God will save them? nor leave off praying and believing for more and more, till they find that God has held his hand? When they find that their agonizing faith and prayer receive no further answer, then, and not till then, they will conclude that God will be no further gracious, and that he will not save to the uttermost them who come to him through Christ Jesus.

But it is farther objected, that even St. Paul himself denies this doctrine of perfection, disclaiming it in reference to himself. "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after." Phil. 3: 12. This place is mistaken; the apostle is not speaking of his restoration to the image of God, but to completing his ministerial course, and receiving the crown of martyrdom; as I have fully shown in my notes on this place, and to which I must beg to refer the reader. There is another point that has been produced, at least indirectly, in the form of an objection to this doctrine. "Where are those adult, those perfect christians? We know none such; but we have heard that some persons professing those extraordinary degrees of holiness have become scandalous in their lives." When a question of this kind is asked by one who fears God, and earnestly desires his salvation, and only wishes to have full evidence that the thing is attainable, that he may shake himself from the dust, and arise and go out, and possess the good land—it deserves to be seriously answered. To such I would say, There may be several, even in the circle of your own religious acquaintance, whose evil tempers and unholy affections God has destroyed; and having filled them with his own holiness, they are enabled to love him with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbor as themselves. But such make no empty professions; their conduct, their spirit, the whole tenor of their life, is their testimony.

Again: there may be none such among your religious acquaintance, because they do not know their privilege, or they unfortunately sit under a ministry where the doctrine is decried; and in such congregations and churches holiness never abounds; men are too apt to be slothful, and unfaithful to the grace they have received; they need not their minister's exhortations to beware of looking for or expecting a heart purified from all unrighteousness; striving or agonizing to "enter in at the strait gate" is not pleasant work to flesh and blood; and they are glad to have anything to countenance their spiritual indolence; and such ministers have always a powerful coadjutor, the father of lies; and the spirit of error will work in the unrenewed heart, filling it with darkness, and prejudice, and unbelief. No wonder, then, that in such places, and under such a ministry, there is no man that can be "presented perfect in Christ Jesus." But wherever the trumpet gives a certain sound, and the people go forth to battle, headed by the Captain of their salvation, there the foe is routed, and genuine believers brought into the liberty of the children of God.

As to some having professed to have received this salvation, and afterward become scandalous in their lives (though in all my long ministerial labors, and extensive religious acquaintance, I never found but one example), I would just observe that they might possibly have been deceived, thought they had what they had not; or they might have become unfaithful to that grace and lost it; and this is possible through the whole range of a state of probation. There have been angels who kept not their first estate; and we all know, to our cost, that he who was the head and fountain of the whole human family, who was made in the image and likeness of God, sinned against God, and fell from that state. And so may any of his descendants fall from any degree of the grace of God while in their state of probation; and any man and every man must fall, whenever he or they cease to watch unto prayer, and cease to be "workers together with God." Faith must ever be kept in lively exercise, working by love; and that love is only safe when found exerting its energies in the path of obedience.

An objection of this kind against the doctrine of christian perfection will apply as forcibly against the whole revelation of God as it can do against one of the doctrines, because that revelation brings the account of the defection of angels and of the fall of man. The truth is, no doctrine of God stands upon the knowledge, experience, faithfulness, or unfaithfulness of man; it stands on the veracity of God who gave it. If there were not a man to be found who was justified freely through the redemption that is by Jesus; yet the doctrine of "justification by faith" is true; for it is a doctrine that stands on the truth of God. And suppose not one could be found in all the churches of Christ whose heart was purified from all unrighteousness, and who loved God and man with all his regenerated powers, yet the doctrine of christian perfection would still be true; for Christ was manifested that he might destroy the work of the devil; and his blood cleanseth from all unrighteousness. And suppose every man be a liar, God is true.

It is not the profession of a doctrine that establishes its truth; it is the truth of God, from which it has proceeded. Man's experience may illustrate it; but it is God's truth that confirms it. In all cases of this nature, we must forever cease from man, implicitly credit God's testimony, and look to him in and through whom all the promises of God are yea and amen.

To be filled with God is a great thing; to be filled with the fulness of God is still greater; to be filled with all the fulness of God is greatest of all. This utterly bewilders the sense and confounds the understanding, by leading at once to consider the immensity of God, the infinitude of his attributes, and the absolute perfection of each. But there must be a sense in which even this wonderful petition was understood by the apostle, and may be comprehended by us. Most people, in quoting these words, endeavor to correct or explain the apostle by adding the word communicable. But this is as idle as it is useless and impertinent. Reason surely tells us that St. Paul would not pray that they should be filled with what could not be communicated. The apostle certainly meant what he said, and would be understood in his own meaning; and we may soon see what this meaning is.

By the "fulness of God," we are to understand all the gifts and graces which he has promised to bestow on man in order to his full salvation here, and his being fully prepared for the enjoyment of grace hereafter. To be filled with all the fulness of God is to have the heart emptied of and cleansed from all sin and defilement, and filled with humility, meekness, gentleness, goodness, justice, holiness, mercy, and truth, and love to God and man. And that this implies a thorough emptying of the soul of everything that is not of God, and leads not to him, is evident from this, that what God fills neither sin nor Satan can fill, nor in anywise occupy; for, if a vessel be filled with one fluid or substance, not a drop or particle of any other kind can enter it, without displacing the same quantam of the original matter as that which is afterward introduced. God cannot be said to fill the whole soul while any place, part, passion, or faculty is filled, or less or more occupied by sin or Satan! and as neither sin nor Satan can be where God fills and occupies the whole, so the terms of the prayer state that Satan shall neither have any dominion over that soul nor being in it.

A fulness of humility precludes all pride; of meekness, precludes anger; of gentleness, all ferocity; of goodness, all evil; of justice, all injustice; of holiness, all sin; of mercy, all unkindness and revenge; of truth, all falsity and dissimulation; and where God is loved with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, there is no room for enmity or hatred to him, or to anything connected with him; so, where a man loves his neighbor as himself, no ill shall be worked to that neighbor; but, on the contrary, every kind affection will exist toward him; and every kind action, so far as power and circumstances can permit, will be done to him. Thus the being filled with God's fulness will produce constant, pious, and affectionate obedience to him, and unvarying benevolence towards one's neighbor; that is, to any and every human being. Such a man is saved from all sin; the law is fulfilled in him; and he ever possesses and acts under the influence of that love to God and man which is the fulfilling of the law. It is impossible, with any Scriptural or rational consistency, to understand these words in any lower sense; but how much more they imply (and more they do imply), who can tell?

Many preachers, and multitudes of professing people, who are studious to find out how many imperfections and infidelities, and how much inward sinfulness are consistent with a safe state in religion; but how few, very few, are bringing out the fair gospel standard to try the height of the members of the church; whether they be fit for the heavenly army; whether their stature be such as qualifies them for the rank of the church militant, "the measure of the stature of the fulness" is seldom seen; the measure of the stature of littleness, dwarfishness, and emptiness is often exhibited.

Some say, "The body of sin in believers is, indeed, an enfeebled, conquered, and deposed tyrant, and the stroke of death finishes its destruction." So, then, the death of Christ and the influences of the Holy Spirit were only sufficient to depose and enfeeble the tyrant sin; but our death must come in to effect his total destruction. Thus our death is, at least partially, our Savior, and thus that which was an effect of sin ("for sin entered into the world, and death by sin"), becomes the means of finally destroying it; that is, the effect of a cause can become so powerful as to react upon that cause, and produce its annihilation. The divinity and philosophy of this sentiment are equally absurd. It is the blood of Christ alone that cleanses from all unrighteousness; and the sanctification of a believer is no more dependent on death than his justification. If it be said that "believers do not cease from sin till they die," I have only to say they are such believers as do not make a proper use of their faith; and what can be said more of the whole herd of transgressors and infidels? They cease to sin when they cease to breathe. If the christian religion brings no other privileges than this to its upright followers, well may we ask, "Wherein doth the wise man differ from the fool? for they have both one end!" But the whole gospel teaches a contrary doctrine.

ADDRESS ON THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Substance of the remarks of the Earl of Shaftesbury, K. G., at the London Conference, May, 1874.

It would be inappropriate in me to undertake to give instruction to this meeting on the subject of prophecy in the presence of so many of the clergy. I wish, however, to say that I think it most desirable for its study to be encouraged; and I think every man and woman should form their judgment upon such an important subject by constant reading and meditation upon the word of God.

I am quite sure of this, that one great result that would follow such a course would be that in these days of wide-spread insubordination and general Babel of thought and spirit, reverence for the past might in some measure be restored, so as to triumph over that recklessness which abounds as to the present; and thus there might be awakened some forethought as to the future in opposition to the striking feature of irreverence for the past and disregard for the future, which is such a characteristic of modern times. And I cannot think anything would be more beneficial than a consideration of the grand truth of the second coming of Christ in all the aspects in which it is presented to us in Scripture.

Those who have given attention to it have derived from its consideration the greatest amount of instruction and knowledge and spiritual light; and especially is it important in these days, when nearly everything has a tendency to divert men's minds, and thoughts, and feelings from the great hope that should always be before them—the entertainment of the cheering promise of the Second Advent. If the lively expectation of this event were more generally cherished, it would of itself be a hopeful earnest, and foretoken of the promised "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, when he shall send Jesus Christ at the times of the restitution of all things."

There was one point referred to by one of the speakers—When shall the Second Advent come to pass? Now, I can understand that in antideluvian times Noah would be told, "It cannot be, because such and such prophecies were first to be fulfilled." But the flood did come; and the prophecies held on their course, and in due time were accomplished, and some have yet to be accomplished. Thus in like manner the Second Advent will soon come, although some may think that many prophecies have first to be accomplished. I am satisfied, however, from the statements of Scripture, that the personal return of the Lord Jesus will take place speedily and suddenly at a time when the world at large is least looking for it; and we must not allow the expectation of any intermediate event to make it appear distant. Adopting this view, that whatever prophecies remain to be fulfilled, the coming of our Lord may nevertheless come to pass suddenly at any time, I find great comfort in taking the word of God as I find it, and I wait to understand fully until all shall be accomplished.—Signs of our Times.

HOLINESS.

O. E. MERRILL.

I am a lover of Jesus and his appearing. I love the way of "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." So I say with Bro. Thomas in last Crisis, "Talk it, pray it, sing it, preach it, write it, live it." Yes, LIVE it. We may talk, pray, sing, preach, and write about it, and yet not be in possession of it, therefore cannot live it. The Spirit is holy; and if we are filled with the Spirit, we shall be holy, we shall live holy lives. The trouble why people do not live holy lives is the lack of being filled with the Spirit. It is our privilege to be thus filled. All that we have to do is to ask, that our joy may be full. God is more willing to give to those that ask the Holy Spirit, than parents are to give good gifts to their children. What a privilege! ask, and receive; be filled with the fullness of the love of God. Our motto—"HOLINESS TO THE LORD."

Holiness is a Bible doctrine, and God in his word commands us to be holy. He says, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." It is strange that when in the Old and New Testaments the doctrine of holiness is so plainly taught, many should oppose it. But so it is. Hear what some say who profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, looking for his soon appearing: "I am disgusted with holiness." I ask the dear ones, why oppose? Does not the Bible teach it? Is it not our imperative duty to be holy? If so, why, again I ask, oppose? Is it because you do not understand the subject? If so, I pray the Lord to help you to see the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Consecrate all to him. I know it is a great thing to be fully and completely consecrated. If we are, whatever God wills we will. If it is prosperity, amen; adversity, amen. No matter. In whatsoever state we are, learn to be content; for contentment with godliness, we read, is "great gain." The Lord help me, with all who want to see the Lord, that we may become partakers of Christ's holiness.

THT IMPORTANCE OF PRESENT TRUTH.

"Present truth" is like instruction needed for the duties of to-day, or like warnings of danger to which we are now exposed. It has a special application at a certain time, because of particular circumstances then existing, to which it was designed to apply. It can never be applicable to more than one period, or to more than one class of circumstances, and can never be repeated. When it is past, it is to be received as an example or warning, but never to be practiced. Its acceptance and rejection always produces opposite results, are specific like the truth, and can never be repeated. It is especially important during its period, and God always requires his people to make it the prominent subject of their teaching,—the great theme of contemplation at that time.

We are most solemnly convicted that the present period is one for which God has appropriated the most deeply interesting and vitally important present truth ever given by God for the benefit of humanity. That this generation is witnessing events strange and startling is apparent to all. The world is fast drifting from its former course in every department. Thrones are trembling, kingdoms are convulsed, the earth quakes and reels, the heavens show fearful signs of great changes, human society is in fevered restlessness, with strong currents and counter currents foreboding terrible revolutions. The fountain of the great deep of satanic skepticism seems to be breaking up, and Atheism, Spiritualism, and all manner of infidelity is flooding the world. Strange and exciting times indeed! and can it be possible that God should lead his church to such a period, surrounded as she is with a theological jargon which would drown Babel in everlasting silence, and not give her a standard of present truth; truth comprehending the vast phenomena and the approaching future? No. Every prophetic hand has pointed to this time, and every inspired pen has written parts of its strange history. Earth scenes have become a vast whirlwind. Every thing is being scattered and broken in the midst of roar and confusion. Every body is in expectation of something new and startling. All things of the past give way to the whirl of the present. In the church is heard the confusion of Babel. The heaped up fable teachers of the last days are flooding the world with their scholastic theology and satanic interpretation of God's word. It is enough to make angels weep and drive saints to the brink of despair. Is there no guiding star? Where are the sleepless sentinels? Has not the Lord some faithful servants on the earth, who have received words of present truth from the lips of Jehovah, and who can guide the weeping Bride of Jesus in a safe path? Is not this the time for Elijah to come with the prophetic message, heralding the approach of the "dreadful day of the Lord?" Has not the guiding pillar appeared to lead Christ's Israel out of the darkness of this Egypt to the heavenly Canaan? May Christ send us a Paul and a Luther to confound, by argument, the Pharisee who trusts in a boastful righteousness, but rejects present truth. Send men who would dare go to the seat of worldly power, though he were challenged by a thousand devils. O that the thunders of Sinai might fully arouse the servants of Christ to comprehend the situation, and the vast importance of giving the trumpet a certain sound. May the Lord anoint our eyes, that we may see the creeping thief approaching our house, under the shadows of night. Why do not the "dogs bark?" Is it because they are watching for their gain instead of the thief? Are they slumbering because prophetic light has not ended the darkness of their night? Is there anything that can awaken them this side of the trump of doom?

Ye servants of the great God, get ye up into the high mountain! Cry aloud, spare not! Say unto the daughter of Zion, "behold the Lord God will come," "his arm shall rule for him;" "his reward is with him." This is the "certain sound" the great Marshal has ordered his trumpeteers to peal forth upon the ear of the last generation. Fear not, then, ye men of God, to sound the note from the hill tops, and through the valleys, for the "vision shall speak and not lie." Dare to be true to God, though you receive the hate of the world and the infidel's scoff. Proclaim the judgment message faithfully to all men. Let the distant empires hear it, and the wandering tribes see the light of the last prophetic lamp. We feel an agony of earnestness upon this subject, for it seems to us that God has made it the most essential and vitally important message ever revealed to men.

We ask none to excuse us for making it so prominent in our labors, for we feel that as long as our present conviction of God's requirements rests upon us, we will proclaim it with all our power, though all the world oppose, the heavens grow black, and the lightnings plow furrows at our feet. If God has not commissioned us to proclaim the glorious speedy advent of Christ to judgment, as a specialty to this generation, then we plead ignorance of his Word relating to that subject, and the manifestations of his Spirit and providences. We would not, by these arguments, make unimportant truth, having a general application, as faith, hope, charity, consecration, and all truth of that class which applies at all times and to all persons the same. This subject of "present truth" is most forcibly and beautifully expressed in an editorial in the A. C. Times as follows:

THE COMMISSION.

"Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him." Isa. 62: 11.

This is the great commission of the gospel minister to the people of God at the present time. Given in prophetic language in days of old, it has remained in the pages of Holy Writ that it might come in force, and become the rallying note of all the people of God in times just prior to the judgment day.

The plans of the Almighty are vast, and comprehensive of eternal things. They are not limited to the life-time of single individuals, as though their rising and setting was comprehended in a three score years and ten. His day is composed of centuries, and his time counts the ages of eternity. And as his days pass on he prepares his messages for his people, and commissions his servants to herald forth the vast changes to be wrought out, each in his appointed time.

His servant Noah heralded to the people the coming deluge, and faithfully executing his commission, he stood approved of God, and "perfect in his generation."

Moses was commissioned to herald forth deliverance from Egyptian bondage, and Israel's freedmen went forth in the appointed time and way.

The law shadowed forth the blood of Calvary; men of God foretold Messiah's sufferings; angelic messengers announced his birth; the Baptist heralded his coming; and the voice of Jesus speaking of grace and truth, was hushed in agony and death, but was again awakened to speak from heaven. And since those days, the voice has told of persecution and martyrdom to the church of Christ, to fill up the measure of the dispensation of sufferings, until at last the time has come for the last great rousing cry to the daughter of Zion—"Behold, thy King cometh!"

Whatever else of teaching may be needful for the church of God at the present time, the commission of proclaiming the return of Messiah as King of kings and Lord of lords" is manifestly the one great work of the minister of Jesus Christ. All other truth of the present day is subservient to this. The commission embraces every gospel arrangement of whatsoever sort it be. Is repentance proclaimed? It is that one may join the host of the redeemed, and be numbered among the blood-washed throng to hail the coming King. Is pardon and forgiveness of sins proclaimed among the people? It is that they may be free from wickedness, and not be ashamed before him at his appearing. Is the fulness of the spirit urged upon the people of God? It is that they may be overcomers at last and sit with him on his throne.

This is the great gospel commission of the present time, and whoever ignores it, ignores the perfecting truth of the dispensation in which we live. Unmindful of this commission and unprepared for this event, the church becomes worldly in its character, the minister of Christ becomes a blind leader, and the professed christian is either a spasmodic runner of a race in a serpentine track, outwardly extremely pious to-day, and to-morrow wallowing in the mire of worldliness, making many crooked paths; or else he is merely a nominal believer on Christ, having a name to live and yet dead.

There is no vital, earnest, and reliable christian arousing, aside from the proclamation of the coming King. Experience there may be, but it is the experience of those who eat not for strength to work, but for fatness to sleep. Pardon to penitent sinners is proclaimed, and many seek it and rejoice, not that they may follow it by a life of consecration and sacrifice, of separation from this world that they may be ready for the coming of Jesus by doing his bidding; but that they simply feel emotions of pleasure and tell to others how happy they are. And if holiness is proclaimed, it is for the purpose of fattening the church into a state of self-confidence that is ruinous, rather than that indwelling of God's spirit that nerves men for action, as hardy soldiers who are fighting under royal banners and looking for their King.

We paint no over-drawn picture. The lights and shades are those which come from heaven and earth, and are as real as the facts themselves. Men cannot lay aside the great commission, and find something else to fill its place, and yet properly fulfill their work before God. The commission is God-given, and it is in the book. It is the only one. It covers all else. It absorbs all besides. Whether it comes from the lips of godly saints; whether it is the war cry of men whose hearts are full of strife and bitter hatred; or even though demons may hurl it forth with curses on the midnight of their career, yet the language of the commisission is of God, and the days of the Almighty have brought us to its proclamation as an imperative duty.

How vastly important is it then that the minister of Christ should speak the message given him. No matter what the earthly consequences are, no commissioned officer in all the ranks can find his work approved by the great King at his coming, unless he is faithful to the dispensation given him. The private soldiers may be excused for many things, but to whom much is given much will be required. It is an awful thing to be among those who take the book with its seals all opened, and yet to fail in the great commission.

God has not laid this burden and work upon one portion of this church alone. The reponsibility is equal upon all who minister in sacred things. There is no room for excuse. The commission is given alike to all, and among all the ministry God will require it at their hands. J. C.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

As we are approaching the time for the commencement of another National campmeeting at Springfield, we hope those who are interested in its welfare, will make it a subject of special prayer, that in interest, profit, and the manifestation of the power of the Holy Spirit; in the conversion of sinners, reclaiming of backsliders, and the entire consecration to Christ, may surpass any meeting we have ever held. The Lord would be pleased to see this result, and will do all on his part to bring it about. It is our purpose to pitch the "Tabenacle" again, for the benefit of those who wish to make special preparation to meet the coming Savior. We expect seasons of gracious refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Let all who can come to this feast in the tented grove, looking for glorious results.
M. G.

Certificates.—It should not be forgotten that the delegates appointed by the various churches, interested in the business to be transacted by the Adv. Chris. Association, at the next annual meeting on the Springfield camp-ground, should be supplied with certificates signed by the pastor, or elders, or deacons, or clerk, or chairman, presiding at the meeting at the time the delegates are appointed. Observe, any church having twenty-five members or less, can send one delegate; and an additional one for every fifty members above twenty-five. As our next meeting will be one of special importance, every church should send their proper number of delegates. All ministers co-operating with the Association are considered members when their names are enrolled at the annual meeting. The certificate for delesates may read as follows:—

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed by the church in ——— as a delegate to the annual meeting of the A. C. A., to be held at Springfied, Aug. 10th.
M. G.

Ministers' Meeting.—By conversation and correspondence, we find many preachers are in favor of the proposed ministers' meeting, at the Springfield campground, for the purpose of a mutual interchange of thoughts on important subjects, affecting the present and eternal welfare of our fellow beings. It is thought best to meet Thursday 2 P. M., Aug. 6th. Let all come who can, praying the Lord to direct us into the best means to accomplish the greatest good in the vineyard of our divine Master. M. G.

GREENWICH MEETING.

Greenwich is on the Springfield, Athol and Northeastern R. R., about fifteen miles from Athol. The grove selected for the meeting is a pleasant one, about a quarter of a mile from the depot. The new Mass. mission tent was on the ground, and made a fine appearance, rendering good service to those present. There were three other tents. The meetings were excellent, and increased in numbers and interest. While there, we listened to preaching from Brn. S. G. Mathewson, R. Grant, Geo. Teeple, and H. Munger.

The adjourned meeting of the Mass. State Conference was held, and conducted in a very kind spirit. The prevailing spirit and leading object of the conference was to devise means, if possible, to accomplish more in the vineyard of the Lord in leading people to Christ and the truth in the Scriptures. There were about a dozen preachers present, and delegates from various churches.

We were obliged to leave the morning of the 4th, which, with the following day, were to be noted days of the meeting. We shall wait with interest to learn the result, which we expect will be a happy success. It is designed to hold a meeting there every 4th of July. M. G.

Waldenses.—Those who are familiar with the history of the Waldenses, will remember that they suffered severe persecutions from the twelvth century to about the middle of the nineteenth. They were "excluded from all civil and military offices until 1848, when Sardinia granted them full religious and ecclesiastical liberty, and equality of civil and political rights with the Roman Catholics." Since then, and especially since the Italian government took possession of Rome, Sept. 20th, 1870, the Waldenses have been returning to their native land—Italy.

A few days since Giovanni Cereghino (pronounced Geovanni Charageno), a Waldensian minister called on us and gave many interesting facts in relation to the Waldenses. Since 1870, about 100,000 of them have returned to Italy, and are doing more, probably, to advance the cause of Christ in that country than all that is done by other denominations. They understand the language, are in earnest, and truly evangelical. Bro. Cereghino is in this country to raise money to build a chapel in Italy. He has an abundance of good testimonials, showing very clearly that he is a true representative of the interests of the Waldenses. Let those who can, give him aid to help build the chapel, and thus have the pleasure of knowing that they have done something to help deliver the Italians from the power of the Papacy. We are hoping Bro. Cereghino will be able to attend our National campmeeting at Springfield, or the one at Alton Bay, and thus become acquainted with those who are looking for the speedy coming of Jesus. If any of our readers see him, please inform him that the time of the Springfield meeting is changed to the 8th of August. M. G.

Interlinear Translation.—We have just received the sixth number of this important work, which is being issued quarterly by Messrs. Tafel, in Philadelphia and London. This is a valuable work for Bible students. Price $2.00 a number for the Hebrew, and $1.50 for the Greek, which are issued alternately. Address L. H. Tafel, 635 Arch St., Philadelphia. Besides the translation, the work contains critical notes and explanations. The Greek of the New Testament is now translated to the thirteenth chapter of John. As some of our readers may not understand the character of the work, we would say that it is word for word translation, according to the arrangement in the Hebrew Old Testament and the Greek New Testament. Over each Hebrew or Greek word in each line is its corresponding English word. This is a great help to those who have not studied Hebrew or Greek, and affords them much light on the Scriptures that they could obtain in no other way so readily. M. G.

The Health Reformer, published at Battle Creek, Mich., is an enterprising monthly devoted to the dissemination of knowledge respecting the prevention and home treatment of disease, together with other topics of general interest. The July number contains the first of a series of articles on the "Evils of Tobacco Using." Artificial Dentures a Source of Offensive Breath; Modern Dress; Drainage for Health, Pythagoras on Flesh-eating (poetry); The Physiological Effects of Alcohol; Advice to Granges; Sleeping Rooms; How to treat Babies; The Nerves; Wine and the Bible; Fashionable Heart Disease; A Woman's Hair; are some of the many interesting articles contained in this number. Published at Battle Creek, Mich., at one dollar a year. Specimen copies free. M. G.

"Bible Investigator" is the title of a new monthly, the first number of which was published in May, by Bro. Amos Sandford, at Columbus, Kansas. 75 cts a year in advance. It abounds in interesting articles.
M. G.

The Bible Banner is now owned by Bro. A. A. Phelps. The Banner is an excellent monthly, and deserves a liberal patronage. Price $1.00 a year in advance. Address A. A. Phelps, 75 Barclay St., New York City. M. G.

The Resurrection Body.—The first part of an interesting and able article sent to the Crisis by H. Brittain, of Birmingham, Eng., on "the resurrection body," may be found in another column. M. G.

Thanks for three pamphlets mailed to us from Rouses Point, N. Y. M. G.

That Ministerial Conference.—Editors of the "Crisis":—I like much Bro. Munger's suggestion for a conference of ministers, and wish very much to have one; but the suggestion of Bro. Wm. Himes, of having preachers from Canada, as well as elsewhere, attend it, could not be carried out, if such a conference were held at Springfield, unless that campmeeting were after the Alton Bay meeting. Some this way were intending to attend the Springfield meeting, if it had succeeded the Alton Bay meeting.
L. C. McKinstry.

MASS. A. C. CONFERENCE.

The Mass. A. C. Conference convened July 2nd, 1874, according to the adjournment of the last conference. Called to order by the President. Opened with prayer by Bro. Hemenway. Bro. Geo. L. Teeple was appointed Secretary pro tem. Brn. R. D. Grant, Samuel Ayres, and I. I. Leslie were appointed committee on credentials, who reported the following preachers and delegates present. Preachers: S. G. Mathewson, Samuel Ayres, Worcester; Geo. L. Teeple, Westfield; H. H. Tucker, Dudley; J. Hemenway, Athol; M. Grant, Boston; Geo. A. Streeter, No. Dana; Prosper Powell, Three Rivers; I. I. Leslie, Carver; J. D. Merriam, Fitchburg; L. Boutell, Chelsea; H. Munger, Chicopee Falls; Roland D. Grant, Stoneham. Delegates: E. S. Gage, W. G. Ruggles, C. Newell, J. B. Walker, H. H. Nash, F. W. Higgins, Worcester; J. C. Burnham, Palmer; I. Barnes, Clinton; E. Kingsbury, Brimfield; Ozias Goodrich, Chelsea.

Voted, That the unfinished business of last conference be called up. The matter was introduced by Bro. Hemenway, who was followed by Brn. Grant, Barnes, Ayres, Mathewson and others, which resulted in a motion that all in favor of a more systematic and thorough way of doing our work should manifest it by vote, which was a unanimous yea.

Voted, That the Chair appoint a committee of two to nominate a committee of five, to take this matter into consideration, and report; said committee consisting of Brn. Leslie and Ayres, who reported the following names, which were duly accepted by the conference: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, Miles Grant, Prosper Powell, Geo. L. Teeple. Adjourned to 9 A. M. Friday.

Friday, 9 A. M. Met according to adjournment. The President in the chair. Prayer by Bro. M. Grant. The committee to whom was referred the subject of more thoroughly and systematically carrying forward the work, reported they could arrive at no definite plan. This called out a very spirited talk, which resulted in a move for an expression of the conference by a rising vote whether we would have a State Evangelist or not. The vote was nearly a unanimous yea. It was then moved that a committee of three be appointed to nominate a man or men, whose duty it should be to write to or visit the different churches of the conference, and inquire into their condition, and the state of feeling, and see how much they will raise towards supporting a State Evangelist. Brn. Hemenway, Mathewson, and M. Grant, were appointed. Adjourned till after the afternoon services.

3 P. M. Met according to adjournment. The President in the chair. Prayer by Bro. Boutell. Committee to nominate reported the names of L. Boutell, M. Grant, G. L. Teeple, J. Hemenway, which were duly accepted by the conference. Adjourned to the call of the conference committee.
G. L. Teeple, Sec. pro tem.

MEETINGS
OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society was held at its rooms, 160 Hanover St., Boston, Friday, March 27th, at one P. M., the members all being present, viz.:—A. Ross, Pres., Geo. T. Adams, L. Boutell, W. H. Mitchell, S. G. Mathewson, H. A. King, L. T. Cunningham, M. Batchelor, H. V. Davis, J. G. Hamblin, A. W. Sibley, Sec.

The Business Agent stated to the meeting, that various requests had been made to the managers of the Crisis to publish in its columns certain articles regarding Eld. J. V. Himes, and matters connected with him.

The Agent also read letters from several brethren, some of whom were Elder Himes' particular friends.

After a full consultation, in which all present participated, on motion, the President appointed a committee of three, consisting of the following brethren: Geo. T. Adams, S. G. Mathewson, and H. A. King, to draft resolutions expressing the sense of the meeting.

The committee retired, and having attended to the duty assigned them, returned and reported the following preamble and resolutions (the names of committee, in the second resolve, being afterwards inserted by vote of the meeting), which were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, grave charges have been preferred against the christian character of Elder J. V. Himes; and,

Whereas, Elder Miles Grant has been accused of improperly dealing with the case; and,

Whereas, serious divisions are growing out of these circumstances, which threaten the interests of Christ's cause; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the Advent Christian Publication Society, deem it our christian and official duty to recommend the holding of an ecclesiastical council, to try this case, to be appointed as follows: two persons to be selected by Eld. J. V. Himes, two by Eld. M. Grant, and these four to choose three others, the seven to compose a council to investigate and decide the case.

Resolved, That the following brethren, Geo. T. Adams, S. G. Mathewson, and H. A. King, be a committee to forward the above recommendation to Elds. Himes and Grant, with authority (in case either party refuse to comply with the above recommendation) to collect the facts in the case for publication in "The World's Crisis."

The following resolution was also adopted by the meeting:—

Resolved, That the above committee be authorized by this Society to expend a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars, in defraying the expenses they shall deem necessary in holding said council.

A meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society was held at its rooms in Boston, July 10th, 1874, all the members being present.

Bro. G. T. Adams, chairman of the committee appointed to correspond with Elds. Himes and Grant in relation to a council recommended in the resolution passed March 27th, 1874, read a lengthy correspondence which he had had with Eld. J. V. Himes and his counsel, from which it appears that they "absolutely refuse to accept the proposed council."

Eld. Grant accepted it, so far as it related to him.

It was voted, that the part of the resolution passed March 27th, 1874, relating to the collection of the facts in the case for publication in the Crisis, and also the appropriation to defray the expenses of the proposed council, be now rescinded.

The following preamble and resolution were then presented and unanimously adopted:

Preamble and Resolution.

Whereas, It is a well known fact that serious charges against the moral and christian character of Elder J. V. Himes were preferred many months ago; and,

Whereas, It is a fact that there has been a hearing on said charges, or a part of them, before one or more councils; and,

Whereas, It is a fact that Elder J. V. Himes has made certain acknowledgments—a confession, and an agreement, which agreement, it is claimed, he has violated, thereby causing many to look upon him as unworthy of their support and sympathy, as a minister of the gospel; and, in connection with his previous course, producing division in the body; and,

Whereas, Recognizing the existence of the above facts, the Board of Directors of the A. C. P. Society, with the sole desire to restore harmony in the body, did, at its meeting March 27th, adopt resolutions recommending the selection of a mutual Council to meet, hear, and decide the whole case (Buchanan or Jackson, Mich., being suggested in the correspondence); and,

Whereas, After earnest effort, by continued correspondence of several months, said council has been positively declined,—and all others; the only body before which Eld. Himes consents to have a hearing being "The Michigan Conference," of which he is the President, and elected since some of the charges were known;—and,

Whereas, It is a fact that, under the existing circumstances, a large number of Adventists do not regard the Mich. Conf. as an impartial, unbiassed body to try this case, and therefore it is not satisfactory; therefore,

Resolved, That, with the facts in the case already before us, we, the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society, having in charge the publication of the "World's Crisis," the "Young Pilgrim," and various interests of the cause of our soon coming Lord, deem it our duty to the body at large to make the above statement, and to say that we do not regard Elder J. V. Himes as occupying a position in which we can extend to him the right hand of fellowship, or bid him God speed, as a worthy minister of the gospel of the kingdom of God at hand.

Voted, That the foregoing action of the Society be published in the next issue of the World's Crisis.
A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

REPORT OF MISSION BOARD
Concerning Eld. M. Grant.

Whereas some complaints were made by certain persons in relation to Elder Miles Grant's labors in California, during his four visits to that coast, the American Advent Mission Board, of which he is chairman, thought best to appoint a council of five men, none of whom should be members of the Board, to carefully and fully investigate the causes of the complaints against Elder G., and report the result to the A. A. M. Board.

At a meeting of the Board in Boston, July 10th, 1874, the following business was transacted:—

Voted, That whereas the Council, chosen by the American Advent Mission Board to investigate the labors of Elder Miles Grant, during his four visits to California, have attended to their duty, and have reported the same, we hereby publish their decision, which is as follows:—

"We deem it hardly necessary to assure the Mission Board, that we entered upon this investigation determined to act impartially, and decide to our best ability upon the facts presented to us. This we have endeavored to do, and we think the decision we present to you, as the result of our labors, is the only decision that candid and fair men could come to, after being presented with the abundant and satisfactory evidence that has been submitted to us.

Our decision is, that Elder Miles Grant has vindicated most fully the uprightness of his intentions in the course that he has pursued in his several visits to the California coast; that the charges preferred against him are unsupported by facts; and that we close this investigation with the same appreciation of him as a meek, humble christian, and as a truly faithful and worthy minister of the New Testament.

Respectfully submitted.

S. G. Mathewson,
A. Ross,
Hiram Munger, } Council.
C. E. Barnes,
Solomon Hale,
C. E. Barnes, Secretary.

The foregoing was unanimously adopted.
L. T. Cunningham,
Recording Sec. of Board.

Voted, to publish the foregoing in the Crisis.

THE LORD IS AT WORK.

Most that is wanting now to see the work of the Lord go on is to go to work for him. If we raise a crop of corn, we must put in the plough, then the seed, then cultivate it, and a crop is sure, greater or smaller; for the Lord does his part of that we cannot do, but he can, and will, if we obey and begin. In many places, if the few brethren will make an effort, God would give an increase, as at Green Point. A few weeks ago, four or five brethren got together and agreed to start a meeting Sabbath evenings, and get preaching when they could, even if they invited some to preach that belonged to other denominations. This will call in others, spread the influence for good, and keep up the light and truth for these times. Yet do it prudently, as they did at Green Point.

The result in this place was, in five weeks six were baptized. I led five down last Sabbath and buried them. Every one came out blest. This had a good effect upon outsiders, as it always does. No doubt it will stir up sectarianism to oppose and scoff; but no matter; go on. God will open the way in other places, if there is an effort made in a similar manner. Try it, brethren. You cannot tell which will prosper, this or that. Come, ye weak ones, try once more where your meetings have run down; then if the people will not hear or come out, you will be free. Hiram Munger.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

The Evangel Tent was pitched for the first time in Vienna, June 11th. The weather was unfavorable the first part of the meeting. Many came, and were refreshed in spirit. The truth was listened to with much eagerness, on the evidences of Jesus' soon coming, by many not identified with us. We were glad our friends had one more opportunity to hear the truths we love so well; and the sacrifice we make is repaid by the consciousness that they have been warned, and will be without excuse in the day of judgment. Brn. Weeks, Wood, Blaisdell, Howard, Rines, and others, were present to preach the word.

From thence, we decided to hold meetings in Chelsea, Me. We pitched the tent on Bro. Weeks' land. He has been preaching in the vicinity with good results, as the fruits are plainly seen. We are here now (July 3d). Our meetings have been largely attended (found our tent was too small, and we intend to enlarge it to fifty feet or more in diameter) by Brn. and Srs., and a good interest among all is manifest to consecrate all to God; also among the unconverted, who give the best attention to the word spoken.

What the Kennebec Journal says of our meeting:—"The attendance has been large for a sect which has so few representatives in this vicinity. All of their meetings, which have been held both day and evening, have been attended by large numbers of spectators, who have been, without one exception, most respectful and attentive listeners. Indeed, the simple faith of these earnest people, approaching most nearly that of the primitive christian church, accepting the Bible as it reads, and expecting a literal fulfillment of all its promises, cannot fail to make a deep impression upon the minds of all who visit this meeting, and will compel from even the most light-minded at least a respect for the things of religion."

A few Brn. and Srs. have made a sacrifice to go with the tent, and can sing:

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice,
Myself, my reputation;
The lone way is my choice."

Pray for us in the highways and hedges.

DISTRICT MEETING REPORT.

The third District Meeting of the Quebec Conference was attended in the Melbourne district, and convened at Danville, Q., on the 18th of June, 1874, as per appointment. Our first meeting, although thinly attended, was rich in blessing, and was a fit introduction to those that followed, which were characterized by the manifest influence of the good Spirit, producing the utmost harmony of action and feeling among ourselves,—a harmony which even the presence of an "evil worker," with the livery of heaven on, could not seriously disturb or interrupt.

The ministers of the conference present were Elds. N. Stevens, John Porter, D. H. Merrill, C. P. Dow, J. Ward, L. C. McKinstry, and Sr. M. McKinstry, who labors to good acceptance in "word and doctrine," and is very useful to the cause of truth; as also Thos. Davidson of Quebec, who was present, and put his name to our constitution, and is a preacher of importance, a true friend of our common cause, and useful therein; being our best Greek scholar, and able in criticism as those opposed to us, who are proud of having B. A. or M. A. follow their names.

The order of the services was, a morning prayer-meeting, and three sermons each day after the first; interspersed with warm and interesting exhortations by the brethren and sisters. Saturday afternoon was occupied with the hearing of an address on our Conference Constitution, our duties and prospects, by the President of the Conference; followed by telling addresses by the ministers present, and a business meeting, at which Elder John Porter was unanimously chosen President of the Melbourne District, and Bro. John Daniels, of Richmond, its Secretary.

We mutually felt it good to be thus together, and spoke of and realized this great benefit of our Conference association, by which an interchange of views and commingling of feeling was promoted, and the indissoluble bonds of christian love greatly strengthened. Having Christ as our Master and Leader, we stand side by side to fight the good fight of faith, that we may "lay hold on eternal life." We pledge ourselves anew, as ministers and brethren, to "study the things that make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another," and benefit "the household of faith"; and being united in this, and duly considering the circumstances of our field of labor to all the flock of God within the reach of our influence, we would most earnestly say, in the language of Paul—as important now as then—"Now we beseech you, brethren [and sisters], mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple."

The subjects were well chosen and presented; and on the Sabbath large audiences were in attendance, who listened attentively to the words spoken, and we trust that good seed was sown that will produce fruit.

The last service of the meeting was the supper of the Lord, of which a large number partook, sung a hymn and went out, and were separated; and, as they parted in sadness, were cheered and sustained by the blessed hope of a final glad reunion in the better land. Although the Sacrament was designed to be the last, yet another was added by request, and a sermon delivered at half-past six, which was well attended. We found our brethren well situated, Danville being a pleasant village, and they being favored, through years of faithful effort and sacrifice, with a pleasant place of meeting; and we hope, for their good, that they will "strive together for the hope of the gospel," and stay up the hands and encourage the heart of their pastor, to be respected for age and faithfulness; to whom under God they owe much of their present and past prosperity. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient; "and of yourselves why judge ye not what is right?" Having the good of the cause in view, we earnestly ask on the behalf of Elder Porter, the President of the Melbourne District, your hearty and faithful co-operation, as in duty bound. "Honor to whom honor," is apostolic counsel. The Bolton District meeting will be appointed as to time and place, and duly noticed in the Crisis.
Chas. P. Dow, P. C.

Proposed Amendments and Additions to the Constitution, to be moved at the next session of the Quebec Conference.

Art. 5. In addition the following—"The duty of the Treasurer shall be to keep safely all monies put in his care by the conference, subject to the order of the President, as authorized by the Official Board; to keep in writing an exact account of the same, and make an annual report to the conference of monies received, paid out, and in hand."

Art. 7 to read—"This conference, as now organized and constituted, shall be divided into four districts, bounded and described as hereinafter following; and these districts may be altered at an annual session of conference by a vote of the majority of the members present, the officers all concurring, as circumstances may require; and general district meetings shall be held about three months apart, or as shall be appointed by the President of the conference, one in each district each conference year, at which all the ministers and official members of the district shall be present, or endeavor so to be, or report by letter; and the Lord's Supper shall be administered; and a business session be held, at which the President of conference shall preside as chairman if present; and each district shall have a resident chairman and secretary, which chairman shall preside in the absence, or by the request of the conference President, and have the "oversight" of the district; and other ministers of the conference shall attend these district meetings when convenient; and the Lord's Supper shall be administered at least four times in each district, each conference year."

All other articles to be made to agree with the above in language.

C. P. Dow, P. C.

CORRECTION AND EXPLANATION.—An appointment over my name appeared in Crisis two weeks since, for grove-meeting at Bro. John F. Emerson's grove, in West Levant, Me., at which place Bro. I. Damman had notice for meeting for same date. I engaged to help Bro. Damman in his meeting, and he desired to have my name put with his in his notice. He sent it without my knowledge, and by some means it was put in separately. I met with Bro. D. July 4th and 5th. Rain prevented our meeting in grove, but we had a good meeting in school-house.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, July 7. Despatches from Spain report that 4000 Carlists attacked Temel on last Saturday. After an engagement, lasting twelve hours, they were obliged to retire, with a loss of forty killed, sixty seriously wounded and two hundred prisoners. The Republicans lost nine killed and fifteen wounded.

July 8. The Times Paris special says that the Right and Left Centres have agreed upon an order that the Assembly are determined to defend MacMahon's powers from every attack of their opponents. The Cabinet still has a majority of fifty in the Assembly, but the Bonapartists and a portion of the Moderate Right, who are able to turn the scale, are wavering. If the government is defeated, the dissolution of the Assembly is inevitable.

KISSENGEN, July 13. It is reported that while Bismarck was driving in the country toward the Saline Springs, at noon, to-day, he was fired at by a young man. The ball grazed his wrist. The wound is insignificant. The would-be assassin was promptly arrested, but is not yet identified.

THE POPE AND THE BONAPARTISTS.—The Paris correspondent of the Cologne Gazette writes: The Papal Court has now resolved to take the part of the Court of Chiselhurst, as a restoration of the Comte de Chambord has become impossible, and the Jesuits will not allow the Orleans Princes to arrive at power. The restoration of the empire remains, therefore, the only means to do away with the republic. Before the Roman Curia resolved to abandon the cause of the Comte de Chambord, negotiations were commenced with him to make him adopt the Prince Imperial as his successor, and to gain the Bonapartist party and render his accession to the throne possible. The Comte de Chambord declined these proposals, and informed the Curia that he was King of France (if it were only nominally), and wished to remain so, that in religious matters he inclined himself willingly before the Church, but that he could not suffer any intervention of the Pope in political affairs. This answer hastened the resolution to take the side of Napoleon IV., especially as the Prince Imperial, who has been brought up as a strict Catholic, offers the necessary conditions for assuring the Jesuits' rule in France. Although the French clergy have acknowledged the Pope's infallibility, it will be no easy task to determine them suddenly to turn their back on the "king," and to undertake the advocacy of the generally despised empire.—Boston Globe.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE INDIAN OUTBREAK.—New York, July 10. A Topeka, Kansas, despatch states that there can no longer be any doubt that a large body of Indians are on the war path, and menacing the lives and property of the people on the southern and southwestern borders of Kansas. The raid was begun by the Kiowas, and now comprises war parties from that tribe, the Cheyennes and Arapahoes. Lone Wolf and Kicking Bird are the leaders, and the outbreak is being made on their part with unusual ferocity.

The Quaker Indian Agent Miles had to fly for his life from the Cheyenne Agency. Three men were killed and scalped near Mozer's Ranche, in Indian Territory, Monday, and one of them, Patrick Hennessey, formerly Sheriff of Christian Co., Ill., was tied to his wagon and burned alive. Two men, herders, were killed and scalped within three miles of Sargent, Kansas, and two others on Bate Creek, Colorado, twelve miles from Granada. A party of hunters were surrounded by the Indians on the Cimmeron, seventy-five miles from Caldwell, and have been fighting for their lives since Sunday last. Eight have been killed, and there is little chance of escape for the remainder.

A panic prevails all along the border, and settlers are leaving their homes and hurrying into the towns and railroad stations. A strong party of Indians is reported at Bute Mound thirty miles from Granada, and the people of Granada are preparing for an attack on their town. Three companies of the Fifth Infantry passed here yesterday from Fort Leavenworth for the scene of the disturbances.

TERRIBLE CONDITION OF AFFAIRS IN MINNESOTA.—The following despatch was received here this morning, and was at once transmitted to the Secretary at New London, Conn.:

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 8th.

To the Secretary of War:

A terrible calamity has befallen the people of several counties of the southwestern part of this Sate. The locusts have devoured every kind of crop, and left the country for miles perfectly bare. They did the same thing last year, over the same area. Many thousands are now suffering for food, and I am using every public and private resource that I can lawfully command to send immediate supplies of food. This State is entitled to two years' quota of arms, estimated at $8,160. I respectfully request that the Subsistence Department be ordered to turn over to me in lieu of those arms a quantity equivalent in value of rations, or such parts of a ration as I may request. I should not request this, but for the gravest reason and to prevent imminent starvation. I have used every resource which the State has given me. I earnestly hope obstacles of form will not be allowed to interpose. Please advise me by telegraph. (Signed) C. K. DAVIS, Governor.

Washington, July 6th.—The storm of Saturday night is entirely without a parellel in this section. It resembled in all its essential features the tornadoes of the Western prairies. It traversed the city from the northwest to southeast, embracing about one-third of a mile in its track. The tornado spent most of its force in the northwestern portion of the city near the State Department. Nearly one hundred houses were completely unroofed in that locality alone. Fourteen houses in one block lost their roofs. The house of Senator Morrill of Vermont was much disfigured, having a row of bricks wrenched from its side, and having been apparently twisted from its foundations by the giant grip of the whirlwind. The trees in all the Government reservations are very seriously damaged, especially in the Capitol grounds. Many of them were torn from the earth. Many of the fine old maples in the President's grounds are destroyed. Horses were thrown to the ground; a street car was lifted ten feet from its track, and all without a second of warning. The loss is estimated at at least one million dollars. The trees in front of Mr. Sumner's house were blown down.—Cor. Boston Journal.

New Haven, Conn., July 6th.—The shore train due here at 8.40 A. M., from New London was thrown from the track near Stony Creek, on a low pile bridge over the flats. Every car was upset, but the engine is partly upright. The accident was caused by the switch becoming misplaced before the whole train had passed, throwing the last truck off the track. The action of replacing the switch, too, was unintentional. The Shore Line Division Superintendent, Wilcox, when he saw the hind car swing off, jumped from the baggage car down sixteen feet to the flats below, where the cars fell on him and broke his neck. He was an efficient officer and popular with all. There were others injured but probably not dangerously, although several have broken limbs. The particulars are not yet fully received.

By the latest accounts the number of wounded is seventy-eight, nearly all of them slightly. One lady of Clinton, Ct., will probably die, having both legs broken and internal injuries. It is impossible to get the names of the wounded now. The favorable locality saved many lives.

St. Paul, Minn., July 7. The Commissioners of this county yesterday appropriated $5000 for the relief of the sufferers by the grasshopper plague.

TENT MEETING.—The Hoosick Valley conference tent (D. V.) will be pitched in North Clarendon, Vt., about three miles south of Rutland, near Clarendon Village, on the Rutland division of Central Vt. R. R. The meetings will commence Saturday evening, July 18th, and continue evenings and Sabbaths for two weeks. The great subjects of Christ's second personal coming and kingdom, as an impending event, even at the door; together with such other kindred truths, best calculated to lead backsliders and other sinners to repentance and holiness, will be presented; believing, hoping, and praying, that good results will follow. Brethren and sisters of every christian denomination, living in the vicinity, are cordially invited to come to the meeting, that it may be in every sense a free, christian union meeting.

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should shnd a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

DEDICATION.—Providence permitting, the Advent Christian chapel in Woodford, Vt., will be dedicated for the worship of God, Friday, July 24th. The services will commence at two o'clock P. M. Eld. A. W. Sibley, of Sandy Hill, will deliver the dedicatory sermon. It will be seen that this service is in connection with the quarterly meeting of the Hoosick Valley conference. We hope it will be a glorious meeting, fruitful of good results. Brethren in the ministry, let us lay aside all malice, envy, and evil speaking, likewise joking and jesting, and come to this meeting with the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, and while one plants and another waters, we may confidently expect that God will give the increase.

For the church, W. O. HIGLEY.

CAMPMEETING.—Providence permitting, the fourth annual campmeeting of the Life and Advent Union will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, situated about one and a quarter miles from railroad depot, on land of L. Carew, commencing Aug. 1st, and continuing till Aug. 10th. Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the boarding house on the ground. Board 80 cents per day. Fare on the railroads will be reduced from July 27th to Aug. 26th inclusive. The nature of man, prophecy, holiness, coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, together with other subjects, will be presented. All are cordially invited.

T. R. WEAVER, Secretary.

THE campmeeting located at Coventry Centre, R. I., will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

ALTON BAY.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. COUCH, for Com.

☞ NOTICE.—Fares will be reduced one half on Maine Central Rail Road and its branches to all parties attending Alton Bay camp-meeting. The brethren living along this line of road wishing to attend the meeting, will notify H. K. CHOATE, at Augusta, Me., of the station where they wish tickets sold. This is required so that tickets and baggage checks may be printed for said stations. Particulars hereafter. COMMITTEE.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. COUCH.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced. H. F. C., for Com.

PITTSFIELD CAMPMEETING.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

JER. CARR, Chairman.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. MITCHELL, for Com.

EDWIN BURNHAM will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer. E. BURNHAM.

Tremont Mass. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont will commence (the Lord willing) MONDAY, JULY 20TH, and continue until the 30th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board, and those with lodging who cannot bring tents. Those who can are requested to do so.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, do make one more effort to devote a few days in meeting with his dear saints on this consecrated ground, for it will very likely be the last time we shall have to meet on this spot before our Lord will come. We intend having some of his servants who are prepared to give the evidences we have of our soon deliverance, and labor with us to secure the salvation of the lost, that some, at least, may share with us in the hope of eternal life.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

There will be a team in readiness upon the arrival of the 9.30 A. M. train from the North and Troy, and the 6.30 P. M. from Troy and the North, at the Bennington depot, when brethren and sisters will be taken to the meeting free of charge. W. O. HIGLEY.

THE TENT MEETING at West Amesbury has been one of interest. Some have been converted, and wanderers have been reclaimed. There will be a meeting under the tent Saturday, July 18th, and Sunday, July 19th. We hope to see a good turn-out to the meeting from adjoining towns. Come and help us. ENOCH MORRILL.

DEDICATION of the new chapel at North Rutland, Mass., Sabbath, August 2nd. Particulars next week. T. M. PREBLE.

THERE will be a three days meeting in the grove at Westbury, N. Y., commencing at one o'clock, July 17th, and holding over Sunday. M. R. Miles, B. P. Stevens, C. H. Williams, and E. F. Sergisson, will be present to preach the word.

THE Lord willing, there will be a two days meeting at the Button school-house, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing evening of July 17th, and over the Sabbath. All are invited.

For the Brn., E. H. EGGLESTON.
E. A. KEELER.

THE Evangel Tent will continue in Wiscasset, Me., over Sunday, the 19th of July. Meetings afternoons and evenings. H. B. SEVEY.

KANSAS.—Notice is hereby given that the Kansas Mission Tent will be pitched at Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas, August 27th, if the Lord will. Services will commence at eight o'clock P. M., and continue over two Sundays. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come; and let us work for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. Come one, come all.

R. F. CLARK, Sec. Adv. Chris. Conf., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

I WOULD say to all the brethren and sisters in the State of Kansas, that I am now traveling with the Advent Christian Mission Tent of Kansas, with Bro. and Sr. Smith. I expect to go with the tent until the last of September; after which time, I will visit and hold meetings with all who may write to me, and inform me of their whereabouts. If it is the Lord's will, and the people desire it, I will devote Oct., Nov. and Dec., to holding meetings from place to place, as the interest demands. Let all who want me to visit their neighborhoods during those three months, and preach the word, write to me, and inform me when they would like me to come. Direct to VIRGIL HUNT, Wellington, Sumner Co., Kansas, Box 104.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The Advent Christian Church of Norwalk, Ohio, will hold a quarterly session on the last Saturday and Sunday in July. A general invitation is extended.

FRANK BURR, Pastor.

FOR SALE.—Tent 148 Alton Bay camp-ground is for sale. It has accommodations for six or eight persons, having a cook house or L connected, with stove, etc. Price $100. This tent has a front view on Lake Avenue, overlooking the Bay, steamboat and railroad landings, within five rods of the boarding tent. Inquire on the ground of Bro. T. E. WOOD, or of H. K. CHOATE, Augusta, Me.

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE NEW HAMPSHIRE CONFERENCE.—At the annual session of the N. H. Conference at Manchester, you chose for a protracted and tent-meeting committee, Enoch Morrill, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Fletcher. Now these brethren (like most of our preaching brethren) have families to support, and other expenses and demands to meet; and as the design of the tent is to go in new places where there is little or no interest in the coming of Christ, it needs money to carry on this mission work. But little has been done as yet by your committee in protracted meetings; but it is the desire of your committee that the tent be in the field, and faithful laborers with it. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have means with which God has blessed you to help in this mission work, whatever you send to either of your committee, specifying it for the tent and mission work, will be faithfully appropriated to that object, and God will bless the giver, and the means under God will result in the salvation of some poor lost sinner. ENOCH MORRILL, South Deerfield, N. H., for the committee.

A NEW WORK.—If I can obtain sufficient aid, I intend to publish a new book, in pamphlet form, entitled, "LET US MAKE MAN:" or, How God the Father, and God the Son, are associated in creating and in preparing Man for the "DOMINION OVER ALL THE EARTH." This work will be about the size of my "Three Kingdoms," containing about 60 pages. It may be less, or a little more; and the retail price about 15 cts. Now, as I wish to know about how large an edition to publish, will those interested just write me immediatly, and let me know how large a number they will take, and advance the pay so as to assist me in meeting the printer's bill? Those who will take 25, 50, or 100 copies, and advance the money as above stated, shall have them at a fair cost price. As but little has yet been paid in, will the friends to this enterprise move quickly? The work will contain my complete views in relation to Jesus Christ as the Son of God; and an answer to all the objections of the opposition; such as—"Before Abraham was I am"; "Whose goings forth have been of old," etc.; "The glory I had with thee before the world was"; "I came down from heaven"; "Was rich—became poor"; etc., etc. About one half of the work has never been in print, but the MS. has been read to private brethren, and highly commended. The articles recently published in the Crisis, "Did Christ make the World?" have been revised and improved, and will make a part of the book. Now those who are really interested in this thing, please don't delay, but write me at your earliest convenience, directing your letters to Hyde Park, Mass.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

10 cts. AG'T.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

For sale at this Office. AG'T.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

ISAIAH 6: 5.

R. OWEN.

"Woe! Woe!" to me, the prophet said,
I am, indeed, undone;
Mine eyes have seen of kings, the King,
The glorious holy One.

Of lips unclean I am possessed,
Of excellence devoid;
My real state is thus confessed,
Self-confidence destroyed.

I dwell among a people, too,
Whose converse is impure;
We are corrupt, all through and through,
How then can we endure

The test of his all-searching gaze,
Who dwells in light sublime,
Who knows our inmost thoughts and ways,
And how we pass our time?

'Tis only from the contrast, we
Our real state discern;
Could we the Lord of glory see,
Nothing would so concern

Our deepest thought, our whole desire,
As cleansing through the blood;
As passing the "Refiner's fire,"
With likeness unto God.

If we by faith could catch a view
Of excellence indeed,
How oft should we our vows renew,
How truly sense our need.

Then, gracious Father, let us see
Ourselves in light divine;
So shall we unto Jesus flee,
And toward him e'er incline.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

J. C. DAY.

The evidence of regeneration is unfeigned love of the brethren. 1 Pet. 1: 33. It is the fruit of the incorruptible seed which liveth and abideth forever. It is a proof that a man has passed from death unto life, that he knows God, and that God by his divine Spirit dwelleth in him. The Scriptures set forth the love of God and of his children as interchangeable evidences, which mutually prove each other, so that he who loves God in truth loves his people, and he who loves his people in truth loves God. A church of christians is always known to be in a healthy condition when love to each other is prominent and it is the object of earnest prayer that this love should be on the increase. Phil. 2: 9; 1 Thess. 3: 12.

Love is desirable above all the gifts of the Christian church. Gal. 5: 22; 1 Cor. 13. It is evident from the Bible that love is the greatest gift to the church, the richest of all the donations which the precious Christ has to bestow on his servants. What, then, is the state of that church where love is not found? It may make a noise indeed, and a sound about religion, but it is that of the sounding brass or tinkling cymbal. It may have all the outward performances, but there is no life in the body. We must have love down deep in the heart or it will not avail anything. The Savior said, when about to leave the church, "A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you." This must be something more than sectarian friendship. To love only one sect or party of christians, which we may have heartily espoused as the only church or party, and not to love a christian as a christian, is counterfeit love; and so, also, to love those who in some way have befriended us, or those who are our near friends, comes very far short of fulfilling this new commandment.

The strength and novelty of the commandment consists in the likeness of christian love to the love which Christ bears to his people—"As I have loved you." We are to love one another with the same freedom from prejudice, and the same strength of affection. Our Lord loved the Sadducees, and Pharisees, and priests, and the Jews, and the Samaritans, who believed in his name. As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." "Ye are all the sons of God by faith in Jesus Christ. "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are one in Christ Jesus." He did not at all consider their previous origin, their habits, kindred or caste; he considered their faith, and their reception of himself as their all in all. The love of christians must be to christians like that of their Master to themselves. The inquiry should be, has his faith laid hold of Christ as the only name under heaven whereby he must be saved? and is he following in his footsteps, and trusting alone in Christ's righteousness for salvation, and through that righteousness has he received the remission of sins? Has he been sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby he can say, "Abba, Father?" Does he rejoice in the Lord Jesus? Does he love to search the Bible? Then he is a christian; and if I am a christian I am bound to love him as I love myself, to lay down my life for him if need be, to offer him all my affections and to do him every act of kindness in my power. We see, then, that if a churchman loves a churchman merely because he belongs to his party, he is no better than a Mohammedan; he is an utter stranger to the new commandment.

First of all, then, harmony, peace and perfect love must be conspicuous in the church. It must be seen that christians love one another, that their union is a wonder-working power which no wisdom of the world can counterfeit; that the gates of the christian enclosure open into the sanctuary of love, that is, Christ in us and we in him, as a hiding place from wind, a covert from the tempest; and although the storm may rage in all the world beside, there is peace within. Oh, my brethren, if every professor of christianity lived in the atmosphere of the new commandment, what a power they would be, But, alas! is it so at the present time? Let any one who is acquainted answer this question. There are indeed some christian societies wherein the poor are treated with kindness and sympathy, or, in some places, a few of the church members are united in pious friendship and brotherly love, and it produces happy results; but, generally speaking, there is a sad distance between brethren. They know not one another in the bonds of the gospel; they are estranged by the cold and distant formalities of the ceremonious world. They are either too intent on the pursuit of their own interests, or too deeply embedded in the well-lined nest of opulent selfishness, to care for the labor and sorrows of their brethren who are less fortunate than themselves.

We see this state of things to an alarming extent among all classes of professed christians; and instead of its growing better, it is getting worse and worse. And where, oh, tell me, is that company to be found who are longing for and loving the appearing of our precious Christ and Life-giver? Brotherly love has almost died out, and the reason is obvious; it is a lack of the living, energizing, vitalizing union with Christ, the living Vine. When I contrast the Advent people of to-day with those that came out in '43, it seems as though they were not the same people. Who can not see that they have lost their power with God and man? "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" The Lord is coming; prepare to meet thy God, O Israel, is the prayer of my heart. Amen.—Herald of Life.

THREE THOUGHTS.

I CAN'T help thinking that Devotional Committees often miss the mark in selecting preachers for the early stages of general meetings. It seems to be the common impression that any gift will do at first, but afterwards as numbers in attendance increase, more care must be taken in the choice of speakers. Better employ the choicest gifts at the very beginning, and let them give tone and spirit to the meeting. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined." And many a meeting has been stunted or twisted by the discourse of injudicious men. The question with Devotional Committees should be, What gifts will do most good? and not, Who will feel slighted if they are not invited to speak? True, there is too much of this latter feeling, and committees dislike to meet it. It were well if all ministers who esteem it an honor to preach at general meetings would remember and practice the apostolic precept—"In honor preferring one another."

A WRITER on French manners observes: "It is one of the highest merits of the system, that it tacitly lays down the principle that all persons meeting in the same house know each other without an introduction." It would do no harm to have a little more of French manners introduced at conference and other general meetings. Often at these gatherings one cannot help but be reminded of the person who saw another drown, making no effort to save him, because, as he said, he "had never been introduced to him." So we see brethren and sisters spending intermissions in silence, and alone, because "they have not been introduced." Some of those who occupy so much time in the social meetings would do well to extend a portion of their wonderful gift of language in "entertaining strangers" between meetings.

IT WOULD appear from the conclusion of the discourse contained in John ch. 6 (see v. 66) that a sound, truthful discourse is not necessarily a popular sermon, or a faithful preacher a popular minister. We sometimes account for apparent failures on the part of preachers by something in the matter or manner of the discourse. But no one will presume to criticise either of these elements in our Lord's teaching. Whatever he said, whatever he did, was right, and said or done in a right way. Still he reached only a few. His plainness of speech, his very spirituality and truthfulness, offended them. Very likely most who "went back and walked no more with him" afterward found great satisfaction in listening to other preachers, who always held a crowd; yet I can but think that some who left carried uneasy consciences the rest of their days; often saying, "I wish I had not followed the multitude. I wish I had listened to my convictions, instead of floating with the crowd away from Jesus." Perhaps some were afterwards converted under other preachers.

HOW MANY ARE WE?

The New York Times of Dec. 17th, 1873, has an article relating to the increase of the people called "Second Adventists," that is somewhat interesting. It appears that its publishers have been looking over the United States Census figures of 1870, and in an article on "Religious Progress" is summed up the membership, churches, church property, increase and decrease of all denominations, as shown for the last three decades. It is a singular fact that in a period of more than a third of a century no enumeration of the Adventists has ever been made, of a very accurate kind, save that made by the writer of this article, and published in 1860. And no person has taken the trouble to look over the census, gather up the facts and figures therein stated, and present the sum of the result, as has the Times in the above-named article. The statistics are therefore of historical value, worthy of note and specific record. Especially interesting are the figures of comparison presented by the Times as to the relative increase of the different sects in the ways already specified, and the very large increase above nearly all and every other of the "Second Advent" denomination. We are pretty much cured of sectarianism, of late, and care little about the numbering of any one denominational Israel, but our sympathies are where they have been for thirty years past. We are looking for the King, and doubtless shall never shift positions on this important doctrine. We shall continue till death, or "till he come," to "pull on that link,"—that one last, glorious, golden link—for it is the final link in the chain that, stretching back to Paradise Lost, touches Paradise Regained. Pulling on that link, we shall in Christ's name and strength go through the gates, always ajar for all poor, saved sinners.

But to the Times. Under the head of "Members, or Church Sittings," we have opposite "Second Advent" these figures: Number in 1850, 5,250; in 1860, 17,120. But in 1870, the census gave the number as 34,555.

In a second table, under the head of "Increase and ratio of increase in sittings," we have "Increase from 1850 to 1860, 11,870; increase per cent. 226.09; increase from 1860 to 1870, 17,435; increase per cent. 101.88."

Then, as to the relative strength of the various sects, we find a third table, under the head of "Percentage of all Membership or Sittings," the following: Second Advent in 1850, .04; in 1860, .09; in 1870, 16 per cent. "It will be seen," says the writer, "that the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists have fallen off, particularly since 1860," etc. And a little further on, we read that "The Second Adventists went up on the figures handsomely, more than trebling from 1850 to 1860, and doubling in the following decade;" which, if the figures are correct, we are glad to know.

We are then brought to Table IV., containing "Churches and Church Organizations." Of these, in 1850, the Adventists had 25 church edifices; in 1860 they had 70 church edifices. But ten years later, in 1870, they had 140 church edifices, and 225 church organizations. This increase of places of worship is in another table given as 45 edifices (180 per cent.), to 1860, and 70 edifices (100 per cent.), from 1860 to 1870. And then we are told that "the largest increase for the last decade were Second Adventists, who have doubled." No other denomination had increased their places of worship so fast as the "Second Adventists." We are happy to know this also."

We then come to "Amount of Church Property," in which table (No. VII.) we have $11,100 for this people in 1850; $101,170 in 1860; but in 1870 the figure of valuation of church property rose to $306.240.

The Times just here gets dumbfounded and appalled, for it ceases to comment on the extraordinary increase of "our people" in this line, contenting itself with only presenting the table of "Increase and Ratio of Increase in Church Property," where the tell-tale figures run as follows: Increase from 1850 to 1860, 811,44 per cent.; increase from 1860 to 1870, 202,70 per cent.; which figures stand boldly right up beside the strongest in the table, and compare finely with the best denominations in the land.

So much for the record. We do not feel proud nor flattered. We are only glad, as we said, if those who do sincerely and holily look for the Lord and his eternal kingdom, are prospering numerically and in all good ways. They are our people, no matter how various their ways of thinking. Our lot is cast in this growing company. But there is room for many more. Come and join the ranks—not so much of a sect, as of the great throng that everywhere seek a readiness to go into the marriage supper of the dear Lamb. May this hope and faith—this gladsome doctrine, leaven all the churches! O, that they would take hold of it! Never mind. the smallness of the people; take hold of the hope!—D. T. TAYLOR in Advent Herald.

A SIGN OF JESUS' COMING.

C. H. SWEET.

The "sure word of prophecy" predicts startling and widespread political commotions just before the Lord comes. The following are a specimen of this class of predictions: "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars." Matt. 24: 6. "Upon the earth distress of nation, with perplexity." Luke 21: 25. "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong." Joel 3: 9, 10.

This was to be the condition of the nations in the last days of this world's history. A warlike spirit should be abroad in the world summoning the nations to arms. The sound of existing battle, or the rumors of coming strife, should be heard in all directions; preparations for war on a grander scale than was ever before witnessed, while the nations would be agitated by feelings of hatred, distrust, jealousy, and anger toweach other. If this is the condition of things at the present time to a sufficient extent to fulfill these predictions, then we must certainly be living in the closing hours of this dispensation.

Are we witnessing a fulfillment of these prophecies? Read what a New York paper says, in an issue dated June 17, 1874, and then decide for yourself:—

If preparations for war can be taken as indications of coming events, it would seem that all Europe is apprehensive of a disturbance of the peaceful conditions which at present generally prevail there. In Germany Krupp, the great manufacturer of cannon, has raised a loan of 12,000,000 thalers to extend his works, while by the beginning of next year the whole army will be equipped with the Mauser rifle. In France every exertion is making to place the military establishment on a more formidable footing than it has had for many years. Austria is greatly increasing its army; and in Russia it is proposed to raise the army to 3,000,000 by enforcing a general conscription the coming autumn. The following table, taken from the London Times, shows the general increase in the military forces of the principal European states during the last fifteen years:

Notwithstanding the cordial relations that apparently exist between the Czar and the Emperor William, the newspapers of St. Petersburg persist im accusing Germany of a disposition to go to war with France and the rest of mankind as soon as possible; and the anti-German feeling which is so general among the Russian people undoubtedly extends to the highest circles.—Weekly Sun.

Steep Falls, Me.

"AT the Lord's table I always invite all christians to come and sit down and commune with us. . . . . The pulse of Christ is communion; and woe to the church that seeks to cure the ills of Christ's church by stopping its pulse. I think it is a sin to refuse to commune with any one who is a member of the church of our Lord Jesus Christ. I should think myself grossly in fault if, at the foot of these stairs, I should meet a truly converted child of God, who called himself a Primitive Methodist, or a Wesleyan, or a Churchman, or an Independent, and I should say, 'No, sir; you do not agree with me on certain points. I believe you are a child of God, but I will have nothing to do with you.' I should then think the text would bear very hard on me, 'These are they who separate themselves, sensual, not having the Spirit.'"—Spurgeon.

FREQUENT BAPTISM OF THE HOLY GHOST.

The Holy Ghost is our enlightener, sanctifier, and comforter. If, therefore, we have light, holiness, and comfort, it must be by his agency, and our possession of these blessings is a matter of consciousness. I suppose the only way in which we are or can be conscious of the presence of the Holy Spirit, is by being conscious of the effects produced by him. As "the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the Spirit." We know of the presence of the Spirit just as we are conscious of the presence of the wind by the effects produced. We know the Holy Spirit by trying his fruits or influences by his own written word.

The more marked, frequent, and impressive the influences of the Spirit upon us, so is the likelihood of our walking in his ways.

I make the following distinctions:

1. All christians have the Spirit.

2. All established and abiding christians are filled with the Spirit.

3. Baptisms of the Spirit are refreshings, quickenings, spiritual holy impulses given at any stage of the christian life.

These baptisms are, and from the nature of the case must be, occasional. We find in the constitution of our being a tendency to reaction after any excitement. The impressions first produced decrease after a time, and though a permanent effect in some respects remain, yet the impulsive and quickening effect dies away. This is true in fact; and the rule holds good in relation to baptisms of the Spirit, just the same as to any other excitements. If this was generally understood and properly considered, it would relieve many from perplexities. When christians have had their sensibilities wrought up to a high degree of excitement, and they find the tide of emotion running out, they ought not to consider it an indication of backsliding and thereby fall into fear and unbelief. Let them still trust Jesus while their perceptive and sensitive faculties rest for a while.

The Holy Ghost may, without leaving us, so withhold the manifestations of himself that for a time we have no consciousness of his presence; yet he never really departs from us while we adhere to the Lord Jesus. His apparent withdrawment is a trial, and if rightly viewed it may be a means of greatly strengthening our faith.

I have been blest with many baptisms of the Spirit. Some of them have been of a remarkable character. In every instance, so far as I can remember, they have been immediately connected with a clear perception of some particular truths, revealed to me then for the first time, or more clearly revealed than before; and such baptisms were always followed by an increase of purity and spiritual joy.

In all cases, after a time longer or shorter, the impulse of these baptisms was gone. They left me with increased knowledge, and enlarged experience, and greater susceptibility to heavenly influences. Then, after a season of quiet, I would feel a conscious need of another quickening. I would seek for it, and I obtained it whenever I sought for it perseveringly.

After long-continued observation I not only found that the experience of many esteemed christians was similar to my own, but I could not find any who had been long in the way essentially differing from it. I attended a number of "holiness meetings" for years together, and I observed that dear saints who walked in the light were, at times, wonderfully quickened so that their words and everything about them had a peculiar spiritual power. Then, after a time, this special quickening would seem gradually to subside, and though they still walked in the light, and their earnest, consistent lives commended them, to all, it was evident they were not impelled as before by the baptism, that is, their appearance did not continue to exhibit the same glow and deep fervor. The unusual elevation of feeling had subsided.

After I had been familiar with these considerations for some years, I was interested in the testimony of a very eminent servant of God, who, speaking upon this subject with the advantage of long experience and much thought, said, "Such baptisms (of the Spirit) need to be often repeated to keep the current of spiritual life flowing strongly."

This testimony, and similar ones from others whom I knew to be greatly blessed of God, and some other and more marked experiences in my own spiritual life, and a comparison of all with the Scriptures, confirmed me in the belief, only not that frequent baptisms of the Spirit are necessary and obtainable, but that God does in fact carry on the spiritual life of his children in that way.

Looking over a number of past years, I can say that since I have learned these things, whenever I have felt a deep conviction that I needed a new baptism of the Spirit, and have steadily waited on God for it, pleading the promises which refer to it, I have never failed in a single instance to receive what I sought. I have sought in prayer, peacefully and persistently, making frequent, but usually brief and quiet supplications, often using but a few words, and not regarding it necessary or desirable to get into anxiety or impatience. Sometimes the answer has been given after a few days, and sometimes after a few weeks. In every instance it was my purpose to continue seeking till I should obtain, and, as I have said, I never failed to prove by sweet experience, that my heavenly Father is more willing to give his Spirit to them that ask him than we are to give good gifts to our children. It is of importance to add, that in some cases the answer to my prayer has been given gradually, and I have realized that the blessed Holy Spirit was coming upon me by degrees, more and more, for several days. At first the spiritual refreshing and energizing would be comparatively gentle and in small degree, and then, from time to time, the waters of life would come welling up in greater and still greater fulness.

I am glad to say these things for the encouragement of any who feel their need of a baptism of the Spirit, and I say them because I am assured of their truth.

Let me add a word concerning two mistakes which are made in reference to this matter.

1. The first is, the idea which seems to have settled down upon the minds of some who have been brought into an experience of purity, that after receiving that experience they steadily abide there without any further baptisms of the Spirit. The difficulty with such persons is that they have the idea of resting in a state of holiness, instead of resting in Christ, and thus failing to look to Christ alone they inevitably sink into a state of deadness and formality. The baptisms of the Spirit bring us into the immediate recognition of Christ, and their frequent repetition is needful both for our own spiritual life and our fruitfulness in the Master's service.

2. The other error is one of distrust or anxiety, and this oftentimes in connection with an undue desire for self-gratification. Christians not satisfied with their own experience desire a baptism of the Spirit, to set them at rest and make them happy. The baptisms of the Spirit are not given for that purpose. The written word is given for that. If we believe the word, we shall enter into rest; and every desire for the baptism of the Spirit, to enable us to believe, is an undervaluing and despising of the word which God "has magnified above all his name."

When we seek for the Spirit, it should never be merely for our own gratification, but that we may be made Christ-like and fruitful to the glory of God.—REV. H. BELDEN in Guide to Holiness.

THIS I DID FOR THEE, WHAT DOEST THOU FOR ME?

I gave my life for thee,
My precious blood I shed,
That thou might'st ransomed be,
And quickened from the dead.
I gave my life for thee;
What hast thou given for me?"

I spent long years for thee,
In weariness and woe,
That one eternity
Of joy thou mayest know.
I spent long years for thee;
Hast thou spent one for me?

My Father's house of light,
My rainbow-circled throne,
I left for earthly night,
For wanderings sad and lone;
I left it all for thee;
Hast thou left aught for me?

I suffered much for thee—
More than thy tongue can tell,
Of bitterest agony,
To rescue thee from hell.
I suffered much for thee;
What dost thou bear for me?

And I have brought to thee,
Down from my home above,
Salvation full and free,
My pardon and by love.
Great gifts I brought to thee;
What hast thou brought to me?

Oh! let thy life be given,
Thy years for me be spent,
World-fetters all be riven,
And joy with suffering blent.
I gave myself for thee;
Give thou thyself to me.

LIVE IN THE PRESENT."

J. W. THOMAS.

"To-day."—HEB. 3: 15.

Yesterday is buried. To-morrow is unborn. To-day is the only time you have; improve its rapidly fleeting moments, so that it will leave an impress of happiness on your memory when it is past. Many good people lose the present opportunity of doing that which would bring joy to their own hearts, or gladness to the hearts of others, by worrying over the already misimproved past. Again, others burden the present, or crowd out its joys, by imaginary troubles of the future, which may never come. So their life is made up of sorrows and needless anxieties. This is wrong. Life is too short for any of its precious moments to be lost in dreamy reveries. Let the dead past bury its dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

To-morrow will take care of itself. Live by the moment, and let the work of each day be done in the day, and then you will be prepared for each day as it comes. There are none, probably, who do not wish they had improved many opportunities which can never be recalled; but if you have confessed and forsaken your sins, that is all that God requires. He has said, "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." It is your privilege to be saved now, fully and completely, from all past guilt.

"To-day, if you will hear his voice"; it says—"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." It says—"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." It says—"Fear not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will uphold thee." It says—"There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." It says—"Beloved, now are ye the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." So be it.

NOTHING ELSE WILL DO.

A note signed "Mrs. S. H.," on our table, contains some thoughts for the times. The writer, alluding to this paper, says:

"It comes regularly to cheer me in my sick room. I do not wonder that so many read it with pleasure and profit. It is just what the people want in these days—something to bring them nearer to God and Bible holiness—a salvation that reaches to the uttermost. Nothing will do but 'Holiness to the Lord.' This is the rallying cry, by which God is marshaling his hosts, preparing them to take a noble stand for truth and purity. Something whispers to me, there is a great necessity for christians to arm themselves with the Spirit's might. Satan and his legions are mustering their forces, determined to wrest from us our Sabbaths, our Bible, and our religion; but in the strength of Jesus, our King, truth will prevail. God is walking through the land in mighty power and men valiant for his truth are stepping out from old musty forms and traditions, into the arena of strife, and daring to do right. I have long been praying that God would draw the dividing line, and I see in the great work of holiness now gaining ground in all the churches, that he is separating the precious from the vile, and the wheat from the chaff. The bride is getting herself ready for the marriage of the Lamb.

After reading your excellent paper, I send it to a dear lady friend in Western New York, whose heart God has opened to receive the truth. She writes me that it is a great blessing to her soul. 'O,' she writes, 'if we could only have such meetings here, how it would cheer us all in the blessed way.' The paper, she says, goes all over the neighborhood.

Continue to give the trumpet a certain sound, that all the children of God may prepare themselves for battle; the conflict is on us; it is a conflict between truth and error. Who will draw back in these stirring times? Let christians gird themselves for the mighty issues just before us. "Who is on the Lord's side?"—Methodist Home Journal.

OMENS.—Is not he, whose right it is to reign, preparing his people for some great crisis which is to precede his coming to claim the kingdoms of this world? So we are disposed to think. The signs of the times are portentous. Let us, beloved, keep our lamps trimmed and brightly burning,—looking for and hastening unto the coming of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Jesus, our absent Lord, has told us that he would come again. He has been away nearly two thousand years. Nearly six thousand years has he stood forth before a fallen, redeemed race, as the Lamb newly slain.

The Jubilee of heaven and earth—the grand Sabbatic year—is about to break upon us. By the foreshowings of Scripture, we seem to see that there will be a short, sharp conflict with the man of sin. But though we may be called to pass through seas of blood, it will but quicken our heart-longing cry, 'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!'"—Guide to Holiness.

ROWLAND HILL, when once shamefully attacked in a public paper, was urged by a friend to bring a legal action, to which he replied, "I shall neither answer the libel nor prosecute the writer. 1st, because in doing the one I might be led into unbecoming violence. 2nd, because I have learned from long experience that no man's character can be eventually injured but by himself."

HOME AND HEALTH.

ALCOHOL NOT A FOOD.

Is alcohol a food or not? that's the question that vexes our minds after reading both sides.

ANS. A little common sense ought to settle this question. Nobody disputes that bread is a food because it nourishes, sustains, strengthens, sweetens life; but alcohol don't do this. Strike out of existence in a day all our bread, and civilization would stop, but strike out of existence all the alcohol and it would go on faster than ever. Bread makes men strong, alcohol makes them weak and mad. Whatever the chemist may say about it as a food, a little common sense says it is not. The Journal of Chemistry says: "As the result of the chemical changes which sugar undergoes in passing downwards towards a dead, inorganic condition, a substance is produced which has been the cause of more sorrow, crime and suffering than all other evil agencies that have afflicted the world. It has caused tens of thousands of murders, and uncounted instances of robbery, theft, arson, incest and suicide; it has brought misery and want into millions of households; it has filled almshouses and asylums with wretched victims; it sends a never-ending procession of crime-stained men and women to prison and the gallows. What an awful indictment this is to bring against a substance which stands so closely allied in chemical relationship to innocent sugar?

Alcohol is not a natural product, it can only result from a spontaneous change which is excited in saccharine liquids under the influence of a ferment. If in the order of things this chemical change had been impossible, the human race would have been saved from shedding tears, the aggregated volume of which reaches to that of a mighty river. But, alas! atoms of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen are permitted to group themselves in a way to form the maddening liquid; and the great enemy to human happiness confronts us in all our domestic, industrial and commercial relations. If through disarrangement of nature's laws, the vinous fermentive process should suddenly cease and not another drop of any kind of spirituous liquors be produced, no sensible harm would come to any industrial or art process, and no absolute want in medicine would be encountered.

Carefully viewing the matter from the stand-points of the chemist, physician and artisan, we unhesitatingly declare that the world in its present advanced stage, has no need of alcohol; it is simply convenient, but not necessary. Why not, then, make a determined effort to rid the world of the monster? Although alcohol results, as we have said, from spontaneous changes, yet the aid of man is necessary to form the various liquids containing it into attractive and permanent beverages. The fermentation of the juices of grapes and other fruits produces alcohol, but if let alone nature will not allow the spirit to remain except for a brief space of time. Nature 'abhors' not only a 'vacuum,' but manifestly one of her products, for alcohol is so unstable in its attenuated combinations that if left to itself it speedily runs down into the harmless form of acetic acid."—Herald of Health.

TOBACCO A FOE TO MARRIAGE.

"Pernicious weed! whose scent the fair annoys,
Unfriendly to society's chief joys;
Thy dire effect is banishing for hours
The sex whose presence civilizes ours.
Thou art the drug the gardener wants,
To poison vermin that infects his plants;
But are we so to grace and beauty blind,
As to despise the glory of our kind,
And show the purest minds and fairest forms
As little mercy as he does grubs and worms?

The inquiry is often made, "How is it that there are so many fine girls in our cities unmarried and likely to remain so?" We answer, tobacco is one cause. In old times, when you could approach a young man within whispering distance without being nauseated by his breath, he used, when his day's work was over, to spend his evenings with some good girl or girls, either around the family hearth or in pleasant walks, or at some innocent place of amusement. The young man of the present day takes his solitary pipe and puffs away all his vitality, till he is as stupid as an oyster, and then goes to some saloon to quench the thirst created by smoking; and sheds crocodile tears every time his stockings are out at the toes, that "the girls now-a-days are so extravagant one can't afford to be married!" Young men deliberately give up respectable female society to indulge the solitary, enervating vice of smoking, until their broken-down constitutions clamor for careful nursing, then they coolly ask some noble girl to exchange her health, strength, beauty and unimpaired intellect for their sallow face, tainted blood and breath, irritable temper and mental imbecility.

Women may well hate smoking and smokers. We have known the most gentle and refined men grow harsh in temper and uncleanly in their personal habits under the thraldom of a tyranny which they had not love nor respect enough for woman to break through.

On the other hand, certain ladies of the superfine, superficial type, we confess, sometimes trouble us a little by dispatching the mighty evils of tobacco by a mere stroke of nonchalance, a toss of the head, or a senseless laugh. "Oh, my husband smokes a little," said one of these ladies to us, "but he smokes the best cigars, and if he does nothing worse I shall not trouble him about it." This lady afflicts God's world with five creatures in the shape of sons and daughters; they are pale, lank, lean, scraggy and tremulous; she never investigated the cause of this family deformity and disease; she does not consider that tobacco is a rank poison; that her husband was poisoned from head to foot when she married him; that he poisoned her and she poisoned the children, and that the virus inheres like indelible ink, or the hue of the Ethiopian.

"A man," says a distinguished physician, "may poison his child before it is born, through the nerves and blood of its mother." I have a friend who was an inveterate smoker until his first child was born; that saved him. He knew that his breath would poison it, and he has abandoned the poisonous weed, I trust, forever.

"A few nights ago," says an eminent physician, "I was sent for hastily to see an infant two weeks old. I had attended the mother in her confinement, and had not thought it necessary to call but once after. I found her radiant with health, and she had followed my directions. The child had nursed, and it had seemed as strong and healthy as possible. I could see no reason why it should be sick, but it had evidently been so. It seemed that it must have been poisoned. I questioned the mother and grandmother, nurse and all, but could not find that any were in fault. At last I turned to the father. 'Don't you use tobacco, sir?' said I. The murder was soon out. He was an inveterate smoker. The day before he had taken the babe while the mother went out; some of his friends called, and they had a nice sociable smoke in the same room with the child, and there the little delicate creature had been poisoned in every fiber of its being with every breath it drew. Is it a wonder it was sick? Doubtless many a child is poisoned to death by the tobacco used by its parents and those around it." "I can point you," says another physician, "to two families right under my eye, where in each case there is a nest of little children rendered idiots by the tobacco habits of their parents!"

"One would think," says a lady, "that marriage ought to cure a man of using tobacco." It would if women did their duty! The ceremony ought to be amended by inserting after "love, honor and cherish," the words, "and use no tobacco." But if marriage,' says another, "does not reform the tobacco toper, one of its blessed consequences ought to. No man ought to poison his baby."

The argument respecting marriage, as we reflect, becomes intensely moral. Marriage is a powerful ally to virtue. But few state prison convicts, we are assured, are married men. "Marriage is honorable in all;" hence to abuse and thwart the grand designs of this holy institution is a high-handed sin against the highest good of the race.

The ignorance of former times touching this evil God may have winked at, but he now commands tobacco sots everywhere to repent. They have no right to poison virtuous women, "whose price is above rubies!" They have no right to afflict the world with a feeble, scrofulous, scraggy set of children; it is a sin against God and nature, and should be placed among criminal offenses in the statutes of a State.—Rev. George Trask, in Herald of Health.

SEEING THE POINT.

A boy returned from school one day, with a report that his scholarship had fallen below the usual average.

"Well," said his father, "you've fallen behind this month, have you?"

"Yes, sir."

"How did that happen?"

"Don't know, sir."

The father knew, if his son did not. He had observed a number of cheap novels scattered about the house, but he had not thought it worth while to say anything until a fitting opportunity should offer itself. A basket of apples stood upon the floor, and he said:

"Empty those apples, and take the basket, and bring it to me half-full of chips. And now," he continued, "put those apples back into the basket."

When half the apples were replaced, the son said:

"Father, they roll off. I can't put in any more."

"Put them in, I tell you."

"But, father, I can't put them in."

"Put them in! No; of course you can't put them in. Do you expect to fill a basket half-full of chips, and then fill it with apples? You said you didn't know why you fell behind at school, and I will tell you. Your mind is like that basket; it will not hold more than so much, and here you have been the past month filling it up with rubbish—worthless, cheap novels."

A SERIOUS QUESTION.—Have you made one heart happy to-day? How calmly can you seek your pillow, how sweetly sleep? In all this world there is nothing so sweet as giving comfort to the distressed. Many sighs and tears are caused by our own thoughtlessness. How many a daughter wrings the soul of a fond mother by acts of unkindness and ingratitude! How many husbands, by one little word, makes a whole day of sad hours and unkind thoughts! How many wives estrange and embitter loving hearts! How many brothers and sisters meet but to injure and vex each other, making wounds that no human heart can heal! But if each one worked upon the maxim of striving to make some heart happy—jealousy, revenge, madness, hate, with their kindred evil associates, would forever leave the earth.

WHAT A CHILD CAN DO.—A little boy who attended a temperance meeting, was asked by his father when he returned,

"Have you learned anything, my boy?"

"Yes, father, I have. I have learned never to put strong drink to my lips; for it has killed fifty thousand persons annually, and how do I know that it will not kill me?"

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

THERE REMAINETH THEREFORE A REST.

Watchmen! are you growing weary,
  Watching night and watching day?
Do the hours seem long and dreary,
  Till the shadows clear away?
Grasp the standard—hold it tighter,
  Meet the foe midst shot and shell;
Heavenly rest will be the lighter
  If you do your duty well.

* * * * * * *

Christian! are thy crosses growing
  Heavier, and the journey long?
Art thou saddened with the knowing
  Right is conquered by the wrong?
Strive a little longer, bearing
  All, though drooping spirits mourn.
Crowns will be more worth the wearing
  If the cross is nobly borne.

Brothers, sisters, toiling, praying,—
  Seeking for the higher rest!
Oh, the joy of weary laying
  Ever on the Savior's breast,
Where the parted friends are meeting,
  Never more to parted be,
Where the angels shout their greeting,
  All across the jasper sea.

Here is but the time of testing,
  Time of battle, tears, and pain;
There, the joy of sweetly resting,
  Never more to toil again.
Let us then bear all the sorrow
  God shall deem it wise and best;
Soon will dawn the glorious morrow,
  With its sweet, eternal rest.

THE RESURRECTION BODY.

H. BRITTAIN.

All this has been exemplified in the person of the great Head of the church, the Lord Jesus Christ. The body with which he appeared among men was, like our present bodies, a "natural" (psychikon) body, derived from his human parent,[*] and was therefore mortal—though even then a temple of the Holy Ghost, as is the present body of the regenerated believer in him; but the present body of Christ is not a "natural," but a "spiritual (pnumatikon) body," and is therefore no longer mortal. "Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him." And further, the same thing was true in the case of His resurrection from the dead, as will be true in that of his people; in both cases the Holy Spirit is the agent or the efficient power which accomplishes the work. Thus we read in reference to the revivifying of Christ's body: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." 1 Pet. 3: 18. And thus with regard to the revivifying of the believer's body—"But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8: 11. In both cases, it will be observed, there is a quickening of a mortal body, and in both cases by the same power.

We are now, therefore, in a position to see the meaning of another assertion of the apostle in this same chapter (1 Cor. 15); viz., that, "as we have borne the image of the earthy [man], we shall also bear the image of the heavenly" man. v. 49. In other words, we shall be made like unto Christ in reference to the body which he now bears, now that he has been raised from the dead, just as we have been made like Adam in reference to the body which he bore. The declaration has reference, of course, only to the body of Christ, and thus we read elsewhere—"For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body [to soma tes tapeinoseos amon], that it might be fashioned like unto his glorious body [toi somati tes doxes auton], according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. 3: 21.

But this brings us at once to the question, What is the nature of Christ's resurrection body? To that shall ours be like, and in that, therefore, we have a standard of comparison.[†] Now, we have the clearest and the most demonstrative evidence that our Lord's resurrection body was a material body, precisely so much so as that which he bore before his death; for in reality it was the same body, only when raised from the dead it had been "quickened by the Spirit." It is well in this case to trace the different steps of the question. The body, then, with which the Savior "went about doing good," was the body which was laid in the tomb when he was dead; it was this same body which was raised from the tomb when he was dead; it was this same body which was raised from the tomb, as was proved, among other things, by the fact that it bore the very marks of the nails and of the spear, which had pierced it, while he hung upon the cross. The unbelief of Thomas seems to have been permitted and recorded for the very purpose of proving this; and how very striking is the record of the fact:—"But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples, therefore, said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. And after eight days, again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." John 20: 24–28. Of the identity of the Redeemer's body, therefore, after he rose from the dead, there could be no doubt, and as little of its being as substantial and material as it was before; for, in addition to the above, we find him saying to his disciples on another occasion—"Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not FLESH AND BONES, as ye see me have." Luke 24: 39. In a word, we see that his body was the very same body as before, having the same properties, the same organization, and capable of exercising the same functions. It was visible to sight; it saw, it walked, it talked, and even ate and drank;—"and they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honey-comb. And he took it, and did eat before them." Luke 24: 42. "Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly[*]; not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him, after he rose from the dead." Acts 10: 40, 41.

But, after all, it may objected, we find it written that "FLESH AND BLOOD cannot inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 15: 50. True, but "flesh and bones" can; for, as we have just seen, the Savior declared with regard to his body, which had now been raised from the dead, that it had both these; and we know that that same body, of which he said this, afterward ascended into heaven,[†] and is now sitting at the right hand of God, "angels, and principalities, and powers, being made subject to him." It is desirable again to have the full record before us of the occasion when this was spoken by him. "And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit."[‡] And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet; handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not FLESH AND BONES, as ye see me have; and when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet; and while they believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat? and they gave him a piece of a broiled fish and of an honey-comb; and he took it and did eat before them." Luke 24: 36–43.

Now, it is all-important to observe, before we proceed further, that we learn from this, not only that the resuscitated body of the Redeemer is material, but also of what kind of matter it consists, so to speak. We learn, namely, that it is still a fleshly body. It was so before his death; it was so after his resurrection; it is so still,—modified, or altered, indeed, very materially, as it would seem, in reference to its condition, in some important respects, as we learn elsewhere; but yet, truly and essentially, a body of "flesh"; for this the Redeemer himself calls it. Why, then, we may ask, if CHRIST'S body be of this nature,—a body that is of "flesh and bones"—why should we esteem it, as some seem to do, inconsistent with the dignity of our future condition, to have bodies of the same? Is it not sufficient that "the servant should be as his Lord"? We are told that, "as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." Must not our utmost desires, and even our highest aspirations, be satisfied with such an assurance as this, whatever be its meaning? We have now, however, I trust, seen something of that meaning; more remains which we shall have to consider hereafter; but this must suffice for the present.

[*] "Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came."—ROM. 9: 5.

[†] The extent of the resemblance between our resurrection body and that of Christ, together with the respects in which it will be maintained, will be more fully discussed hereafter; the only point which it was necessary to discuss here was the materiality, or non-materiality of the body of the Redeemer, after the resurrection of the dead.

[*] Note by H. Brittain, on Acts 10: 40. The exact translation of the Greek (see Diaglott) is, "and gave him manifest to become," or "permitted him to become manifest," not to all the people, but unto chosen witnesses. It is evident that unless God had permitted Christ to have been seen, we should have been without that precious evidence we have now as to his resurrection; and further, could have had no conception of the nature and characteristics of the resurrection body.

[†] "And he led them out as far as to Bethany; and he lifted his hands and blessed them; and it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." Luke 24: 50, 51. "'He led them,' saith he. Who, I pray thee? Even the Lord Jesus Christ, which until then, by the space of forty days, had in very deed truly showed himself unto his disciples, that he was risen from the dead with a very true, essential body,—even he, the very same that had taken unto him a true body, led his disciples out unto Bethany, and from thence brought he them further to Mount Olivet; and in the same place, lifting up his hands (no doubt bodily and human hands, yea, with the prints and token of the wounds), he blessed them; namely, his disciples; that is, he saluted them, as the manner is of those that take their leave of; and so he departed from them, and set his body corporeally in heaven, as in one place."—COVERDALE'S Remains, p. 150. Par. Soc. Ed.

[‡] "And they would have been evidently right, if, as many suppose, we are to understand St. Paul, when he tells us that "there is a natural and there is a spiritual body," to mean that the resuscitated body will be, not a material, but a non-material substance, a spiritual thing.

THE truths of the Bible are like gold in the soil. Whole generations walk over it, and know not what treasures are hidden beneath. So centuries of men pass over the Scriptures, and know not what riches lie under the feet of their interpretation. Sometimes when they discover them they call them new truth. One might as well call gold, newly dug, new gold.

THERE cannot be a secret christian. Grace is like ointment hid in the hand: it betrayeth itself.

THE DEAD—WHERE ARE THEY?"

J. M. LEIGHTON.

"There the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."—JOB 3: 17.

In considering all questions of this kind, the immortality of the soul becomes the chief and leading idea. Doctrinal writers of many creeds make it the basis of their arguments, and if I use it as a preliminary, or opening point, it will be in the sense that man is not immortal. The proof of this assertion is to be found in the Scriptures, which plainly declare that man is mortal: "Shall mortal man be more just than God? Shall man be more pure than his maker?" Job 4: 17. God only is immortal: "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." 1 Tim. 6: 16. "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be power and glory forever and ever." 1 Tim. 1: 17. This plainly proves that God and God only hath immortality. Who only hath immortality, says the apostle. Thus we see that man has not the slightest claim to immortality.

When man becomes immortal, he becomes as God. He possesses the attribute of God, which the Bible teaches belongs to him alone. "But," says one, "this cannot be, for man must be immortal to enter heaven." True, but immortality is put on at the coming of Christ. "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15: 53, 54. This victory over death (which is the resurrection of man in an immortal state) takes place at the appearing of Christ, and comes through him. "But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 15: 57.

Again, we read, "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." 2 Cor. 5: 4. The soul is here represented as groaning for immortality. This is not strange, oppressed as it is with earthly cares, and troubled with things temporal, and tempted of Satan. This also proves its mortality; for if immortal, why should it groan for immortality, or "that mortality might be swallowed up of life"? The body is spoken of as an earthly home: "If our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens." "For in this we do groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." 2 Cor. 5: 1. Man, then, being mortal, and flesh, and blood, cannot enter heaven till Christ's coming clothes him with immortality.

The question that naturally follows is, where are the dead? I will first answer negatively, by saying that they are not with Christ in heaven. This is proved by the following Scripture: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." John 3: 13. These are Christ's own words, and if we accept any of his sayings, we must accept all.

Again he says, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come." John 13: 33. Jesus spoke these words to his disciples, "For David is not ascended into the heavens, but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand till I make thy foes thy footstool." Acts 11: 34. Unto the Jews Jesus said, "Yet a little while I am with you, and I go unto him that sent me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come." John 7: 33, 34. So it seems that Jesus used the same language to his disciples and to the Jews, his persecutors. Neither can enter where he is gone.

Can the wicked enter hell? If so, what becomes of the doctrine of judgment? "Where are the dwelling places of the wicked?" asks Job; and he does not answer that they are in hell, but "that the wicked are reserved for the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Job 21; 28–30. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." 2 Peter 2: 9. If the dead are not in heaven, neither in hell, where can they exist during the interval which must come between death and the resurrection and judgment? I answer, they sleep in the dust from the decease of the body till the final awakening, when they arise and appear in the judgment. The poor mortal, whose pilgrimage on earth is a succession of care and labor, sorrow and fitful unrest, looks forward to some place of rest from his labors; and as we have plainly proved that he does not enter heaven, nor yet hell, so we can as plainly prove that we rest in the grave till the final entering into the eternal state.

Christ said, "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 28, 29. Death, we say, is the end of life. This is true only of the physical life, and in no way implies that the eternal state is immediately entered, when the breath leaves the body. They sleep. First, because sleep is universal. Death as applied to the material body is universal. All must die. Death and sleep are analogous in this respect. Every material body is subject to death and decay. So every soul is subject to a common law—sleep. Every one must be in the same state, because they are all subject to the same summons that is to herald the resurrection and judgment.

When the end comes, the last trump calls all men to judgment. This indicates that all the dead must at that time be in the same state of existence. But, you say, we read, "Behold, I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump," etc. 1 Cor. 15: 51. This is easily answered. It plainly refers to those who shall be alive when the end comes, and goes to prove that all others sleep.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.

BY ADAM CLARKE.

It is strange there should be found a person believing the whole gospel system and yet living in sin! "Salvation from sin" is the long continued sound, as it is the spirit and design of the gospel. Our christian faith in Christ, and avowed belief in his word, all call us to this; can it be said that we have any louder call than they? Our self-interest, as it respects the happiness of a godly life, and the glories of eternal blessedness; the pains and wretchedness of a life of sin, leading to the worm that never dies, and the fire that is not quenched. Reader, lay these things to heart, and answer this question to God: "How shall I escape if I neglect so great salvation?" And then, as thy conscience shall answer, let thy mind and thy hand begin to act.

As there is no end to the merits of Christ incarnated and crucified; no bounds to the mercy and love of God; no let or hindrance to the almighty energy and sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit; no limits to the improvability of the human soul; so there can be no bounds to the saving influence which God will dispense to the heart of every genuine believer. We may ask and receive, and our joy shall be full! Well may we bless and praise God, "who has called us into such a state of salvation;" a state in which we may be thus saved; and, by the grace of that state, continue in the same to the end of our lives!

As sin is the cause of the ruin of mankind, the gospel system, which exhibits its cure, is fitly called "good news, or glad tidings;" and it is good news, because it proclaims Him who saves his people from their sins; and it would indeed be dishonorable to that grace, and the infinite merit of Him who procured it, to suppose, much more to assert, that sin had made wounds which grace would not heal. Of such a triumph Satan shall ever be deprived.

"He that committeth sin is of the devil." Hear this, ye who plead for Baal, and cannot bear the thought of that doctrine that states believers are to be saved from all sin in this life! He who committeth sin is a child of the devil, and shows that he has still the nature of the devil in him; "for the devil sinneth from the beginning;" he was the father of sin,—brought sin into the world, and maintains sin in the world by living in the hearts of his own children, and thus leading them to transgression; and persuading others that they cannot be saved from their sins in this life, that he may secure a continual residence in their heart. He also knows that if he has a place throughout life, he will probably have it at death; and, if so, throughout eternity.

"That is," say some, "he does not sin habitually as he formerly did." This is bringing the influence and privileges of the heavenly birth very low indeed. We have the most indubitable evidence that many of the heathen philosophers had acquired, by mental discipline and cultivation, an entire ascendency over all their wonted vicious habits. Perhaps my reader will recollect the story of the physiognomist, who, coming into the place where Socrates was delivering a lecture, his pupils, wishing to put the principles of the man's science to proof, desired him to examine the face of their master, and say what his moral character was. After a full contemplation of the philosopher's visage, he pronouced him "the most gluttonous, drunken, brutal, and libidinous old man that he ever met." As the character of Socrates was the reverse of all this, his disciples began to insult the physiognomist. Socrates interfered, and said, "The principles of his science may be very correct; for such I was, but I have conquered it by my philosophy." O ye Christian divines! ye real or pretended gospel ministers! will ye allow the influence of the grace of Christ a way not even so extensive as that of the philosophy of a heathen who never heard of the true God?

Many tell us that "no man can be saved from sin in this life. Will these persons permit us to ask, How much sin may we be saved from in this life? Something must be ascertained on this subject: 1. That the soul may have some determinate object in view. 2. That it may not lose its time, or employ its faith and energy, in praying for what is impossible to be attained. Now, as Christ was manifested to take away our sins, to destroy the works of the devil; and as his blood cleanseth from all sin and unrighteousness, is it not evident that God means that believers in Christ shall be saved from all sin! For if his blood cleanses from all sin; if he destroys the works of the devil, (and sin is the work of the devil), and if he who is born of God does not commit sin, then he must be cleansed from all sin; and while he continues in that state, he lives without sinning against God, for the seed of God remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born or begotten of God.

How strangely warped and blinded by prejudice and system must men be who, in the face of such evidence as this, will still dare to maintain that no man can be saved from his sin in this life; but must daily commit sin in thought, word, and deed; that is, every man is laid under the fatal necessity of sinning as many ways against God as the devil does through his natural wickedness and malice; for even the devil himself can have no other way of sinning against God, except by thought, word, and deed. And yet, according to these and others of the same creed, "even the most regenerate sin against God as long as they live." It is a miserable salvo to say "they do not sin so much as they used to do; and they do not sin habitually, only occasionally. Alas for this system! Could not the grace that saved them partially save them perfectly? Could not that power of God that saved them from occasional or accidental sin? Shall we suppose that sin, how potent soever it may be, is as potent as the Spirit and grace of Christ? And may we not ask, If it was for God's glory and their good that they were partially saved, would it not have been more for God's glory and their good if they had been perfectly saved? But the letter and spirit of God's word, and the design and end of Christ's coming, is to save his people from their sins.

The perfection of the gospel system is not that it makes allowances for sin, but that it makes an atonement for it; not that it tolerates sin, but that it destroys it.

However inveterate the disease of sin may be, the grace of the Lord Jesus can fully cure it. God sets no bounds to the communications of his grace and Spirit to them that are faithful. And as there are no bounds to the graces, so there should be none to the exercise of those graces. No man can ever feel that he loves God too much, or that he loves man too much for God's sake.

Be so purified and refined in your souls, by the indwelling Spirit, that even the light of God shining into your hearts shall not be able to discover a fault that the love of God has not purged away.

"Be thou perfect, and thou shalt be perfection," that is, altogether perfect; be just such as the holy God would have thee to be, as the Almighty God can make thee, and live as the all-sufficient God shall support thee; for he alone who make the soul holy can preserve it in holiness. Our blessed Lord appears to have these words pointedly in view. "Ye shall be perfect, as your Father who is in heaven is perfect." Matt. 5: 48. But what does this imply? Why, to be saved from all the power, the guilt, and the contamination of sin. This is only the negative part of salvation, but it has also a positive part; to be made perfect, to be perfect as our Father who is in heaven is perfect, to be perfect, to be filled with the fulness of God, to have Christ dwelling continually in the heart by faith, and to be rooted and grounded in love. This is the state in which man was created; for he was made in the image and likeness of God. This is the state from which man fell; for he broke the command of God. And this is the state into which every human soul must be raised who would dwell with God in glory; for Christ was incarnated and died to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. What a glorious privilege! And who can doubt the possibility of its attainment who believes in the omnipotent love of God, the infinite merit of the blood of atonement, and the all-pervading and all-purifying energy of the Holy Ghost? How many miserable souls employ that time to dispute and cavil against the possibility of being saved from their sins, which they should devote to praying and believing that they might be saved out of the hands of their enemies!

But some may say, "You overstrain the meaning of the term; it signifies only, be sincere; for, as perfect obedience is impossible, God accepts of sincere obedience." If by sincerity the objection means "good desires, and generally good purposes, with an impure heart and spotted life," then I assert that no such thing is implied in the text, nor in the original word. But if the word sincerity be taken in its proper and literal sense, I have no objection to it. Sincere is compounded of sine cera, "without wax;" and, applied to moral subjects, is a metaphor taken from clarified honey, from which every atom of the comb or wax is separated. Then let it be proclaimed from heaven, "Walk before me, and be sincere! Purge out the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump unto God; and thus ye shall be perfect, as your Father who is in heaven is perfect." This is sincerity. Reader, remember that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. Ten thousand quibbles on insulated texts can never lessen, much less destroy, the merit and efficacy of the great atonement.

God never gives a precept but he offers sufficient grace to enable thee to perform it. Believe as he would have thee, and act as he shall strengthen thee, and thou wilt believe all things savingly, and do all things well.

God is holy; and this is the eternal reason why all his people should be holy—should be purified from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. No faith in any particular creed, no religious observance, no acts of benevolence and charity, no mortification, attrition, or contrition can be a substitute for this. We must be made partakers of the divine nature. We must be saved from our sins—from the corruption that is in the world, and be holy within and righteous without, or never see God. For this very purpose Jesus Christ lived, died, and revived, that he might purify us unto himself; that through faith in his blood our sins might be blotted out, and our souls restored to the image of God. Reader, art thou hungering and thirsting after righteousness? Then, blessed art thou, for thou shalt be filled.

God is ever ready, by the power of his Spirit, to carry us forward to every degree of life, light, and love, necessary to prepare us for an eternal weight of glory. There can be little difficulty in attaining the end of our faith, the salvation of our souls from all sin, if God carry us forward to it; and this he will do, if we submit to be saved in his own way, and on his own terms. Many make a violent outcry against the doctrine of perfection; that is, against the heart being cleansed from all sin in this life, and filled with love to God and man; because they judge it to be impossible! Is it too much to say of these, that they know neither the Scriptnre nor the power of God! Surely, the Scripture promises the thing, and the power of God can carry us on to the possession of it.

The object of all God's promises and dispensations was to bring fallen man back to the image of God, which he had lost. This, indeed, is the sum and substance of the religion of Christ. We have partaken of an earthly, sensual, and devilish nature; the design of God, by Christ, is to remove this, and to make us partakers of the divine nature, and save us from all the corruption, in principle and fact, which is in the world.

It is said that Enoch not only "walked with God," setting him always before his eyes—beginning, continuing, and ending every work to his glory—but also that "he pleased God," and had "the testimony that he did please God." Hence we learn that it was then possible to live so as not to offend God; consequently, so as not to commit sin against him, and to have the continual evidence or testimony that all that a man did and purposed was pleasing in the sight of Him who searches the heart, and by whom devices are weighed; and if it was possible then, it is surely, through the same grace, possible now; for God, and Christ, and faith are still the same.

The petition, "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," certainly points out a deliverance from all sin; for nothing that is unholy can consist with the divine will; and, if this be fulfilled in man, surely sin shall be banished from his soul. Again: the holy angels never mingle iniquity with their loving obedience; and, as our Lord teaches us to pray that we do his will here as they do it in heaven, can it be thought he would put a petition into our mouths the fulfillment of which was impossible?

(To be concluded.)

THE TEN VIRGINS.

ALVIRUS N. HITCHCOCK.

We have all heard of four-legged parables, but the amusing feature comes in when we see this class of the genus quadrupeda trying to walk off on all fours. Somehow, when the legs are all stuck on nicely, like some watches that are eternally being tinkered, they "won't go." The parable referred to in our caption has gone through this severe test. It would be a thankless task to begin an estimate of the many hours of toil and tears, of heart aches and head aches, of disappointments and angry disputes occasioned by the attempt to make this parable keep time with the "Advent movement." It has been subjected to the severest torsion, but it never seems to take the "right twist." If one does cry out, "Eureka," all the rest give back the individual reply, "I can't see that;" and so the question seems to have about as many sides as it has observers.

Now suppose we say that this parable has no reference to the "movements" of the past, how many will cry, "Infidelity!" Perhaps a few. But we have heard this cry before. It is most generally used for want of a better argument, and is the creature of bigotry or fanaticism. Before giving a brief exposition of the parable, let me call in question the common application. This view is clearly at fault, from the following considerations:

1. The virgins did not once go forth to meet the bridegroom until the midnight cry sounded. Here of course I shall be flatly contradicted; but please listen to the argument. In Eastern marriages there was no "slumbering and sleeping" after once going forth to meet the bridegroom. The company that conducted the bride to the house of the bridegroom's father, there waited until the announcement was made without, tnat the bridegroom was coming (this usually occurred in the night), whereupon, the company who were with the bride formed a procession, and "went forth to meet the bridegroom." If any had neglected to trim their lamps, it was now too late. The procession moved forward until they met the advancing company, when they all returned to celebrate the marriage banquet, and the door was shut. Christ's parable was built upon this ceremony. It is simply ridiculous to suppose that he would so far depart from a truthful picture of the ceremony, as to represent the bride and her escorts as going to sleep after they had started out to meet the bridegroom.

But you ask, "Does not the language of the parable imply this?" Not in the least. Now get the Testament and read carefully. In the first verse, Christ, in a general statement, makes reference to ten virgins, who, he simply says, "took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom." Here he does not allude to the circumstance of the announcement, though that always precedes the going forth. Having now made a general statement, he proceeds to particularize, and of course goes back to the beginning as every clear author does. Now (before they have gone forth) they are represented as slumbering. At lenth they hear the cry, and for the first and only time go forth to meet the bridegroom. The "going forth" of the first verse, then, is the same as the "going out" of the sixth. Christ first states the subject of the parable, and then gives the particulars from the start. Take another parable for illustration. Said Jesus, "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return." Next verse: "And he called his ten servants and delivered unto them ten pounds." Now do we conclude from this language that he called his servants after he had gone into the far country? Certainly not. As in the parable under discussion, so in this. Christ first states the subject in a general manner, and then goes back to follow up in detail. This certainly proves the common application incorrect; for, according to this, the virgins went out in '43 and '44, have since slumbered and slept, and must yet go out to meet the Bridegroom the second time; while in the parable there is but one going forth, and that is after the virgins have slumbered and slept.

2. There is no getting ready after the announcement is made. Some, it appears, in the parable, started to buy oil after the cry was made; but they were left behind, and the door was closed against them. It was necessary to have everything in readiness to start forth at the first signal of the advancing messenger. How will this apply to the '43 movement? Manifestly not very well, unless the "shut door theory" be true. If the virgins went out then, woe to poor sinners and backsliders who have since sought in vain the "oil of the Spirit!"

Now let us find the true application. Christ is the Bridegroom of the church. And as in the ceremony, the virgins went out at the first announcement of the actual coming of the bridegroom; so the church will go forth to meet her Lord when the voice of the archangel shall sound out from the heavenly procession. And as some were without oil when the time came to go forth, so many will find when too late that they are unready for the marriage supper of the Lamb. The world's midnight is upon us. The trump of God will soon rend the quivering air. The harmonies of heaven will soon be awakened to the advancing tread of him who comes to reign. From land and sea will go up the responsive shouts of saints. From every plain and hilltop, we shall behold the ascending forms of white-robed victors; while far below shall be heard the low wail of a disappointed world. It hasteth greatly. "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

Fennimore, Wis.

"TEACH US TO PRAY."

J. HEMENWAY.

Modern disciples, in their earnestness to learn the truth, and attain a spiritual life that will prepare them for the kingdom of God, will do well to learn to pray the Lord's prayer. One sentence well learned, and breathed out from the depths of the heart, means more than all the talking and praying about justification and sanctification, that is expressed only in words. "Thy kingdom come" are but words of prayer, that often find utterance without the spirit and desire of the heart; but let that prayer come from the heart that prays, and it denotes a subjective state of the mind, and earnest desire for Christ's coming, the resurrection, and demolition of all the ruling power of earth. "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" expresses a present state of the mind, that denotes entire sanctification of the will, and all that pertains to this life to God without reserve. This places one in a position that brings "perfect peace" and fulness of joy. Long prayers, shouting, excitement, losing one's strength, are not infallible proofs of consecration, or full enjoyment of "perfect love." Oftentimes, it's like a tornado, leaving its pathway strewed with wreck and ruin. Not so with blessings from heaven that come to the submissive soul, that not only says, "Thy will be done," but quietly bows to the storm of trial and tribulation, and all the time says, "Thy will not mine." It is here, and only here, that we find "perfect love," peace, and joy.

Take this one expression of the prayer, and learn to practice, as well as repeat it, and a miraculous change will take place in the heart and life. It leaves no place for fear,—God's will is right. There is no undue anxiety as to the future,—God provides for that. Give up the will and desires to God's will, and perfect peace takes possession of the heart; contentment reigns in the soul, and sweet rest is found in Jesus.

Let the heart learn this part of the prayer, then it is ready for the next sentence, "Give us day by day our daily bread." The submissive heart is not desirous of a large stock of bread for years to come, but is satisfied with a daily supply.

This wonderful and comprehensive prayer must be learned in its regular order. First, it begins with the heart up in heaven, and drives heaven here; then bows to the will of heaven. When that is learned we come to daily life. It is not living in the future, but to-day. This day, and every day, finds the heart acknowledging God's will as supreme and safe to submit to without a murmur. It is here that we can expect forgiveness as we forgive. The heart that can say, "Thy will" cannot hold a grudge, cannot hold revenge. It forgives and receives forgiveness. When this prayer finds a full response in the heart, holiness is there; entire sanctification of the whole man is made, and that man is holy and sanctified, just as long as his will is in subjection to God's will. Teach us to pray, Lord!

A CHRISTIAN should never plead spirituality for being a sloven. If he be a shoecleaner, he should be the best in the parish.

THE PROPOSED MINISTERIAL CONSULTATION AT SPRINGFIELD.

The present time is doubtless the most perilous in many respects ever witnessed by the church of Christ. Wise counsels, cool and careful deliberations, brotherly love and long forbearance are especially needed. One of the most perilous snares of the last days, according to the Scriptures, is "jealousy," which is to devour the whole earth, or break up all harmony of associations. Good people as well as the wicked are affected by it; therefore every proper gospel effort should be made by the servants of Christ to withstand this element of disintegration of all social bodies. It takes deep root, and grows rapidly in the misunderstanding of the motives and acts of others. The tendencies and liabilities to become prejudiced against friends by this means, is alarmingly increasing. It is like the current of the Niagara River, which grows more rapid and threatening as you near the falls. So is every current of evil in this world; their volume and velocity increases as we near the universal dissolution of all earthly governments. These powerful influences must be withstood by the faithful in Christ, so as to prevent discord and strife among themselves; if not, the Holy Spirit is driven away, and the carnal nature is left to bite and devour, and so drown many in perdition.

These times call for peacemakers to unfurl their glorious banner, and pour out a flood of divine love into the sea of contention, like oil upon the fleecy waves in a howling tempest. All that good devoted christians need to continue brotherly love and christian harmony among themselves is an understanding of each other's purposes and acts; therefore every christian should be open hearted, and ready to give a reason for all his social designs and deeds to his brethren; and when there is an honest disagreement in purposes, let all yield as far as they can conscientiously, so as to produce gospel harmony. Divine love and fidelity to Christ demand in us a fixed purpose of heart to do all we can to perpetuate christian fellowship and unity, by every means within our reach. Frequent associations, in which a brotherly fraternal spirit is studiously and prayerfully cultivated, where explanations of misunderstandings can be given, and concert of action agreed upon, is one of the most effectual means of christian unity within our control.

Such a gathering, for such a purpose, is the design of the published call for a ministerial meeting, to be holden on the Springfield Camp-ground, commencing Aug. 6th. We are assured that the object is a holy and important one, and that the safety of the flock of Christ and the threatening aspect of the world at the present time imperatively demand of us as watchmen of God the most unselfish decisions, untiring efforts, and willing sacrifices for its accomplishment. We need to have our hearts filled with the love of Christ, so that we shall be willing to forego personal advantages for the salvation of men, as he did. We should pray much for the aid of the Holy Spirit to make our hearts impressible with truth, and with a sense of the importance of our present position and duties.

Dear brethren in the ministry, let us consider the holy profession we have made, that Christ has called and commissioned us guardians and leaders of his church, to conduct her to the elevated position of preparation for translation. We are required upon our peril, to teach her christian unity and fellowship, by precept and example. The end is evidently approaching,—the end of Satan's work of deception and death,—the end of christians toils and temptations,—the end of discord and strife. But the end of sin is fearful. The prince of darkness will not yield the reins of government without a terrible struggle—a fearful conflict. It is a war of worlds, a war of gods, of angels, and men, of spirits and principles, of truth and error. It is Satan's last death-struggle for the rulership of this world. His rival and antagonist is Christ, and as he is not present to be personally attacked, the satanic indignation is poured upon his representatives and friends, in a fearful effort to break their espousal to Jesus, by infusing into them his wicked spirit of strife and rebellion; thus deranging the purpose of God in preparing a bride for the glorious nuptials of his Son at his returning.

Then let us rally, brethren, and present a fearless and unbroken front on this field of deadly conflict. The smoke and roar of battle may frighten some from the post of duty, and the general confusion may cause others to mistake their own ranks, and wander into those of the enemy, thus exposing them to the volleys of the faithful. But there is a voice above this roar and din, known to the sainted host by its unvarying commands, and the sweetness of its tones, leading the unbroken ranks of his veterans to sure and eternal victory. O that the eyes of all might be opened to see the vastness of this subject, and the inexpressible importance of faithfulness to Christ in this day of unparalleled commotion! The external of christian duties required of us now may not appear to have any special importance. They do appear to the eye of unbelief as being very insignificant; but when faith rends the vail, and the outlying scenes appear, they seem like the spark of a fuse running to a mighty magazine which explodes with terrific grandeur. The angels doubtless look down, with more than human interest, upon the ever varying currents of the moving millions of our race;—the multitudes crowding the broad way from every avenue of wickedness,—political, social, religious and moral; while a few in obscurity and unassumed meekness, with no vain parade or worldly pomp, walk in the narrow way in heavenly unity and sacred devotion. Their interest is intensified as they see that they are approaching a point when the destiny of all will be eternally sealed. Could we all feel that we are nearing a time when the moral status of men will be fixed by a changeless decree of Jehovah, so that it will be said by the Judge, He that is filthy let him be filthy still, and he that is holy let him be holy still, how carefully should we conduct all our meetings. How earnestly should we seek to move in harmony with Christ, his spirit and people, so that when the clock shall strike the end, we may be found with our hearts perfectly in tune for the society of all the holy on earth and in heaven.

We do not say these things in exclusive reference to the meeting at Springfield, but to all of our associations and work; for these great principles which apply to one part, apply to all. We do look upon this subject of christian love and harmony, under present circumstances, as of very great importance; and that every opportunity like that at Springfield should be improved to do all that can be done to strengthen that fellowship and love, and defeat Satan, who is trying every strategem to destroy them. Brethren, we do exhort you to rally manfully, and in the strength and love of Christ, to stand in unbroken phalanx and battle the common foe, and nobly defend, by precept and example, the purity and unity of Christ's Church. J. C.

PURE RELIGION.

The word religion expresses a system of worship, including theology, ritual, and moral or spiritual character. We read of "Jews religion," "vain relgion," and "pure religion." "Vain religion is that system of worship which will not accomplish the purpose for which religion is sought, or which does not give salvation. Jews religion was the particular faith, worship, and spirit, peculiar to the Jews. Pure religion is that system of devotion which is unadulterated by men; that which is unalloyed with human theology, ritual, or spirit, and is just as it emanates from its author—God.

The prefix re, to the word religion, signifies anew, again, once more, the repeating of something previously stated or written. From the root of the word religion we get "to gather or collect again, "to go through or over again in reading, in speech, or in thought;" "to bind anew, or back, to bind fast." Webster. It appears, therefore, that pure religion is a divine arrangement designed to "gather or collect again" for the benefit of man, that which had been lost and scattered. What had been lost? As it is "to go through or over again in reading, in speech, or in thought," it must be God's communications or instructions, designed to regulate our worship and conduct, which was lost and is now restored.

When God created man he qualified and endowed him as a worshiper, giving to him a law by which to govern his acts of service and devotion. Man, as a sinner, broke that law, and departed from the instruction God had given him, which rendered his service and acts acceptable to his God. Pure religion restores the sinner "back" to a position where he consents to receive again to his heart as the rule of his life, such instruction as God may be pleased to give him. Again, it is "to bind anew, to bind fast." It binds man to his God in covenant, by promise, by mutual agreement. God covenanting to protect and save man; he covenanting to be governed by God's instructions in all his service. When man thus in his heart binds himself to God, the covenant on the part of God is ratified by the gift of the Holy Spirit, which blends divine truth with the believer's heart, vitalizing both, so that truth moulds the character of every act of the man, and binds his heart to God and his word, in strong bonds of love, divine fellowship, and heavenly union. The divine nature is thus engrafted into the human stock, so that the Holy Spirit becomes the leading, governing spirit, producing a will in man harmonizing with the will which the same spirit produces in Christ, thus making it our meet to do the will of our Father in heaven; that is, it becomes as really our pleasure to do his will as to receive food when hungry.

The apostle tells us that "if any man seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, this man's religion is vain;" that is, pure religion presents instruction for the use of the tongue which will properly regulate it in all it says; therefore, if it is not properly regulated, it is not governed by the rules God has given for it; thus proving its religion or rule of life defective. He then states, on the other hand, what acts would prove it pure and undefiled by God's standard. "To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." These acts prove his religion unadulterated by men's traditions, or a false rule of life; for they are just such acts as God's law requires of him; which laws cannot be kept in spirit only by such as have received the divine Spirit, which produces a heart-loyalty alone acceptable to God.

Love is the fulfilling of the law. Not human and worldly love, but divine, heavenly love. When the natural heart attempts to keep the law of God, it is controled by a depraved nature, and will be governed by some unsanctified principles, producing selfish motives of personal happiness, self-aggrandizement, worldly, sectarian interests, which are not allowable in the gospel. That religion which has not incorporated in it the unadulterated word of God, his divine Spirit and love practically applied by a renewed heart, in unreserved submission and obedience to God, will be found defective and ensnaring at the end. If our religion does not produce in us a love for the service of God in obeying his precepts, observing his ordinances, and keeping his commandments, it will be wisdom in us to reckon it "vain," and seek unto God for a higher type of devotion, a heavenly unction which will as naturally separate us from the world, its foolish fashions, sinful customs, and ungodly practices, as oil separates itself from water.

Do not be deceived: the religion of Christ is of heavenly origin, and is in itself a mighty miracle-working system. It produces results just as far beyond human efforts as were the miracles and resurrection of Christ. The christian's daily experience is wrought in him by the same power which created the worlds. His evil passions are subdued and held by the same hand which bound the winds and calmed the sea of Galilee. His prayers are answered by the same authority which responded to the prayers of Elijah by sending bread, fire, and rain. The widow, who out of a pure heart willed to give to God all her living—a pittance of two mites—was honored more than they who of their abundance, selfishly, for fame and personal pleasure, poured much wealth into the Lord's treasury. God accepts nothing only that upon which his own image is stamped. He accepts of us when he can see in us a ruling Christ. He accepts our acts when they are moulded by the hand of Christ through his Word and Spirit. He accepts our alms when they are given cheerfully, as acts of obedience to his divine law.

It seems to us that the standard of religion now accepted by the professed servants of God, generally, is far too low. It accepts altogether too much of human nature and worldly policy. It does not demand a supernatural change of heart, a direct work of God, a radical change of life, so that old things are passed away, and all things become new. It does not require men to leave the world, separating christians from worldly society; but it allows them to associate in all their worldly customs and habits, excepting open immorality and blasphemy; and these are passed by when a worldly policy demands it. This, we fear, will form a fatal snare to millions, when it will be too late to repair the breach, too late to gain eternal life.

Brethren, this is an important subject. Your eternal interests are hinged upon it. Give it your most earnest thought and prayerful consideration. Do not measure your Christianity by any standard except the apostolic. Be sure that you are Christ-like in heart and life, that when he shall come, you may not be ashamed to appear in his presence. DISCUSSION IN SALEM.

Our discussion in Salem with Mr. Jamieson, commenced Monday evening, June 8th, and continued five evenings. The people manifested unusual interest in the debate. It is well known that thousands have been confirmed in the belief of Spirit manifestations by the strange and wonderful performances in dark circles. Facts were presented in the debate which made Mr. Jamieson admit that the dark circle performances, as conducted by the Davenport Bro's, Fay Bro's and many others, are not done by spirits at all, but is mere trickery, similar to that practiced by any juggler. This admission was a heavy blow on the Spiritualists.

Mr. Jamieson's strongest forte in debate appears to consist in sarcasm and ridicule, rather than in supporting his position by logical argument. The more weighty the evidence presented against him, the more he sneered and ridiculed; the more sacred the subject, the more he treated it with contempt. Our heavenly Father and his word were spoken of in the most blasphemous and horrifying terms; and everything that the christian holds sacred was treated with disgustful scorn by the Spiritualist champion. We never realized so fully before what our Savior said about casting pearls before swine. The more precious and glorious the truths, the less they are esteemed by those who become confirmed in Spiritualism. M. G.

ENCOURAGING.—A prominent and devoted Methodist sister writes:—"We take six different papers, and the 'Guide to Holiness,' and the 'Earnest Christian,' and we think more of the Crisis than we do of all the rest." M. G.

MODE OF BAPTISM.

It has been claimed by those who advocate Trine Immersion, that when persons are buried with Christ in baptism, they should be buried with the face downwards. It is a fact that the Bible gives no such intimation. It is a fact that we do not bury persons in that way in the grave. There is no evidence that Jesus was laid in the tomb with his face downwards. We can find no evidence that any one was baptized with the face downwards before the introduction of trine immersion by the heretic Marcion, about A. D. 130. Of course, one is as truly baptized, if buried in the water, whether his face be downward or upward, as a person is as truly buried in the grave when covered in the ground, whether he lies on his face, his side, or his back. The manner of laying him in the grave does not constitute his burial, but the fact that he is covered in the earth. But there is a fitness and propriety in the manner that commends itself when we bury persons in baptism in the same way we lay them in the literal grave, because baptism represents the burial and resurrection of the dead. M. G.

"THE DEAD, WHERE ARE THEY?"—The article on this subject in this week's paper, and two others to follow are from a Baptist Bro., who heard the first sermon on the subject only eight weeks before he prepared his well-written articles. He has learned rapidly. We hope to hear from him again. M. G.

"VISIONS AND PROPHECIES."

It is a well-known fact, that when a demon has control of his medium, he can cause his subjects to see any thing he pleases. Like a mesmerizer, he has only to form a mental picture of any thing existing, or any imaginary object, when that mental picture in the demon's mind appears to his medium as a real object. In this way they deceive those under their control.

A sincere follower of Christ, at Dayton, Ohio, by the name of Milton Jennings, was brought under the influence of a demon, and made to believe that all his visions came from the Lord. He was urged by this spirit to more activity and self-denial in the cause of Christ, and actually made greater sacrices than ever before to lead his fellow beings to the Savior, guided, as he supposed, by the blessed Jesus. Although there were repeated failures in the promises made by the spirit that controlled him in his visions, yet explanations were given by the spirit, that somewhat satisfied him, so that he did not become fully convinced that a "seducing" spirit, transformed into an angel of light, was leading him, and giving him, at times, heavenly visions, till he had been thus deceived for about four years. He finally became satisfied that his information through visions and impressions did not come from the Lord, because they contradicted facts, themselves, and the Bible, just as do the visions of Mrs. Ellen White.

After he had become fully satisfied that he was deceived, he pressed the "seducing" spirits to let him know how and why they had deceived him. They then said to him:

"Finding you in a condition to impress with considerable ease, we commenced the work of leading you to believe that all the modern spirit communications were of God, and all superintended by angels, and would in the end bless the whole earth by its wonderful manifestations. Thus you were prepared to consider that whatever emanated from that source should be interpreted in some way as working together for the great and ultimate good of all.

Your mind was gradually prepared by mesmeric influences to receive more perfectly our impressions. We continued this course of treatment until we had gained such control over you as to slightly influence your hand to move involuntarily. In the course of time we were enabled to insinuate into your mind a full idea, and so on until we became master, to some extent, of your whole being. We then made arrangements with a number of what we call wise spirits (though you would not call them wise, because not good), to write the first communications which were received at the commencement of your course as a spirit medium. They contain the very essence of the gospel of Christ. But from this learn that the devil can preach the gospel, and eloquently too, when he has an end in view. This we found succeeded so well in gaining your confidence that we concluded to go farther. Of one thing we were in doubt, which was that you were a christian at all; we therefore determined to prove you. We were also in doubt whether there was any true piety in the world. . . .

"We commenced, as you are well aware, by making you think that God had called you to become the second Christ. We had our fun in seeing you really and sincerely pray for sinners. We were delighted, very greatly delighted, to witness your extreme gratification at the conversion of your friends and neighbors. We now know that those were genuine, hearty tears. We know that any man who will stay awake, and pray with tears streaming down his cheeks, nearly a whole night, for the salvation of friends and relatives, is certainly of the true, genuine material, of which all christians should be made.

Then we were pleased by your evincing so much faith in God. Your faith has as far exceeded faithful Abraham's, as his faith exceeded that of Peter. Because first, you left a home of the highest type of excellence, with wife, beautiful and happy children, and an endeared circle of friends. You left, too, without money, and without scrip, at the bidding of one whom you had reason to believe was the Lord, your Maker. Second, you prayed for those who were your bitter enemies, and in the simplicity of your faith believed them converted. Third, you adhered to God, after he had deceived you, and given the evidence of moral weakness."

"The whole matter of spirit seeing in the modern times is an imposition upon the credulity of the public. The visions of A. J. Davis, as well as those of Emanuel Swedenberg, are bare-faced deceptions, so bare and transparent a falsehood that the world ought to see through the cheat at a glance. . . .

It is the means which is resorted to all over the world to induce people to believe that they see spirit forms, when in fact they see only the mental pictures which the spirits are disposed to give them. Therefore, by this you will understand the fallacy of seeing spirits. . . . You know by experience that spirit-seeing is an imposition—a mere trick, played off by impressing the subject with the scene which the spirit wishes him to have a view of and then informing him that it is an actual sight of the place or person presented to view.

This . . . most masterly power, we have used to make multitudes believe that they could see at a distance without the use of their natural vision, but which as you well understand now by experience, is only produced by creating the picture of the person, place or thing in the mind of the subject, so that he is able to describe the object as perfectly as he could by the use of his natural eyes. This has given us almost the power to work miracles, and led many intelligent persons in the earth life to believe that it was all from God, through the agency and ministrations of angels, and spirits of just men made perfect; and this belief was the more confirmed in the minds of many because we could write, or speak out through mediums, many pure and exalted ideas; ideas that you now know came from the vilest of the vile. Many worthy christians have been beguiled and ensnared by these deceptions into a belief that these spiritual manifestations were all of God, when indeed, they proceeded only from the power of darkness."

Dr. Wm. B. Potter, a "noted Spiritualist, says: "Spirits control by animal magnetism, in the same way that psychologists control their subjects, making them see, hear, feel, smell, taste, write, speak, or think just what the operator wills."

In the visions of Mrs. White, published at Topsham, Me., Jan. 31st, 1849, she says:

"I was taken off in vision to the most holy place, where I saw Jesus still interceding for Israel. On the bottom of his garment was a bell and a pomegranate. . . . A decree went forth to slay the saints, which caused them to cry day and night for deliverance. This was the time of Jacob's trouble. Then all the saints cried out with anguish of spirit, and were delivered by the voice of God. The 144,000 triumphed. Their faces were lighted up with the glory of God. Then I was shown a company who were howling in agony. On their garments was written in large characters—thou art weighed in the balance, and found wanting. I asked who this company were? The angel said: 'These are they who have once kept the Sabbath and have given it up.' I heard them cry with a loud voice, 'We have believed in thy coming, and taught it with energy. . . . I saw the state of some who stood on present truth, but disregarded the vision,—the way God had chosen to teach in some cases, those who erred from Bible truth. I saw that in striking against the visions they did not strike against the worm—the feeble instrument that God spake through, but against the Holy Ghost."

Again she says: "The Lord has given me a view of other worlds. Wings were given me, and an angel attended me from the city to a place that was bright and glorious. The grass of the place was living green, and the birds there warbled a sweet song. The inhabitants of the place were of all sizes; they were noble, majestic and lovely." . . .

Then I was taken to a world which had seven moons. There I saw good old Enoch, who had been translated. On his right arm he bore a glorious palm, and on each leaf was written victory. Around his head was a dazzling white wreath, and leaves on the wreath, and in the middle of each leaf was written purity. . . . I asked him if this was the place he was taken to from the earth? He said, 'It is not, but the city is my home, and I have come to visit this place."

In a vision of Mrs. White, March 24th, 1849, she says: "I was shown that the commandments of God, and the testimony of Jesus Christ, relating to the shut door, could not be separated." She had visions showing that the door of mercy was closed to sinners on the 10th day of the seventh month, 1844. The witnesses to this fact are abundant. She was then shown that "the door was opened in the most holy place," at that time, and then Jesus entered it for the first time. She was then shown that "The mediation of Jesus was finished in the holy place of the sanctuary in 1844. Then Jesus rose up and shut the door in the Holy Place." She goes on to say, "The midnight cry was finished at the seventh month, 1844." "My accompanying angel bade me look for the travail of soul for sinners as used to be. I looked, but could not see it, for the time for their salvation is past."—Views of Ellen G. White, pp. 24–27.

If these visions were from the Lord, then the door of mercy was shut in the 10th day of the 7th month, 1844, and no sinner has obtained pardon since. It is certain that many sinners have been pardoned since 1844, therefore the door of mercy was not shut at that time, as declared to Mrs. White by the one who gave her the visions; hence it follows that her visions did not come from the Lord, but from a seducing spirit.

These examples of her visions will suffice for the present. The Spiritualists have similar ones. And again we wish to say, that "not a single prophecy or vision of hers can be produced that may not have been given by a demon." Yet her visions afford the main support of the peculiar views advocated by the Seventh-Day Adventists.

A BASE FALSEHOOD.

When in Napa City, Cal., we were requested to give our views of the reliability of Mrs. White's visions and prophecies. We said we felt confident they did not come from the Lord for three reasons:

1. "They contradicted FACTS."
2. "They contradicted THEMSELVES."
3. "They contradicted the Bible."

The Baptist minister then asked if we had any proof at hand of our assertion. We answered in the affirmative, saying, we did not intend to make statements we could not prove. We then read some of the statements published in the Crisis, July 1st, concerning Mrs. White's visions. Among the others was one from Bro. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me., who stated that he had seen Mrs. White have visions, and had caught her at such times when she was about to fall. Afterwards, Elder Canright, with whom we discussed the seventh-day Sabbath question, at Napa City, published the following in the "Advent Review Extra."

"It is no new thing for the innocent to be condemned by perjured witnesses. . . . I am also acquainted with Eld. Wellcome. He was with Eld. White in meeting only at one time—and that was for less than a week in 1844, at which time Elder White baptized him. Was Elder White such a fanatic as he claims? Then what must he have been to have chosen Elder White to baptize him? But the fact is that Wellcome's statement is a base falsehood. He never saw Sr. White have a vision. She was never acquainted with him; and she had no vision till three months after the only meeting at which Sr. White and Eld. Wellcome were both present. While in New Hampshire in 1868, I read a letter from Eld. Wellcome, acknowledging that he had never seen Mrs. White in vision, but only learned what he reported by hearsay."

In a letter from Bro. I. C. Wellcome, received May 1st, 1874, he says:

"The truth is, we were with Eld. White first, the most of one week's meetings in Palmyra, and stopped at his father's house. We were with him subsequently in Litchfield, Topsham, Brunswick, Poland, Paris, and Portland, some four weeks, in meetings mostly. We carried him two journeys of some distance in our carriage. While a meeting was being held in Portland, where Eld. White presided, or officiated, and fanaticism was rampant, and several concluded to be rebaptized, and we were drawn partially under the fanatical cloud by him and others, for five days; we concluded to be rebaptized also; and as Elder White was baptizing, we allowed him to administer the ordinance, which we should not have done two days after.

We were in meetings with Ellen in Topsham, Poland, Portland and Brunswick. We saw her fall while talking, several times, and twice caught her to save her head from the floor; once in the house of Wm. Jordan, and once in the house of John Meguire. We saw her fall in several other meetings. She would remain for some time in the mesmeric state; subsequently she would relate wonders which she said her heavenly Father had shown her. We think they were not entitled visions until sometime after, when these same fits were named visions. We considered it mesmerism under fanaticism.

Having seen Mr. Canright's statement that he had read a letter from us in New Hampshire, 'acknowledging that we had never seen Mrs. White have a vision,' we called to mind that we had corresponded with one man in New Hampshire on the Sabbath question, and one only, as far as we know. We therefore wrote for a copy of 'anything we had written' Bro. Ball on Ellen's visions. Here is the reply:—

WASHINGTON, N. H., April 26th, 1874.

'Dear Bro. Wellcome:—Agreeable to your request, I set myself to work to hunt up those letters you wrote to me several years ago. I found them; one dated Feb. 20th, the other April 30th, 1867. But instead of their containing any statement that you never saw Ellen Harmon have a vision,' the opposite seems to be their teaching, as the following quotation will show, as follows:

'Dear Bro. Ball, I am glad indeed that you are improving your experience in giving the people light on the seventh-day theory and Ellen's visions. Hope you will continue to write. The subject has occupied my attention much for twenty-two years. I was acquainted with Ellen in former times, and have seen her in her visions, such visions as they would not now publish, for they conflict with modern ones. Glad you take the other papers.' Signed Feb. 20th, 1867. We feel assured that Mr. Canright never read such a letter from us as he refers to. Who is the 'perjured witness?' Mr. Canright has published a willful falsehood, yea, several falsehoods, in my case. I. C. WELLCOME."

We believe Mrs. White to be sincere, but we have no doubts that she is deceived, as are all who think her visions come from the Lord. We have none but kind feelings towards Mrs. W. and her husband, but love for Jesus and his dear children prompts us to speak plainly in relation to her visions, though we may be covered with reproach by those who have not yet seen the delusion. M. G.

WEST AMESBURY.

We are glad to give a good report of the Tent meeting at this place. Although the weather has been unfavorable, both Sundays stormy, and we were disappointed on laborers that we expected to help preach the word, yet God has been with us, and has blessed the people. Some of the youth have, we trust, been converted, and quite a number of backsliders have been reclaimed, and the people are becoming very much interested.

Yesterday (Sunday, July 12th), notwithstanding the storm, we had a good congregation, and at the close last evening our hearts were made glad with the confessions of backsliders and those renewing covenant with God. It is by meeting with faithful laborers and the blessing of God that the people can be reached better than any other way. ENOCH MORRILL.

P. S.—When I wrote the above we expected to close the meeting with Sunday, the 12th, but could not on account of the interest. The congregation is increasing and the interest also. Monday night we had a solemn and melting time. To-night (Tuesday evening) wanderers confessed and returned to Christ, and new ones are convicted of sin and request prayers, and we hope it will go on. Other denominations are taking part with us and getting free, and God is blessing them. There are only two families of Adventists here. But we expect by the help of God to see a good work here in West Amesbury. E. M.

OUR TENT-MEETING closed in Chelsea July 5th. It was a refreshing season to many, and all acknowledged it was one of the best meetings they ever attended. Three were baptized during the meeting, and the peace of God rested on them sweetly. The last Sunday was very rainy. Held our meeting in Bro. Weeks' house. The Spirit was present in power to help; wanderers cried for mercy, and found peace and pardon. One young lady started for the kingdom, bowed in humble submission and called on God for mercy, and resolved by his grace to follow him in all his requirements. Saints rejoiced in God, and received blessings as never before.

I am satisfied few know the depth of perfect love who profess to love Jesus. Though they have much peace and pardon,

> "Greater things they yet may find;
> Freedom from unholy tempers,
> Freedom from a carnal mind."

How sweet to be filled with the Spirit! What blessed fruits it brings forth—"love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law"; "and they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." So says the apostle; so we believe, receive, and teach. Amen. Brethren and sisters, pray for us in the highways and hedges. H. B. SEVEY.

IS IT FAIR?—In looking over the names in the appointment list this morning, I am led to ask, Is it fair for persons to run the Crisis and its supporters publicly, and from house to house, trying to lessen its circulation and cripple its influence, and at the same time use that same paper to give out their appointments and call the friends of the Crisis to their meetings to turn them from our family paper and its teachings? To my certain knowledge there are names there to whom this question will apply. For my part, I consider such a course mean and wicked. No friend of the Crisis will take this, but its enemies will see the point; and repeat, I hope. F. A. BAKER.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish you would say through the Crisis that I shall not be able to furnish any tents for the National Campmeeting this year, as our tents will go to Wolfboro immediately upon the close of our meeting in Springfield. Yours in much love, J. C. DAY.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM BRO. J. A. CARGILE.

"All things work together for good to them that love God."

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—I have just been studying over my work since the 20th day of May. I felt sadly disappointed on that day, for I had made preparation to start for Texas, to preach about a month; but in the providence of God things were so arranged that I did not go. Since that time, I have done more work for the cause of truth; visited more new places, and the seed sown seemed to take deeper root than ever before. I can not begin to tell you everything of interest, but will select a few.

Friday, before the fifth Sunday in May, I started to meet Bro. J. J. Smith, at the place of which he speaks in the last Crisis. Found an appointment for me at night, which I tried to fill, in a Presbyterian house jammed full of very attentive listeners. The next morning, when passing a cotton gin with two brethren, I observed not far distant, and at a spring of good water, in a group of half a dozen trees inside the field, a lot of seats thrown together, by placing some old logs, and then some loose plank on them. Between those seats and the water was a pole stuck in the ground, standing about six feet high, on the top of which was nailed a piece of board about six inches square. I asked the brethren, "What does this mean? have you been having a picnic party or a barbecue here?" To which one of them—the owner of the farm—replied, "No, sir; old Bro. Smith has been preaching there by moonlight"; and that pole held the lamp by which he read the word. He continued, "They would not open their church to him, and I told them that I wanted the very dews of heaven to moisten his old gray hairs, as a witness against them." I found that Bro. S. had done a mighty work in that community. Many of the most influential citizens are awakened to a new energy in vital godliness, and diligent searching of the Scriptures. I then met Bro. S. at Concord, and found the same interest. I returned Sabbath evening to the place where I spoke Friday night. One minister had told the people that was "the only soft place that Cargile and Smith had ever found, for people everywhere else were too sensible to go out to hear them."

After my return, I spent the week and following Sabbath in my own community, preaching almost every night, and baptized one. The second Sunday, I visited "Shilo" church, and had a precious time. Had a Sabbath school, baptized one, and spoke three times. The following week I visited a new place near Tantallon, Tenn. Had a good time and much interest. Have spent this week preaching day and night here at home. To-day I baptized two more dear ones, considerably advanced in age. This makes fifty-three I have buried since I became an Advent preacher. The prospect is very flattering here at present. I spoke on the bank of the stream to-day, from Rev. 1:7, and tried to show that looking for Jesus is the only hope of the church. Had a precious time, and left an appointment to form a church. In three weeks I have tried to preach about forty times.

Must start in a few minutes to preach tonight in Stevenson. Pray for me. I feel that the time and means which I expected to spend in Texas have done great good in other fields, and I do really feel that God has overruled it all to his own glory. As I see the day of the Lord coming, I feel that I must be continually in the field. I have rested two nights in three weeks, and now my work is so arranged that I will only rest one night until the second Sabbath in July. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for your unworthy Bro. in tribulation.

Stevenson, Ala., June 25th, 1874.

FROM BRO. J. C. SMITH.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—Again, I desire to inform you of the goodness of God in our preservation, and the work that is being wrought by him in different places here in Kansas. We already have the tent pitched for the fourth time, and at every place his saving power is made known. At Ottumwa, a band of twenty-three united in church order, some who had formerly belonged to the Methodist, others with the Christian, all united together on a Bible basis, taking that as their only rule of faith and practice, church order and discipline. If the church at large would do this, divisions and subdivisions would be unknown. But, alas! these things will never be while the world stands; yet, notwithstanding all of these inconsistencies and separations, some are taking the pure word, and are living by it.

At Pleasanton, Linn Co., we had a blessed season in the Lord. Bro. Crowell and wife were the only two that have been wholly interested in that vicinity; others have been partially, and have been brought out by their lending the Crisis, and other works, and above all, their consistent life has redounded to the glory of God. Now a noble band has been raised up to glorify God. We were with them over three Sundays. Had full meetings to the last. For six or eight miles around the country, the people came night after night to hear the word. Bro. and Sr. Clark were with us; also Bro. Hunt, who labored faithfully in proclaiming the word of life. Spiritualism has a strong hold on the people of Pleasanton; but they acknowledge that if the Bible was true, we have the right of it, and that they are running a great risk. We found Bro. Crowell's home to be a pilgrim's home, and there we had blessed seasons in the Lord, long to be remembered. The last Sunday four went forward in baptism, and at night a little flock of fourteen came together in church order, thirty or forty united in communion, and a goodly number testified to the goodness of God. A good impression was left all through the community; and I trust a glorious harvest will be gathered when the Lord comes.

Bro. Crowell has made a great sacrifice, and has helped the cause after a godly manner. He will be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. O that other noble-hearted men may be raised up to help spread forth the glad news of Christ's coming kingdom! We are now in the city of Garnett, Anderson Co. The people here are very popular and sectarian. We came here perfect strangers to all, and no one of like precious faith to look to for aid; but with the help of Bro. Houck, who conveyed the tent to this place, a distance of over thirty miles, free of charge, and Bro. Hunt, we erected the tent, and have had meetings now over a week. Many are stirred, and some have embraced the truth. Pray for us, that we may have strength and help to do the Master's will. We are nearly out of tracts, and papers to scatter. We hope the cause will be remembered in this direction, as there are thousands that have never read anything in regard to our views. O that more interest might be taken among those that have this world's goods in spreading the glorious news of speedy redemption, and of that world which is so soon to come!

We have but a very few who are able to help the cause in this State; and therefore a great struggle is going on; but these glorious truths must be proclaimed, and the Lord will raise up somebody to do the work, even if they suffer in doing it. In traveling, we camp where night overtakes us; and some times it is out under the broad canopy of heaven; at other times among the poor and needy. At this place, we camp under the tent a portion of the time, and get our own meals, and pay our own expenses. Thank the Lord, the blessed gospel is taking root and scores are seeking light as they never saw it before. Pray for us, one and all, that our faith fail not. If any have works to send, please forward them to Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, and we will endeavor to scatter them to the glory of God.

A. A. M. S., by G. T. Adams, $13; also seven dollars worth of Pilgrim Songs. Lizzie White, Nashua, $4. A friend in Western Mass., $2. To these donors, and all friends of the freed people, I wish to say that your gifts helped to carry us comfortably through the spring term, so that upon settling up I found myself only eight dollars in debt. The progress of my pupils afforded me much pleasure. In most cases the behavior was honorable and upright. The last day was one of interest. The morning was spent in examination of classes, and I think if their Northern friends could have heard them, they would have said, truly, Chattels have intellect! In the afternoon, we gathered on the old-fashioned porch and door-yard, where in the shade we had speeches, compositions, and the singing of beautiful hymns. An essay by the oldest member of the Normal class, written and committed to memory and spoken, did honor to head and heart. Quite a number of white people were present, and some afterwards said—The "niggers will go ahead of white people sure, if they don't stir." Although there have been no cases of special religious interest, yet from their reverence for the word of God, and interest in reading it; from the manifest adoption of a higher standard of virtue and morality generally, I feel that gifts and labor have not been lost, and may prove of some little account in the day of reckoning. At any rate, many smiles have been diffused, and the sum of human happiness increased. Dormant intellect has been awakened, and made to thrill with new and higher aspirations; and though I am often discouraged at not seeing more of the fruits of the Spirit, I have learned to believe more fully that "God seeth not as man seeth," and that in his judgment of the human family every ameliorating circumstance, concerning inherited evil propensities and unfavorable surroundings, will be wisely and mercifully considered.

I have many sad and gloomy musings as, in my solitude, I contemplate the condition and destiny of our race. But I do rejoice in the evidence of just such a God as the Bible reveals,—a Father-God, with a heart all pitiful, planning and unfolding, whereby good shall evolve from evil, and evil finally be annihilated. This faith only drives dark gloom away, and lights up hope for this lost planet of ours.

To friends who have written to me so kindly, I would say that I am seeking rest for body and mind awhile beneath the shelter of my humble home. Early in the morning, and late at evening, I can work a little in the garden, though now it seems in vain, for the region is visited with terrible drouth. For over eight weeks no rain of any account has fallen, and the earth is parched to an extent unknown for long years. Still the sun scorches. Such heat I never knew. Gardens, so much the dependence of the poor, are nearly ruined. The child of God understands the why of this, while others fear.

The papers, Banner, Crisis, Christian and Guardian, still come to cheer me. If each writer knew how much food they send out to hungry minds, they too would be cheered. I read, and then give to those who can and will read. Tracts sent by I. C. Wellcome and others are not yet exhausted. I cannot circulate as many as I wish, being unable to walk as formerly, and not able to keep a horse. I would like to traverse this whole region monthly with tracts, but I often send out, and carry when I can go. If any one could send me their Young Pilgrim papers for my children, I should be extremely glad, as I am out of them. My heart is longing to meet the household at some of the campmeetings, but must wait and hope to meet them at the final gathering.

Obituaries

Myers. In Pownal, Vt., June 16th, 1874, Eunice Jane Myers, widow of the late Dea. Joseph Myers, aged sixty-six years lacking eleven days.

She had been in a weakly condition for twenty-five years, but at the death of her husband she appeared as though she might live some years, if time continued; but the dropsy set in, and carried her off. She dressed every day until she died. She lay down to rest the morning she died, and fell asleep, and I think she slept some hours; at last, she drew two heavy breaths and died. I feel assured she sleeps in Jesus, in whom she had trusted in life. She loved the truth, and those who preached it. Four daughters and one son are left to mourn the loss of a dear father and mother in a little over six months. The son is chosen Town Treasurer, an office which his father filled for thirty years, and God grant that he by grace may be brought to fill his father's place in the church. Brethren, pray for the family. The writer was sent for to preach the truth they loved, and I feel I did not betray the trust. I preached from 1 Cor. 15: 26. God helped me to set forth death's doom, and the victory the church would gain over it at the coming of Christ.

M. Batchelor.

Pettingill. In Newfield, N. J., April 25th, 1874, Clara E. Pettingill, aged forty-five years, and six months.

Her health had been poor for many years, and for fourteen months she has suffered much, but patiently. She conversed freely as her strength would allow, and more than usual the day she died, remarking to her companion, "We shall not be parted long." She bade her husband, three children, and mother good night, with a better prospect for rest than usual, and ere they left the room, she quietly fell asleep without a struggle, a pleasant smile resting on her face. She made a public profession of religion in 1852, uniting with the Baptist church at Lawrence, Mass. In 1861 she became acquainted with and embraced the Bible doctrine of immortality only through Christ, remarking as do others, "The Bible seems like a new book to me now." She was a native of Hancock, Me., where most of her connections live. She leaves many friends to mourn her loss. Funeral attended in the Baptist church, by the pastor (a personal friend), who spoke words of comfort from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

Davis. In Concord, N. H., May 5th, 1874, Sr. Lydia G. Davis, aged sixty-two years and six months.

Sister Davis was a patient sufferer for many months before her death, but she seemed wholly given up to the Lord, feeling that he would not afflict willingly. When she was in the keenest distress she would look up and sweetly smile, and say, "Jesus, dear Jesus, how I love thee; thou art my all—yes, only waiting, only waiting!" Her disease was enlargement of the heart, and her sufferings were intense at times; but she has gone safely, and she will come forth at the resurrection of the just. This she believed and lived, and with this hope she died. She has passed gently away, and we sorrow not as those that have no hope. The funeral was attended by Elder John Couch.

M. P. Lamprey.

Reed. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Hinesburg, Vt., May 28th, Etta A., only child of Perry and Martha J. Reed, aged four years, nine months, and twenty-four days.

Sudden was the call, but the little one is now sleeping calmly in Jesus, awaiting the resurrection morn. Bro. and Sr. Reed, though stricken and bowed down with grief, sorrow not as others who have no hope. They find strong consolation in the blessed gospel of Christ, and through faith are enabled to say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." The hope of the gospel, to be realized through faith in Jesus, by a resurrection from the dead at his second appearing, was the subject of discourse at the funeral; and never did this blessed truth seem more consoling. It bound up the torn and bleeding hearts, and poured therein the healing balm of divine consolation.

W. H. McAllister.

Barker. In East Rochester, N. H., April 4th, 1874, Sister Susan H. Barker, wife of George R. Barker, aged twenty-four years and eight months.

She professed faith in Christ four years ago. She maintained her profession only about one year. A few weeks before she died, she repented of her backslidings, sought forgiveness of the Lord and others, and obtained peace by believing in Jesus. She very much regretted to the last that she had not lived obedient to the Lord. She died trusting wholly in him. Words of comfort were spoken by D. M. Leavitt, assisted by T. W. Piper.

A. D. S.

Smith. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 1st, 1874, at Chapmanville, Venango Co., Pa., Sr. Delia E. Smith, aged twenty-two years.

Sr. S. was an invalid, had never stood on her feet, and had been a great sufferer most of the time. About a year ago she became very much interested in the blessed hope that we cherish, and last fall, at the close of our tent meeting in C., Oct. 26th, 1873, she felt it her duty to obey the Lord, by putting on Christ by baptism. Although she had not been handled by one person in five years, yet we were enabled to take her from her couch at the water's edge, and plant her in the likeness of the Master's death (an older sister being baptized at the same time). Her health was better for some time after her baptism, until the last of January, 1874, when she was taken with inflammation of the lungs, which ended her career until the awaking. She said to her sister Mary, "How sweet it will be to sleep, that blessed sleep, till Jesus comes." She chose her own text—Job 19: 25-27, and the undersigned to preach the funeral discourse; "not that it will do me any good," she said, but that the people may hear the truth." The Baptist house was open for the occasion, and we hope the truth may take effect on the hearts of some.

Smith. Also, on the 3d of March, at the same place, of typhoid fever, her brother, J. B. Smith, aged sixteen years.

He often expressed a wish that he had been at the tent meeting; he felt that God had forgiven his sins. Well, we leave him in the hands of a good Judge, hoping that others may be fully prepared by obedience.

John T. Ongley.

Harvey. May 25th, 1874, near Quaker Hill, Lycoming Co., Pa., in an apoplectic fit, Mrs. Amos Harvey, aged forty-eight years.

She died in one hour after she was taken. She was a good and kind wife, mother, and neighbor, and had often administered to our necessities. She was an anxious hearer of the truths we have advocated in the past two years in that region, yet had never come out and made an open profession. Her neighbors said to me that she carried out the spirit of Christianity more than many who professed it. Truly, if a cup of cold water is not forgotten, the Lord will remember her. We leave her in his hands. We spoke to a large concourse of people from the words of Jesus—John 7: 6.

John T. Ongley.

Barber. In Springwater, N. Y., April 8th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Wm. M. Barber, son of Horace and Eliza A. Barber, aged seven years and three days.

Sermon by the writer.

W. J. Hobbs.

Waite. In Springwater, N. Y., May 21st, 1874, Arthur J. Waite, aged one year, one month, and four days.

When the last enemy is destroyed, the innocents will shine forth as the sun in the kingdom.

W. J. Hobbs.

Lambert. In Deering, Me., May 17th, 1874, Bro. James E. Lambert, aged twenty-seven years.

Through sufferings great, and sickness long,
His faith and hope in Christ were strong;
His end was peace, and his the sleep
"From which none ever wake to weep."

Campmeeting Notice.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should shnd a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W Smith, President.

Dedication.—Providence permitting, the Advent Christian chapel in Woodford, Vt., will be dedicated for the worship of God, Friday, July 24th. The services will commence at two o'clock p. m. Eld. A. W. Sibley, of Sandy Hill, will deliver the dedicatory sermon. It will be seen that this service is in connection with the quarterly meeting of the Hoosick Valley conference. We hope it will be a glorious meeting, fruitful of good results. Brethren in the ministry, let us lay aside all malice, envy, and evil speaking, likewise joking and jesting, and come to this meeting with the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, and while one plants and another waters, we may confidently expect that God will give the increase.

For the church, W. O. Higley.

Campmeeting.—Providence permitting, the fourth annual campmeeting of the Life and Advent Union will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, situated about one and a quarter miles from railroad depot, on land of L. Carew, commencing Aug. 1st, and continuing till Aug. 10th. Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the boarding house on the ground. Board 80 cents per day. Fare on the railroads will be reduced from July 27th to Aug. 26th inclusive. The nature of man, prophecy, holiness, coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, together with other subjects, will be presented. All are cordially invited.

T. R. Weaver, Secretary.

The Evangel Tent will continue in Wiscassett over Sunday, the 26th. Meetings evenings, and and Saturday p. m.

H. B. Sevey.

If any of the Canada brethren wish my labor in the gospel, they can address me at Highland Creek, Ontario. I have obtained my license, and am now ready to work wherever the Lord sends me.

L. C. Kerr.

I have moved to Raymond, Iowa, and taken the pastoral charge of the church there.

J. W. Burroughs.

Alton Bay.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. Couch, for Com.

☞ Notice.—Fares will be reduced one half on Maine Central Rail Road and its branches to all parties attending Alton Bay camp-meeting. The brethren living along this line of road wishing to attend the meeting, will notify H. K. Choate, at Augusta, Me., of the station where they wish tickets sold. This is required so that tickets and baggage checks may be printed for said stations. Particulars hereafter.

Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th.

J. Couch.

Vermont Campmeeting.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced.

H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Campmeeting.—The Campmeeting at Pittsfield for Eastern Me. will commence Aug. 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Jer. Carr, Chairman.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. Mitchell, for Com.

The campmeeting located at Coventry Centre, R. I., will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th.

E. R. Wood, Secretary.

Edwin Burnham will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer.

E. Burnham.

Tremont Mass. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont will commence (the Lord willing) Monday, July 20th, and continue until the 30th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board, and those with lodging who cannot bring tents. Those who can are requested to do so.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, do make one more effort to devote a few days in meeting with his dear saints on this consecrated ground, for it will very likely be the last time we shall have to meet on this spot before our Lord will come. We intend having some of his servants who are prepared to give the evidences we have of our soon deliverance, and labor with us to secure the salvation of the lost, that some, at least, may share with us in the hope of eternal life.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held at Woodford, Vt., July 23d, and over the following Sunday, instead of at the earlier date before announced. The delay is to give time for the completion of the new chapel at Woodford. Those who come by railway will leave the cars at Bennington, where they will find a team to take them to Woodford. The driver will wear a broad red band on his hat, by which he may be known to strangers. It is expected that Bro. Munger will be present, beside others belonging to the conference. Our brethren have done well in building. Let there be a great rally and a glorious feast of dedication.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

There will be a team in readiness upon the arrival of the 9.30 a. m. train from the North and Troy, and the 6.30 p. m. from Troy and the North, at the Bennington depot, when brethren and sisters will be taken to the meeting free of charge.

W. O. Higley.

Acknowledgment.—From Nancy T. Pease, for Wm. Kellaway, $10.00.

Kansas Campmeeting.—The Southern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Topeka, Shaunee Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 13th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been apppointed as committee of arrangements, and are expected to be on the ground the day appointed to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: A. S. Covey, Chairman, Ployboy, Shaunee Co.; J. H. Peak, Mont Cenis, Dick. Co.; Orson Lewis, No. Lawrence, Douglas Co.; C. Crowell, Pleasanton, Lim. Co.; Levi R. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co. Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Bring your baskets well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Wash. Co., Kansas.

Quarterly Meeting.—The Advent Christian Church of Norwalk, Ohio, will hold a quarterly session on the last Saturday and Sunday in July. A general invitation is extended.

Frank Burr, Pastor.

Grove Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting in Albany, N. H., in Geo. W. Bennett's grove, Sunday, Aug. 2d, if fair; if not, in the Bell school-house.

S. Bragg.

Barn Meeting.—There will be a meeting in B. W. Moony's barn, near the neck road, Moultonborough, N. H., Saturday, Aug. 8th, at two o'clock p. m., and hold over Sunday.

S. Bragg.

For Sale.—Tent 148 Alton Bay camp-ground is for sale. It has accommodations for six or eight persons, having a cook house or L connected, with stove, etc. Price $100. This tent has a front view on Lake Avenue, overlooking the Bay, steamboat and railroad landings, within five rods of the boarding tent. Inquire on the ground of Bro. T. E. Wood, or of H. K. Choate, Augusta, Me.

Iowa Campmeeting.—There will be a campmeeting in Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, beginning Aug. 28th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, also groceries for those who desire to board themselves, also feed for horses. Help from abroad is expected as the Lord may direct.

For the Committee, J. Ridley.

The Iowa General Union Conference and Campmeeting will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonables rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding.

J. Ridley, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting.

J. R.

New Preston Tent Meeting.—We expect to have a tent meeting in New Preston, commencing Sept. 1st or 2d. We want the brethren and sisters to bear this in mind and come, all who can. Full notice hereafter.

H. J. Baldwin.

Grove Meeting.—If the Lord will, a grove meeting will be held at West Levant, Me., in Bro. John F. Emerson's grove, July 26th, beginning at nine o'clock a. m.

F. A. Baker.

A New Work.—If I can obtain sufficient aid, I intend to publish a new book, in pamphlet form, entitled, "Let us make Man;" or, How God the Father, and God the Son, are associated in creating and in preparing Man for the "Dominion over all the Earth." This work will be about the size of my "Three Kingdoms," containing about 60 pages. It may be less, or a little more; and the retail price about 15 cts. Now, as I wish to know about how large an edition to publish, will those interested just write me immediately, and let me know how large a number they will take, and advance the pay so as to assist me in meeting the printer's bill? Those who will take 25, 50, or 100 copies, and advance the money as above stated, shall have them at a fair cost price. As but little has yet been paid in, will the friends to this enterprise move quickly? The work will contain my complete views in relation to Jesus Christ as the Son of God; and an answer to all the objections of the opposition; such as—"Before Abraham was I am"; "Whose goings forth have been of old," etc.; "The glory I had with thee before the world was"; "I came down from heaven"; "Was rich—became poor"; etc., etc. About one half of the work has never been in print, but the MS. has been read to private brethren, and highly commended. The articles recently published in the Crisis, "Did Christ make the World?" have been revised and improved, and will make a part of the book. Now those who are really interested in this thing, please don't delay, but write me at your earliest convenience, directing your letters to Hyde Park, Mass.

T. M. Preble.

Hyde Park, Mass., July 8th, 1874.

Dedication.—The new chapel in North Rutland will be dedicated Sunday, Aug. 2nd. The brethren and sisters are cordially invited to come. Bro. T. M. Preble will deliver the discourse. Morning service and preliminaries to commence at half past ten in the morning. Baptism at noon, dedication sermon at two, Lord's supper and prayer and conference meeting at five. Those who come on Saturday, to stay over night, should take cars from Worcester at five o'clock, and stop at Princeton station. Then take Wellington's express for North Rutland, as the express from the station does not run but once a day. Those who come on any other train must notify H. V. Moulton, so a conveyance can be made from the depot. We invite you all to our homes, to our meeting, to our feast of fat things, in the name of the Lord. For the church, H. V. Moulton, North Rutland, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as Tuesday morning (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the current week.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

A MEDITATION.

R. OWEN.

Oh! thou God of my life,
At these waters of strife,
With sin coming in like a flood;
Be thou graciously near,
That thy voice I may hear,
And pardon my sin through the blood

Of the Lamb that was slain,
But who liveth again,
To reconcile men unto God;
Give me patience to bear
All my burden of care,
And support me when under the rod.

I do not dare ask
A less arduous task;
My Father has made no mistake;
He is leading aright,
He will bring to the light,
Nor a poor bruised reed ever break.

In the fulness of time
(Oh! the thought is sublime),
He will cause his dear Son to descend,
And will gather each saint,
Although weary and faint,
Mid the ruin of sin all around.

Though we may suffer now,
We submissively bow,
There is promised us grace for our day;
Never should we complain,
For a glorious reign
Is promised to those who obey.

A FARMER'S HOME IN JUNE.

H. MUNGER.

Some of our young people in cities may be as interested in hearing about a farmer's life and associations, as farmers are to hear about the city life, and its gay curiosities, which have attracted so many from the calling of tilling the land to cities and villages, to get a living easier than by farming. But many are being disappointed in these hard times, when the money is locked up in fine extravagant houses of worship and dwellings, furniture, and stocks of various kinds, till the inhabitants are getting desperate. The effect is robbery, theft, and murder, in order to get the necessaries of life, in thickly settled places especially; while millions of acres of good land are lying idle, and groaning to be cultivated, which would afford labor for all out of work, and a good, comfortable living, but not an extravagant one, which is a curse to the world. In these days, most people spend double what they need to live. This keeping up appearances has ruined thousands. A foolish pride lies at the bottom of the whole of it. Twelve dollars a week will support a family of twelve out in the country on a farm. Many live comfortably on less in proportion.

THE SECRET.

As I travel among all classes, I have observed the different modes of living in the cities and in the country. In the city, the whole family depend upon the labor of the man, and he depends upon good luck in getting work, while his family have nothing to do but gad the streets, and see the fashions, which increases the fanciful appetite for these varieties, which leads to a temptation, if no more, to take an unlawful course to obtain them. If out in the country, on a farm, they would be away from such influences, and find something to do.

I notice families, where I am writing this fifteenth day of June, were all out to meeting yesterday (Sunday). Some fifty were at Sabbath School, at 9 A. M., neatly, but plainly dressed, ready and willing to learn the doctrine of the Bible.

MONDAY. At five in the morning the fathers and mothers had the fires started. Then the fathers go out with the girls of twelve to fifteen to milk the cows, while those in cities were in bed. The younger ones were up at six, ready for breakfast; after which the work commenced as follows: the older girls attend to washing, the mother superintending. The father set the boys to harnessing the teams for ploughing out corn; the younger ones to drive the cows to the pasture. The little girls of eight to ten had their chickens to feed, visiting the different coops. Every one in the family, above eight years old, was doing something to advantage, and all seemed happy. The old brindle cows as they passed the house appeared to belong to the family circle. At nine o'clock the washing was done, the butter churned, and the children started for a good country school, about the time city children were up.

Another neighbor was washing sheep; another shearing his; and the whole neighborhood was actively engaged in getting a living as God designed. This was a great change for me to witness in one week. How different the customs and the work of the people.

AT NIGHT the farmer's family was in bed at nine, while the crops were growing, together with the pigs, calves and poultry all paying for their labor; while the city families are out till eleven at night, spending their time and the money their parents have earned. These things make so many poor people in cities, when, if they would move out into the country, their health would be better, the moral atmosphere clearer, rent and living cheaper and better, and hard times would effect them less; for the crops will grow if cultivated, and stock of all kinds will pay. If one half of the speculators fail in the land, the farmers will have bread and meat, butter, cheese, milk and vegetables, which make a good living any how.

These reflections are suggested to my mind while traveling among the farming districts in Hoosic, Hebron, Poultney, and Low Hampton, where the fields are all promising an abundant yield, especially grass and fruit, which makes a believer in God's promises long for the new earth, when all will be farmers, and own their farms, clear of taxation or grab mortgages.

SLEEPING. At half-past nine o'clock in the country all is still and quiet. There is no rattling of car wheels or wagons on the pavements, or stinted pure air in sleeping rooms, as is often the case in cities and villages; but a good, large, unfinished garret, thirty by thirty, is often a luxury in the country. Hundreds of good farms, with good tenements, suitable for supporting families of from five to eight persons, are lying idle, because the attraction of thick settlements have decoyed the people away. There will be harder times yet, unless the poorer class go back into the country, and till the land, and not depend so much on others for bread, when they can get it themselves, and be more independent, happy and healthy, by letting alone the poor, unhealthy luxuries that are a curse to this generation generally. Great wages and poverty go together. Most of the people that get great wages lay up nothing. If they get two dollars a day, they will spend three, or want to, then strike for more pay, and either lose a job, or spend their time or money in hunting up another one. I have never known the strikers to be benefited. A candid consideration, with a little wisdom, would dictate differently. Poulticing a sore is generally better than lancing it before it is ripe. This is experimental.

We are living in strange times. All are dissatisfied with their condition, the rich and poor alike. There is no peace in these days in worldly pursuits. The most quiet people are the farmers, and God seems to smile most on them. To look over the thousands of acres of the verdant field, producing something for the benefit of man; no wonder God has chosen this earth for the abode of the saints, since its productions have sustained all generations that have lived upon it, and always will; but the wicked he will chase out of it, as Adam was driven out of the garden. The meek shall inherit the new earth, i. e., get the right of possession through the second Adam—Christ.

The earth in the month of June suggests many scriptural thoughts. Our great men of old times were farmers. Adam, Cain and Abel, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Lot, Noah, and Elisha the prophet, were all farmers. The latter was out ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen when he was called into the ministry. Moses left his calling in Egypt and let himself to Jethro to learn farming, and married a farmer's daughter, when God called him into the ministry. Joseph saved all Egypt and his father's family from the famine by raising corn. King David was a farmer's son when he was called to battle against the Philistines with his farmer's weapon, and with it won the battle, and got in Major General the first day. Job was a great farmer. He had twenty-three thousand head of live stock. No wonder the devil got his match with him, being so much in the order of God in getting a living for his family and a host of others by farming. Who thinks farming a low, mean calling when God has honored it? Father Wm. Miller—God bless his memory!—was a farmer.

I did not think of writing so much on this subject when I commenced, and must close to go four miles to preach in a farming neighborhood, and all farmers; and it will be nothing strange if I preach on farming, either sowing, or cultivating, or harvesting, which latter is very near.

REASONINGS.

O. R. MERRILL.

"Too much reasoning is a great distraction. Those who reason—the undevout—quench the inward spirit as the wind extinguishes a candle. After being with them for awhile, we perceive our hearts dry, and our minds off the center. Shun intercourse with such men; they are full of danger to you. There are some who appear recollected, but whose appearance deceives us. It is easy to mistake a certain warmth of the imagination for recollection. Such persons are eager in the pursuit of some outward good to which they are attached; they are distracted by this anxious desire; they are perpetually occupied in discussions and reasonings, but know nothing of the inward peace and silence that listens to God. They are more dangerous than others, because their distraction is more disguised. Search their depths, and you will find them restless, fault-finding, eager, constantly occupied without, harsh and crude in all their desires, sensitive, full of their own thoughts, and impatient of the silent contradiction; in a word, spiritual busybodies, annoyed at everything, and almost always annoyed.

I warn you beware of philosophers and great reasoners. They will always be a snare to you, and will do you more harm than you will know how to do them good. They linger and pine away in discussion of exterior trifles, and never reason into the knowledge of the truth. Their curiosity is an insatiable spiritual avarice. They are like those conquerors who ravage the world without possessing it. Solomon, after a deep experience of it, testifies to the vanity of their researches."

The Lord help us that we may be humble and not "expect the gifts of God from men." Neither deceive ourselves by thinking we are advancing in the divine life, "because our vain curiosity is gratified by the enlightenment of our intellect." Let us learn of Him who is meek and lowly of heart. He will teach us more than the most experienced christian, and better by far than all the books that we may read. "All we need is to be poor in spirit, and to know nothing but Christ and him crucified."

Worcester, Mass.

GENTLENESS.

True gentleness is founded on a sense of what we owe to Him who made us, and to the common nature of which we all share. It arises from reflection on our own failings and wants, and from just views of the condition and duty of man. It is native feeling, heightened and improved by principle. It is the heart which easily relents; which feels for every thing that is human; and is backward and slow to inflict the least wound.

It is affable in its address, and mild in its demeanor; ever ready to oblige, and willing to be obliged by others; breathing habitual kindness towards friends, courtesy to strangers, long-suffering to enemies. It exercises authority with moderation, administers reproof with tenderness, confers favors with ease and modesty. It is unassuming in opinion, temperate in zeal. It contends not eagerly about trifles; slow to contradict, and still slower to blame; but prompt to allay dissension, and to restore peace. It neither intermeddles unnecessarily, nor pries inquisitively into the secrets of others. It delights above all things to alleviate distress; and if it cannot dry up the falling tear, to soothe at least the grieving heart.

Where gentleness has not the power of being useful, it is never burdensome. It seeks to please, rather than to shine and dazzle; and conceals with care that superiority, either of talents or rank, which is oppressive to those who are beneath it. In a word, it is that spirit and that tenor of manners, which the gospel of Christ enjoins, when it commands us to bear one another's burdens; to rejoice with those that rejoice, and to weep with those who weep; to please every one his neighbor for his good; to be kind and tender-hearted; to be pitiful and courteous; to support the weak, and to be patient towards all men.—Sel. by Thomas Foote.

N. Y. ANNUAL CONF. REPORT.

The N. Y. State A. C. Conference held its annual meeting with the church at Lockport, June 15th to the 28th, 1874. There was quite a delegation present the first evening, when Bro. C. H. Williams preached a good stirring Advent sermon, from Isa. 25: 9—"Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him." The President appointed B. C. Simonds, J. S. Beman, C. H. Pennoyer, as Devotional Committee.

Friday, 9 A. M., met for business. Ordained ministers present during the meeting—W. J. Hobbs, J. H. Whitmore, S. C. Gove, M. R. Miles, C. W. Low, W. Vreeland, W. Ingmire, A. P. Moore, D. Cogswell, P. A. Smith, J. E. Wells, R. H. Bateman, A. C. Newell, B. P. Stevens, E. C. Cowles, E. F. Sergisson, C. H. Williams, J. H. Luttentop, C. P. Greenman, Ira Allen, Franklin Douglas, and Sr. J. S. Jennings. Visitors—J. V. Himes, and Sr. L. M. Stoddard.

Minutes of last Conf. read and adopted. Business Com.: M. R. Miles, W. J. Hobbs, W. E. Brown, Com. on Credentials—A. P. Moore, R. H. Bateman, E. C. Cowles. Com. on Ordination—A. P. Moore, A. C. Newell, C. W. Low.

Delegates—N. McCulloch, J. S. Maynard, Rochester; S. H. and N. T. Withington, A. Wiley, Springwater; A. H. Dunbar, C. D. Knapp, North Victory and Martville; Silas Hewitt, Seneca Falls; Merit Benjamin, Savannah; Paul Grinnell, F. Carpenter, East Shelby; J. S. Beman, Honeoye; B. C. Simonds, Darien; C. H. Todd, J. Trevor, Lockport; B. F. Brownell, Brockport. As Bro. Franklin Douglas, of New York, is laboring in our State, he was received as a member of our conference. The committee on credentials reported delegates sent from three societies that were not yet belonging to the conference; and we could not receive the delegates until those churches were received into the conference. The churches at Savannah and Seneca Falls were then voted into the conference, but the division of the Rochester church was not admitted.

2 P. M. Preaching by W. J. Hobbs, from Rom. 8: 17. 3 P. M. Met for business. Officers elected for the ensuing year: President, M. R. Miles, Wolcott. Vice President, C. W. Low, Fredonia. Secretary, A. P. Moore, Linden. Treasurer, N. McCulloch, 58 Kent St., Rochester. Board of Trustees, D. Cogswell, Dansville; A. Riggs, Lockport; J. F. Wescott, South Butler; J. S. Beman, Honeoye; N. T. Withington, Springwater; B. C. Simonds, Darien; N. McCulloch, Rochester.

Social meeting from 7 to 8, when M. R. Miles preached from 1 Pet. 3: 15. Saturday, 9 A. M. President absent; Vice President in the chair. Report of Treasurer: Cash received from the Western District, from June 21st, 1873, to June 25th, 1874, $91.55. From the Eastern District, $111.57. Balance in treasury, June 21st, 1873, $3.95. Total, $207.07. Amount paid to those laboring with the tent, per order of President, $200.58. Balance in treasury, $6.49. N. MCCULLOCH, Treasurer.

Preaching at 2 P. M. by E. C. Cowles, from 1 Pet. 1: 3. Preaching again at 8, by Sr. L. M. Stoddard, from Isa. 21: 11, 12. 9 P. M. Met for business. It was voted to do away with the two districts, and come together under one general head for the year to come, that our strength may be concentrated. Committee on ordination reported Bro. A. H. Dunbar, of No. Victory, as a worthy candidate for ordination. The conference voted to grant license to Luther C. Kerr, of Canada, and R. G. Wells, of Rochester.

As there is a misapprehension abroad, the following resolution was adopted:—

Resolved, That the Adventists of N. Y. State, in conference assembled, re-affirm the sentiment of our covenant; viz., the right of opinion in all matters of faith, and the right to express it; but we are opposed to any of our brethren pressing as a test of christian fellowship any doctrine controverted among ourselves.

Reports were read from the Quarterly Conferences, which we will not insert in this. The East. Dist. held three quarterly meetings; 1st at Alton, Oct. 3d to 6th; 2nd at Aurelius, Dec. 19th to 21st; 3d at South Butler, Feb. 26th to March 1st. The West. Dist. had also held three quarterly meetings; 1st at Darien, Sept. 19th to 21st; 2nd at East Shelby, Nov. 28th to 30th; 3d at Springwater, March 6th to 8th.

The Treasurer's report shows the financial standing of the two districts. Reports from those laboring with the tent showed a mistake in previous reports, and a debt of $9.55 still unpaid. No action was taken to reduce the debt, or to purchase a new tent, as discussion of other matters crowded this out. If we curtail our missionary effort, God cannot bless. Towards meeting this debt, there was $6.49 in the treasury, and the quarterly collections at Rochester $3.58, at Springwater $4.00, at No. Victory $3.85, at E. Shelby $4.50, at Honeoye $3.00, B. C. Simonds $2.00, Sr. Rogers of Syracuse $2.00, and cash handed in $2.00; making $31.42; leaving a balance of $58.13 still due; and those that have pledged should send in their pledges immediately to the Treasurer, N. McCulloch, No. 58 Kent St., Rochester, N. Y.

Sunday, 9½ A. M., love-feast, in which many warm testimonies were given. 11 A. M., preaching by C. W. Low, from 1 Tim. 2: 6. 2 P. M., by J. E. Wells, from Rev. 6: 17, after which Bro. A. H. Dunbar was set apart for the work of the ministry, by the laying on of hands. Prayer by A. C. Newell, right hand of fellowship by A. P. Moore, charge by D. Cogswell. He was voted into the conference, and we commend him to the church, as worthy of their confidence and sympathy. As the conference was about to adjourn, Sr. Jennings presented the following, to the sadness of many hearts:—

"To the members of the N. Y. State A. C. Conference assembled, at Lockport, June 28th, 1874. I have a matter which I wish to place before you, one that I have long considered, and duly, I think, in all its bearings. Believing that I can labor more efficiently as an independent Evangelist, I now offer my resignation as a member of this Conference; desiring your immediate and decisive action with reference to the same. With due respect, and with warmest expressions of my love and interest for the welfare of my brethren, this request is respectfully submitted. E. S. JENNINGS."

Her request was granted, and she goes with our prayers for the blessing of God to attend her where she may be called to labor.

A. P. MOORE, Secretary.

IOWA CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

The eighteenth annual session of the Iowa Christian Conference met in connection with the yearly campmeeting, near New Hartford, June 24th, 1874. Its sessions were held each day from the 24th to the 28th inclusive, and transacted the business coming before as shown in the order of business, Art. IX., which I will here insert:

1. Hear report of the Board of Directors through the Secretary. 2. Elect officers for the ensuing conference year. 3. Receive new members. 4. Receive new churches. 5. Hear reports of proceedings of Quarterly meetings. 6. Hear reports of ministers. 7. Hear reports of churches. 8. Examination of ministers. 9. Miscellaneous business.

The first meeting was called to order by J. W. Burroughs, Secretary, in the absence of the President, and after prayer the report of the previous meeting was read and approved, and C. C. Ramsey was duly elected President, pro tem.

The following named brethren were duly elected for the ensuing year: Job Gildersleve President; E. A. Marsh, Secretary; and W. A. Newell, C. P. Burroughs, and Eber Dunham, to complete the conference Board of Directors. The following named brethren were accepted as members of this Conference. Eld. J. N. Marble was received as a regularly ordained minister from the Protestant Methodist connection, of twenty years standing. New Hartford church delegates: Eben Hurlburt, Silas Peck, E. Dunham, and W. Sherman. Floyd Church: C. P. Burroughs, James Griffith, H. M. Brown, Eugene Hoar, and B. A. Sherk, Raymond Church: Dr. Banton, L. O. Hill. The Raymond church was presented by Eld. J. W. Burroughs, and received. Membership forty-four. There being no particular report of quarterlies, I would say our secretary faithfully attended them, and brings a favorable report.

The following ministers reported by letter: S. D. Deyo, N. S. Ketchum, and Job Gildersleve. Though not engaged much of the time in the good work of saving men, each one stands firm and hopeful, and ready for every good word and work, and expresses a desire to do more in the future for God and his "present truth."

P. S. W. Deyo reports forty baptized the past year, and as laboring in Cerro Gordo, Butler, Tama, and Floyd Counties, preaching on an average every Sunday, and is doing what he can, though sometimes discouraged. Has also pitched his tent three times during the year.

J. W. Burroughs brought a favorable report of labor, having the past winter organized a church of forty-one members at Raymond, which is receiving new accessions, and more expected. Is preaching as the way is opened. Has been out occasionally and visited destitute regions, and done a good work for the Master. At Sioux City gathered a little band, and also prevailed on some at Clarksville to come out from the world. Is engaged the coming year as pastor of the New Hartford church. C. C. Ramsey gave a good report. Is pastor of the Floyd church. Had ten accessions, three by immersion. Has also preached in Manchester, Belle Plains, Traer, and other places, and desires to be found when the Lord comes with the whole armor buckled on, and realizes that He that is for us, is greater than he that is against us.

M. A. Newcomb, E. A. Marsh, A. A Wilbur, A Durand, P. S. Converse, W. A. Newell, F. A. Denton, and J. N. Marble reported as all laboring in the vineyard of the Lord, with more or less success, and very much encouraged to continue in the work, and are all seeing good done in the name of the Lord.

There are now eighteen ordained and three licensed ministers in this Conference, some of whom could not come to the meeting in time to report, and others who, for various reasons, have failed to appear with us, and I would earnestly request in behalf of the cause of God that all our preaching brethren come to confer with us, or report to conference by letter.

Report of churches. Ettie church was reported by Bro. P. S. Converse to be in a prosperous condition, with harmony among its members.

Floyd church represented by letter as looking, waiting, and longing for the return of Jesus from heaven. Meeting regularly every First day. Wednesday evenings prayer and conference, and once each month a covenant meeting. The church numbers one hundred and four members. C. C. Ramsey, pastor.

Raymond church was reported by Dr. Banton, as having a membership of forty-four, worshiping and serving God, and standing fast. Prospects good and interest increasing, rejoicing in the truth.

New Hartford church by J. W. Burroughs. Two or three accessions. The total membership is about one hundred and sixty, but many have moved away, and some have died in the last few years, which has reduced the church to about one hundred active members. Have an interesting Sunday School. Regular preaching twice a month.

There are quite a number of churches in this conference that did not send delegates, so that we do not know their condition. I would urgently recommend that they report to conference their situation, and if needy, they shall have help. As no charges were preferred against any of our preaching brethren, they are considered as being in sympathy with us, and should signify their readiness to work as fellow laborers with us, and many have done so. It is to be hoped all will do so.

Under miscellaneous business, it was moved that these churches who wish the quarterly conferences held with them, correspond with the clerk in regard to it, and that he be empowered to make arrangements for the same, which was carried. This is a matter that should be attended to without fail.

The report of the delegates, who attended a meeting held at Belle Plaine, commencing Jan. 8th, 1874, from this conference in regard to the action taken then in reference to a union of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of Iowa, was taken into consideration, and after due deliberation accepted. It then became necessary to show our approval or disapproval of the course pursued by our brethren who assembled there. They drew up a constitution under the name of "The Union State Conference of Iowa," and it was moved that we adopt it with an amendment of the article relating to the time for holding its sessions, which placed it in the month of June; but as we had no authority to amend their constitution, being only an advisory body, it was lost. It was then moved that we adopt it, which was done, and the following brethren we mention were duly elected to represent the wishes of this conference as Delegates: W. S. Dutrick, Raymond church; U. C. Newcomb, Tama City church; E. Dunham and W. H. Peck, New Hartford church; C. P. Burroughs and J. S. Hodge, Floyd church; J. T. Canverse, Ettie church. On motion, they were instructed to use their influence in effecting an amendment of the article in question.

Bro. F. A. Denton and P. S. Canverse were presented and recommended for ordination, and accepted.

THE ORDINATION. Sunday, A. M., just before the preaching services, they were set apart to the reponsible work of the ministry by the imposition of hands and prayer. Prayer by Eld. C. C. Ramsey. Charge to Bro. P. S. Converse was solemnly given by Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, and to Bro. F. A. Denton by Eld. P. W. Hough. The right hand of fellowship, in behalf of the church and the ministry, was given by Eld. J. W. Burroughs, and general congratulation and encouragement by the brethren followed. They have the prayers and confidence of the brethren, and will be shining lights in the world.

Though not properly in a conference report, I would say that the meeting was a great success, and the results greater than any preceding year. It was well attended, and we were much blessed by the instruction of visiting ministers. Bro. H. L. Hastings and Sr. Hastings of Boston, and Brn. Ridley of Manchester, F. H Kenny of Cherokee, and P. W. Hough of Wisconsin, rendered efficient assistance, and delivered a number of soul-stirring discourses, enlightening and cheering our brethren who labor in this great field of labor. Many have been quickened into new life, many almost persuaded to be christians, and many, I trust, who will soon put on Christ by baptism. Nine precious souls went forward and were immersed in the "beautiful river" near the grounds. The scene was witnessed by thousands of people, and our hearts are gladdened, our hope made brighter, and faith stronger by this glorious meeting, which closed by the commemoration of the Lord's Supper, at which seventy-four participated. Glory be to God.

WORK UNTIL WE DIE.

We're drawing near to Jesus,
Our banner waves on high,
And this our watchword ever,—
We'll work until we die.

We love our Master's service,
And seeing eye to eye,
With grace divine to help us,
We'll work until we die.

The fields are white to harvest,
The days are speeding by,
Go forth again, ye workers,
And work until you die.

The night of death approaches,
And angels in the sky
Repeat the chorus ever,—
Go work until you die.

PREACH THE WORD.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Be ye holy."—1 PET. 3: 15.

This is a part of it, so we must preach this. Peter was a good preacher, he preached it. Paul was a good preacher, he preached it. "Be holy." It is necessary to safety. It is desirable to be safe; to feel that the horse you are driving is safe, the boat in which you are sailing is safe, the road which you are traveling is safe. No man will venture where there is danger, if he knows it, and is in his right mind. Well, now, it is always safe to obey God. It is very unsafe to disobey him. He commands us to be holy, to be whole-hearted in his service. He requires nothing but what is reasonable; nothing but what he will give us grace to perform. To repent and forsake our sins, and to obey God is right; and safety always walks in the track of right. He that walketh uprightly walketh surely. To be unholy is to be unsafe. Life is uncertain, death certain, and judgment sure.

Be holy. It is necessary to usefulness. No man can do much at saving others until he is saved himself. A man who was up to his neck in the mire would make poor work trying to pull another man out, who was in equally as deep himself. No; we must be on solid footing if we would be useful in assisting others to a place of safety. If we know the gospel as the power of God to our own salvation, then we can successfully recommend it to others. Purity of heart is the first step to a useful life. All history proves that the men and women who have done the most good in the world have been the most holy. How can any man pray, preach, or sing acceptably unless the Holy Spirit is in him? Will the Spirit dwell in an unholy temple? If God is in a person, he is mightier than all the forces of earth. What is needed to-day is a holy ministry and a holy church. The attractions of sin are powerful, but the attractions of holiness are more powerful. "My grace is sufficient."

A SHORT SERMON.

M. E. FLAGG.

The following verses, which I clip from the daily Rutland Globe, are so illustrative of a correct or incorrect sense which may be expressed according to the position of a mere comma, in the answer of Jesus Christ to the thief on the cross, I send it for the readers of the Crisis:

"In the priory of Rumesa there dwelt a prior who was very liberal, and who caused these verses to be written over his door:

"Be open evermore, O thou my door,
To none be shut, to honest or to poor."

But after his death there succeeded him another, whose name was Raynard, as greedy and covetous as the other was bounteous and liberal, who kept the same verses there still, changing nothing therein but one point, which made them run after this manner.

"Be open evermore, O thou my door
To none, be shut to honest or to poor."

Afterward, being driven from thence for his extreme niggardliness, it grew into a proverb that for one point Raynard lost his priory."

The same verse illustrates two opposite points, just as you place the comma. In the same manner also, does the answer of our Savior appear in Luke 23: 42, 43. "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." As the comma now stands, it makes our Savior contradict himself, and also the other Scriptures; but place the comma where it belongs, and our Savior's answer is in perfect accord with all the other Scriptures. "Verily I say unto thee to-day, shalt thou be with me in paradise."

BODY AND SPIRIT.

"For as the body without the spirit is dead."—JAMES 2: 26.

This shows plainly that the spirit gives life to the body, which would be dead without the spirit; hence the spirit is not a living entity, in a prison-house of clay, as the body by men often is called, but is a quickening spirit. Do we believe it when Christ says, "It is the spirit that quickeneth"? John 6: 63. Paul says, "The spirit quickeneth." 2 Cor. 3: 6. A living bird in a cage, or prison-house, as it might be called, does not make the cage alive; but a life-principle makes the bird alive. Now, if the spirit would be a living entity in the body of man, like the bird in a cage, I ask, where would the life of the body be?

Thus we see, according to ideas of men, not a few in number, spirit is a living being in the body of man; but according to the Bible, it is the essence, or principle, which gives life to the body, and thus makes him a living soul. B. KNEPPER.

A PROPHECY.—The following was prophesied in 1848, by Father Morrow, in a monastery in St. Croix:—

"In the last part of the nineteenth century there will be a republic in Switzerland, France and Italy, and signs in the whole world; pestilence, famine, and war; and great cities will be destroyed, and kings and religion be destroyed; and they will seemingly get the victory, but will afterwards be defeated. The Catholic church will be stripped of every thing, and the Pope will be kept in captivity by his enemies, and the Pope's chair will be no more Popes, for the Son of God will come, and bring peace with him."

HOME AND HEALTH.

TAKEN FROM THE EVIL TO COME.

E. S. WILLARD.

How kind in the good Shepherd, when he sees a little lamb in danger, to take it up in his arms, and set it in a safe place until the danger is overpast. Thus we console ourselves in the decease of one of the little lambs that made up our happy group in the visit of the Sunday school, June 23d.

A dear friend, Sr. A., of Philadelphia, who loved him most tenderly, and whom he loved, probably, next to his own parents, thus writes us on the occasion:—

"Yes, Willie is dead. His body now lies buried in Mt. Vernon Cemetery. He sleeps in Jesus, whom we hope will soon come to ransom his loved ones from the power of the grave. Such, I am sure, was he, who loved to sing and to talk so much of these things during his short life. The dear little lamb, on Saturday last, seemed to droop a little with a slight affection of the bowels, but as he was predisposed to weakness there, his parents apprehended nothing at all serious, as he was playing around, until Sabbath at noon, when he rose from the table, where they were eating dinner, and laying himself down, said—'Papa, read me that?' His papa asked, 'What?' He replied—'O, that in my little Sunday school paper, where it says, "Little children, come to Jesus,"'—the last past precious name he uttered, for he became unconscious; the disease went to his brain, and he died at eleven o'clock that evening, calmly and sweetly.

How pleasant to contemplate the happy, heavenly day we spent with you; how he did enjoy it! I wish you could have seen him the day before, when I went to invite him, how he clapped his hands, and skipped about, and says, "O I can't wait; I wish it was to-day." Those beautiful eyes, how they sparkled, but now are they closed in death—I hope not to remain so long."

Thus died Willie Jewel, June 28th, 1874, aged seven years. The Lord have mercy upon his heart-stricken parents. May they both find refuge in the arms of that same Jesus, who says, "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me."

A CHEERFUL HOME.

A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. One surly glance casts a gloom over the household; while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers which spring up along our path, full of freshness, fragrance, and beauty, so do kind words and gentle acts, and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessings dwell. No matter how humble the abode, if it be thus garnished with grace, and sweetened with kindness and smiles, the heart will turn longingly toward it from all the tumults of the world, and a home, if it be ever so humble, will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.

And the influences of home perpetuate themselves. The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughters long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death, and the fatherly kindness finds an echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons who come to wear his mantle and to fill his place; while on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverned, and disordered home, go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable, and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions, and strifes, and railings, which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Toward the cheerful home the children gather "as clouds and as doves to their windows," while from the home which is the abode of discontent and strife and trouble, they fly forth as vultures to rend their prey. The class of men that disturb and disorder and distress the world are not those born and nurtured amid the hallowed influence of christian homes; but rather those whose early life has been a scene of trouble and vexation, who have started wrong in the pilgrimage, and whose course is of disaster to themselves and trouble to those around them.—Friends' Intelligencer.

GOOD READING.—Let good reading go into a home, and the very atmosphere of that home gradually changes. It becomes clearer, purer, more cheerful, healthful, and happy; and out from its number will go intelligent men and women to fill honorable places, and be useful members of the community. Let the old and young vie with each other in introducing new and useful topics of investigation, and in cherishing a love of reading, study, and improvement.

HEALTH HINTS.

We are living in an age when sickness is the rule and health the exception. But this is not necessarily so. We have but to learn nature's laws, and obey them, to enjoy perfect freedom from disease. We are a people governed by the most despotic of tyrants—fashion and appetite. Though by sin came death into the world, it does not follow that the subjects of death need eke out a miserable existence, made thus by being the constant prey of disease. It is possible for man, even in this degenerate age, to so relate himself to life as to avoid the ills consequent upon improper living, and finally to go down to the grave "like a shock of corn fully ripe."

All disease has a cause, either direct, or indirect, and cannot be cured while the cause exists. It is not our design here to give directions how to cure disease, but to give such information as we have gained from experience and observation, and from reading the ideas of others, as to how to live so as to preserve the health.

To enjoy health of body, the mind must be kept in a healthy condition, as the two sustain the closest relationship. One cannot remain in perfect health while the other is diseased. As the mind controls the body (it should, at least, and does when both are free from disease), it is of the greatest importance that it should be evenly balanced, avoiding all extremes, and that calmness and composure prevail.

The nervousness and excitable temperaments of people now-a-days are owing largely to the irregular and uneven management in childhood. Children are frequently awakened by fright, and are permitted to witness exciting scenes without their minds having any preparation. Such things sometimes so shock the nervous system that, even though they afford them present pleasure, it requires years to recover, if they ever do.

Violent fits of anger are injurious to physical health, and we have known death to follow the indulgence of very violent anger within a few minutes. It is said that one fit of anger robs the system of more vitality and sinks it lower, and the effect is more deleterious to health, than many weeks of hard labor performed in a calm and quiet way. A recent writer says: "It is not like an acute disease in plants, or like the devastations of the locust and caterpillar, that cause vegetation suddenly to disappear. It is a corroding malady; and it eats on till the vital sap is wasted. Much better practice a little self-denial, and relinquish the practice of undue fretting, even at the expense of a few drugs and nervines; leaving your physician to practice his skill upon others and collect his fare from other quarters, till a more reasonable cause shall call for his aid."

For the mind to secure perfect freedom from disease, the thoughts must be trained to dwell most upon the most pleasant objects. If the mind be properly governed, it is prepared to meet what unpleasant duties there may be in life without being seriously affected. With people generally, the mind receives less care and attention, to preserve a healthy tone, than the body. Few realize the importance of taking proper rest and recreation. American people, especially, are guilty of overworking, usually showing themselves little mercy, until it has become proverbial that "they are always in a hurry." No one should ever work till he gets tired.—Health Reformer.

KEEP CHEERFUL.

The majority of mankind need no caution against overwork. Where work kills one, the want of work kills ten, the fires of passion consume twenty, sinful indulgence destroys fifty. In cases where work seems to undermine health, it is not so often that the labor is too much, as the faulty way in which it is done, the spirit in which it is performed. Labor, to be permanently endurable, must be healthy; that is, it must be adapted to the mental and physical capacities of the worker, and especially if brain labor, it must be pleasing. It must not be allowed to trench upon sleep, to interfere with the regular and deliberate taking of food, nor prevent a proper amount of recreation and exercise. Those who write upon this subject, rarely look beyond the surface of the matter. Dyspepsia is traced to hasty meals and want of exercise; softening of the brain, to excessive thinking, and so on. Why the meals are hasty, or the brain overtaxed, seems to escape notice.

The healthiest men we know are those who do not work the hardest, but do the most work. There is no paradox about this. Every business man sees among his employes examples of men who work hard, yet accomplish but little; others who easily accomplish much. How is this to be explained? Much is attributable to the want of system on the part of the inefficient; more, to the want of the proper spirit. Nervous irritability is the great weakness of American character. It is the sharp grit which aggravates friction and cuts out the bearings of the human machine. Nine out of every ten men we meet are in a chronic state of annoyance. The least untoward thing sets them into a state of ferment.

The machinist, when he finds his machinery squeaking, applies the oil; if the bearings have become so hot as to endanger the works, he stops and allows them to cool. The human machine should be treated in like manner. It should be kept well oiled and cool. Good humor is what will keep digestion perfect and the brain from softening, while it will, at the same time, keep the heart from hardening.—Scientific American.

CHANGED.

"We shall be changed."—1 COR. 15: 52.

"We shall be changed." Yes! we, the weak and mortal,
Shall lay this flesh-robe by,—
Shall shining stand upon the eternal portal,
No tears in any eye;
For weeping shall be done—it is earth's portion,
And heaven will never hear
A single sigh of grief; exultant song
Shall fill Immanuel's ear!

"We shall be changed." No sick and aching frame,
No weary, drooping head;
The great Physician, who from Gilead came,
His precious balm shall shed
Upon our wounds and languor; once he knew
All depths of mortal pain—
From his dear cross that root of healing grew
Which ever shall remain!

"We shall be changed." No saint, with hoary locks
Like the white almond tree,
Shall look thro' darkened windows—for Christ's saved
Are young eternally!
They shall not know the failing of desire,
No fears shall haunt the way;
The incorruptible shall never tire
Through heaven's long day!

How fair and pure will be our changed faces,
When we are made like Him
Whose glory fills eternity's vast spaces:
No time-blight e'er can dim
The dazzling beauty of that likeness new—
Rare immortality!
What perfect bliss to bid decay adieu,
And welcome thee!

"We shall be changed" Oh! blessed change of all!
Washed in thy blood divine,
Dear Lord! no sin on our pure hearts shall fall;
We shall be thine
Eternally, beyond temptation's power
To lure away.
All hail, sweet hope! haste on, triumphant hour!
Celestial day!

THE RESURRECTION BODY.

H. BRITTAIN.

"But the objection we have noticed, as derived from the apostle's declaration that 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God,' is, in truth, of no weight, and the supposed difficulty admits of an easy solution. After what has just been said, it will be readily seen that what is meant by the terms 'flesh and blood,' is simply our nature in its present state, as corrupt and sinful; just as the term 'flesh' is used in Rom. 8, and elsewhere, for an unconverted and unregenerate state of the soul, without any reference whatever to the materiality or non-materiality of the body. Thus—'They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.' v. 5. And again—'So, then, they that are in the flesh cannot please God.' v. 8. The apostle is not here speaking of two parties, of whom one class are in a fleshly body, and the others not so; but of the unregenerate and regenerate, both of whom are alike in the same body, and that our present fleshly, corrupt, and mortal body. What should we think of any one who should attempt to argue to the contrary, and labor to prove from the apostle's expressions in this case that the regenerate are now not in the body? Yet surely, with as much reason may it be argued that they will not be in a material body hereafter, because it is said, 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.' This is indeed true, for 'corruption cannot inherit incorruption'; but 'this corruptible [body] shall put on incorruption, and this mortal [body] shall put on immortality,' even as has already been done in the person or body of the Redeemer; so that the venerable patriarch Job was justified in exclaiming, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another.' Job 19: 25-27.

"Christ's resurrected body, with which he now sits at the right hand of God,[*] waiting 'till his enemies be made his footstool,' and in which he will return to judge the quick and the dead, is, as we have seen, the same body with which he trod the earth at his first advent; no longer indeed subject to death and corruption, and therefore 'changed,' as we are told we must all be[†]; but yet the same material body, which he himself has told us is a body of (at least) 'flesh and bones.'

"The scriptural evidence for this is complete and conclusive, and hence nothing more is necessary to challenge for it our ready assent; but yet, methinks, I shall be pardoned if I appeal to another testimony, which, though not of itself an authority, is yet highly important. The Articles of the Church of England[‡] are no proof of truth, but simply declare what she holds to be truth. As such I give, with no small measure of thankfulness, the 4th:—'Of the Resurrection of Christ—Christ did truly rise again from death, and took again his body, with flesh, bones, and all things appertaining to the perfection of man's nature, wherewith he ascended into heaven, and there sitteth, until he return to judge all men at the last day.' (In the 2nd Article it is affirmed that the 'two natures, that is to say, the Godhead and manhood,' which are 'joined together' in Christ, are 'never to be divided.')

"There remain yet a large number of passages of Scripture which might be brought to bear in support of that view of the subject at which we have now arrived, namely, the true corporeal character of the resurrection body, whether it be that of Christ, as the great Head of the church, or that of his people. Enough has been said in reference to the former; but it is desirable to go a little more at length into the question of the latter, in order that it might be seen how little there is, on the one hand, to support the very prevailing view respecting its spirituality, and, on the other, how much in favor of its materiality.

"I think it will be felt, after the examination of the subject which we have now made, that if it were not for our preconceived views, which yet are very visionary and undefined, we should feel, as a matter of course, that wherever the Scriptures speak of 'the dead being raised,' or, wherever they make use of any expression to that effect, we should understand that, when raised, they will resemble in all essential respects their former selves, having the same form and organization, and endowed with the same functional power; as also with the same mind; though both body and mind will be in a greatly advanced, and even in a very highly exalted condition, in comparison with the present. This, I say, is the natural and obvious view of the case, and would be immediately felt to be so if a disturbing influence had not affected the judgment.

When, for instance, we are told that the great object of the Church's desire, and for which she waits, is 'the redemption of the body' (Rom. 8: 23), what should lead us to understand by the term any other than a literal body such as we now have? The word is used in a known, definite, and recognized sense, and there is nothing here or elsewhere to interfere with or to alter that sense. The obvious meaning, therefore, ought clearly to be adopted without scruple. To depart from it is to go needlessly into obscurity, when we have light before us. Then, again, when we read that 'the dead shall be raised,' or that 'all that are in the graves shall come forth' at the voice of the Son of God, why do we not at once understand that they will do so with their true veritable bodies, seeing that all the expressions obviously and naturally imply this, and moreover would really be obscurity itself if they did not do so? If, indeed, there be other passages which qualify their meaning, they should be taken into account; and we have already seen, and shall do so still further in a subsequent part of our discussion, that there are passages which show that, at least, the resuscitated body will be so far altered in its condition as that 'death shall have no dominion over it'; but this, as we have also seen, does not affect its materiality, nor its true corporeal character, which remains just what it did before, as was fully shown to be already the case in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Again, therefore, we must repeat, that, if it were not for our preconceived and really erroneous views upon the subject, we should never think of departing from the plain, literal, and obvious sense of those numerous passages which, with varied expression, but with uniformity of meaning, declare that 'God will raise the dead.'

"But there are certain portions of Scripture which call for a more specific examination than this, and which compel us to view the subject under a still more definite aspect. We read, for instance, of the exercise of the bodily functions, and we cannot but inquire into the meaning of the passage in which this is the case. We have already seen that in the case of the resuscitated body of the Redeemer, those functions were all exercised; have we reason to believe that such will be true also of the resuscitated bodies of his people? Let the following passages answer the question. Whether they speak of the millennial, or the eternal period, or of both, I will not attempt to determine; they undoubtedly refer to a time subsequent to the resurrection, and this is all we need be anxious about at present.

"(a) 'And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.' Matt. 8: 11.

"(b) 'There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.' Luke 13: 28.

"(c) 'Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptation. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.' Luke 22: 28-30. 'But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.' Matt. 26: 29.

"(d) 'After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.' Rev. 9: 10.[*]

"I will make no comment on these passages, but rather let them speak for themselves, only remarking that they must be viewed in the light of those which have been already quoted, and which record what was done by the Redeemer after he rose from the dead, and which, moreover, seeing that they clearly prove that his bodily substance remained, and his bodily functions exercised after that event, show us that there is prima facie assumption in favor of the opinion that ours shall do so. If such was the case with his, why should it not be also with ours? The only course to pursue in order to arrive at the truth, is to divest ourselves as much as possible of preconceived views[†] on the subject, and to keep strictly and rigidly to the scriptural evidence upon it, readily adopting whatever view of it that may set before us.

"In concluding this section of the present Essay, I may be permitted to call attention to the fact that, in the views propounded in it, there will be seen a harmony and a consistency which, when duly reflected on, must be felt to be essential to the truth of any theory which may be proposed on the subject; and this harmony will be more thoroughly seen when we consider, as hereafter may be shown, that man's future abode will be of a material and true physical character. And, a material abode calls for a material inhabitant. But such the resurrection body will not be, according to those who expect it to be a spiritual substance, and there would, therefore, be a total want of adaptation between it and its material abode. But it is far otherwise with the body which the Scriptures recognize; that, as we have seen, is a material body, and therefore fitted, just as the present body is, for living on a material earth. But further, of what use would such a body be, if its functions are not to be exercised? Evidently none, and we must surely feel, as soon as the question is proposed, that it is little better than absurd to contemplate such a contingency. Even the most determined opponent of final causes would hesitate to entertain it. It would make the whole structure of the body null and void, so far as its use or adaptation was concerned. But, in order to test the question,—are the saints, let me ask, to be endued hereafter with far greater mental powers than at present? and are they to make no communication to each other of those glorious thoughts that will occupy their minds? and if it be absurd to suppose this, then by what means or instrumentality is it likely they will communicate them? Will it not be by that of the material tongue? It was so, be it again remembered, in the case of our Redeemer after he rose from the dead; can any shadow of reason be assigned why it will not also be the same in the case of his people? Consistency of principle, therefore, seeing that there will be a material body, calls for the exercise of the bodily functions. This it has, I trust, been shown there will really be. It is not only involved, but directly asserted in the passages of Scripture we have appealed to. The whole subject, therefore, is in harmony. There is no contradiction or inconsistency between its parts. The whole agrees, and this must be admitted to be corroborative proof of the positions advanced."

This concludes the first portion of the essay. The natural man will compare the spiritual with the natural, so that the things of God are hidden from him. But he who receives the earnest of the Spirit will compare spiritual with spiritual, and rise more and more into the liberty of the Son of God. May we all try to explain the Scriptures in their own light, and find the Word of the living God to be a light to our feet and a lamp to our path.

[†] "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep [die], but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—1 Cor. 15: 51-52.

[‡] The writer of the work was a lately deceased clergyman of the Church of England. Note by M. B.

[*] Very possibly some of my readers may object to the introduction of this passage as proof on the question under examination, because they consider it should be viewed solely in a figurative or symbolical light; but, however this may be, no such objection can be made to the other texts quoted, for they are all of an essentially literal character. I confess I do not see how the evidence they afford can be resisted.

[†] Than the preconceived notions which we may form on any subject, which is a matter of revelation, nothing can be more unsafe as a guide. Had we, e g., been consulted as to the extreme of redemption, or been asked to determine what was antecedently probable, we should not have made the Son of God born in a stable, and cradled in a manger,—the son of a carpenter,—frequently without where to lay his head,—despised and rejected of men,—the laughing stock of a brutal soldiery; nor should we, at length, have put him to death between two thieves, and that, too, by the most cruel and ignominious death of the day."

AN INVITATION, COMMAND, AND PROMISE.

E. L. BITLER.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light.—MATT. 11: 28-30.

These are the words of our Lord to the weary, doubting ones—"Come unto me, all ye that labor." Thank God, none need be discouraged. God is no respecter of persons. Bless his dear name. When we come to him in humility, he hears and answers prayer. Not the long pharisaical prayer, but the words that come from a broken and a contrite heart.

"I will give you rest." Blessed promise, not to be broken, for his promises are yea and amen to all that believe. Why should we doubt the Lord? If we need anything, and go to a true earthly friend, and ask for it, we get it. "What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye, then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him."

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." There are many things to be learned of Jesus. When he was reviled, he reviled not again; when he was persecuted, he opened not his mouth. He went about healing the sick, cleansing the lepers, and raising the dead. And as he sent out his disciples without purse or scrip, he said, "Freely ye have received, freely give."

"I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." His mission was not among the rich and the great; for he says, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called." He chose the humble fishermen, and sent them out, and commanded them to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

If more than eighteen hundred years ago the disciples were to preach the kingdom of heaven is at hand, shall we shirk duty and preach "my Lord delayeth his coming, and eat and drink with the drunken"?

"Up, christians, up! the moments fly,
And while you count the cost,
Ten thousand souls around you die,
And are forever lost."

THE FUTURE OF OUR PLANET,

AS VIEWED FROM A

BIBLICAL AND SCIENTIFIC STANDPOINT.

A. W. SIBLEY.

The future of our planet is a question that has deeply engaged the attention of the learned and scientific of every age, both in this and the European countries; and various conclusions have been arrived at in the discussion of this interesting theme. Scientists and philosophers have come to vague and uncertain conclusions as to what will be the ultimate destiny of this terraqueous globe.

While Geology presents us with some very interesting facts concerning the past and present conditions of our earth, it does not disclose to us what is to be the future ultimatum of the same. Although there is a vast field opened up to man, by the discovery of geological science, for thought and profound study, yet it has been and still is a source from whence come the wildest conclusions and speculative and indefinite ideas; and hence, from the very best possible light that geological science affords us we cannot predict the future, neither determine with any degree of certainty the wonderful terminus of earth's mission, much more her grand destination.

Since scientists and philosophers differ so widely in their views respecting the final condition of this planet, and since man with all his boasted wisdom and wonderful sagacity is utterly incompetent to penetrate the future and gaze through the innumerable cycles of the untold ages of eternity, we must seek for a solution of this problem elsewhere than at the hands of those who have entered the arena of modern science, and made themselves conspicuous in this department of culture and learning.

To whom shall we go for the information after which our minds so eagerly thirst, in order to ascertain whether earth is to "abide forever," or whether it is destined to go to Sun, the great father of planets, and become extinct, as some affirm? Shall we go to those who seek knowledge from the dead—the wizards that "peep and mutter"? or shall we seek wisdom from the Being who made the planets, and created the laws by which they are governed? In the divine revelation which God has given us, where his great purposes are clearly developed respecting this mundane arrangement, may be seen standing out conspicuously on the page declarations setting forth the fact of the eternal perpetuity of our earth.

We read as follows: "Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever." Ps. 104: 5. "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever." Eccl. 1: 4. These scriptures plainly teach that the earth will always "abide," and this is asserted in contrast with the fact that one generation passeth away and another cometh.

But will earth forever continue in its present state, with its foul vapors and poisonous atmosphere? Will it forever be the playground of the devil, the theatre of war, bloodshed and carnage? Are sorrows, anguish of heart, and tears, forever to continue? Are earth and its inhabitants always to be subjected to destructive tornadoes, devastating earthquakes, pestilences that walk in darkness, moral, physical and political changes? Are the works of the burglar, the highway robber, the midnight assassin, always to be practiced? Is this world always to be the pandemonium of demons? and is Satan to be the prince and power of the air forever? Inspiration responds in the negative. A vast change is to take place,—a change in the moral, religious, political and physical departments of earth. This change is announced to the human family in the following scriptures:—

"Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure; yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." Ps. 102: 25, 26.

"The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly." Isa. 24: 19.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3: 10.

"Seeing, then, that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." 2 Pet. 3: 11, 12.

"But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 7.

"The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved; he uttered his voice, the earth melted." Ps. 46: 6.

As to the possibility or probability of such a change as is here announced in these scriptures by the inspired apostle, no one can doubt when he takes into consideration the almightiness or omnipotency of the Being from whom these words come. The Being who has created can change that which is created if he purposes thus to do; hence, no question can arise here in regard to a power adequate to bring about this change.

Again, it seems even that the disclosures of modern science have made it quite certain that such a change will soon take place, for it has been clearly stated as a scientific truth that the interior portions of the earth are a vast bed of fire and flame.

Albert Barnes says, when speaking on this interesting theme:—"Modern science has made it probable that the interior of the earth is a melted and intensely-heated mass of burning materials; that the habitable world is but a comparatively thin crust, or shell, over those internal fires; that earthquakes are caused by the vapors engendered by that heated mass, when water comes in contact with it; and that volcanoes are but openings and vent-holes through which those internal flames make their way to the surface.

"God, in bringing about this conflagration and change in this planet, only has to call into action those agencies that now exist. Doubtless before the flood the waters were pent up or deposited in the bowels of the earth; but at the time of the deluge 'the fountains of the great deep were broken up,' and earth and all pertaining thereto were completely submerged in water; for we read that 'fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail.' May not God cause the internal fires of the earth to burst forth from their chambers and seize upon all sublunary substances, which will ultimate in that state of things announced in the prophecy of Isaiah, where he says—'The earth shall be clean dissolved'; or, as Peter says—'The elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up'?

"Whether these fires everywhere will make their way to the surface and produce a universal conflagration, perhaps could not be determined by science; but no one can doubt that the simple command of God would be all that was necessary to pour those burning floods over the earth, as he once caused the waters to roll over every mountain and through every valley."

It is a generally conceded fact that the ancients in general entertained the idea that the elements out of which all things were formed were four—air, earth, fire, and water. Modern developments in science have entirely demolished this old established and cherished theory, and shown that these so far from being simple elements, are themselves compounds. It has been ascertained that air is composed of nitrogen and oxygen; four parts of the former, and one of the latter. Hydrogen is a colorless gas highly inflammable, and extremely light, and is an element that enters into the composition of nearly all organic bodies.

It would be a very easy thing for God to cause a separation of the two constituent gases of which water is composed, and thus deluge the world with fire, causing the burning day of which prophets and apostles have spoken.

Dr. Adam Clarke in his comments on 2. Pet. 3: 10, says:—"If the galvanic spark be made to pass through the water, a portion of the fluid is immediately decomposed into its two constituent gases, oxygen and hydrogen; and as the electric or ethereal fire is that, which, in all likelihood, God will use in the general conflagration, the noise occasioned by the application of this fire to such an immense congeries of aqueous particles as float in the atmosphere, must be terrible in the extreme. . . . When the fire has conquered and decomposed the water, the elements, hydrogen and oxygen airs or gases, the former of which is most highly inflammable, and the latter an eminent supporter of all combustion, will occupy distinct regions of the atmosphere; the hydrogen by its very great levity ascending to the top, while the oxygen, from its superior specific gravity, will keep upon or near the surface of the earth; and thus if different substances be at once ignited, the fire, which is supported in this case not only by oxygen, which is one of the constituents of atmospheric air, but also by a great additional quantity of oxygen obtained from the decomposition of all aqueous vapors, will probably seize on all other substances on all terrestrial particles, and the whole frame of nature will be necessarily torn to pieces."

The poet in describing the change that awaits old earth, speaks as follows:

"The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
And all it inherits shall dissolve,
And, like the baseless fabric of a vision,
Leave not a wreck behind."

Albert Barnes in his Notes on 2 Pet. 3: 10—"And the elements shall melt with fervent heat"—says:—

"It could not be demonstrated from this phrase that the world would be annihilated by fire; it could be proved only that it will undergo important changes. So far as the action of fire is concerned, the form of the earth may pass away, and its aspect be changed; but unless the direct power which created it interposes to annihilate it, the matter which now composes it will still be in existence. The words rendered 'burnt up' like the word just before used and rendered fervent heat—a word of the same origin, but here intensive, means that they will undergo such a change as fire will produce; not, necessarily, that the matter composing them will be annihilated."

Dr. Adam Clarke on the eleventh verse of this same chap., which reads as follows: "All these things shall be dissolved"—says,—'They will all be separated, all decomposed; but none of them destroyed. And as they are the original matter out of which God formed the terraqueous globe, consequently they may enter again into the composition of a new system; and therefore the apostle says (ver. 13), 'We look for new heavens and a new earth;' the others being decomposed, a new new system is to be formed out of their materials."

ANTICIPATION.

C. MENDENHALL.

In this life we frequently anticipate future pleasures or emoluments from present expectations. How often the realization has disappointed and dissatisfied. We had been too sanguine, had expected too much, or some unforeseen event interposed and marred or destroyed our hopes. This is the rule with things temporal, which fact ought ever to teach us to have our ambition centered above the things that are seen; our hopes placed in God through Christ, enabling us to anticipate the joys of a future existence in paradise restored. Then by faith we can rise above the adverse storms of life's troubled sea.

With our hearts full of the promises of God, our meditations on that rest which remaineth for the people of God, present disappointments, present difficulties, shrink into insignificance, for they are not to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in our favor.

Here we can anticipate without fear of overdrawing the beautiful picture, or overestimating its value; for it is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the thing which God hath prepared for them that love him." What a field for thought! What a motive to thanksgiving is brought to view in those words! Man may try to picture the future bliss and exaltation of God's chosen ones, but it comes far short of the reality. Let us, dear brethren, gird our loins, holding fast till Jesus comes; then shall our hopes and expectations be consummated in a glorious realization. It will be greater than we expected; infinitely more than we deserved, showing forth with resplendent beauty the exceeding riches of his mercy, and the unfathomable depths of his love. Yet a little while and the curse will be removed, and we shall be changed; "for it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Do we desire that great event? Let us live in readiness for it, then we can come before him without confusion, being bold through faith.

Reader, if you do not love and obey Jesus, turn now while time and opportunity continue. Accept the terms, and now in the eleventh hour of the old world's history, make him your all and in all. We all need to watch and pray, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping. He is at the door. Are we prepared to give him an entrance? God keep us all, saint and sinner, to answer aright, for surely the day of God hasteneth mightily. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God, your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

PSALMS 11: 3.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

This question, at the present time, is one of solemn importance. In the conflict going on between truth and error, in the self-opinionated and metaphysical ideas and doctrines of the present age, it becomes us to know what is truth, and to walk in its light. We are gravely told that there are twenty thousand mistakes in the Scriptures; that there is no devil; that the Son of God had no existence before his birth at Bethlehem; that many passages of Scripture are interpolated and uninspired; that man cannot experience any regenerating change until after he is dead, and is raised again; that man cannot be born again, abandon sin, and become a partaker of the divine nature, until his body rests in the ground and he is resurrected; that Jesus the Messiah was born after the law of a carnal commandment, or had an earthly father; that Jesus labored in the gospel ministry nineteen or twenty years instead of three and a half years, as the Bible says; that Jesus had no hand in the creation of the world, etc., etc., etc. It is not enough for us to deny the above statements, but we will suggest some propositions which bear upon the subject before us. Our text says: "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do? We understand the foundations to be in God.

As it regards the interpolation and mistranslation of Scripture, the mistakes are so small as not to affect the general scope and meaning of the sacred writers. The vital truths are there, and let us open our hearts and our arms to embrace them. Who ever read more beautiful imagery or poetry than is given by the prophets, or more precious doctrine than comes from the sermon on the mount, our enemies themselves being judges? Search the Scriptures, for they treat of life, and that life is Christ. "He that hath the Son hath life." "He that honoreth the Son honoreth the Father." "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." "I [Christ] am the door." "My words shall judge you in the last day." Although man has sinned grievously, God holds out the sceptre of mercy, and invites him to return, offering to forgive his sins, and to cleanse from all unrighteousness. Shall we, through unbelief or neglect, lose this blessing? or shall we receive and acknowledge it? What more beautiful promise can you find than that in Ezek. 36: 25-27?—"I will sprinkle clean water upon you; from all your sins and idols will I save you, and put a new heart within you." Do you believe this, dear reader? or do you not? Remember that it is faith that secures the blessing, but unbelief dashes away the cup from our lips. It is not do and live, but it is believe and live.

As to the birth of our Lord Jesus, on the maternal side, he was of "the seed of David according to the flesh," Mary, his mother, being of the line of David; but as to the paternal side, he was "the Lord from heaven," or the eternal Word, God being his Father; born not of the will of man, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God. Thus he was an acceptable offering for the sins of the world, and for the suffering of death was crowned with glory and honor. "The Captain of our salvation" was made "perfect through sufferings," that he might be the author of eternal salvation to all that obey him. We hear much from France about the Right and Left Centre, but we feel assured that our God is an Eternal Centre, consisting of love and wisdom. From him emanates all that is good, grand and noble. He upholdeth all things by the word of his power; by him all things consist, and, in the final consummation, he will be glorious, while all that is evil will be destroyed and perish forever. Come, thou poor, suffering saint, have patience a little longer. Thy God will come. He will come with a recompense, and thou shalt be satisfied.

IS IT WELL?

To be thirsty near a fountain and not to drink; to be hungry while the master of the table invites us; to carry our own burdens for years, when a strong one who can never be weary, offers to bear the load; to be pierced with many an arrow when a shield may be had; to be wanderers, when we might dwell in a palace and have peace—is it well?

These thoughts come to us as we compare God's word with experience felt, read, heard, and observed. Jesus offers the water of life, the bread that shall end hunger, the taking of our cares, to throw a defence about us, to bring us home that we may rest.

Yet many do not devote themselves fully to Jesus, and allow him to fill their hearts so as to make religion the most pleasurable to them. They walk by a curtain while a light is shing brightly just beyond it, and do not break through the intervening obstacle so as to walk in the light. They live a life that is painful through want of likeness to the Master—one that is loaded with duties that are not relished—one that is yet shaded with slavery—has not full liberty.

So the years pass with many. But is it well? That is, in view of the great experience which is possible—is it well? Jesus can grant the soul victory. He can put its fears all away. He can give it the sweetness of heaven. He can supply it with an assuring faith. He can cleanse the heart. He can fill it with the fruits of the Spirit.

Blessed be God! a great change has of late come to many a soul that had long been going on in the unfortunate way above indicated. You meet them now to find that they have become "transformed." They are living wholly for God. They have consecrated all to God, and become as little children. The Holy Spirit is allowed to have entire possession of their souls, and he occupies them, making them full of love and joy. He dwells there as the sanctifier, as he who empowers, as he who takes the things of Christ and makes them plain.

These persons realize the glory of religion; they feel the power which words seem feeble to tell. The sweetness of God's love has become greater. Doubts have been slain. They prove that perfect love casts out fear. The routine of service which they thought severe, and which they regarded as fully enough burdensome if they even supplied the forms well, appears now but the least of what God demands, and this is readily met, while the heart cries out for more to do for Jesus, and is conscious of a love burning in the soul which cannot be matched by any sacrifices; cannot be expressed in words. They have abiding communion with Jesus.

To yield all to Jesus and be fully saved—this is well!—Christian Standard.

THE BAD HEART.

Suppose a man should establish a magazine for grinding charcoal in the first story of his house, while his books and pictures were in the next story. Do you suppose a man can grind charcoal down stairs, and keep things up stairs clean? The charcoal will not go up by the ton, but the impalpable dust will find its way up. The ever industrious air will carry it thither. Some will go out at the door, some will go through the windows, and some will get through the crevices, until by and by his fine engravings are all smutted, and his books are all grimed, and the ceilings are changing in color, and the man's face is turning from its natural hue. You cannot grind charcoal down stairs and keep clean up stairs.

But many men are trying that which is just as impossible. Dirty dogs they are. Miserable, filthy creatures they are. Wicked, self-indulgent men they are. They are men who would rather die than have their inside life turned inside out so that folks could see it. They are men that are not so much afraid of the great day of judgment hereafter, as of the great day of judgment now. They would not for all the world have the truth respecting themselves come out. And yet they think they are moving in the most eminent sphere; that it is all quiet, and that nobody knows anything about it. There never was a greater mistake made than that. You cannot harmonize these two things. "You cannot serve God and mammon." You cannot obey Christ and Belial.—Sel.

AGENT.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

For good and satisfactory reasons, the National Campmeeting appointed to commence at Springfield, Mass., Saturday, Aug. 15th, is changed to begin Saturday, August 8th. M. G.

CAMPMEETINGS.

Our campmeetings, without any expectation of such a result, have become one of the most important branches of our religious economy. There are some things connected with them which are objectionable, and many things very desirable. We think the balance of the account stands on the side of the meetings as approved of God. When we examine his word upon the subject, it requires his worshipers to assemble themselves together, but does not specify whether it shall be in a house, field or grove; but Jesus does say, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Jesus did give the example of preaching the gospel to out-door congregations, and retaining them there for successive days.

The moral status of all meetings, whether in a house or grove, depend upon the motive for holding them, and the spirit by which the worship is controlled. There was disorder, and some very bad people attending apostolic meetings; but that did not prove that God did not call his servants to hold them, and labor for the salvation of unbelievers who attended them. In some of those meetings there were gathered vast crowds of people, who, in swaying to and fro, "trod one upon another." Many at that time thought it demoralizing to a religious community to hold such gatherings, and esteemed it "turning the world upside down."

Campmeetings throw a heavier weight of responsibility upon the church, which holds them more than ordinary meetings. In these, the door is thrown more widely open to receive the floating masses, which are always swept here and there by currents of excitement. But this is all right when the ruling currents of the meeting are for God and truth, and sufficiently strong to withstand those for evil, and leave a good impression for Christ and his cause. Their history in the past, connected with devoted classes of christians, certainly show that God has approved of them, for they have resulted in great spiritual good to the church. They present concentrated and multiplied advantages to reach and benefit sinners. A sermon preached to five thousand people, has a tenfold advantage over one preacher to five hundred. The power of true worship is increased by a large ratio, by increasing the number of worshipers. "One can chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." The combined strength of two, is equal to the strength of ten, standing alone. Many people will attend such large meetings, where the multitude go, who would not attend a small meeting of the same people at their home. By this means prejudice is taken away from many, and they are brought to rejoice in the truth.

It is divine power, the power of the Holy Spirit, which is increased tenfold by the union of those who possess it, and it is diminished in the same ratio by dividing those who possess it. It is a fact that where great advantages for good are concentrated, corresponding advantages for evil are always present. Where many are thrown together, and great strength can be obtained by their union, corresponding weakness can be produced by their division. A fire sufficiently large to burn out of the way a large amount of rubbish, would destroy many valuable buildings. Satan understands this, and is always laboring to destroy the power of christians for good, by dividing them in spirit or effort, thus causing them to draw in opposite directions; throwing them into factious parties by differences of faith, and causing them to speak reproachfully to each other. At large meetings of any kind, there is a concentration of means for good or evil; and the enemy always takes advantage of it to accomplish his destructive purposes. On this account, christians should go to such meetings with a fixed purpose to resist the devil at every point of attack. He often commences by inducing you to grumble and complain about the management of the meeting; for, with the imperfection of human judgment, there is always a chance to think that something might have been done better, which also gives an opportunity to exercise charity and covers a multitude of faults.

He will also stir the hearts of some to complain of the worship,—the preacher is not the right man; he talks too loud or too low; too fast or too slow; or there is something to destroy the meeting for them. The singing is not exactly mechanical and tasteful to the ear, which combined with a little prejudice already existing, causes disgust. The general appearance of the place and congregation is such a contrast to their fine house and fashionable audience at home, that it is at once pronounced half uncivilized, fanatical, and unworthy of confidence. Such often walk over the ground, excited with curiosity to see the strange sights and hear the wonderful sounds. They look in upon every social meeting, which, if truly spiritual, like apostolic worship, will appear to them as that did, like "heresy," or the worshipers as "filled with new wine." Such persons usually leave the campground hardened and blinded, with a sour spirit, ready to denounce campmeetings and all who enjoy them.

To attend such meetings profitably to ourselves and others, we should fully fix our purposes before going to mind our own business and nothing else. We should turn our minds, as much as possible, from every thing that excites faultfinding or sour feelings, which always drives the Spirit from us, and disqualifies us to worship. We should never suffer the enemy to get advantage of us by taking a wrong position in the meetings the first day of our attendance. The first right step for a christian is to reckon yourself as one of the people of God, and mingle with them as such, approaching the altar without hesitation. Seat yourself with those who are active in the service. Join with them in their devotions as freely as if in your own meeting at home. If anything is said by another not in harmony with your faith, never reply to it in the meeting, for contentions or discussions are sure to bring ruin. Never occupy more than your proper proportion of time. Time is a very valuable article at such meetings; for there are generally many more who ought to have a privilege to testify for Jesus than can get time to do so. It is generally the weaker class who most need the strength to be gained by activity, who are crowded out, and lose their privilege in the house of God, which is more valuable to them than bread or gold, by a careless, selfish class who occupy much more time in social meetings than they have a right to do. Better go to the table of a weak brother and rob him of his dinner (for that he might lose without serious damage), than to deprive him of his share in sacred worship. This is one of the serious evils attending a campmeeting and all other meetings.

Another serious evil is tattling and backbiting. This is a very great evil there, and everywhere. A strong influence should be thrown against it, not only by refraining from it yourself, but those who do it in your presence should be kindly rebuked. If all faithful christians would do this, much sin and trouble would be saved.

All discussions on the open grounds should be avoided; for even if the parties are kind to each other, outside people get the idea that they disagree among themselves, and this injures their confidence in all they say.

A preacher should not go on to the stand and preach directly against what another brother has preached; for this tends to make unbelievers feel that they all may be mistaken, thus making them skeptical in regard to all that is preached.

Much carefulness should be practiced by the worshipers as to their general appearance and conversation on the ground; for this gives spectators a very strong impression for good or evil. Much love and friendship should be manifested, but in a very chaste and becoming manner. Too much familiarity should never be indulged between the sexes. Loud and uncultivated talk, jesting and loud laughter, all these things are an injury to the cause of Christ.

As love and harmony are absolutely essential to the prosperity and influence of such meetings, to bring men to Christ, and prepare the church to meet her Judge, it is important that none introduce anything in theory or practice, contrary to the faith and manner of the worship of the major part of the meeting. We do not say this to show that we think every body is heretical and unchristian who does not believe and worship just alike, or to proscribe christian's liberties; but that those who cannot teach and labor together in harmony, had better separate, as to fields of labor, according to the apostolic example, rather than mar the sacred cause by manifesting differences and strife.

We do, therefore, most earnestly exhort our brethren, for the sake of Christ's cause, and the salvation of men, that when they attend campmeetings, to teach and work in harmony with the general sentiment and order of the meeting, if they can conscientiously, and if not, peacably withdraw and not manifest an unchristian spirit by faction and sedition. We hold to the largest liberty and toleration sanctioned by true civilization and christianity, but we do not believe in destroying religious meetings by jargon and strife. These will kill the best meetings ever held.

Brethren in Christ, we have come to a time when our campmeetings are truly our representative meetings. Our faith, spirit, and purity of life and worship are understood by the world at large, to be exhibited in them. We cannot pray too earnestly, or watch too carefully, or apply too fully all the power and virtue of our holy religion, to make them as efficient for good as the present circumstances demand. They should be used to give the clearest and strongest arguments we are capable of producing in presenting present truth. A thorough, God-producing regeneration of the sinner's heart, a transformation of character, a planting of the divine nature in human soil at conversion, should be emphatically taught as essential to communion with God. The standard of pure christian character should be raised to the apostolic elevation. Unreserved consecration, sanctification through a belief of the truth, and an imputation of God's righteousness by the faith of Abraham, should be pressed home upon all hearers, by the Holy Spirit.

Brethren, our period for work in the vineyard of the Lord is nearly passed. The campmeetings we are now holding are evidently among our last. Shall we labor in these meetings in harmony with Christ and with each other? Shall we go into the field shoulder to shoulder, laboring to overcome all hindrances, and pressing the battle to the gate? The work is great, and our duties are responsible. Let us pray unitedly and earnestly to God for grace to enable us to so improve these golden opportunities, that the Judge may say unto us at last—"Well done." J. C.

CAMPMEETING SUGGESTIONS.

As we are near the time to open our great campmeetings for this year, we have thought it might be well to make a few suggestions to assist those who wish the most happy success in these important gatherings.

1. When you depart from home for the meeting, leave all care and worrying anxiety behind, as fully as the sinner leaves his sins when he seeks pardon. Remember the worry affords no relief; makes nothing any better, and is as useless as violent medicine to a well man. Trust home matters in the hands of the Lord; keep the mind stayed on him, that perfect peace may abound.

2. Come at the beginning of the meeting, and rise with it, that you may be interwoven with its hallowed associations. It is better to be at the first than the last half, if you cannot attend the whole. Those who come late are more inclined to be spectators, which is about as profitable as to look at a distant fire to receive warmth in a cold day.

3. Take a part in the meeting as soon as possible after your arrival. Do not attempt to do some great thing, but commit yourself as one of the followers of Jesus. This is highly important. Do not depend on being warmed by another's fire, but have one kindled immediately in your own heart, that it may be abiding.

4. Those who wish to be agreeable and pleasing in the meetings should be specially careful to avoid long exhortations and prayers, which often ruin the vital interests of the meeting, besides burdening the patience of all who listen. The long talks and prayers are a great hindrance to the prosperity of most public meetings. The speaking and praying may be all good enough, but there is so much of it that it becomes exceedingly tedious, like a long sermon. Whenever weariness begins, pleasing devotion ends, and the tide of interest begins to decline. Whenever we desire one to stop, his words cease to do us good. There are some we always dread to see rise to speak in meeting, or to engage in prayer, because they are so tediously long; there are others whose voices are ever greeted gladly, because they are wise enough to be short. The long talkers are usually so in their home meetings. They may acquire the habit there because there are but few to take a part, and they think the time must be occupied. When such get warmed up at campmeeting, they feel more than usual like talking, so they improve the time, not thinking they are occupying besides their portion, that which belongs to half a dozen others. This cannot be called christian courtesy. We are required to love our neighbor as ourselves. It is much better to speak one minute at a time five times, than to speak five minutes at one time. Let a social meeting be social. One fact should be remembered; time seems twice as long to the hearer as to the speaker. In our coming campmeetings, begin with very short public prayers and testimonies, giving every one an opportunity to do their part of the work.

5. Those who would avoid long exhortations in conference meetings, should not rise for the purpose of teaching others some new or old doctrinal point. Such talks are almost invariably dull and tedious, and interest no one so much as the speaker. When church members become low in spiritual life, then they usually run into this prosy kind of talk, which only increases their cold formalism, and helps to chill what little warmth there may be left in their spiritual nature. As a remedy for these ague chills, let the thoughts be turned to Jesus. Speak of his blessings and love. Tell what he has done. Confess wanderings and forsake all unholy things. Consecrate all to the Lord, and live to please him. Praise him for what he has done, and trust him without wavering in the darkest hours. His friendship is abiding. Put all into his hands for safe keeping, and there let it forever remain.

6. Those who would reap rich benefit from campmeetings should spend much time in secret prayer, keeping their minds stayed on the Lord; avoid doing the busy-body's work, the tattlers, the complainers, and the backbiters. Their seats look best when vacant. They are most entertaining when silent. They do the most good when alone, where they exert no influence. Let us all meet this year around the Cross, and make a full surrender to Jesus, and ask him to baptize us all into one spirit, and preserve us blameless unto his coming. M. G.

NATIONAL HOLINESS CONVENTION.

A very interesting and important meeting has just been held at Ocean Grove, N. J., commencing Wednesday, July 15th, and closing Thursday, July 23d. Ocean Grove is six miles from Long Branch, and is most admirably adapted to promote the interests of such a meeting. It is the most delightful place we have ever seen, where christians can spend the summer months, and enjoy rest, intelligent and good society, without the torments of fashion and folly, so common at most of the summer resorts. There are some two hundred and thirty acres dedicated to the Lord to be used expressly for the accommodation of those who wish to spend the hot days where they can be fanned by the sea breeze, enjoy ocean bathing, and mingle in daily prayer and song. In harmony with this arrangement, private persons have erected some three hundred and fifty neat cottages, besides about five hundred tents which are needed for the campmeetings held in the grove. The grounds are well lighted with gas, and supplied with plenty of good water. A post-office, telegraph office, stores, bakeries, markets, and some eighteen boarding houses, afford good accommodations for visitors. During the past year, some twenty-five thousand dollars have been expended in fitting up the grounds. There are two pleasant lakes embosomed in the grove, which furnish very fine opportunities for boat rowing. These are supplied with about a hundred boats, which are much used by men, women and children at morning and evening hours. At Ocean Grove those dressed in calico and plain bonnets are respected as much as those who wear costly apparel. Indeed, fashionable dresses seem to be out of place in this consecrated grove. They look odd as poverty in the midst of affluence. The disciples of Jesus, who need rest from weary labors, whose nervous systems have become exhausted by over work, find Ocean Grove just the place for physical, mental, and spiritual repairs. Many ministers and their families go there for this object. A large campmeeting is to commence there the 14th of Aug. to continue ten days.

The National convention just held at Ocean Grove has produced much precious fruit. All christians, without respect to denominational creeds, were invited to take a common interest in the meeting. Preachers among the Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Dutch Reformed, Quakers, and others, participated in the gracious exercises. Dr. I. M. Ward, the President of the convention, is a very devoted, sweet-spirited man, eminently adapted to take the lead of such a gathering; yet we never saw one who seemed more anxious to keep himself out of sight, exalt Jesus, and have him take the entire control. He appears to be perfectly unsectarian, and bestows his hearty sympathy upon all who follow Christ.

Those gathered at this meeting from the various churches named, were generally such as are wholly consecrated to the Lord, or those who are seeking to find "the way of holiness." Those who have not attended these meetings can form but a meagre idea of their blessedness. It is most evident that the Spirit of the Lord is the leading power in them. It is a remarkable sight to see representative men from the different denominations which have been antagonized for centuries, now united in the warmest christian love, more closely than the members of any church we ever saw. The chief bond of union is love for Christ, produced by the power of the Holy Spirit. The union is not feigned; it is real, and permanent. It is not a doctrinal union, but "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Since our first visit to the National campmeeting for holiness, held at Round Lake in July. 1871, we have been more and more convinced that the remarkable movement on holiness, which has now become world-wide, has special reference to the coming of Christ. The mistakes and other failings that have occurred among those who are looking for the coming of Jesus, together with the exposure of some of the false theological dogmas in the Protestant churches, received from the "mother of harlots" in "the seven-hilled city," have produced such strong prejudice in the minds of many honest christian people, that they were unwilling to listen to those who preached these things. In consequence of misinformation and some facts, they had concluded that those who were looking for the speedy coming of Jesus, were a deluded, ignorant, and fanatical people, unworthy of confidence and support. This feeling has been quite general, and has served to shut against us church doors and pulpits, very naturally stirring up more or less a spirit of bitterness on either side. It is a blessed fact, that the spirit of holiness takes out all roots of bitterness, all sectarianism, and gives at once a love for the coming of Jesus. We have felt confident that those honest souls, who have stood aloof from the great present truth of the age—the coming of Christ—would in some way—the Lord's way—be led into the glorious position of looking and waiting for the coming of Jesus in our day. Already this is becoming true. At the late convention at Ocean Grove, quite a number of ministers were asked if they did not think this marvelous holiness movement was not the preparation of the church to meet Christ at his coming, and every one, including the President, answered in the affirmative without hesitation. The Spirit of the Lord is teaching them this sublime truth, and they are receiving it with delight. Praise his blessed name. We had precious seasons in conversation with some of the dear Brn. on the subject. They were anxious to hear the evidence in favor of the coming of Jesus.

It was a most heavenly feast to witness the sweet blending of hearts at this convention. It was not a Baptist, or Methodist, or Presbyterian, or Episcopalian, or Congregational, but a CHRISTIAN union. CHRIST was the centre of attraction. All gathered around him. His lovely character so charmed them, that they seemed to forget all their former sectarian and creed differences. So long as we remain in Christ, this union will continue; and the longer it is enjoyed, the more precious and heavenlike it becomes. O that all might be filled with the Spirit, and thus be one with Christ and all his children. It is a most pleasing, even enrapturing thought, that we have truly come to the time when the evidence is clear and unmistakable, that the bride of the Lamb is actually putting on her pure bridal robes of his righteousness, in order to be ready to meet him lovingly and rejoicingly at his glorious appearing.

> "Come and reign, come and reign,
> Jesus, on thy throne;
> And O, it fills my heart with joy,
> To know we are almost home."

FASTING AND PRAYER.—In harmony with our usual custom, we would suggest that Friday, Aug. 7th, be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, before the Lord, that he may most wonderfully bless the National campmeeting to commence at Springfield Aug. 8th, and the Alton Bay meeting to begin Aug. 22d, and all other similar meetings. Let it be the burden of our prayers, that as a people we may receive a fresh baptism of power to labor in the vineyard of the Lord with more energy and success the coming year than during any one in the past. Pray that all the watchmen may be filled with the Holy Spirit, that they may labor with new delight, new zeal, fresh courage, and blessed union, in the last great work to which they have been providentially called to spend their remaining life energies. M. G.

CAMP FURNITURE.—Those who may attend campmeetings should not forget the necessary things they may need for their comfort. Make out a list of them some days before you start. Put down shawl, and overcoat, over shoes, umbrellas, towel, soap, comb and brush, clothes brush, blacking, looking-glass, matches, bedding, etc. Each tent's company should bring candles, candlesticks or lamps, twine, lantern, nails, hammer, auger, hatchet, and other such things as they may need for their convenience. M. G.

AN IMPRESSIVE BAPTISM.

A messenger called at our door at about six o'clock in the evening, a few days since, and wished to know if we could baptize a young lady at a certain St. and No. of our city that evening, at seven o'clock. We inquired the circumstances, and learned that it was a girl fifteen years of age, who was sick, and apparently near unto death. She sent particular word that she wished us to come that night, for she feared she should die, and could not die in peace before she had borne this cross, and acknowledged her Savior in following him according to his instruction and example in this emblematic ordinance.

We went immediately to the house, determined to do what the Word, Spirit and providence of God might then indicate as duty. We found a pale, emaciated young lady, apparently in the last stages of consumption. She expressed, without excitement or fear, an intelligent faith in the gospel, and a firm trust in Jesus as a present Savior, and in Christ as a future King. She spoke as composedly of dying as she would of resting in sleep. She said she had fears that we should not come, and so she would not have the privilege of keeping this great commandment of the Lord. We inquired if she had no fears of dying in passing through the service of the holy ordinance? She seemed to express the idea that older christians would do well to realize,—that death would not alarm her if it found her doing her duty to Jesus.

As many friends had collected as could be admitted, to witness one of the most impressive and solemn ordinances in which we ever engaged. We had a service at the bedside of singing, remarks upon the great subject—its importance and signification—and prayer. An inspiration of power seemed to come upon her while we were singing, so that she joined with very sweet devotion. A bath-tub was prepared in an adjoining room, and she was taken in the arms of a brother and set down in the water, with an affectionate mother holding her head, for she seemed almost as helpless as if death had already done its work. We buried her in the likeness of Christ's burial in death, and raised her from the emblematic grave in the likeness of Christ's resurrection. We have buried many before in the observance of this ordinance, but we were never before so deeply impressed with the perfect adaptation of the figure of burial; for it seemed almost as if we were burying one really dead, and that she was immediately resurrected to life. She was a little exhausted for a short time, but soon seemed to rest quietly in Jesus, and said, "I have done my duty," and was happy in the Lord.

All present appeared deeply impressed with the solemnity of the occasion. God seemed to smile upon us by sending the Holy Spirit, and we doubt not the service was ratified in heaven. We admired the faith in so young a person, which so undauntedly pressed through the apparent insurmountable obstacles, and with true christian heroism laid hold of the cross and devoutly confessed Christ. J. C.

A TERRIBLE FRESHET took place in Pittsburg, Sabbath, July 26th. One hundred and thirty-two dead bodies have been found, as the results of the flood, and seventy-six are still missing. One hundred and forty-seven buildings have been destroyed, and a million dollars worth of property. M. G.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

BRO. L. NORMANDEAU.

NEW YORK, JULY 21ST, 1874.

To the Editors of the Crisis:—

Dear Brn.:—I received a very interesting letter, a few days ago, from Rev. L. Normandeau, of Canada, showing that the cause of truth is advancing on our borders, as well as in our midst. Mr. N., as some of your readers perhaps know, has been connected, as a minister and professor, with the Grand Ligne Mission for many years. Notwithstanding his strong attachment to that mission, and his acknowledged usefulness and eminence as a missionary, he has been compelled finally to give his resignation. A long and careful study of the Bible had completely changed his views on the erroneous dogmas of the immortality of the soul, eternal torment, etc., and he felt duty-bound to give utterance to his new convictions. His altered views were looked upon as dangerous innovations. He was officially admonished before a committee, and given to understand that silence on his part was advisable and necessary.

Mr. N., in order to avoid further remonstrance, and for the sake of peace, immediately tendered his resignation. He is now working in a new and different field of labor, independently of any religious organization, and being content, for conscience' sake and the love of truth, to work for an extremely small salary. He wishes me, in his letter, to appeal to the well-known liberality of the Advent brethren and others, hoping that some may be found able and willing to help him in furthering the good cause in this portion of the Lord's vineyard. He says there is a large field for missionary work, through preaching and circulating tracts, he having already a considerable number ready and waiting for the press. The people are generally disposed to receive the truth. The soil is ready for the good seed, or rather the field is fast ripening for a rich harvest of right and true believers. May God incline the hearts of his children to contribute liberally towards the upbuilding of Zion in Canada. Humbly but hopefully yours,

J. R. LAMOUREUX.

P. S.—Donations or communications may be addressed to Rev. L. Normandeau, Granby, P. Q., Canada, or to the Crisis, with your kind permission. J. R. L.

When in Quebec, P. Q., some few years since, we visited Bro. Normandeau, and had a pleasant interview. We esteem him as a true Bro. in Christ, and worthy of the confidence and support of all christian people. Let those who can, lend him a helping hand at this time, when favors are so much needed. M. G.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Not having written for the Crisis in some time, and as some may wonder what has become of Bro. J. T. Ongley and the Penn. Mission Tent, I write to inform you that I am still endeavoring to do my duty in warning my fellows of a coming judgment. Since the first of Jan., 1874, I have preached one hundred and thirty discourses in fifty different places, in N. Y. State and Penn. Most of these places have been regular appointments, once in four weeks, since we closed our tent meetings last fall. The 6th of June I started off on the tent mission. Held our first meeting for this season in Union City, Erie Co., Penn. Bro. C. F. Sweet was on hand to help. Union City is the hardest place we had to encounter in all our meetings since we started with the tent last year. We had to combat the devil's lie, and his followers; yet there were a few who were interested in the truth. The son of the prominent minister of the place told his father that those men at the tent presented the Bible to the understanding of the hearer, and he (the father) had better let those men alone. We found friends to invite us to their houses, and thereby entertained the strangers; also a gentleman that owned the Opera House came to the tent, after it had been raining quite hard, thinking it would be unpleasant for meeting, and offered us the hall free at any time; but we did not use it until the last meeting after we had taken down the tent.

Thank the good Lord, we were enabled to present the message, showing by the signs that the kingdom of God is soon to come, and they that are ready will go in to the marriage. While there, we had calls to go to other places with the tent, but our arrangements were made. Bro. Darrow, of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Penn., was quite anxious to have us go to that place and hold a meeting, and we arranged to have Bro. Sweet go there, and I go to Chapmanville, Venango Co. (where we had our last tent meeting last fall), to preach the funeral discourse of Sister Delia G. Smith. We held three meetings, and baptized two souls; also Bro. Sweet baptized two at Blooming Valley. Bro. S. started for home, and to attend the yearly grove meeting at Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y.

Tuesday evening, June 30th, stopped at Ross' Mills, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and gave one discourse. July 1st, came on to Randolph, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. Found Bro. Card at the depot waiting for me, but no appointment given out, as there was a remarkable murder trial going on in R., and Bro. and Sr. C. were witnesses. O Lord, let thy kingdom come, is my prayer.

July 2nd, came on to this place. Next day put up the tent, and got it partly seated, when down came the rain. Well, thank the Lord, it was needed. Saturday evening, the 4th, commenced meeting alone, although the Baptist minister of the place came to the tent and assisted in the opening service by prayer, he having taken up his appointment at the church. On Sunday we gave the Scripture evidence of our hope. Monday evening, we showed what the gospel is, and its power. While preaching, Bro. Sweet came, and made some remarks. The truth will, we hope, gain a lodgment in the heart of some. Dear Lord, we leave it in thy hands, praying for thy blessing.

Morton's Corners, Erie Co., N. Y.

From Bro. S. Scott.

MR. EDITORS:—I now embrace a few moments to drop a few lines to you. I am very glad to learn by the Crisis that there is being raised up a people on earth who advocate the personal coming of Jesus in the clouds of heaven; also, the doctrine of holiness of heart, and other kindred subjects. For my own part, I believe in a whole and pure gospel, founded on the rock of eternal truth. I believe the God of Abraham is no respecter of persons, but he respects the person of the righteous. I have received the Crisis for several months from my sister, of Omro, Wis. I have learned much by this means.

I hear no preaching in this section, what I can call the whole truth, although I am called a Methodist. I believe the things pertaining to salvation should not be trifled with, for, as saith the Scripture, without holiness no man can see the Lord. I hope to have my lamp trimmed, and be ready very shortly.

If I had the means, I would have sent by this letter the cash as a subscriber for the Crisis. Although I am poor as to this world's wealth, I expect to be rich ere long, and with you wear the crown and also a rich wedding garment. If any brother has by him the book entitled "The Bible Doctrine of the Soul," I would like to obtain it. Perhaps you know that sometimes a few dimes as a sacrifice to Christ may in a coming day secure stars in our crown. I will pay the postage if anything is sent here for me, or act as agent in the cause. If I had the means as many around me, I would scatter the truth by the press in this section like autumn leaves.

I often think of the last great commission to the apostles to be completed and fulfilled by his church on the earth—"Go ye . . and preach." This means a work for all Christ's chosen people, and no time, no, not one moment, should be lost or vainly spent. But many sleep, yes, many are folding their arms, and saying by words and actions, Our Lord is delaying his coming; and we also know many will be crying ere long for the rocks and mountains to fall on them, and hide them from the wrath of the Lamb.

Lawler, Chickasaw Co., Iowa.

From Sr. S. E. Phipper.

I have some little news to communicate concerning the work in this part of our Master's vineyard. True, I expect many of your readers will not look for much from the borders of civilization, much less the enjoying of the wholesome influences of a true religion. Well, have it as they may.

Bro. John A. Cargile of Stevenson, Ala., and also of the Ooltawah Church, has by invitation visited Mouse Creek and Phila. Near the former place, in the neighborhood of John's River, quite a number of unseen friends and lovers of Bible truths came to meet and welcome him, whom he admonished to be always up and doing for their Master's cause. On his first visit to this place, some five months ago, the people looked upon him as an intruder; in other words, "a sheep in wolf's clothing." Quite different now. The missionary Baptists gave to him the use of their church, invited him to their homes, and paid him many respects that were strongly withheld on his former visit. Does not this indicate a healthy progress? And since Bro. C.'s debut in this place, the Bible has been read with twice the interest ever before. May Bro. C. go on with his good work, and health and strength be given him to visit us again.

Phila., Tenn., July 15th, 1874.

From Bro. J. A. Bryan.

Two or three months ago, Bro. J. J. Smith of Long Island, Ala., came into our neighborhood, and delivered a sermon on the "saints' inheritance," which awakened a great interest on the study of the Bible in relation to the Abrahamic covenant. About four weeks later he came back again, and preached here and hereabouts for over a week; and notwithstanding he preached most of the time in the open air, his congregations were large and attentive. His preaching seemed to be in the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit, and it fell with crushing weight on the popular dogmas of the day. In addition to his preaching, he has distributed a large number of tracts, together with some books and papers. People of all denominations in our country have waked up on the subject of searching the Scriptures; and what will be the end of Bro. Smith's visit I cannot say.

I should not forget to say that Bro. John A. Cargile, of Stevenson, also was with him, and preached several of the most interesting sermons that it has ever been my privilege to hear. Believing their mission a heaven-born one, and their labor one of love, I bid them God-speed onward over all opposition.

Obituaries.

LIBBEY. In Compton, P. Q., Monday, June 8th, 1874, Bro. William Pitt Libbey, aged fifty-seven years, ten months, and twenty-seven days.

Bro. Libbey was converted to God in the winter of 1866, and until the day of his death was a substantial, reliable christian man, who loved the doctrine of the soon coming of Jesus, and stood in his place in the house of God. His influence was salutary, and his example such as it was safe to follow. His words of exhortation and counsel were thrilling words, and of great importance, and showed how deeply the truth had rooted into his heart. His last sickness was short and painful, being caused by an ulcer in the stomach, which broke entirely through the coatings of it, and made his last moments those of intense agony; yet he was calm and composed, and talked of his death as one speaks of sleeping, and made all the arrangemenss necessary for his funeral; and then died, trusting in Jesus. He leaves a wife and eleven children to mourn his loss, some of whom at least are wonderfully sustained by the grace which was so "sufficient for" the husband and father in life, and in the agonies of death. The funeral services, at Bro. Libbey's request, were attended by L. C. and M. MCKINSTRY.

SHOWERS. Fell asleep in Jesus, June 26th, at Little Cooley, Crawford Co., Pa., Sister Lucinda Showers, aged nineteen years.

The deceased was taken ill last winter, while teaching school, and seemed impressed from the first that her life was short. Although a successful teacher, and ardently attached to her young companions, and the pleasures of this life, yet as soon as she got better, she renounced them all, came to the prayer-meeting, and came out the firmest young convert I ever saw. She told her sister she could hardly wait for an opportunity, so strong was her desire to be immersed in the likeness of her Savior. Again she was stricken down, and after about three months' intense suffering, she bid adieu to her weeping friends, and was laid away to sleep till Jesus comes. Sermon by the writer from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

C. N. BUZZELL.

CARR. Fell asleep in Jesus, July 10th, 1874, in Clarendon, N. Y., Mrs. Betsey Ann Carr, aged fifty-five years.

She was Eld. E. F. Sergisson's wife's mother. She leaves a kind husband and two children to mourn her loss, whose hearts are stricken, and homes bereaved; yet we are comforted with the precious promise, that all those that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. The funeral was conducted by our much beloved sister, E. S. Jennings, who spoke very timely and comforting words from Ps. 17: 15. May all the mourning friends share in his glorious likeness, when it shall be fully revealed.

"She sleeps, but not forever."

E. F. SERGISSON.

PERKINS. In West Poland, Me., Dec. 1st, 1873, Bro. Oliver Perkins, aged ninety years.

Father Perkins, through the most of this long life, was a devoted follower of Christ, and for many years waited for his release in glory. His eye of faith got fixed upon the day of restitution, and he never took it off; for long after memory was lost to earthly things, and he could not even recognize his children, he would talk consistently with God in prayer, and tell of the glories of the future state in exhortation.

His passing away was sudden, as he went to his chamber at evening, where death waited to shut down his eyelids with icy fingers, while angels of God above (it may be) whispered to each other, "So he giveth his beloved sleep."

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

WARNER. In Barkhampsted, June 22nd, 1874, Katie Warner, daughter of Curtis and Georgie Warner, aged one year the day of her burial.

Katie was fair as the lily of the valley, and bright as the blossom of the night blooming Cereus. Bro. and Sr. Warner's faith is in Jesus, who is the resurrection and the life. They believe Katie sleeps, but are comforted to know that sleep is not forever. Words were spoken by the writer from 2 Kings 4: 26. S. WOODRUFF.

MCKEAN. In Lisbon, N. H., July 4th, 1874, of consumption, Eva A. McKean, in the twenty-first year of her age.

Having lived a devoted life, her last days were peaceful, and her death most happy and triumphant. She rests in Jesus, awaiting the glorious resurrection morn. I. H. SHIPMAN.

WELLMAN. In Palmer, Mass., July 22d, 1874, Nellie Mabel Wellman, aged twelve days.

The writer was helped by God to show that death is not a friend, but an enemy; but that Christ would destroy death, and give life and immortality at his coming. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 26.

H. H. TUCKER.

HEATH. In Stewardstown, N. H., April 16th, 1874, of malignant scarlet fever and canker rash, Emery Heath, son of Laurin and Betsey A. Heath, aged nine years and eight months.

Little Emery was beloved by all who knew him. Funeral sermon by Elder Chansey. Text, Luke 18: 16. MAHALA J. COOLIDGE.

CRANE. In China, Me., July 10th, Sr. Lydia Crane, aged fifty-seven years, eight months and ten days, after a painful illness of several months, which she bore patiently.

Funeral services attended by the writer.

J. R. HALL.

MORSE. In Springville, Wis., June 22d, 1874, Wm. A. Morse, aged fifty-eight years and four months.

He died in hope of a "better resurrection." When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then he will "appear with him in glory."

ALLEN. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Dansville, N. Y., July 9th, 1874, Sr. Esther Allen, wife of Stephen Allen, aged sixty-five years.

She died as she lived, a christian, expecting to sleep but a little while. D. COGSWELL.

BEMIS. In Benton, N. H., July 8th, 1874, of putrid fever, William B., only son of Lyman and Mary J. Bemis, aged three weeks and five days.

Willie sleeps, but not forever.

LYMAN BEMIS, JR.

DANA. Fell asleep in Jesus suddenly, June 29th, 1874, in Woolwich, Me., Mr. Eben O. Dana, aged sixty-one years.

FOREIGN NEWS.

MADRID, July 25. A terrible landslide occurred at Alana, in the Province of Navarre. The overhanging rocks fell upon and utterly destroyed the village. The disaster was so sudden that few of the inhabitants escaped. Two hundred corpses have already been recovered.

Forty-one Carlists, most of them members of the nobility, have been arrested, by way of reprisal, against the inhuman conduct of the Carlists.

THE POPE AN EX-MASON.—His Holiness Expelled from the Order. The reasons therefore, and all about it.—At the semi-annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons, Scottish Rite of the Orient, of Palermo, Italy, on the 27th of March last, Pope Pius IX. was expelled from the Order. The decree of expulsion was published in the official Masonic paper at Cologne, Germany, and is preceded by the minutes of the lodge in which he was initiated, and is as follows:

"A man named Mastai Ferretti, who received the baptism of Freemasonry, and solemnly pledged his love and fellowship, and who afterward was crowned Pope and King, under the title of Pio Nono, has now cursed his former brethren, and excommunicated all members of the Order of Freemasons. Therefore, said Mastai Ferretti is herewith, by decree of the Grand Lodge of the Orient, Palermo, expelled from the Order for perjury."

The charges against him were first preferred at his lodge at Palermo, in 1865, and notification and copy thereof sent to him, with a request to attend the lodge for the purpose of answering the same. To this he made no reply, and, for divers reasons, the charges were not pressed until he urged the Bishops of Brazil to act aggressively towards the Freemasons. Then they were pressed, and, after a regular trial, a decree of expulsion was entered and published, the same being signed by Victor Emanuel, King of Italy, and Grand Master of the Orient of Italy.—Voice of Masonry.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

A Terrible Water Spout.

San Francisco, July 25. A dispatch from Eureka, Nevada, says that a terrible water spout burst in the mountains yesterday and swept through the town, killing twenty persons, and causing great destruction of property.

A section foreman was run over and lost both legs. The track is so badly injured that trains cannot get through to-day.

Wells, Nevada, July 25. About thirty feet of the Pacific Railroad track was washed out by the bursting of a rain cloud, twenty-eight miles east of this place yesterday.

The eastern bound express train is detained. A train with workmen has passed to repair damage and the anxious passengers are waiting their progress.

LATER.

A dispatch from Eureka, Nevada, gives particulars of the storm yesterday. It had been raining with great violence from early morning till noon, when the cloud burst on a lofty range of mountains to the eastward, and a vast volume of water rushed down the canyon, where the town is located. The eastern part of the town was flooded in ten minutes by a fearful rush of water, which constantly increased in violence, depth and impetuosity. The people in that portion were hemmed in, and every moment the houses were torn from their foundations and swept away with the occupants. Ropes were procured and a line formed. Brave men, thus protected, dashed into the torrent and saved many lives. Only a few women and children were lost. The body of Mrs. Brady was recovered. Rodger Babinett, reporter of the Sentinel, is among the drowned. The Sentinel office was swept away. The bodies are being brought to the Court House as soon as recovered. Three Chinamen were lost. Thirty houses were swept away, and all that part of the town containing the dance houses and other places of amusement is gone. The flood lasted only half an hour. The total loss of life is not yet known, but it is believed that it will reach twenty-five or thirty persons. The weather is still threatening.

LATEST.

San Francisco, July 25. Private dispatches from Eureka state that fourteen dead bodies have been recovered. The loss by the flood is over one hundred thousand.

A water spout burst near Carson City, Nev. this afternoon, causing great destruction of property. No lives lost.

July 26. A dispatch from Eureka to-night says that the loss by the flood is $150,000. The Eureka Consolidated Mining Company's loss is $200,000. The company will have to shut down their furnaces. Several more bodies have been recovered and a number of persons are still missing.

Notices.

☞ NOTICE is hereby given that the Alton Bay Campmeeting Association will meet at Alton Bay camp-ground, FRIDAY, AUG. 21st, 1874, at two o'clock P. M., to transact business authorized by an act of incorporation passed June 26th, 1874.

COMMITTEE: J. Couch, J. G. Smith, J. D. Swain, T. H. Ford, Benj. Young, H. K. Choate, J. W. C. Pickering.

ALTON BAY.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. COUCH, for Com.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced. H. F. C., for Com.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. MITCHELL, for Com.

THE campmeeting located at Coventry Centre, R. I., will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

EDWIN BURNHAM will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer. E. BURNHAM.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—"For the Needy"—A Brother, $10.00. GEO. T. ADAMS.

DEDICATION.—The new chapel in North Rutland will be dedicated Sunday, Aug. 2nd. The brethren and sisters are cordially invited to come. Bro. T. M. Preble will deliver the discourse. Morning service and preliminaries to commence at half past ten in the morning. Baptism at noon, dedication sermon at two, Lord's supper and prayer and conference meeting at five. Those who come on Saturday, to stay over night, should take cars from Worcester at five o'clock, and stop at Princeton station. Then take Wellington's express for North Rutland, as the express from the station does not run but once a day. Those who come on any other train must notify H. V. Moulton, so a conveyance can be made from the depot. We invite you all to our homes, to our meeting, to our feast of fat things, in the name of the Lord. For the church, H. V. MOULTON, North Rutland, Mass.

Pittsfield Me. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting for the eastern part of Maine will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year, in Hathorn's grove at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th. The grove has been much improved by clearing, grading, and deepening wells. It is expected that all who can will put up tents for themselves, and furnish plenty of bedding and food. The Maine Mission Tent will be on hand, and will afford lodging for those who cannot put up tents for themselves; but all must provide bedding for themselves. Be prepared for cold storms. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent. Breakfast and supper, 25 cents each; dinner, 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when dinner will be fifty cents. Also horse keeping, hay, straw and board, will be provided on the ground for all who wish, at reasonable rates. The committee will do their best to obtain reduction of railroad fare, and give timely notice.

COMMITTEE: Jer. Carr, F. A. Baker, S. K. Partridge, Oren S. French, J. M. Tozier, Oscar Farnum, M. W. Corliss, G. L. McKenney, William Clark, Abner Millet.

PORTLAND AND OGDENSBURG R. R.—Persons intending to pass over this railroad to the Mechanic Falls Campmeeting, can secure a return pass free of charge by dropping me a line, stating from what station they are to start.

C. H. SWEET, Steep Falls, Me.

THE IOWA GENERAL UNION CONFERENCE AND CAMPMEETING will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonables rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding. J. RIDLEY, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting. J. R.

IOWA CAMPMEETING.—There will be a campmeeting in Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, beginning Aug. 28th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, also groceries for those who desire to board themselves, also feed for horses. Help from abroad is expected as the Lord may direct.

For the Committee, J. RIDLEY.

NEW PRESTON TENT MEETING.—We expect to have a tent meeting in New Preston, commencing Sept. 1st or 2d. We want the brethren and sisters to bear this in mind and come, all who can. Full notice hereafter. H. J. BALDWIN.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting in Albany, N. H., in Geo. W. Bennett's grove, Sunday. Aug. 2d, if fair; if not, in the Bell school-house. S. BRAGG.

BARN MEETING.—There will be a meeting in B. W. Moony's barn, near the neck road, Moultonborough, N. H., Saturday, Aug. 8th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. S. BRAGG.

FOR SALE.—Tent 148 Alton Bay camp-ground is for sale. It has accommodations for six or eight persons, having a cook house or L connected, with stove, etc. Price $100. This tent has a front view on Lake Avenue, overlooking the Bay, steamboat and railroad landings, within five rods of the boarding tent. Inquire on the ground of Bro. T. E. Wood, or of H. K. Choate, Augusta, Me.

IF any of the Canada brethren wish my labor in the gospel, they can address me at Highland Creek, Ontario. I have obtained my license, and am now ready to work wherever the Lord sends me. L. C. KERR.

TAKE NOTICE.—Those living in the southwestern district of Wisconsin A. C. conference, wishing quarterly meetings held with them, will please correspond with the writer at Arena, Iowa Co., Wis. The first one is past, the third one is engaged. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing

Saturday, August 8th,

and continuing till the 17th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced, and will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Westboro, Worcester, and the stations to Springfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the New York, New Haven, and Hartford R. Road, we are very sorry to say, that no reduction of fare can be obtained for this year.

On the Connecticut R. R. fare is reduced from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Central Vermont, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vermont Valley Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a CAMPMEETING ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—provided twenty-five or more shall have come over the line operated by the Vt. C., of which we think there is little or no doubt—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Central Vermont Railroad.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Springfield, Athol, and North Eastern Railroad fare is reduced one-half.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R., Campmeeting Tickets will be sold at Nashua, Ayer Junction, Clinton, and Sterling Junction. Be sure and call for Campmeeting Tickets, as no passes will be given out this year.

Fare is reduced on the Fitchburg R. R. via. Springfield, Athol, and N. Eastern R. R. from Boston and all the intermediate stations, including Fitchburg to Springfield.

Buy regular tickets for Springfield, and the Secretary at camp-ground will furnish you with a free return pass.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

From New York via. New Haven Steamers. Fare reduced on this route so that friends can come from New York and return for $5.25.

Pay the regular fare, $3.00 from New York to Springfield, and if you wish to return back the same way, call for a return ticket from New Haven to New York, on the boat, which will be furnished for 50 cents, this ticket to be endorsed on the camp-ground by the Secretary.

As they sell R. R. tickets on the boat only to Springfield, on your return you will have to buy a ticket at the depot in Springfield for New Haven, which, with the return ticket from New Haven to New York, obtained on the boat previously, will take you to New York.

Boat leaves Peck slip at 3 P. M. 23d street E. R., at 3.15 P. M., connecting with steamboat train for Springfield. Also at 11 P. M.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 10 A. M., and at 3, 4, 5, and 9 P. M.

Advent Christian Association.

At a meeting of the A. C. A., in Boston, July 10th, it was decided that the next annual meeting of this body will be held at Springfield camp-ground, commencing Aug. 10th, at 4 o'clock P. M. Business of special importance will be transacted at this meeting, and every church is requested to send delegates qualified to represent their wants and feelings. Every church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary pro. tem.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held on the National Advent camp-ground, Springfield, Mass., commencing Wednesday, Aug. 12th, at 4 o'clock P. M.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association, are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should shnd a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W. SMITH, President.
C. C. MARSTON, Sec.

A. C. Times, please copy.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.—The annual meeting and annual campmeeting of the Advent Christian Conference, of Michigan, will be held at Mosherville, on the Fort Wayne, Jackson, and Saginaw R. R., about nine miles north of Jonesville, and fifteen miles south of Jackson, Aug. 1st to 8th inclusive. The grounds are about forty rods from station, beautifully located, and every thing convenient. Inquire for Bro. Samuel Emery and Day Conklin. It is expected to obtain half fare on F. W. and S. R. R. All trains stop at Mosherville. Let this be the best of all our meetings.

J. R. PRESTON,
A. E. BABCOCK,
J. M. SNOOK,
Committee.

CAMPMEETING.—Providence permitting, the fourth annual campmeeting of the Life and Advent Union will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, situated about one and a quarter miles from railroad depot, on land of L. Carew, commencing Aug. 1st, and continuing till Aug. 10th. Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the boarding house on the ground. Board 80 cents per day. Fare on the railroads will be reduced from July 27th to Aug. 26th inclusive. The nature of man, prophecy, holiness, coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, together with other subjects, will be presented. All are cordially invited.

T. R. WEAVER, Secretary.

KANSAS.—Notice is hereby given that the Kansas Mission Tent will be pitched at Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas, August 27th, if the Lord will. Services will commence at eight o'clock P. M., and continue over two Sundays. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come; and let us work for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. Come one, come all.

R. F. CLARK, Sec. Adv. Chris. Conf., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

THE first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wisconsin A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Big Creek, commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, to hold over the Lord's day. We expect a number of the preaching brethren to be present to assist in preaching the word.

E. P. GRAVES.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing

Saturday, August 22nd,

and continue over the Sabbath, AUG. 30th. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 85 cents per day. Single meals—breakfast or supper—35 cts. Dinner 50 cts. Horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cts. per day.

BOSTON AND MAINE R. R. The meeting being located on this road, we rely chiefly on its management for conveyance. The superintendent has made an extra effort to meet the demands of the meeting, and the convenience of those attending, in arranging with lines connecting, so there may be no delay on the part of this road in conveyance. Fare reduced on this road and its branches from August 12th to Sept. 5th.

Purchase campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay at the ticket office at Boston, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Leave Boston at 8.15 A. M., 12 M., 3.30 P. M.
" Portland, 6.15 A. M., 9.10 A. M., 3.15 P. M.
" Rochester, 11.23 A. M., 3.23 P. M., 6.50 P. M.
" Newburyport, 7.30 A. M., 2.40 P. M.

Bangor and Machias line of steamboats will run their boats in connection with the Boston and Maine R. R. at half rate of fare. Superintendent Furber has consented to run an extra train from Portland to Alton Bay on Wednesday, Aug. 19th, Friday 21st, and Monday 24th, leaving Portland on the arrival of the boats. We would recommend this route, as you can reach the ground the same day without delay, and make sure connection. Tickets sold at Bangor, Winterport, Bucksport, Sandy Point, Searsport, Belfast, Camden, and Rockland, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

NORTHERN CONCORD AND CLAREMONT, N. H., R. R. Tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting via. New Market Junction, can be procured of the conductors on the Northern and Concord and Claremont R. R. at reduced rates, good to go and return. Notice that the tickets must be purchased of the conductors, and not of the station agents. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

CONCORD RAILROAD AND ITS BRANCHES. Call for Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets, to be procured at the following stations: Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Manchester, Nashua, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, and Portsmouth.

For the better accommodation of those who attend the meeting from Portsmouth and adjoining towns, a train will be run through the week of the meeting direct from Portsmouth and intermediate stations to Alton Bay, with baggage car attached. Baggage will be checked through via. New Market Junction. By this route you will save the expense and inconvenience of transporting baggage from one depot to the other in Dover; also have the benefit of the reduction of fare, as this road has (for our accommodation) made this arrangement. We would recommend this conveyance. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

GRAND TRUNK. From Lewiston and Auburn via. Grand Trunk, connecting at Portland with Boston and Maine, purchase Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay, and have baggage checked through. By this line fare will be reduced to half rate, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

PORTLAND AND ROCHESTER R. R. Leave Portland at 4.15 P. M., to connect at Rochester with Boston and Maine, fare one way. Fare reduced from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

MAINE CENTRAL. Tickets will be sold at reduced rates at the following stations: Bangor, Newport, Belfast, Augusta, Hallowell, Gardiner, Richmond, Brunswick, Lewiston, Bath, to Rochester, N. H. via. Conway Junction. All baggage will be checked to Rochester, N. H. Change cars at this place, taking the cars for Alton Bay on the Boston and Maine. Have your baggage rechecked at this station for camp-ground at Alton Bay. No tickets will be sold on this road by conductors, or at any other stations than those named above, unless due notice is given. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

CONN. AND PASSUMPSIC R. R. On this road you will procure tickets only to Wells River. Return passes will be furnished at the meeting for this road at said Junction. Purchase tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting at reduced rates, from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

BOSTON AND ALBANY. Tickets sold at the following stations: Natick, Westboro, Worcester, Palmer and Springfield, via. Boston and Maine, to Alton Bay Campmeeting. Fare reduced one third to Boston. $4.70 for the round trip from Worcester; $6.70 from Springfield to Alton Bay. Return passes will be given at the meeting by J. D. Swain. Good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

We have endeavored to secure, for the accommodation of all who may attend this meeting, the best Rail Road arrangements possible; and it is now very important that the following directions be observed: You will notice that the arrangements of the several Rail Roads differ very much in regard to procuring tickets and checking baggage. In every case call for tickets for

as there are other meetings at the same time of ours. See that you have your baggage properly checked, as advertised by the road over which you pass.

Further particulars may be expected.

KANSAS CAMPMEETING.—The Southern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Topeka, Shawnee Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 13th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been apppointed as committee of arrangements, and are expected to be on the ground the day appointed to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: A. S. Covey, Chairman, Ployboy, Shawnee Co.; J. H. Peak, Mont Cenis, Dick. Co.; Orson Lewis, No. Lawrence, Douglas Co.; C. Crowell, Pleasanton, Lim. Co.; Levi R. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co. Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Bring your baskets well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. R. F. CLARK, Sec., Peach Creek, Wash. Co., Kansas.

ALTON BAY.—We wish to sell our house and furniture, at much less than cost, built last year; first house north of McKinstry and Wallace tent. Price $44. Inquire of Wm Hawkes, 74 Meridian St., East Boston, or Jasper Stone, on the ground.

Special Notice.

Our History of the Second Advent Message and Mission is now in the hands of the binders, and is to be ready for delivery at the Springfield Campmeeting, and those that follow. As only a limited number can be bound so soon, we hope all who have subscribed and can take them at the campmeetings, or send by friends who will attend to getting them, will do so as early as they can. Others who design to have the book will be supplied if we can do so. All will see the propriety of this when we say, that the postage is about forty cts. on each copy. (We cannot say exactly how much the book will weigh.) All this will be saved by taking them at campmeetings.

All who have subscribed will have them at the prices agreed on, although it is much less than the cost of the book, as we intend to keep covenants. Such will be gainers. Some will want to pay all the book costs when they see it.

We have added over one thousand dollars to the expense above our original design. We might have left out much of this expense on those to subscribers, and kept our covenant, but we preferred to act the generous part, and allow others to do so. The book contains 710 pages of matter, besides 22 portraits, beautifully bound, and on excellent paper. The price will be $3.50 to all who have not subscribed, and 40 cts. postage. The symbols of Daniel are given with fine wood cuts, prepared expressly for the book. Our binder says it ought to sell for $5.00. He showed me a class of books with less work in them, which sell for that price. But we wish the story to go as far and as cheap as possible.

We have done all we could to make it a work that believers will have, and that inquirers will think best to have.

All subscribers who can take them at Alton Bay, Bethel, Vt., Pittsfield, and Mechanic Falls, will be gainers to do so, and all who can buy them at those meetings. We hope to be able to send out by mail to all, as fast as ordered, after Aug. 15th, except perhaps a few days delay while at the campmeetings.

Send your orders plainly written—name, town, and State, and enclose the amount, to secure the book. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

CAST ALL YOUR CARE.

"Cast all thy care." What precious words!
So full of Jesus' tenderest love,
To draw thy heart like silken cords,
To his dear self in heaven above.

"Cast all thy care." Yes, every care;
And though thou thinkest some but small,
Just cast them all; be sure he bare
The small ones when he bare them all.

"Cast all thy care." E'en every thought
That would disturb thy peace of mind;
If once they're to the Savior brought,
Instant relief thou'rt sure to find.

"Cast all thy care" Why should'st thou try
A task of hopeless agony?
"'Tis finished," was the Victor's cry,
When that same load was borne for thee.

"Cast all thy care." Canst thou not see
Trat there exists no other way?
O, come to him, and ask that he
May give thee grace by faith to see.

Lord Jesus! now to thee I come,
Before thy wounded feet to fall,
To find in thee my peaceful home,
My only Lord, my rest, my all."

—Advocate and Guardian.

THE DEAD—WHERE ARE THEY?

When the last trump shall sound, the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we [the living] shall be changed." The dead sleep in the grave, because they are all in one place." All go to one place, all are of the dust, and all return to dust again. Eccl. 3: 20. This "one place" is in the dust. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 19. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. 12: 82. "Thou hast brought me into the dust of death." Ps. 22: 15. "For now shall I sleep in the dust," etc. Job 7: 21. It will be plainly seen from the foregoing and their connections, that the Bible historians and prophets recognized sleep in the dust as the true state of man after death. Job further says, "If I wait, the grave is mine house." Job 17: 13. Job, with his prophetic power, born of inspiration, evidently looked far into the future, and with his clear perception, saw the future state of man in the interval between death and judgment. And if the old prophets had power to foretell events of history, and the fate of nations, why should not the same power reveal to them the condition of the soul after death? Bible historians also recognized this state of sleep, and frequently applied the term to the dead. It is used in nearly every account of the death of Israel's kings. For instance, "And David slept with his fathers." Paul concurs with the historian, when he says, "For David is not ascended into the heavens," etc. Acts 11: 34.

Sleep, then, as a universal term, applies to man, as death does to the material body. In the creation God made the body subject to certain laws. These laws are universal; that is, every natural system is subject to them. So man is just as much subject to common principles as the body is to natural laws. This point of universal sleep for the soul, while the body decays, may be illustrated as follows. It is known that many plants flourish and grow through the summer, when the stalk and root alike flourish. When one ceases to grow, the growth of the other ceases also. Winter comes, and the stalk dies and decays; but the root does not die; neither does it grow, but remains in a state of inactivity through the long winter. It simply exists. When spring comes, it infuses into the root the elements of life, and causes the stalk to spring forth again, and both thrive together. But spring does not give this root new life; it simply awakens the life in it from its state of inactivity, and with new power causes it to spring forth; and this is exactly the way the soul sleeps, and is awakened at the resurrection.

There is a perfect harmony existing between nature and man, and one has only as it were, to strike the key-note to this connected and beautiful harmony that runs all through the Bible, nature and man, to see how perfectly every part is planned and executed. Though we may sometimes strike what seem to our unskilled ear to be dis cords, yet when they are perfectly comprehended, they become simply "minors," and perfect parts of the perfect whole. As the life of the plant sleeps with the dust of its decayed stalk, so the soul sleeps with the dust of its decayed "outward form." When the spring comes that is to herald the beginning of endless summer, the soul awakens and sends forth a new spiritual body, and rises from its long sleep to heaven, never more to sleep. Such deviation as this from strict Calvinistic doctrine strikes as harshly on the ear that is unused to it, as minor chords do upon the ear of persons unaccustomed to them; but they are a part of the great perfected plan that God made, and when perfectly understood, become as minors to a person who studies them, and acquires their true meaning—beautifully sweet and melodious. But as we are simply learners, we cannot expect to read at a glance all the works of the great "Master Artist," for they are often written in characters new and strange to us, and only patient study will reveal their true beauty.

The soul sleeps: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Thou shalt sleep with thy fathers." Deut. 31: 16. Again, God commanded Moses to "die in the mountain whither thou goest up." Deut. 32: 50. This serves to show the analogy between death and sleep. "And when thy days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee." 2 Sam. 7: 12. This was a promise of God to David, and he is grateful to him and prays in the 28th verse of the same chapter,—"And now, O Lord God, thou art that God, and thy words are true, and thou hast promised this goodness unto thy servant." David calls this promise a "goodness," and the sleep promised, he recognises as a part of this goodness.

The following references prove that sleep is the state of the dead, as recognized by New Testament writers: "And the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." Matt. 25: 52, 53. This was one of the circumstances attending the resurrection of Christ, and is strong proof in favor of the doctrine of sleep. "And they stoned Stephen," etc. "And he kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Acts 8: 59, 60. "For David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell asleep." Acts 13: 36. "After that he [Christ after his resurrection] was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this day; but some are fallen asleep." Acts 13: 36. "Then they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. 15: 6, 18, 20. "Who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." 1 Thess. 5: 10. "For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the creation," etc. 2 Peter 3: 4. There are others equally strong in the New Testament, but these are sufficient on this point.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.

BY ADAM CLARKE.

(Concluded.)

The reader is probably amazed at the paucity of large stars in the whole firmament of heaven. Will he permit me to carry his mind a little farther, and either stand astonished at, or deplore with me the fact that, out of the millions of christians in the vicinity and splendor of the eternal Sun of righteousness, how very few can stand examination by the test laid down in 1 Cor. 13? How very few love God with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbors as themselves! How few mature christians are found in the church! How few are, in all things, living for eternity! How little light, how little heat, and how little influence and activity, are to be found among them that bear the name of Christ! How few stars of the first magnitude will the Son of God have to deck the crown of his glory! Few are striving to excel in righteousness; and it seems to be a principal concern with many, to find out how little grace they may have, and yet escape hell; how little conformity to the will of God they may have, and yet get to heaven. In the fear of God I register this testimony, that I have perceived it to be the labor of many to lower the standard of christianity, and to soften down, or explain away, those promises of God that himself has linked with duties; and, because they know they cannot be saved by their good works at all; and thus the necessity of christian obedience, and christian holiness, makes no prominent part of some modern crees. Let all those who retain the apostolic doctrine, that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin in this life, press every believer to go on to perfection, and expect to be saved, while here below, into the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Jesus. To all such my soul says, Labor to show yourselves approved unto God; workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth; and may the pleasure of the Lord prosper in your hands! Amen.

Many employ that time in brooding and mourning over their impure hearts, which should be spent in prayer and faith before God, that their impurities might be washed away. In what a state of nonage are many members of the Christian church!

I am afraid that what some persons call their infirmities may rather be called their strengths; the prevailing and frequently ruling power of pride, anger, ill-will, etc.; for how few think evil tempers to be sins! The gentle term "infirmity" softens down the iniquity; and as St. Paul, so great and so holy a man, say they, had his infirmities, how can they expect to be without theirs? These should know that they are in a dangerous error; that St. Paul means nothing of the kind; for he speaks of his sufferings, and of these alone. One word more: would not the grace and power of Christ appear more conspicuous in slaying the lion than in keeping him chained? in destroying sin, root and branch, and filling the soul with his own holiness, with love to God and man, with the mind, all the holy, heavenly tempers that were in himself, than in leaving these impure and unholy tempers ever to live, and often to reign, in the heart? The doctrine is discreditable to the gospel, and wholly antichristian.

"If they sin against thee, for there is no man that sinneth not," 1 Kings 8: 46. On this verse we may observe that the second clause, as it is here translated, renders the supposition in the first clause entirely nugatory; for if there be no man that sinneth not, it is useless to say, "If they sin;" but this contradiction is taken away by reference to the original, which should be translated, "If they shall sin against thee;" or, "Should they sin against thee; for there is no man that may not sin;" that is, There is no man impeccable; none infallible; none that is not liable to transgress. This is the true meaning of the phrase in various parts of the Bible, and so our translators have understood the original; for, even in the thirty-first verse of this chapter, they have translated yecheta, "If a man trespass;" which certainly implies he might or might not do it; and in this way they have translated the same word, "If a soul sin," in Lev. 5: 1; 6: 2; 1 Sam, 2: 25; 2 Chron. 6; 22; and in several other places. The truth is, the Hebrew has no mood to express words in the permissive or optative way; but to express this sense, it uses the future tense of the conjugation kal.

This text has been a wonderful stronghold for all who believe that there is no redemption from sin in this life; that no man can live without committing sin; and that we cannot be entirely freed from it till we die. 1. The text speaks no such doctrine; it only speaks of the possibility of every man sinning; and this must be true of a state of probation. 2. There is not another text in the divine records that is more to the purpose than this. 3. The doctrine is flatly in opposition to the design of the gospel; for Jesus came to save his people from their sins, and to destroy the works of the devil. 4. It is a dangerous and destructive doctrine, and should be blotted out of every christian's creed. There are too many who are seeking to excuse their crimes by all means in their power; and we need not embody their excuses in a creed to complete their deception by stating that their sins are unavoidable.

The soul was made for God, and can never be united to him, nor be happy, till saved from sin. He who is saved from his sin, and united to God, possesses the utmost felicity that the human soul can enjoy, either in this or the coming world.

Where a soul is saved from all sin, it is capable of being fully employed in the work of the Lord; it is then, and not till then, fully fitted for the Master's use.

All who are taught of Christ are not only saved, but their understandings are much improved. True religion, civilization, mental improvement, common sense, and orderly behavior, go hand in hand.

When the light of Christ dwells fully in the heart, it extends its influence to every thought, word, and action; and directs its possessor how he is to act in all places and circumstances.

Our souls can never be truly happy till our wills be entirely subjected to, and become one with, the will of God.

While there is an empty, longing heart, there is a continual overflowing fountain of salvation. If we find, in any place, or at any time, that the oil ceases to flow, it is because there are no empty vessels there; no souls hungering and thirsting for righteousness. We find fault with the dispensations of God's mercy, and ask, "Why were the former days better than these?" Were we as much in earnest for our salvation as our forefathers were for theirs, we should have equal supplies, and as much reason to sing aloud of divine mercy.

"Be ye holy," saith the Lord, "for I am holy." He who can give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness is one who loves holiness; one who hates sin; who longs to be saved from it, and takes encouragement at the recollection of God's holiness, as he seeth in this the holy nature which he is to share; and the perfection which he is here to attain. But many who call themselves christians hate the doctrine of holiness; never hear it inculcated without pain; and the principal part of their studies and those of their pastors, is to find out with how little holiness they can rationally expect to enter into the kingdom of heaven. O fatal and soul-destroying delusion! How long will a holy God suffer such abominable doctrines to pollute his church, and destroy the souls of men.

Increase in the image and favor of God. Every grace and divine influence which ye have received is a seed, a heavenly seed, which, if it be watered with the dew of heaven from above, will endlessly increase and multiply itself. He who continues to believe, love, and obey, will grow in grace, and continually increase in the knowledge of Jesus Christ, as his Sacrifice, Sanctifier, Counsellor, Preserver, and final Savior. The life of a christian is a growth; he is at first born of God, and is a little child; becomes a young man and a father in Christ. Every father was once an infant; and had he not grown, he would never have been a man. Those who content themselves with the grace they received when converted to God, are, at best, in a continual state of infancy; but we find, in the order of nature, that the infant that does not grow, and grow daily too, is sickly, and soon dies; so, in the order of grace, those who do not grow up into Jesus Christ are sickly and will soon die—die to all sense and influence of heavenly things. There are many who boast of the grace of their conversion; persons who were never more than babes, and have long since lost even that grace, because they did not grow in it. Let him that readeth understand.

In order to get a clean heart, a man must know and feel its depravity, acknowledge and deplore it before God, in order to be fully sanctified. Few are pardoned, because they do not feel and confess their sins; and few are sanctified and cleansed from all sin, because they do not feel and confess their own sore and the plague of their hearts. As the blood of Jesus Christ, the merit of his passion and death, applied by faith, purges the conscience from all dead works, so the same cleanses the heart from all unrighteousness. As all unrighteousness is sin, so he that is cleansed from all unrighteousness is cleansed from all sin.

To attempt to evade this, and plead for the continuance of sin in the heart through life, is ungrateful, wicked, and blasphemous; for, as he who says he has not sinned, makes God a liar, who has declared the contrary through every part of his revelation, so he that says the blood of Christ either cannot or will not cleanse us from all sin in this life gives also the lie to his Maker, who has declared the contrary, and thus shows that the word, the doctrine of God, is not [illegible] him. Reader, it is the birthright of every child of God to be cleansed from all sin, to keep himself unspotted from the world, and so to live as never more to offend his Maker. All things are possible to him that believeth, because all things are possible to the infinitely meritorious blood and energetic Spirit of the Lord Jesus.

Every man whose heart is full of the love of God is full of humility; for there is no man so humble as he whose heart is cleansed from all sin. It has been said that indwelling sin humbles us; never was there a greater falsity; pride is the very essence of sin; he who has sin has pride; and pride, too, in proportion to his sin; this is a mere popish doctrine; and, strange to tell, the doctrine on which their doctrine of merit is founded! They say, God leaves concupiscence in the heart of every christian, that, in striving with and overcoming it from time to time, he may have an accumulation of meritorious acts. Certain Protestants say, "It is a true sign of a very gracious state when a man feels and deplores his inbred corruption." How near do these come to the Papists, whose doctrine they profess to detest and abhor! The truth is, it is no sign of grace whatever; it only argues, as they use it that the man has got light to show him his corruptions, but he has not yet got grace to destroy them. He is convinced that he should have the mind of Christ, but he feels that he has the mind of Satan; he deplores it; and, if his bad doctrine do not prevent him, he will not rest till he feels the blood of Christ cleansing him from all sin.

Can any man expect to be saved from his inward sin in the other world? None, except such as hold the popish, antiscriptural doctrine of purgatory. "But this deliverance is expected at death." Where is the promise that it shall then be given? There is not one such in the whole Bible! And to believe for a thing essential to our glorification, without any promise to support that faith in reference to the point on which it is exercised, is a desperation that argues as well the absence of true faith as it does of right reason. Multitudes of such persons are continually deploring their want of faith, even where they have the clearest and most explicit promises; and yet, strange to tell, risk their salvation at the hour of death on a deliverance that is nowhere promised in the sacred oracles!

"But who has got this blessing?" Every one who has come to God in the right way for it. "Where is such a one?" Seek the blessing as you should do, and you will soon be able to answer the question. "But it is too great a blessing to be expected." Nothing is too great for a believer to expect, which God has promised, and Christ has purchased with his blood. "If I had such a blessing, I should not be able to retain." All things are possible to him that believeth. Besides, like all other gifts of God, it comes with a principle of preservation with it; "and upon all thy glory shall there be a defence." "Still such an unfaithful person as I cannot expect it." Perhaps the infidelity you deplore came through the want of this blessing; and as to worthlessness, no soul under heaven deserves the least of God's mercies. It is not for thy worthiness that he has given thee anything, but for the sake of his Son. You can say, "When I felt myself a sinner, sinking into perdition, I did then flee to the atoning blood, and found pardon; but this sanctification is a far greater work." No; speaking after the manner of men, justification is far greater than sanctification. When thou wert a sinner, ungodly, an enemy in thy mind, by wicked works, a child of the devil, an heir of hell, God pardoned thee on thy casting thy soul on the merit of the great sacrificial Offering; thy sentence was reversed, thy state was changed, thou wert put among the children, and God's Spirit witnessed with thine that thou wert his child. What a change! and what a blessing!

What then is this complete sanctification? It is the cleansing of the blood that has not been cleansed; it is washing the soul of a true believer from the remains of sin; it is the making one, who is already a child of God, more holy, that he may be more happy, more useful in the world, and bring more glory to his heavenly Father. Great as this work is, how little, humanly speaking, is it when compared with what God has already done for thee! But suppose it were ten thousand times greater, is anything too hard for God? Are not all things possible to him that believes? And does not the blood of Christ cleanse from all unrighteousness? Arise, then, and be baptized with a greater effusion of the Holy Ghost, and wash away thy sin, calling on the name of the Lord.

Art thou weary of that carnal mind which is enmity to God? Canst thou be happy while thou art unholy? Dost thou know anything of God's love to thee? Dost thou not know that he has given his Son to die for thee? Dost thou love him in return for his love? Hast thou even a little love to him? And canst thou love him a little, without desiring to love him more? Dost thou not feel that thy happiness grows in proportion to thy love and subjection to him? Dost thou not wish to be happy? And dost thou not know that holiness and happiness are as inseparable as sin and misery? Canst thou have too much happiness or too much holiness? Canst thou be made holy and happy too soon? Art thou not weary of a sinful heart? Are not thy bad tempers, peevishness, fretfulness, covetousness, and the various unholy passions that too often agitate thy soul, a source of misery and woe to thee? And canst thou be unwilling to have them destroyed? Arise, then, and shake thyself from the dust, and call upon thy God! His ear is not heavy that it cannot hear; his hand is not shortened that it cannot save. Behold, now is the accepted time! Now is the day of salvation!

It was necessary that Jesus Christ should die for thee, that thou mightest be saved; but he gave up his live for thee eighteen hundred years ago, and himself invites thee to come, for all things are now ready. Such is the nature of God that he cannot be more willing to save thee in any future time than he is now. He wills that thou shouldst love him now with all thy heart; but he knows that thou canst not thus love him till the enmity of the carnal mind is removed; and this he is willing this moment to destroy. The power of the Lord is therefore present to heal. Turn from every sin; give up every idol; cut off every right hand; pluck out every right eye. Be willing to part with thy enemies that thou mayest receive thy chief friend. The day is far spent, the night is at hand, the grave is ready for thee, and here thou hast no abiding city. A month, a week, a day, an hour, yea, even a moment may send thee into eternity. And if thou die in thy sins, where God is thou shalt never come. Do not expect redemption in death; it can do nothing for thee even under the best consideration; it is thy last enemy. Remember then that nothing but the blood of Jesus can cleanse thee from all unrighteousness. Lay hold, therefore, on the hope that is set before thee. The gate may appear strait; but strive, and thou shalt pass through. "Come unto me," says Jesus. Hear his voice, believe at all risks, and struggle into God. Amen and Amen.

In no part of the Scriptures are we directed to seek holiness gradually. We are come to God as well for an instantaneous and complete purification from all sin, as for an instantaneous pardon. Neither the seriatim pardon, nor the gradatim purification, exists in the Bible. It is when the soul is purified from all sin that it can properly grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ; as the field may be expected to produce a flood crop, and all the seed vegetate, when the thorns, bristles, briers, and noxious weeds of every kind are grubbed out of it.

From every view of the subject, it appears that the blessing of a clean heart, and the happiness consequent on it, may be obtained in this life; because here, not in the future world, are we to be saved. Whenever, therefore, such blessings are offered, they may be received; but all the graces and blessings of the gospel are offered at all times; and when they are offered, they may be received. Every sinner is exhorted to turn from the evil of his way, to repent of sin, and supplicate the throne of grace for pardon. He does not receive the exhortation to repentance to-day that he may become penitent at some future time. Every penitent is exhorted to believe on the Lord Jesus, that he may receive remission of sins: he does not, he cannot understand that the blessing thus promised is not to be received to-day, but at some future time.

In like manner, to every believer the new heart and the right spirit are offered in the present moment; that they may in that moment be received. For as the work of cleansing and renewing the heart is the work of God, his almighty power can perform it in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. And as it is this moment our duty to love God with all our heart, and we cannot do do this till he cleanse our hearts, consequently he is ready to do it this moment, because he wills that we should in this moment love him. Therefore we may justly say, "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." He, who in the beginning caused light in a moment to shine out of darkness, can in a moment shine into our hearts, and give us to see the light of his glory in the face of Jesus Christ. This moment, therefore, we may be emptied of sin, filled with holiness, and become truly happy.

Such cleansed people never forget the horrible pit and miry clay out of which they have been brought. And can they then be proud? No! they loathe themselves in their own sight. They can never forgive themselves for having sinned against so good a God and so loving a Savior. And can they undervalue him by whose blood they were bought, and by whose blood they were cleansed? No! That is impossible: they now see Jesus as they ought to see him; they see him in his splendor, because they feel him in his victory and triumph over sin. To them that thus believe he is precious; and he was never so precious as now. As to their not needing him when thus saved from their sins, we may as well say, as soon may the creation not need the sustaining hand of God, because the works are finished! Learn this, that as it requires the same power to sustain creation as to produce it; so it requires the same Jesus who cleansed to keep clean. They feel that it is only through his continued indwelling that they are kept holy, and happy, and useful. Were he to leave them, the original darkness and kingdom of death would soon be restored.

O, PURIFY MY HEART.

MRS. JENNIE E. JORDAN.

O Father, purify my heart,
And make me clean and white within;
Let mine iniquity depart,
And cleanse me from the stain of sin.

May I the ways of sinners shun,
And tread the path by Jesus trod;
In ways of thy commandments run,
Which safely lead me home to God.

May I avoid this world's vain show,
And wear the christian's modest dress;
For in this humble path I know
My Jesus always deigns to bless.

O help me e'er to watch and pray,
And follow on to know thee more;
So shall I live in endless day,
With Jesus on the shining shore.

WAS PAUL CRAFTY?

A. P. MOORE.

We sometimes hear it said that Paul used deceit, craft, or guile in preaching the gospel to catch men, and people quote what they think are his words to prove it, and then think they are justified in using craft, guile, deceit or hypocrisy in religion, to draw men in, and get them interested in religion. Now if people are deceived, would they not be disgusted when they found it out?

Then, too, if Paul used "guile," did he follow Him in whom was "no guile?" But I think Paul never said he used craft or guile to catch the Corinthians. In 2 Cor. 12: 16, he does say, "And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved. But be it so, I did not burden you; nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile." So it reads; but is it a correct reading or rendering of Paul's words? The Diaglot, and Mc.Knight, and others throw a flood of light upon the passage. The Diaglot reads, "Be it so, then, I did not burden you; but (it is said) being cunning, I took you by artifice." Here the true idea is, he was accused of using cunning, or craft, or deceit, but did he plead guilty to the charge? Mc.Knight renders it, "Be it so, then (for ye cannot deny it), I did not burden you; nevertheless, the faction say, being crafty, in not demanding maintenance, I caught you with guile, taking money of you as a present."

I cannot believe Paul acknowledged that he was hpyocritical, neither have I any sympathy with "worldly policy," guile, craft or hypocrisy in the work of the Lord.

REPORT OF NOVA SCOTIA CONFERENCE.

The Christian Advent Conference of Nova Scotia convened at Hillsburg, Bear River, Jan. 19th, 1874, according to notice. The preaching brethren present were Elds. J. J. Woodworth, J. B. Fitch, A. B. Swansburg, W. Halliday, J. Woodworth, N. H. Reed, and F. Albert Verge; also Brn. J. M. Tozier, and R. Snow of New Brunswick, who gave an efficient, helping hand, and whose words of good cheer were highly appreciated by the brethren. We were glad to see and greet Bro. and Sr. Heath from Lynn. The Lord bless them. The first and second days of the meeting were spent in devotional exercises, through which perfect love and harmony reigned, and all felt greatly edified and blessed.

Conference business was taken up on Saturday, the meeting being called to order by the President. The minutes of last year's conference were read and adopted, when officers for the present year were then chosen as follows: Eld. J. J. Woodworth, President. Eld. J. B. Swansburg, Vice President. Eld. F. Albert Verge, Secretary and Treasurer.

Reports from the various churches were then given by delegates and letters, showing a general increase of interest in, and additions to, nearly all of them during the last year, for which we feel like giving God all the glory, for to him alone is it due. The meeting was then adjourned till Monday 23rd, at 8 A. M.

On the "first day of the week" the brethren enjoyed a "feast of fat things." The audiences were large and very attentive. After the afternoon service, when Bro. Tozier gave us an excellent discourse, Bro. Halliday led two happy, willing converts to the water, where they were buried in the likeness of their dear Redeemer and Savior's death. In the evening the saints gathered around the Master's table, and commemorated the suffering and death of their once crucified but now risen Lord.

Business meeting met on Monday as appointed. Order called by the President. Places and dates were then decided where and when to hold conferences this year. The conference decided that a full report of this meeting should be sent to the Crisis office for publication.

Thus closed the yearly conference of Nova Scotia for 1874 harmoniously, and we hope to the glory of God our Savior, praying that before another conference season should come round, we should see the "King in his beauty." The brethren and sisters went home greatly strengthened, to wait for God's dear Son from heaven, who has promised and will give an unfading crown to all believers at his glorious coming.

THE MAN OF INTEGRITY.

It will not take much time to delineate the man of integrity, as by its nature it is a plain one, and easily understood. He is one who makes it his constant rule to follow the road of duty, according as the word of God, and the voice of his conscience points it out to him. He is not guided merely by affections, which may sometimes give the color of virtue to a loose and unstable character.

The upright man is guided by a fixed principle of mind, which determines him to esteem nothing but what is honorable, and to abhor whatever is base and unworthy in moral conduct. Hence we find him ever the same; at all times, the trusty friend, the affectionate relation, the conscientious man of business, the pious worshiper, the public spirited citizen. He assumes no borrowed appearance. He seeks no mask to cover him, for he acts no studied part; but he is indeed what he appears to be, full of truth, candor, and humility.

In all his pursuits the upright man knows no path but the fair and direct one, and would much rather fail of success, than retain it by reproachful means. He never shows us a smiling countenance, while he meditates evil against us in his heart. He never praises us among our friends, and then joins in traducing us among our enemies. We shall never find one part of his character at variance with another. In his manners, he is simple and unaffected; in all his proceedings open and consistent.—Sel. by Thomas Foote.

TRACTS, TRACTS, TRACTS.

D. N. SMITH.

Every day I am more and more convinced of the importance and efficiency of these silent preachers. A few months since, I gave one to a man, a member of a Baptist church, but who was befogged as to the advent of Christ, and kindred subjects; but he very soon saw the truth, and has become a flaming torch in trying to bring others to the light. A few days since, he started for England to visit his old father, taking a lot of tracts and papers to scatter on the route. The other day, I gave one to a prominent member of a Methodist church. After reading it, he said he was much pleased with it, and believed it to be true, and wanted another upon the same subject. The mind of the people in this vicinity is becoming inquisitive upon the subject of the second advent of Christ. Probably but few in this region have ever heard a lecture upon the subject.

Newburgh, N. Y.

THE fact of the communication of motion from one body to another is as inexplicable as the communication of Divine influences. How then can we have the face to admit the former, but to deny the latter, merely on the ground of its incomprehensibility? We know nothing of force any more than we do of grace, except by its effects.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DELICATE MACHINERY.

"I think I shall have to give it up, aunt Sophy, I can't go to the meeting to-day; little Johnny seems restless and a little feverish, and I do not like to leave him."

Now the child had been fretful all the morning, and when I saw his mother give him a piece of pie at noon, because he would not eat anything else, I thought my own thoughts. But being a visitor, I did not interfere.

"I think I must give him a little medicine. Don't you think rhubarb is as well as anything?"

"My dear, we usually ask the doctor about medicine. I am afraid of edged tools."

"But when children are sick?"

"We leave them without food, give them cool drink, and let them sleep it off."

Now I had noticed that the children had their tea and coffee, and a great deal of sugar, were allowed their choice of what was on the table, and often ate of one kind of food more than was wise, especially of kinds that had not the proper elements of growth for them. Now tea and coffee are not much, and they have a way of stirring up nerves. And the mother was sometimes nervous, and the children were irritable in the morning, and good people as they were, a good many things jarred.

Well, my friend gave up her meeting, and things grew more quiet, and we had a little talk, and I waited till the right time should come to take up my parable. For of all things I dislike visitors who are ready to dictate and give advice.

Tea time came, and Johnny's father came in with a paper of candy. The child put out his little hand for the treat. The mother looked up at me, and I suppose I looked distressed; I felt so.

"Oh, give him a little, it can't hurt him." But the mother had thought enough to know that it was quite safe to let it alone, and she quieted the child in some other way. The other children had some, and then didn't like milk, and didn't want much bread, and made rather an indifferent supper. And I was questioning what kind of flesh and bones could be made of sugar!

The next morning it was found that one of the other children had had a restless night, and it was drooping in the morning, and generally disturbed, and then came the rhubarb proposition again, and a general hint of worms, which are not in the least common, my doctor says; it is when people or plants are feeble, that they have parasites. And so time went on.

Finally when the day came right and when I was asked plain questions, I told the history of two children I knew of,—a boy and a girl. They had not any special advantage of inheritance, and their home was much like others. They began life on milk, and they took milk as they grew on, no sweeter than in the natural state. There is sugar in milk, it is almost always made too sweet for children, by kind mothers and nurses.

To milk was added porridge of some kind,—farina, wheat, oat meal, hominy, bread,—as they grew older. Then meat and potatoes, soup, rice, and other simple things, and as they were old enough, fruit in its time. They had their meals at regular times, and did not learn that there was such a thing as eating at any other time. They had no cake, no candy, no rewards of good things to eat, as if that were the best that could be given them.

My friend thought this was rather hard, and needlessly strict, until I told the rest of the story. They were never ill, seldom cross, never cried for what they ought not to have; never had to take medicine, that horror of children and older people. So on the whole we were forced to conclude that they secured a greater amount of happiness with less trouble, to say nothing of their better prospects for long life and good health.

I did not stay long enough to see the results of the change of administration. The children made some wry faces at the change. But you see those who had never had anything but what was given them, never thought to ask for it. I should like to see reform carried into many other families, and if any one doubts, or thinks it would be too much trouble, I can only say, it is right and it pays.—Aunt Sophia, in Advocate and Guardian.

THE CHILDREN'S INFLUENCE.

A man was leaning, intoxicated, against a tree. Some little girls, coming from school, saw him there, and at once said to each other: "What shall we do for him?"

Presently one said: "Oh! I'll tell you; let's sing him a temperance song."

And so they did. They collected around him and sang—

"Away, away the bowl,"

and so on, in beautiful tune. The poor drunkard liked it.

"Sing again, my little girls," said he.

"We will," said they, "if you sign the pledge."

"No, no," said he, "we are not at a temperance meeting; besides, youv'e no pledges with you."

"Yes, we have, and pencils, too;" and they held them up to him.

"No, no, I won,t sign now; but do sing for me."

So they sang again—

"The drink that's in the drunkard's bowl,
Is not the drink for me"

"Oh! do sing again," said he.

But they refused, and declared that they would go away if he wouldn't sign.

"But," said the poor fellow, striving to find an excuse, "you've no table; how can I write without a table? You must put the table somewhere.

At this, one quiet, modest, pretty little creature came up timidly, with one finger on her lips, and said: "You can write upon your hat while we hold it for you."

The man signed, and I heard him narrate these facts before one thousand five hundred children. He said: "Thank God for those children; they came to me as messengers of mercy."—Home Guardian.

SICK-ROOM HINTS.

A sick room should have a pleasant aspect. Light is essential. Blinds and curtains may be provided to screen the eyes too weak to bear full day; but what substitutes make up for the absence of that blessed sunshine without which life languishes? The walls should be of a cheerful tint. If possible, some sort of out-door glimpse should be visible from the bed or chair where the invalid lies, if it is but the top of a tree and a bit of sky. Eyes which have been traveling for long, dull days over the pattern of the paper-hangings, till each bud and leaf and quirl is familiar and hateful, brighten with pleasure as the blind is raised.

Ah! if nurses, if friends knew how irksome, how positively harmful, is the sameness of a sick-room, surely love and skill would devise remedies. If it were only bringing in a blue flower to-day and a pink one to-morrow, hanging a fresh picture to vary the monotony of the wall, or even an old one in a new place, something, anything, it is such infinite relief. Small things and single things suffice. To see many of his surroundings changed at once confuses an invalid; to have one little novelty at a time, to vary the point of observation, stimulates and cheers. Give him that, and you do more and better than if you filled the apartment with fresh objects.

It is supposed by many that flowers should be carefully kept away from sick people, that they exhaust the air or communicate to it some harmful quality. This may, in a degree, be true of such strong, fragrant blossoms as lilacs, or garden lilies; but of the more delicately scented ones no such effect need be apprehended. A well-aired room will never be made close or unwholesome by a nosegay of roses, mignonette, or violets, and the subtile cheer which they bring with them is infinitely reviving to the depressed spirits.—Scribner's.

SUNLIGHT.

Let us have all the sunshine we can. We are glad to see it in the sky, on the mountains, the fields, the trees, the shining or sparkling water; let us have it too in our homes. If the carpet does fade sooner, the pictures will keep their clear colors longer, the complexions will be fresher and the eyes brighter, the plants will be more thrifty, and the canary will sing more sweetly, and the cat will bask on the window-sill, winking perfect contentment at the passers-by.

Let us have sunshine in our faces too. I have seen a discouraged face in the street brighten upon meeting a cheerful one; and in a sick room, truly "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine." What a pleasure to think that we can make every one we meet happy and courageous by just being happy ourselves! for "a merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance;" and unless the mind is greatly afflicted by either bodily or mental disease, it is only a matter of habit whether we see things bright or dark.—Ex.

THE FUTURE OF OUR PLANET,
AS VIEWED FROM A
BIBLICAL AND SCIENTIFIC STANDPOINT.

A. W. SIBLEY.

(Concluded.)

Dr. Clarke further says, on the 13th verse of 2nd Peter,—"It does appear from these promises what the apostle says here, and what is said in Rev. 21: 27, 22: 14, 15, that the present earth, though destined to be burned up, will not be destroyed, but be renewed and refined, purged from all moral and natural imperfection, and made the endless abode of blessed spirits."

Says Mr. Wesley—"We look for a new heavens and a new earth, raised, as it were, out of the ashes of the old." This is in harmony with what the Savior has taught in Matt. 5: 5—"Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."

With all the facts brought to view in the divine testimony before us respecting the change that awaits our planet, and the grandeur with which it will be clothed when thoroughly renovated and brought back to its primitive state of beauty and loveliness, we can but exclaim in the language of Dr. Watts—

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

That it has been the faith of the Christian fathers of the church, that the present earth in its purified state will be the eternal abode of God's people, the following extracts from their writings most clearly show:—

BARNABAS, A. D. 71, the supposed companion of Paul, taught the change of the terrestrial world, "when," he says, "iniquity shall be no more, all things being renewed by the Lord," who making "all things new, then shall be the beginning of another world."

POLYCARP, A. D. 108, says "if we please the Lord in this present world, he will raise us from the dead, and we shall reign together with him in the world to come." Heb. 2: 5. (Epist. chaps. 1 and 2.)

PAPIAS, A. D. 116, also taught a renewed and wondrous fertility of the earth in the millennium, which he held would commence at Christ's second coming. (Eusebius Hist., B. 3. c. 39.) Compare Isa. chaps. 35 and 60 with Joel 3: 18.

JUSTIN MARTYR, A. D. 150, says of the millennial period or kingdom of Christ:—"Isaiah saith of this thousand years, 'Behold I create new heavens and a new earth, and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind,'" etc. Isa. 65: 17, 18. Justin taught that the Abrahamic promise of the land of Canaan would be fulfilled at the resurrection in this new earth. (Dialogue with Trypho, Sect. 2.)

IRENÆUS, A. D. 178, wrote: "It is fitting that the just rising at the appearing of God should in the renewed state receive the inheritance which God covenanted to the fathers, and should reign in it." He quotes Matt. 5: 5, and Ezek. 37th chap., as proof. (Irenæus' Her., B. 5.)

TERTULLIAN, A. D. 200, held that the saints would inherit a kingdom on earth after the resurrection, Rev. 20: 6, they dwelling in the New Jerusalem. (Tertull. contra Marcion, c. 24.) CLEMENT, about A. D. 192, and HIPPOLYTUS, A. D. 220, held the same view, the former observing that in the seventh millennium will be "the renovation of all things." So too believed CYPRIAN, A. D. 230.

ORIGEN, A. D. 250, it is well known, held that the earth after its conflagration should be renovated and renewed, and be inhabited by the saints forever. (The reader is referred to the Religious Encyclopedia.)

METHODIUS, A. D. 260, taught that at the final fire, the world would "be changed into a better and more glorious estate . . . . to the end that we may dwell in the renovated world free from sorrow." (Methodius contra Origen.) See Ps. 37: 3, 9, 11, 18, 22, 29.

LACTANTIUS, A. D. 300, wrote: "The world shall be renewed by God, and the heaven shall be folded up, and the earth shall be changed, and God shall transform men into the similitude of angels . . . . and they shall be always conversant in the sight of the Almighty." (Lact. Div. Inst., B. 7.) Compare Heb. 1: 10, 12, and Ezek. 37: 24, 25.

THE COUNCIL OF NICE, A. D. 325, composed of 250 bishops, says: "We expect new heavens and a new earth, according to the Holy Scriptures, at the appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ"—quoting Dan. 7: 18, Ps. 27: 13, Matt. 5: 5, and Isa. 26: 6. (Hist. by Gelasius.)

CYRIL, A. D. 350, taught that Christ would have an endless kingdom on the renovated earth. So also did Ambrose, Hilary, Chrysostome, and many other writers in the fourth century. (Oxford Ed., pp. 152-199.)

JEROME, A. D. 380, said: "The meek will inherit the earth,—not this world, not the earth under a curse, producing thorns and briers, which rather the bloodiest warriors possess; but it is the earth which the Psalmist describes, 'I hope to see the Lord's goodness in the land of eternal life.' . . . . God will change these new heavens and new earth into better." (De Inst. Cap. 15.) See Rev. 21: 5.

AUGUSTINE, A. D. 390. He says: "This heaven and this earth shall cease to be when the new heaven and the new earth shall begin to be. For by a mutation of things this world will pass away, not by an utter extinction." (August. Lib. 19, c. 14.) See Eccl. 1: 4.

GREGORY the Great, A. D. 590. This bishop thus writes: The present heavens and earth "will pass as to their present figure or appearance; but as to their substance, they will remain forever; . . . others are not to be created, but these same renewed." (Greg. Lib. 17, c. 2-5.) See Acts 3: 19-21.

We have little or no definite testimony on this subject from the church in the middle ages, save perhaps that of JOACHIM ABBAS, who, as a commentator, had much influence in his day, and who held similar views to those already quoted. He lived A. D. 1190. The WALDENSES and PAULIKIANS also taught that Christ would have an endless kingdom at the end of this age, and in the "world to come."

At the Reformation, the doctrine of the earth's recreation was again revived. MARTIN LUTHER abundantly taught this doctrine. In his Table Talk he says: "God will make not the earth only, but the heaven also, much more beautiful than they are at present. At present we see the world in its working clothes, but hereafter it will be arrayed in its Easter and Whitsuntide robes."

RICHARD BAXTER wrote: "I believe there will be a new heaven and earth, on which will dwell righteousness"; and Samuel Rutherford said: "Certain it is that Christ will reign, the Father's King, in Mount Zion." Thos. Burnet, in his "Theory of the Earth," abundantly substantiates the doctrine of the world's renovation, together with the saints reigning therein; a doctrine he shows to have been the general faith of the church before his day, and taught by all heathen nations.

JOHN BUNYAN held that at the first resurrection the world would be "delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God," the Messiah and his people still reigning in it; and, indeed, the entire body of Baptists, in the time of Charles II., inwove this precious truth into their "Confession of Faith," in which they say, "We believe that the New Jerusalem that shall come down from God out of heaven, when the tabernacle of God shall be with men, and he shall dwell with them, will be the metropolitan city of his Kingdom, and will be the glorious place of residence of both Christ and his saints forever, and will be so situated as that the kingly palace will be on Mount Zion, the holy city of David, where his throne was."

In the seventeenth century this was the belief of the most noted church divines. JOSEPH MEDE paraphrases 2 Pet. 3: 13, thus:—"But this conflagration ended, we look, according to his promise [Isa. 65: 17, and 66: 22], for a new heaven and a new earth; that is, a new and refined state of the world, wherein righteousness shall dwell, according as the same prophet saith (Isa. 60: 21), 'Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land [or earth] forever."

DR. GOODWIN wrote: "God doth take the same world that was Adam's and makes it new and glorious. The same creation groaneth for this new world, this new clothing; as we groan to be clothed upon, so doth this whole creation. Rom. 8: 19-23. And as God takes the same substance of man's nature and engrafteth the new creature upon it—the same man still; so he takes the same world and makes it a new world to come, for the second Adam. For the substance of the same world shall be restored to a glory which Adam could never have raised it unto. And this God will do before he hath done with it; and this restitution is "the world to come." Heb: 2: 5.

The great MILTON says:—

"The world shall burn, and from her ashes spring
New heavens and earth, wherein the just shall dwell,
And, after all their tribulations long,
See golden days"

The eighteenth century is not wanting in honored names of those who firmly held this most scriptural doctrine of the saints' inheritance, as herein presented. Both INCREASE and COTTON MATHER held to "a paradisaical state upon earth" subsequent to the Petrine conflagration, precisely as held by the early Church. THOMAS JAMES wrote: "Creation will not be destroyed at the judgment day, but only purified. The vast and splendid machine will not then be thrown aside, broken up, and consigned to oblivion." (Chris. Charit. p. 244.) ANDREW FULLER said:—"The Scriptures give us reason to expect that the earth itself, as well as its redeemed inhabitants, shall, at a future period, be purified, and re-united to the holy empire of God. . . . . . It is not improbable that the earth, thus purified, may even continue the resort, if not the frequent abode, of those who are redeemed from it." (Fuller's Gospel Wit.) See Ps. 37: 29.

"Heaven," said the pious WILLIAM JAY, "will probably be our present system renovated." (Jay's Christian.)

SIR ISAAC NEWTON believed Christ would come and reign on earth in person, and alludes to "the spirits of just men made perfect" by the resurrection (Heb. 11: 35, 40), and the shaking of heaven and earth, and removing of them, that the new heavens, and earth, and kingdom may remain (Heb. 12: 27, 28); and BISHOP T. NEWTON, too, argues for this doctrine, observing that the earth's destiny is that "it shall become as heaven, or rather that it shall be a heaven upon earth, God dwelling visibly among men" (Rev. 21: 1: 5); and asks, "Why should the new heavens and new earth be destroyed when there shall be no more sin, when there shall be no more curse, when there shall be no more death?" (Disser. on Proph., vol 2, p. 358.)

JOSHUA SPAULDING, with COTTON MATHER, affirms that "the new heavens and new earth was the country promised to Abraham and to his seed; which neither he nor they received, but desired and sought, having seen afar off." And this he says is the "new and glorious world rising from the ruins of the old." DR. GILL's final conclusion, after weighing the whole matter, was that the earth "will be purified, made new, and that it will continue forever" as the abode of the righteous; and PHILIP DODDRIDGE exultantly wrote: "We shall go from the ruins of a dissolving world to the new heavens and new earth wherein righteousness forever dwells."

DR. WATTS gives us good theology in the following verse:—

"Yet when the sounds shall tear the skies,
And lightnings burn the globe below,
Saints, you may lift your joyful eyes,
There's a new heaven and earth for you."

GEORGE CAMPBELL, D. D., of Scotland, in his translation of the Gospels, renders Matt. 19: 28—"At the renovation, when the Son of man shall be seated on his glorious throne, etc., observing of the text that the principal completion will be at the general resurrection, when there will be in the most important sense a renovation or regeneration—a new creation—of heaven and earth, when all things shall become new."

DR. KNAPP—Remarks on 2 Pet. 3—"Peter says the heavens and the earth are reserved, or kept in store for the fire, until the day of judgment. At that time the heavens will pass away with a great noise, and the elements will be dissolved with fervent heat, and everything upon the earth will be burnt up. But in v. 13, Peter gives the design of this revolution. It will not be annihilation, but we expect new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness; i. e., an entirely new, altered and beautiful abode for man, to be built from the ruins of his former dwelling-place, as the future habitation of the pious. Rev. 21: 1. This will be very much in the same way as a more perfect and immortal body will be reared from the body which we now possess."

A. THOLUCK, D. D., an eminent German divine, thus writes:—"The glorification of the visible creation is more definitely declared in Rev. 21: 1; although it must be borne in mind that a prophetic vision is there declared. Still more definitely do we find the belief of a transformation of the material world declared in 2 Pet. 3: 7-12. The idea that the perfected kingdom of Christ is to be transferred to heaven, is properly a modern notion. According to Paul and the Revelation of John, the kingdom of God is placed upon the earth, in so far as this itself has part in the universal transformation. This exposition has been adopted and defended by most of the oldest commentators; e. g., Chrysostom, Theodoret, Jerome, Augustine, Luther, Koppe, and others."

EDWARD ROBINSON, D. D., Professor at Andover, says that the original word rendered new in 2 Pet. 3: 13, Isa. 65: 17, and 66: 22, means re-newed or made new; hence better, superior, more splendid. So the corresponding word of the O. T. means, as a verb, to make new, renew, repair, restore, as in 1 Sam. 11: 14; Job 10: 17; Ps. 60: 12; Isa. 61: 4; Ps. 103: 5; 2 Chron. 15: 8, and 24: 4; whence are derived the words rendered new, i. e., re-newed, as in new moon, new heart, new creature, etc. This criticism is very valuable, and throws much light on the subject in question.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK, D. D., President of Amherst College, on Peter's third chapter, says:—"Now, the apostle does not here, in so many words, declare that the new heavens and earth will be the present world and its atmosphere purified and renovated by fire. But it is certainly a natural inference that such was his meaning. For if he intended some other remote and quite different place, why should he call it earth? and, especially, why should he surround it with an atmosphere? The natural and most obvious meaning of the passage surely is, that the future residence of the righteous will be this present terraqueous globe, after its entire organic and combustible matter shall have been destroyed, and its whole mass reduced by heat to a liquid state, and then a new economy reared up on its surface, not adapted to sinful but to sinless beings; and, therefore, quite different from its present condition—probably more perfect, but still the same earth and surrounding heavens."

We might add to the list of names already quoted numerous other writers, who have entertained the same views, and have died cherishing the same hope, that when this present earthly arrangement shall have passed away, it will be succeeded by the new heavens and earth, where the righteous shall eternally dwell.

"O, exiled Paradise,
O, how we long for thee!
When wilt thou robe the earth,
When plant Life's healing tree?
O, for thy smiling hills,
With gush of clear cascade;
Forever-flowing rills,
By living waters made!
Thou hast fresh blooming vales,
Where glitt'ring fountains play,
And sweet sequestered dales,
Hid in thy groves away.

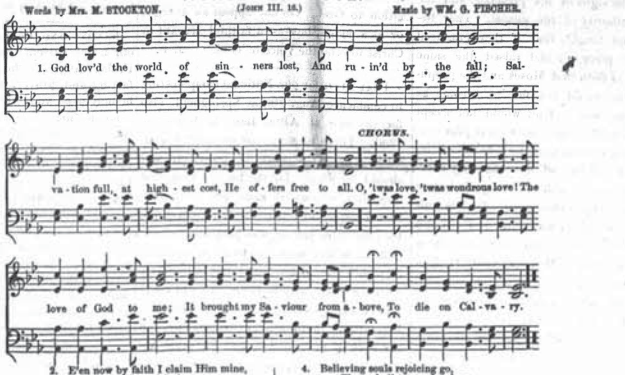
O, for thy fragrant flowers,
That bloom through all the year!
O, for thy rosy bowers,
The wilderness to cheer!
To thee we shall 'return,
And to Mount Zion come!'
With songs sing joyfully,
'And shout the harvest home!'
Awake the harp and lute
In praises to the King
Who reigns on David's throne;
To him hosannas bring.

Jesus shall ever reign!
When his bright kingdom comes,
The sun shall be ashamed
Before his dazzling throne;
The moon confounded, then
Shall hide her silver ray,
And saints of every age
Rejoice in glorious day.
O, exiled Paradise,
O, how we long for thee!
Robe thou anew the earth,
Bring back life's healing tree."

EVIDENCE OF REPENTANCE.—A man went to pay a debt long due; surprise was expressed at his coming on that errand, but he explained all by saying, "I was brought to Christ last week." Is not this a brother of Zaccheus?—A. Bonar.

WONDROUS LOVE.

Words by Mrs. M. STOCKTON. (JOHN III. 16.) Music by WM. G. FISCHER.



1. God lov'd the world of sin-ners lost, And ru-in'd by the fall; Salva-tion full, at high-est cost, He of-fers free to all. O, 'twas love, 'twas wondrous love! The love of God to me; It brought my Sa-viour from a-bove, To die on Cal-va-ry.

2. E'en now by faith I claim Him mine,
The risen Son of God;
Redemption by his death I find,
And cleansing through the blood.—Cho.

3. Love brings the glorious fullness in,
And to his saints makes known;
The blessed rest from inbred sin,
Through faith in Christ alone.—Cho.

4. Believing souls rejoicing go,
There shall to you be given,
A glorious foretaste here below,
Of endless life in heaven.—Cho.

5. Of victory now o'er Satan's power,
Let all the ransomed sing;
And triumph in the dying hour,
Through Christ, the Lord, our King.—Cho.

THE DEAD—WHERE ARE THEY?

J. M. LEIGHTON.

(Concluded.)

"There the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."—JOB 3: 17.

THE DEAD SLEEP. Second, because sleep implies rest. This is what the tired mortal most desires. The bodily rest here obtained comes through sleep; but the labor and fatigue return with the awakening. Man naturally looks forward to an end of all this, and to a rest that shall have a glorious awakening, which shall bring with it eternal peace and rest, instead of new care and weariness. Man has a right to expect this rest; and what can be more comforting than the assurance that "He giveth his beloved sleep." The grave, we are assured, is a place of silence and repose. Job, in bewailing his existence, says, "Why died I not from the womb? . . . For now should I have lain still and been quiet. I should have slept; then had I been at rest." Job 3: 11-13.

Rest is also implied from the fact that the grave is called a place of silence and darkness, both of which are necessary to true rest. "Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death. A land of darkness as darkness itself, the shadow of death without any order, and where the light is as darkness." Job 10: 21, 42. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10.

This rest is so complete, that they exercise no mental powers, neither do they praise the Lord. "For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" Ps. 6: 5. "Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? Shall the dead arise and praise thee? Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave, or thy faithfulness in destruction? Shall thy wonders be known in the dark, and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?" Ps. 88: 10-12. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. "But the dead know not anything," etc. Eccl. 9: 5. "For the grave cannot praise thee; death cannot celebrate thee," etc. Isa. 38: 18.

3. Sleep implies an awakening. In the sleep of the natural body there is rest, and also an awakening; and in the sleep that follows death, there is rest, and a glorious awakening, when the dead "that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth," etc. The word awake, as applied to the resurrection, is frequently used in the sacred Scriptures, and if there is no sleep, why this word awake? Job says, "So man lieth down and riseth not till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep." Job 10: 5-12. "But," says he (14 verse), "if a man die shall he live again?" "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." Then (when this change comes), "thou shalt call, and I will answer thee." This plainly implies an awakening. Says the Psalmist, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. 15: 11-15. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake," etc. Dan. 12: 2. Again, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Isa. 26: 19.

I have endeavored, in this brief manner, to show that the dead sleep. I have proved that they do not enter heaven nor hell; but I will submit one more proof of this, and then leave it. Paul says, "But if there be no resurrection of the dead," etc, "then they which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. 15: 13-19. Now if "they which are fallen asleep in Christ" are in heaven, how can they perish, or be "perished?" They being in their graves are indeed perished if there be no resurrection; but if in heaven, how can it be possible? But let us suppose that they are in heaven, and see if we can reconcile it with reason. We admit that the soul must be immortal to enter heaven. We believe that God is ever watching over us, and knows all our thoughts and acts; also that angels in their office of attendants of divine majesty, have the power of watching over us, for "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14. If man becomes immortal, he becomes able to see and know what takes place in the world below. Immortality gives him this power; for said Christ, "they are equal unto the angels." Luke 20: 36.

The theory of entering heaven at death is wholly incredible and foolish. It has nothing but conjecture to base its arguments upon. Heaven, we are taught, is a place of rest and happiness; but it is folly to suppose that saints in heaven, with power to look down on the condition of their friends below, can in all cases be happy; for too often they would find them in want and misery, crime and disease, in prisons and hospitals. Can such a condition as this couse our friends on earth happiness? Can a parent be happy with his child in danger or crime? No. To the true heart all these conditions cause great unhappiness. Why? Because there is a connecting bond of love and sympathy that links together the hearts of all friends and kindred.

Now I believe that love and sympathy will be as much parts of our immortal existence, as they are parts of our mortal natures, only in a much greater and purer degree; and with this sympathy and love increased in a tenfold degree, we must (if we know the condition of our friends on earth) be very much moved with pity, and also be very unhappy. Now the doctrine of sleep in the grave entirely does away with this difficulty. In sleep, there is no "remembrance." When the awakening comes, and mortality is swallowed up in life, there are none left on earth to feel sorrow, for all the saints awake simultaneously, and from that time henceforth are alike in their natures.

"HOLINESS TO THE LORD."

The history of the church of God may be searched in vain, to find a parallel in attention to the great subject of personal holiness, such as has stirred the heart of Zion during the past ten years. "Holiness to the Lord," has become as never before, the great "central idea," in the tented grove, in the prayer service, in the sacred song and in religious testimony.

Tens of thousands hungering and thirsting after righteousness, have been refreshed and quickened, while great numbers have believed and entered into rest, from inbred sin. This has been more or less the case in all sections of Protestant Christendom.

The obvious fact is, our people everywhere are feeling the need of a deeper, higher, and more intensified spiritual life, and sympathize with every wholesome effort to secure it. The great felt want of the christian church in our day is for purity and evangelical power, which, in the divine economy, are joined and inseparable.

During a few years past there has been a peaceful and happy disposition, generally prevalent in both ministry and laity, to dispense with needless speculation and controversy, and seek by consecration, prayer, and faith the cleansing blood of Jesus. How blessed is this. How glorious the victories achieved. And how many in all our churches are now walking in the clear light and on the high grounds of established holiness. How precious and delightful the christian union. And how little of discord. Let God be praised, and let his people rejoice.

A revival of personal holiness will secure and promote everything desirable and lovely in the unity, efficiency and aggressive power of the church. Holiness becometh Zion; it is her beauty and glory. It has in itself intrinsic excellence and power. Purity—sweet, moral, and gospel purity; a whole constellation of virtues—perfect love, excluding hatred; perfect faith, excluding unbelief; perfect humility, excluding pride; perfect meekness, excluding anger; and perfect patience, excluding impatience.

Let God be praised. Here are riches and honor like the source whence they emanate—glorious as heaven and lasting as eternity. This holiness God enjoins and expects, and is himself the infinite model and source; and to secure this in every believer is the grand aim and object of the gospel. For this purpose Christ died, the Holy Ghost is given, the means of grace instituted, and the Scriptures furnished.

"Holiness to the Lord"—how rich, glorious, and promising this aspect of Zion! This will make her life more intensified, her spiritual vision more clear, her spirit more joyful and happy, and make her safe and useful. It will save her from fearful relapses and backslidings.—Christian Standard.

Serve God well, if you would serve yourselves well. You cannot be true to yourself without being true to God.

LUKEWARMNESS OF THE CHURCHES.

There are certain names that are known in all the churches for their self-denying efforts in behalf of a suffering world—stars that differ from others in magnitude, and whose light is to shine throughout eternity. One of these mighty men who is carrying the banner of the cross over the heathenish plains of Asia writes in the Friend of India, that Mohammedanism has made more progress during the last thirty years, than Christianity; and that a fierce conflict between the two systems, the false and the true, is inevitable in the immediate future. Here are the words of a strong man engaged with the enemy at the front of the battle.

What are we doing at home? Are we at ease in Zion, than which there is no condition more dangerous or deplorable. Our forces are engaged firing into each other about small matters, while the foe is filling the world with tares. With unnecessarily expensive churches, showy rituals, and other heartless things, we consume our energies and our money. Our missionaries in the territories are picking cranberries for a living, or longing for an eleemosynary box of clothing, while we are surfeiting ourselves in sinful luxuries. The soldiers who are fighting the battles of the Lord on foreign fields are struggling and fainting for the want of comforting things. As a political agent one missionary is worth more to conciliate a savage tribe than a full regiment of soldiers. Observing statesmen know this secret; ungodly rulers laugh at the idea. Lord Lawrence, in India, comprehended this truth when he declared that christian things done in a christian way will never alienate the heathen. It is the bad lives of rulers and officials which have produced the bloodshed and mutinies throughout India, just as do the bad lives of our own representatives to the Indians embroil us with them in continual trouble.

How is it that the followers of Mahomet are sweeping over the Eastern world with their false doctrine, gathering multitudes within its fold, while the divine things of Christ the Lord are rejected? It cannot be altogether on account of the perverseness of human nature. We fear the true cause is to be found in the indifference and lukewarmness of the churches. Our enthusiasm has died out. Not so, it seems, with the Crescent. We want renewed the bold zeal of St. Paul, the entire consecration of Luther, the fiery eloquence of a Knox. We need in the army men like Havelock and our own Howard, and statesmen who are devoted followers of Christ. "Awake, O north wind, and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out!"

Some months ago the police of New York were hammering the masses of the people on Tompkins square with their clubs. This is the world's way (its violence has been tried long enough) of sobering and elevating the race. How would it do for those eloquent men of the church to confront the masses on our public squares and imitate the Wesleys and Whitfields? Professor Tullock, of Scotland, was among us the other day. In his country as here, many skilled mechanics and the laboring classes generally do not attend church. The church in recent times, with its ritualisms, its operatic music, its heartless, pointless essays, and the extravagance and vanity which it displays, has no charms for the common people or common sense.

If the people will not come into the churches because of these and other reasons, the duty is clear that the church like Christ should go among the people. The shortest way to destroy Romanism and infidelity—those twin agencies of degredation—is for the Protestant churches to renew their youth in simple gospel things for the wayfaring men. We have lost the path, we have got into an enfeebling atmosphere, we are in the valley of dry and dead bones. Let us have audiences of twenty-five thousand in the open air for this summer. Dr. —— or any eloquent divine with strong lungs could probably draw such audiences.—New York Daily Witness.

LIFE.

C. MENDENHALL.

Notwithstanding we are pressed on every side by that which destroys bodily comfort, or disturbs our mental felicity, we still love and tenaciously cling to life. It is a God-given principle, which is to be loved, preserved, and used properly. The lowest order of beings cling to it; all animated nature loves it.

The life of a fellow man is valuable. God has said, "Thou shalt not kill." Now if this present life, with all its vicissitudes, its trials, its struggles, is so great a boon, how can we estimate that future life which is attainable by all men, who live this present life after the will of God? Surely, the love of God is manifested, in that a way is open whereby we can obtain immortality and eternal life. A life free from the disadvantageous circumstances of this earth state; "For thus saith the Lord to the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live." Amos 5: 4.

Would we live for ever, let us seek the Lord. The Lord is offended at our evil doings. Oh, seek him for reconciliation, pardon, peace, and life. We are under condemnation, of ourselves helpless, exposed to the penalty of a broken law. Let us seek the Lord; seek that life which knows no death, then shall ye live indeed, for thus saith the Lord of hosts. Have we named the name of Christ? then let that life of which we have the assurance show itself daily, hourly, and universally, in conduct, thoughts, and words. We want a life which manifests its existence by activity, not by noise. Let our language breathe forth in a good example, and in mighty tones of good deeds done in Christ's name.

Time is short. Jesus with his retinue of mighty angels, with all that pomp and grandeur which belongs to royalty, is near at hand. He comes not as a sacrifice, but as a mighty ruler to destroy the rebellious, and to save the loyal. Let us then now grasp life, accept his grace, and fervently pray for his appearing. Pray for each other, that we may arouse the sleeping church, warn the lethargic world, lift up the fallen, cheer the saint, being good and doing right in this present life, hoping through Christ to reap life eternal in the glorious, peaceful paradise promised unto the children of the heavenly King. Reader, are you of that family? Are you an heir? "If ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

OUR DUTY.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Thy will be done."—MATT. 26: 32.

Submission to the will of God is evidently the lesson we should learn from the conduct and language of our Savior when he uttered these words. No human imagination can measure the depth of the sorrow he felt when the powers of darkness were let loose upon him in the garden of Gethsemane, and when he prayed, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." The shameful treatment he was soon to receive—the scourge, the mock trial, the smiting, the crown of thorns, the bitter cross—was all before him. Yet in meek submission he bowed, and uttered these never-to-be-forgotten words, "Thy will be done." There was no pride or self-will in his heart. The words spoken by prophetic lips long before were fulfilled to the letter: "Then said I, Lo, I come; in the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart."

How different men are from their Savior. Trifling disappointments and sufferings cause them to murmur and complain against God. There is nothing that tests principle like adversity and affliction. There are plenty of fair-weather christians. When the sun of prosperity shines, they have a great deal of religion—can shout, sing, and pray loud and long, but let the winds and storms of adversity come, and their religion "takes itself wings and flies away." But those who have been thoroughly divested of self-will can say, under all circumstances, as the Master taught his disciples to pray, and as he himself prayed in the hour of his keenest suffering, "Thy will be done."

The first duty of the sinner is to give up his own will, and accept the will of God as the rule of his life. The Bible is given to make known that will, ministers to proclaim it, christians to exemplify it. The time is hastening when the will of God shall be done on earth as it is now done in heaven.

GOD'S SERVICE A REASONABLE SERVICE.

In the first place, God does not require us to obey a law by which he himself is not governed. He always acts upon the principle of love, and whatever we do should spring from the same motive. And in creating man, God did not design a being entirely different from himself. The fact that we are to have communion with God is evidence of an affinity of moral nature; for "what communion hath light with darkness?" Then men should follow out the same moral law by which God himself acts. Why should obedience to law be considered a restraining of one's freedom?

The truth is simply this: A man sees that by a certain course of conduct the highest possible good can be attained, and he follows it, and he does it freely, gladly. Is the man who refuses to yield obedience to God's law, and chooses a fool's part, any more free?

God's law or service is founded in reason, and well may the apostle call it a "reasonable service." . . . .

Suppose the mountain should say: "Is it reasonable that I should lift my head above the surrounding hills, or, in other words, is it reasonable that I should be a mountain?" The answer might be, "Is it not good that you stand there in your majesty, casting your cooling shadow over the broad area beyond your base, refreshing everything of life that comes within your heat-sheltering shadow? Is there not good reason that you reach your head high into morning mists to condense the breeze-swept vapor and send it trickling down your sides to lodge in some aperture, and then reappear in the clear bubbling spring as the heading of a refreshing stream to fertilize the earth beyond?

"Is it reasonable that you should be able to catch the first benignant rays of the morning sun, or to witness the play of the lightning far above the dense thunder clouds that darken all the earth beneath? If this is all good and reasonable, then it is reasonable that you should lift your head above the surrounding hills; in short, it is reasonable that you should be a mountain. And the mountain might rejoice that it may catch and condense the vapor, and that it may witness the sunshine above the fatal storm." So should men rejoice that they may lift up their heads above the sinful level of the world into the pure atmosphere of a sunshiny life. Then, can you ask if it is reasonable to render service to God, or in other words, to be a christian?

Is it not the highest possible privilege to obey a law by which you may approach in some degree to the spotlessly pure and glorious character of God himself? To be religious is to be reasonable; to be unreligious, is to be unreasonable.—Wayside.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

At no period in thirty years have the signs been so bright in favor of the near coming of Jesus as at the present time. Whichever way we turn, a voice seems to say, "Behold, I come quickly"; prepare the bridal robes; come out from the world, and be "separate," "and I will receive you." The impression is continually deepening upon the minds of holy men and women that we are truly living in the last days. As in nature, after the wheat begins to turn golden, it is soon ready for the reapers, so in the harvest of this world, when it is about ready for the reaping angels, we may expect to witness a rapid ripening of the wheat and tares. When we look back over the last ten years, the advance in wickedness is truly alarming and unparalleled. Courts are multiplied, asylums, jails, and state prisons are crowded, and the press groans beneath the weight of recorded crimes. Yet the tide is steadily rising, with no signs of any abatement. The prophetic declaration, applicable specially to the last days—"worse and worse"—is now having a most striking fulfillment. The selfishness, pride, pleasure-loving spirit of the age is in perfect keeping with the description of the times just before the coming of Christ. Should any deny the inspiration of the prophecy, the facts around are thousand-tongued to prove the prophet true. We are compelled to bow to the words of Jesus—"The Scriptures cannot be broken." Though heaven and earth pass away, his word remains unchanged. It can be ever trusted.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" is a question that comes now with peculiar force to every christian watchman. The people have a right to say, "Watchman what of the night?" His silence now would indicate a careless neglect of his duty as a watchman. He should be able to point the pilgrim traveler to the careful fulfillment of the prophecies of Daniel and John relating to the rise and fall of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia and Rome, showing that we have come down the stream of time to the last generation, as indicated by positive signs in the sun, moon and stars, earth and seas, and the hearts of men unholy and profane. The world is being warned in various ways of its approaching end, but the alarm notes are as little heeded as by the careless antediluvians in the days of Noah. He who says to the multitude that Jesus is soon coming seems to them as wild and foolish as did Lot to the Sodomites, when he warned them of their perilous condition.

Great men and rich confess "the signs of the times" are peculiar and strange, boding some great and startling event, but they do not like to believe that the Lord is coming to overturn the present corrupt systems, and set up his kingdom in righteousness. Such an event would afford them no joy, because unprepared; but to "the saints of the Most High," the prospect is gloriously bright and promising. "The signs of the times" say the night of weeping is almost ended, and the morning of bright glory about to begin. Let us heed their warning voice, and receive the full benefit of the intelligence they offer this generation. They bring us good news—the best ever presented to this world. They declare in a most distinct manner that soon the Savior will come to raise the dead, put an end to the night of weeping, and introduce the morning of eternal joy, and glory unfading. Soon the dear ones sleeping in the dust of the earth shall awake to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. Soon the Tempter's power shall be for ever broken, virtue exalted, and vice buried in oblivion with all who give it support. Soon the kingdom of heaven will be established, the saints gathered therein, immortalized and glorified, with their blessed Redeemer. Let us all be there where all will be eternally holy and happy. M. G.

FAITH.

Why is faith in man made the condition upon which reconciliation may be restored between him and God? Because unbelief in man was the cause of unreconciliation between them. Take the cause away, and the effect will cease. Disobedience did not result in unbelief, but unbelief resulted in disobedience. A true faith always produces real obedience; unbelief always produces rebellion. All laws present a reward for obedience, and punishment for disobedience. When the declaration of the law is credited by the subject, the contrast between the reward and punishment is always sufficient, if the law is not defective, to induce the subject to obey it. The only difficulty, therefore, in producing loyalty to a government, is to convince the subjects that if they break the law, its penalty will be surely executed, and its promises of reward will fail to be enjoyed. The sin of unbelief in man is very heinous to God, because it is yielding to God's enemy on a question of controversy between them, involving the truthfulness of each. Satan had taught man to discredit what God had said, and unbelief in man is yielding to the devil against God, making him a liar, and Satan truthful. This is the act of man which causes the alienation between God and man. For this reason the first and great condition of reconciliation betwen them is faith in all that God has said.

The enemy has from the beginning labored to invalidate the divine testimony, by indirectly teaching that God did not mean what he said; thus turning the truth into a lie. That truth is accomplished by the mystical interpretation of his word, showing that what he says is not true, but only mystically representing the truth. By that rule we are taught to believe man's interpretation of the word instead of believing God. We thus reject his revelation, and receive man's; for such an interpretation takes the place of a revelation, and is received as a divine rule for men's faith and hope. This is real unbelief, to reject divine authority as the rule of human conduct, and accept the tradition of men as a substitute. This is the rock of offence over which our race will stumble into perdition.

"Abraham believed God, and it (faith), was accounted to him for righteousness." "David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works." A man cannot do good works until after he becomes righteous; therefore works cannot make a man righteous, but faith does. That which is not of faith is sin; that is, acts performed by a man who discredits God's word, thus making him a liar, cannot be acceptable to God as obedience to him, although the acts in themselves may be right. The moral principle which produced them was sinful, therefore the acts are sinful. An impure heart cannot produce a pure act; and as the heart is "purified by faith," it follows that "without faith it is impossible to please God." Unbelief is not a negative principle, but a positive. It does not consist in neglecting to believe God, but in refusing to believe him. God takes the responsibility of manifesting truth to men, and they take the responsibility of accepting or rejecting it. When any portion of divine truth becomes important for men to receive, God will employ some means to present it before them, and if men will not proclaim it, he can make the stones cry out and proclaim it. If religious papers will not teach it, he can make the political papers publish it.

Sin consists in rejecting light after it has been manifested. Jesus said: "If I had not come and spoken unto them they had not had sin; but now they have no cloak for their sin." He fulfilled the predictions given of the Messiah, which no other man did; thus proving himself to be the Messiah. And when they rejected those evidences they rejected the testimony of God, making his word untrue. This unbelief caused God to reject them as his people. Unbelief is the stumbling-stone over which "both houses of Israel" stumble. The Jewish house stumbled through unbelief in the signs and evidences of the first advent. The Christian house will stumble over fulfillments which become signs of the second advent. The experience of the first house was written to admonish the second to beware of the fatal stone.

In the experience of that typical people, we get an example of one effort made by the Pharisees to harmonize themselves with God without faith. They made clean the outside of the cup by conforming in their acts very strictly to the law of God as understood by them; but they signally failed to cleanse their hearts by faith in divine truth which God had manifested to them, designed especially for them and their time. They verily thought that they were the special favorites of heaven, because they were so very religious; paying tithes of all they possessed, carrying their religion and devotion into all their acts; eating, drinking, dress, and all their habits of life were made to rigidly and strictly conform to the word of God, as they understood it, and the teaching of the Elders. They were so confident that God could not fail to accept them in this position of sanctity, that they could with the utmost confidence thank God that they were "not as other men," but were more righteous because they had done more righteously. They were ignorant that the righteousness of God was imputed to men because they believed him, and not because they obeyed him. Let it be remembered that obedience to God can never precede faith in him. Their obedience was acceptable until they had persistently rejected important truth which God had unfolded to them. This made them so obnoxious to him, that when they offered a lamb, it was rejected as if it had been "swine's flesh." Jesus taught them plainly that notwithstanding their worship externally, in words and acts appeared beautiful like whited sepulchres, yet internally, like them, it was full of dead men's bones because of their unbelief in the signs of his presence, and the divine authority of the gospel. They believed, and taught, that if they practiced the same precepts, and raised the same standard of faith that Moses and the prophets did, they could not fail to become as holy as they were. They would not accept the important truth that God requires his people to go "from faith to faith;" that is, that God demands of men that they exercise an additional faith at every period when additional truth is developed. God is jealous of his character for truth, and will not suffer it to be impeached by Satan or man without impunity. Men may credit God in six declarations, but dispute the seventh, and he will hold them as accountable for the impeachment of his character as if they had disputed all of them. Let this infinitely important truth be everywhere proclaimed, that each member of our probationary race stands upon this pivot, and will turn to the right or left. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned.

The most fatal snare that Satan has coiled for our race, is the opposite of this: viz., that doctrine is not essential for salvation. Yea, more, that it should be kept on the background if we would lead men to Christ, especially present truth, or new development of truth, which demands an advanced faith. We say this is a fatal error, because it has proved fatal to men in every instance in the past history of our world. He is a true friend to humanity who will faithfully expose the snare, and teach men that if they are ashamed of Christ and his words (for some truths will be presented to all, to test them on the point), Christ will be ashamed of them before his Father. When we attempt to lead men to Christ, or accept of men as being in Christ, who will not yield to the requirements of the gospel unless some of its truths, obnoxious to them, are left off, and they object to taking some important unpopular position lest they lose caste in society, and a good name in the world, and we, to gain numbers and influence, yield to their unreconciliation to Christ's instruction, and teach them that they are or can be saved without a full surrender to Christ, we only proselyte them to an unholy and an unsafe position. When the standard of faith is lowered so that men may become members of the church and enjoy their elevated caste, and their worldly pleasures, multitudes will enter; but when it is raised to the point where Christ placed it when he said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me," but few will enter. The more superficial and worldly the faith, the larger the number who will embrace it. The Catholic church gives the largest latitude to men's carnal desires, and consequently gains the largest number of adherents.

It is necessary for Christ to keep his people separate from the world, by crucifying their desires for its applause and honors, by incorporating in their faith, some truth that will serve in its profession and practice to produce that crucifixion. Time generally wears away the unpopularity of truth, so that it will cease to be a reproach to profess faith in it; consequently it is necessary as all must bear the same cross, to occasionally develop new and unpopular truth. Paul said, "If I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is the offence of the cross ceased;" that is, he would not have been persecuted if he only preached circumcision as his fathers had done; but new truth had been presented for his faith, and he must now preach that Jewish circumcision is, by divine authority, superceded by christian baptism. This new present truth was very unpopular with worldly professors, especially because its advocates taught that a belief in it was essential to reconciliation with God. They were looked upon as the most bigoted sectarians for taking such a position. What would have been the result if the apostles, to gain the fellowship and friendship of those popular professors, had taught that the special truths they preached were important, but that those Pharisees who were so strictly religious, holding God's word, professedly, as a divine standard of faith, must be accepted as faithful servants of God, notwithstanding their persistent opposition to those special truths? All must answer that such a position would naturally have caused those who were persecuted and hated for their special faith to have given up that specialty, and thus rid themselves of that hatred, if they could have enjoyed just as perfect salvation without it. Is there partiality with God? Does he lead some of his children in a thorny path, and others in a path of ease, without thorns? Can two men walk with God and walk in different paths? Has the gospel commission changed its condition of salvation? Can Christ's servants preach the gospel with the Holy Spirit, and men hear that preaching and be convicted by it, and resist the conviction, and exclude such doctrine from their pulpits and meetings, holding up to ridicule, and reckoning heretical and dangerous the men who thus teach, and not suffer condemnation from God? Is Christ divided? Will his Spirit justify one man in publishing an important truth, and equally justify another man in defaming that truth and rejecting it.

These are dangerous and ensnaring times, and may the God of all grace give us light that we may lead the flock of Christ in a safe path, by kindly, but firmly and faithfully teaching them that a living, outspoken faith in the truth of God, sent by his servants and Spirit to this generation, is necessary for salvation. Let us not preach our own sentiments, but preach the Word of God with authority, telling all men that faith in it is the only condition of reconciliation to God. Do not appear as a bigot or as a judge, but as a faithful servant of Christ to echo the voice of God. J. C.

Pray much for our National campmeeting to commence Aug. 8th, at Springfield, also for the one at Alton Bay, to begin the 22nd. These meetings are of great importance. Their influence is powerful, and should be wholly for the Lord. Pray that they may accomplish more good this year than ever before; that the Lord will direct the committee and all who preach his word; that all selfish measures may be blasted; all mere human policy plans, not in harmony with the Lord, may be made null and void; that all evil speaking, backbiting, fault-finding, tattling, murmuring, evil-surmising, and the work of busy-bodies, and all other unchristian elements, may be hushed into the silence of the grave, and that Christ alone may be exalted. It is high time that those who profess to be looking for the coming of Jesus should be living in harmony with the truth that leads men to sanctify themselves to the Lord, and be ready for the coming of the Son of man. Let us have a thorough cleansing from all evil things, and be clothed with the righteousness of the Just One. M. G.

Delegates.—Every church, interested in the welfare of our publishing interests, should send their delegates to the next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the Sprinfield camp-ground, Aug. 10th, 4 P. M. Also, let every minister be present who is disposed to cooperate with the Association in the work for which it was organized, as expressed in the second article of its constitution, as follows: "The object of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth, and the promotion of vital piety, by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts, and periodicals." M. G.

The next National Campmeeting for the promotion of holiness is to be held at Old Orchard Beach, Me., commencing Wednesday, Aug. 12th, to continue ten days. M. G.

Send your name.—Those who wish their articles put in the paper should send their names. We frequently receive articles for the Crisis from new writers, which would have been published had they sent their names. Do not be ashamed to be known in the family. M. G.

During the wonderful revival in Scotland, the past few months, under the labors of Brn. Moody and Sankey, it is said ten thousand have been converted. It is said to surpass anything of the kind since the days of Whitefield. M. G.

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.

It was our privilege to spend Sabbath, July 26th, at the Tremont Campmeeting. The grove is a pleasant one, presenting a home-like appearance, seldom witnessed on the camp-ground. Several new cottages have been erected, fronting on the place allotted for preaching, besides a new preacher's stand. The number of tents increases each year. There are now some sixty, besides the Mass. Mission Tent. A large audience was present on the Lord's day, and good order prevailed. We heard preaching from Bro. A. Simpson and J. Couch, showing that our Savior is soon coming to set up his kingdom. Although the evidence is very clear, yet those who have rejected it, as it has been accumulating from year to year, have gained strength to resist the additional proof that is now before us, to show that our great Deliverer will soon appear. It is very difficult to reach sinners at the present time. The great work seems to be to get the church aroused to holy living in order to be ready to meet Christ at his coming; and this is the most successful means of reaching the unconverted. When the church is cold and formal she leads more into skepticism than into christianity. Such is the condition of the mass of professors today; hence the need of special effort to arouse them from their slumbers. To sleep now is alarming madness. As well might one drink laudanum and arsenic to cure dyspepsia. Sleep may produce insensibility, but it destroys safety. The voice of Jesus comes at this time in urgent tones, Take heed, "lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping." Most seem to pay no attention to his timely warning, and act as though they thought he was giving an unnecessary alarm.

We were rejoiced to find a goodly number at the Tremont meeting, who are awake to the perils of the hour, and the importance of entire consecration to Christ, that they may be sweetly kept in these trying moments. A large number are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, seeking the fulness there is in Jesus. Nearly all seemed impressed with the importance of these things. We felt much comforted in the Lord to find such a state of mind prevailing more and more. This is a bright omen. Thank the Lord. M. G.

Springfield Campmeeting.—We expect a blessed season at Springfield this year. Let us pray much that we may have such a baptism of holy, heavenly power as we have never experienced before. The Lord is coming, and it is time to be all ready, "dead indeed unto sin," "filled with the Spirit," and we like those who are really waiting for his coming. Let all come to make a fresh and entire consecration to Christ, to suffer and do his will without a murmur, during the little time that remains. M. G.

No Paper.—We think mercy demands that we should give our faithful compositors and clerks a week's rest this year. Accordingly, it is purposed to issue no paper the week of August 19th. M. G.

☞ As "our paper" will go to press one day earlier next week, appointments should be received as early as Monday morning.

Fasting and Prayer.—In harmony with our usual custom, we would suggest that Friday, Aug. 7th, be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, before the Lord, that he may most wonderfully bless the National campmeeting to commence at Springfield Aug. 8th, and the Alton Bay meeting to begin Aug. 22d, and all other similar meetings. Let it be the burden of our prayers, that as a people we may receive a fresh baptism of power to labor in the vineyard of the Lord with more energy and success the coming year than during any one in the past. Pray that all the watchmen may be filled with the Holy Spirit, that they may labor with new delight, new zeal, fresh courage, and blessed union, in the last great work to which they have been providentially called to spend their remaining life energies. M. G.

Quilts.—We would suggest, that those who can should bring an extra quilt to lend to some needy ones, who may be at the Springfield campmeeting, without any bedding. Some come so far it is very inconvenient to bring their bedding; and others have none to bring. Think of this, and be blest in loving your neighbor as yourself. Let those who bring quilts report to the campmeeting committee, that they may know where to look for supplies in an emergency. M. G.

We are made sad to learn that "Bro. R. E. Ladd lies at the point of death." He is basking in the sunshine of the smiles of his dear Savior. M. G.

DARK CLOUDS.

Observing men are becoming more and more convinced that these are strange times. They have been looking for improvements in society till they are discouraged, and have settled down in sadness, wondering what these things mean. They can see no bright spot ahead, or "silver lining" to the dark clouds that are rolling up in awful majesty, and seem ready to pour alarming contents upon a wicked world. They have toiled, struggled, organized into protective associations, resolved and re-resolved to reform here and there, in church and state; but still the state of things grows "worse and worse." They may well inquire, "What next? The following is from the Boston Daily Herald, July 10th, 1874:

"It is no easy matter to explain why we should feel so, but of late we have somehow come to think and to believe that this people is becoming as profligate, licentious and altogether wicked as people were during the latter stages of the old Roman Empire. Extravagance, which is only a mild definition of profligacy, is breaking down honor and virtue in home and business circles, while the church is but little better than an emporium of fashion, where piety flashes from the gilt-edged prayers and preaching of overpaid pastors—divines who tax a congregation more money for a year's work than Paul ever received during his entire ministry, or the more eminent divines and reformers of early ages ever dreamed of receiving in a life-time. This church extravagance, both architectural and pastoral, is something more than seed sown by the wayside. It is planting a subtle poison in our homes, grafting piety upon the vestments instead of the hearts of the people, and putting the bounties of Providence into costly temples that ought to go where Christ told the rich man to put his money. Such extravagance is the prime cause of our profligacy, licentiousness and intemperance, the great germs of all sin, vice and crime. It makes the rich wasteful and loose, the poor dissolute, lax and immoral, and all wicked and given over to iniquity. Yet there is no spot nor place in the whole framework of society where extravagance is more carefully fertilized than in the church. From this fountain it radiates, permeating all circles, till at last we find its fruits, day after day, harvested as so much vice and crime in our criminal courts." M. G.

TAKE UP SERPENTS.

Editors of Crisis:—I have been considerably burdened with the words of Jesus in Mark 16: 15–18. It seems to me that vers. 17 and 18 should be in as much force to-day as the two preceding verses. I desire you to give your views through the Crisis. Does the sick person have to exercise that faith as well as those who lay their hands on him? Do you believe that thing can be done in this day? I am inclined to think that it can with the necessary faith.

Yours in the Lord, J. A. Cargile.

It is a fact that verses 9 to 20 inclusive are not found in the Vatican Manuscript, which is the oldest known, dating as early as the fourth century. That closes with the 8th verse of the 16th chapter.

We fully believe, in harmony with the instruction given in the letter of James, that the sick may be healed in answer to prayer, even though the sick one should not exercise faith in that direction. M. G.

A Good Rule.—In Mr. Dalton's address on the subject of "unfulfilled prophecy," at the London Prophetical conference, he very properly remarks:—

"We should as much as possible consult the context in seeking the meaning of any passage. We ought never to read the Bible by bits and scraps; that is a very sad way of treating it, but we ought to consult largely the context, and particularly in the parts relating to prophecy." M. G.

The True Church is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. Wm. Shepherd, Newark, N. J. It contains some excellent things. Price 6 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3 per hundred. Address Bro. Shepherd, at 155 Plane St., Newark, N. J. M. G.

Tent Room.—Those who attend the National Campmeeting at Springfield should bring their own bedding. We have engaged large tents in which they can be furnished with tent-room for ten cents a night. Straw or hay can be obtained on the ground at cost. M. G.

Baptism.—Let those who have not been baptized come to the National Campmeeting at Springfield, prepared to obey the Lord, and be "buried with him by baptism." M. G.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

REPORT OF CALIFORNIA CONF.

The First Advent Christian Conference of the Pacific Coast was organized July 18th, 1874, at San Francisco, in the Eddy street Chapel, by the election of Eld. D. D. Reed President; Eld. T. Howell Vice President; A. M. Seabury Secretary; H. W. Snow Treasurer; A. S. Iredale and W. S. Dibble of San Francisco, Damon Nichols and Geo. W. Ficks of Sacramento, C. Morse and D. Coffin of Santa Clara, A. J. Young and John Pettis of Vallejo, A. T. Hatch of Suisun, Cyrus Cutler of Lakeport, A. P. Strong of Courtland, and J. D. Carey of Santa Rosa, Trustees. The Elders belonging to this Conference were appointed a Committee on Ordination. Eld. R. W. Wilson and Brn. S. E. Jones, A. J. Young and W. S. Dibble, were elected delegates to represent this coast at the National Conference at Springfield, Aug. 8th, 1874. A resolution requesting Eld. J. G. Hook to make California his home was unanimously adopted; also the following:—

Whereas, The Advent Christian Times has been laboring under embarrassments and abuses; and

Whereas, It has shown itself true to the cause of Christ, therefore,

Resolved, That we extend to it our united support.

The following preamble and resolution, introduced by Bro. H. W. Snow, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, There has been a circular, entitled, "Elder Grant's four visits to California," which has been scattered broadcast over the land, and which wholly misrepresents facts in relation to the cause on this coast, and,

Whereas, Elder O. R. Fassett has left this coast without any official knowledge of the churches that brought him here, and has been instrumental in circulating said document, and defending its contents, throughout the East and West, and on this coast; and

Whereas, His course has had a tendency to disaffect many, and has done great injury to the cause which is so dear to us; therefore,

Resolved, That his acts are discountenanced by us, and meet our unqualified disapproval.

Eld. J. G. Hook was made a member of this Conference. Brn. Nichols and Ficks were recommended for the ministry. A resolution tendering the thanks of this Conference to Elder Miles Grant for his visits to this coast was unanimously adopted.

Our meeting commenced on the 16th, and closed with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper on the evening of the 19th. God was present by his Holy Spirit in great power. Sabbath evening seven united with us in church fellowship. Praise the Lord.

NOTES BY THE WAY IN TENN. AND ALABAMA.

Dear Brethren:—I feel like telling the dear saints scattered abroad how the Lord has stood with me, and strengthened me, since I last wrote for our precious Crisis. On Saturday before the fourth Sabbath in June, I started for Ooltewah, E. Tennessee, after having stopped to rest from preaching one day. Found the church (Bethel) well, and struggling hard against the wiles of Satan. Sunday morning, baptized one dear sister, who was received into the fellowship of the church. Had a good time preaching on church discipline. Monday, I went to Mouse Creek, in McMinn Co. Visited as many of the dear brethren and sisters as I could, and tried to speak Monday and Tuesday evenings in the village, and Tuesday at eleven A. M., two miles out, where we spoke in the dwelling of Bro. Madison Johnson, who, with his aged and sociable companion, made us feel at home. Wednesday, went to Philadelphia, and spoke in the M. E. church. Thursday, at ten A. M., being very kindly invited, I spoke in the Baptist church, which was closed against me last winter when there. Found all the people at Mouse Creek and Philadelphia very kind, and manifesting great interest in the truth. The precious seed sown there last winter, by such poor instrumentality, has taken deep root in good hearts, and they are now rejoicing in the light.

Thursday, I returned home, stayed only one day, then left my dear wife and children to attend two funerals on Sunday. Saturday night, spoke to a very large and attentive audience in the door-yard of the dwelling of Bro. J. West. On Sunday morning, learning that a son of the deceased whose funeral sermon I expected to preach, having recently arrived from California, manifested some objection, we refused to preach the funeral sermon, but spoke on the Bible hope of man. Four ministers were present. One old blind Bro., a Baptist minister, being invited to close, gave a few cross fires, such as, "When the body dies, the soul goes to God till the resurrection; then it is reunited, and then all the saints will be made perfect and enjoy perfect happiness," etc. As he was blind, we asked the privilege to explain the difference between soul and spirit, and correct his quotation from Solomon, which was granted. Sunday night, at Bro. John F. Anderson's, near Anderson Station, we had a very precious season in telling the people of the nearness of the Lord's coming.

Monday morning, came to this place (Cowan, Tenn.), and found several strange brethren, who were very kind. Spent the day with Bro. J. M. Stewart, at whose house I am now, and who, with his amiable wife, has made us feel welcome. Monday night, spoke from Acts 1: 6. Three ministers were present, two Christian and one Methodist. They were invited to seats, if they loved Jesus. The Christian church believe the kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost, and of course their theory was in jeopardy. They both endeavored to overthrow what had been said. They seemed very much agitated, and very abruptly, as I thought, gave the people to understand that I had preached falsehood. I submitted myself into the hands of God, who filled me with his love and made me perfectly happy, so that I could not be offended. We had considerable cross firing, much to the interest of the audience, as it was the first sermon they had ever heard on our views in that place. It all passed off in love, and I believe God sanctified the effort to some good. I spent the night and following day with Bro, James Sargent, who had invited me to visit this village, who, with his family, prove to me that they love Jesus. Tuesday night, I spoke on the inheritance, and had a good season. A Bro. Darrel, of Winchester, Tenn., freely and fully endorsed the sermon, and we closed with good feeling in the audience. Went with Bro. and Sr. D. D. Burke to spend the night, and till noon next day. I must say that the people of this place, as a general thing, have manifested more christian courtesy toward me than at any new place I have ever visited. God always has broken down prejudice for me, after my first sermon in any place; but here I found none manifested.

Yesterday, I was closely reading a work on "The Gospel Plan of Salvation," of 661 pp., by Dr. T. W. Brents, of the Christian church. He was endeavoring to prove the establishment of the kingdom on the day of Pentecost. I was reading to a crowd of gentlemen, and carefully marking what I thought to be error, with a pencil. The train rolled up to the office where we were investigating, a stranger stepped in, listened a moment, and asked what book we were reading. We replied, "The Gospel Plan of Salvation." He proved to be Dr. T. W. Brents, the author of the work. We had about thirty minutes to talk, while the engine was being repaired. I told him that according to his view the stone smote the image on the legs, when Rome was in her glory; whereas it it was not to strike till it reached the feet. Last night closed our meetings here, and to-day we start for home, to stay till morning, then to DeKalb Co., Ala. So you see the Lord keeps me in the field. I am blest with better health than when I last reported.

Dear Brn., I must tell you the Lord is gracious to us though we are poor in this world. We love the Lord, and expect to be rich in his kingdom soon. The people of this place have helped me after a godly manner, so that I have lost nothing by coming to see them. Also at Mouse Creek and Philadelphia, some dear ones proved their faith by their works by administering to my necessities. I received from the people within the last month ten dollars, which is more than I had received from my audiences in two years before. Pray for me, dear ones, that God will sustain me. I am looking for Jesus. I believe I live more humble and devoted every day, and enjoy more of his love.

I began this letter at Cowan, but will now finish it at home. O, how I do rejoice and thank God that I found my family well; yet the thought of leaving them in the morning would sadden my heart more, did I not believe Jesus will take care of them. Brn., I am trying to climb higher and higher up the hill of holy and righteous living every day. O do pray that I may be led by the Spirit of Jesus to come to a full and complete consecration, so as to enjoy perfect love, for which I do weep and pray. Yours in Jesus,
J. A. Cargile.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Milton Hughes.

I have neither time nor space to say what I would like. I have been for some years engaged in mission work in the South, and in all this time have I never seen things look so alarming. Can it be that God has begun to pour out his plagues on this part of the country? Perhaps it may be so, and if the providential hand of God does not stay the destroying elements that are fast breeding a famine, in a short time our condition will be alarming. The crops were very short last year; in consequence, people are almost at the point of starvation in some sections. Corn, in many places, is $15 per barrel, and other provision in accordance. If there is not a full crop this season, there must, beyond question, be a year of starvation and suffering before us. What the drought has not destroyed, insects are finishing the work at a fearful rate. What can be done? Nothing, except the great God shall stay it. What shall we do? Bow humbly and earnestly at the throne of grace in sackcloth and ashes, and implore the God of heaven to save us from our impending fate.

I have one request, and that is that all will unite and pray that the Lord may deliver the sunny South for the sake of the few that are righteous; for I know God has some faithful children in this land. The different churches are continually fasting and praying, but as yet without any relief. When will such things end? What will give us satisfaction? What will put an end to all calamities, and what will free our loved ones from the clutches of death? Simply, the coming of the Just One. May he come speedily, and may I, an unprofitable child, be counted worthy to be a guest at the marriage supper of the Lamb. Yours in hope.
Bethel Hill, Person Co., N. C.

[If any wish to help Bro. Hughes, or the Freedmen with whom he labors, it is a good time to lend a helping hand.—M. G.

BRO. J. W. FLOWERS writes from Goosepond, Ala., July 3d—"Some twelve months since, Bro. J. J. Smith came into our neighborhood distributing tracts, when I happened to form his acquaintance at Lamkin's Landing, on the Tenn. river. Notwithstanding he was watched as a stranger, I noted something peculiar in the man, and this led me to make some inquiry as to who he was, and what was his mission. He told me that he was a minister of the Advent Christian Church. This was something new to me, and I asked if he would preach at my house? He said he would. I stirred around, and got up a small congregation, to which he preached. As in the apostolic days some heard the word gladly and others mocked, so it was that night. After this he continued to preach through the community for several days and nights. He distributed tracts freely, which have brought forth their fruit in good season.

In March or April last, he visited us again, and preached on the Abrahamic covenant, and left a two-days appointment for the fourth Sabbath in May and Saturday previous, at my spring. His congregations up to Sunday were small, but at the morning service on Sunday, an immense concourse of people, from far and near, assembled to hear him lecture on the prophetic chart. His reasoning was clear and impressive, and had a good effect on his audience, as was made evident by many of them returning to hear him again at night. At the close of the lecture, he gave away a large number of tracts. He continued to preach through the settlement during the next week or ten days.

Bro. John A. Cargile of Stevenson, Ala., was also present and preached several times with considerable effect. These men have had a hard row to weed; yet, they have weeded it well, and preached themselves from the groves into many of the church houses in the community. In the midst of many enemies, they have now many friends, and have done much to awaken the minds of the people to search the Scriptures, to see whether these things are so or not. In conclusion, permit me to say, I think they have done much for the cause of Christ, and may his Spirit be with them and direct their future course."

Obituaries.

MORRISON. At Coffeyville, Montgomery Co., Kansas, suddenly, of sunstroke, our Bro. James Morrison, aged forty-three years.

This affliction falls heavily upon a large family, also a large circle of friends mourn his loss; but we sorrow not as others which have no hope. He was a firm believer in the precious truths of the Bible, and patiently waited the return of the Master. Jesus said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet he shall live." These words comfort amid sorrow. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss.

"Asleep in Jesus! peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear, no foe, shall dim that hour
Which manifests the Savior's power."

I. E. MORRISON.

CHAPMAN. At Bolton, P. Q., July 6th, 1874, Sister Annie Nelson, wife of Bro. Joseph Chapman, aged seventy-four years.

The aged pilgrim has fallen asleep after years of patient and unremitting toil in the cause of the Master. As a wife and mother her tenderly kindness will long be remembered by the bereaved ones. As a christian, her memory will long be cherished by a large circle of friends. A large concourse of mourning and sympathizing friends assembled to listen to a discourse by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

"Sleep, dearest mother, sleep;
Death shall not hold thee long;
In the morning thou'lt rise
And join the blood-washed throng."

HUGHES. At Bethel Hill, Person Co., N. C., July 17th, 1874, of typhoid fever, Willie B. Hughes, only child of Milton J. and Margarett B. Hughes, aged one year, ten months, and fourteen days.

We laid him away feeling that God will remember him, and comfort us when he shall bring Rachel's children from the land of the enemy.

MILTON J. HUGHES.

GOODWIN. In Elliot, Me., Aug. 7th, 1873, John Edward, son of Jeremiah P. and Isabella D. Goodwin, aged two years, five months, twenty-two days.

"When we see a precious blossom,
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair.
Round its little grave we linger
Till the setting sun is low;
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so.
We shall sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no never,
On the resurrection morn."

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, July 28. A dispatch to the News reports the destruction of property by the floods in Moravia as immense. At least two hundred houses were swept away.

Aug. 1. The correspondence of the Daily News shows that the damage done by the storm in Moravia far exceeds the earlier estimates. Eleven villages and two towns were devastated. The Government has sent troops to assist the inhabitants.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE FLOOD AT PITTSBURG.—Total loss of life 219.—How the Storm Broke.—The following is a description of the awful storm that burst over Pittsburg and Alleghany City, July 26th.

About 6.30 o'clock on Sunday evening, two great black clouds came up from opposite points of the compass—one to the southwest and one to the north east. They rose slowly like two awful demons. Their edges were ragged and black, flecked here and there with patches of fiery colors. A dozen little promontories jotted out here and there like the heads of the hydra upon each, changing shape and appearance every moment and assuming the appearance of a bird, beast or monster, occasionally extending far up across the intervening space, as though to reconnoitre the enemy, and then again receding. But all this time the two great giants, swarthed in inky blackness and almost without outline, slowly approached the other.

Suddenly a noise between a roar and a growl, burst from each. There was no distinct detonation like ordinary thunder, but a low, terrible and continuous mumbling growl, causing the air to vibrate and the very foundations of the earth to shake as though a tertian ague had seized upon the everlasting hills. A fringe of fire like an aurora borealis began to run along the ragged edges, faint at first, but growing in intensity every moment, until it looked as though the two demons had put on an armor of fire. On they came, nearer and nearer, when suddenly a mighty bolt of blinding light leaped from the central head of the demon of the northeast, burned high up in the sky and then fairly struck the opposing demon. A moment, and a deafening crash divided the hot atmosphere and made the earth tremble palpably.

But the demon of the southwest was not even stunned, but paid back his assailant with a forked javelin of sulphurous flame. This was the opening of the grand battle. The long lines of flames that enveloped the combatants ceased to dance and flicker, and like the borealis gathered into tongues of silver and blue fire, and leaped forward simultaneously from both directions until the rapidly narrowing space between them seemed to be an ocean of fire. The two demon clouds met directly over the city and seemed to rock the earth to its uttermost foundation. For a few minutes previous a few heavy drops of rain had been pattering down, but when the two giants met in their death embrace it seemed as though a river had been unchained in the heavens and was falling bodily to the earth below.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1. A fire broke out in Muskegan early this morning and destroyed nearly half of the city. The fire is in the eastern portion of the city and it is believed that a number of mills have been destroyed. About ten squares have been burned over.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing

Saturday, August 8th,

and continuing till the 17th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced, and will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Westboro, Worcester, and the stations to Springfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the New York, New Haven, and Hartford R. Road, we are very sorry to say, that no reduction of fare can be obtained for this year.

On the Connecticut R. R. fare is reduced from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Central Vermont, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vermont Valley Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a CAMPMEETING ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—provided twenty-five or more shall have come over the line operated by the Vt. C., of which we think there is little or no doubt—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Central Vermont Railroad.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Springfield, Athol, and North Eastern Railroad fare is reduced one-half.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R., Campmeeting Tickets will be sold at Nashua, Ayer Junction, Clinton, and Sterling Junction. Be sure and call for Campmeeting Tickets, as no passes will be given out this year.

Fare is reduced on the Boston and Fitchburg Railroad one half from Boston and Fitchburg.

Buy regular tickets at Boston and Fitchburg for Springfield, and receive from the Secretary at the meeting a return pass free.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

From New York via. New Haven Steamers. Fare reduced on this route so that friends can come from New York and return for $5.25.

Pay the regular fare, $3.00 from New York to Springfield, and if you wish to return back the same way, call for a return ticket from New Haven to New York, on the boat, which will be furnished for 50 cents, this ticket to be endorsed on the camp-ground by the Secretary.

As they sell R. R. tickets on the boat only to Springfield, on your return you will have to buy a ticket at the depot in Springfield for New Haven, which, with the return ticket from New Haven to New York, obtained on the boat previously, will take you to New York.

Boat leaves Peck slip at 3 P. M. 23d street E. R., at 3.15 P. M., connecting with steamboat train for Springfield. Also at 11 P. M.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 10 A. M., and at 3, 4, 5, and 9 P. M.

Mr. Burr's carriages will take passengers from depot to camp-ground for 10 cents each.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held on the National Advent camp-ground, Springfield, Mass., commencing Wednesday, Aug. 12th, at 4 o'clock P. M.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association, are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should shnd a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W SMITH, President.
C. C. MARSTON, Sec.

A. C. Times, please copy.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.—The annual meeting and annual campmeeting of the Advent Christian Conference, of Michigan, will be held at Mosherville, on the Fort Wayne, Jackson, and Saginaw R. R., about nine miles north of Jonesville, and fifteen miles south of Jackson, Aug. 1st to 8th inclusive. The grounds are about forty rods from station, beautifully located, and every thing convenient. Inquire for Bro. Samuel Emery and Day Conklin. It is expected to obtain half fare on F. W. and S. R. R. All trains stop at Mosherville. Let this be the best of all our meetings.

CAMPMEETING.—Providence permitting, the fourth annual campmeeting of the Life and Advent Union will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, situated about one and a quarter miles from railroad depot, on land of L. Carew, commencing Aug. 1st, and continuing till Aug. 10th. Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the boarding house on the ground. Board 80 cents per day. Fare on the railroads will be reduced from July 27th to Aug. 26th inclusive. The nature of man, prophecy, holiness, coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, together with other subjects, will be presented. All are cordially invited.

T. R. WEAVER, Secretary.

KANSAS.—Notice is hereby given that the Kansas Mission Tent will be pitched at Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas, August 27th, if the Lord will. Services will commence at eight o'clock P. M., and continue over two Sundays. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come; and let us work for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. Come one, come all.

R. F. CLARK, Sec. Adv. Chris. Conf., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

WE wish some of our preaching brethren would call on us. We will find a place for them to speak in, for we are in need of help here. Please correspond with A. P. Scribner, New Market, N. H.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing

Saturday, August 22nd,

and continue over the Sabbath, AUG. 30th. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 85 cents per day. Single meals—breakfast or supper—35 cts. Dinner 50 cts. Horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cts. per day.

BOSTON AND MAINE R. R. The meeting being located on this road, we rely chiefly on its management for conveyance. The superintendent has made an extra effort to meet the demands of the meeting, and the convenience of those attending, in arranging with lines connecting, so there may be no delay on the part of this road in conveyance. Fare reduced on this road and its branches from August 12th to Sept. 5th.

Purchase campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay at the ticket office at Boston, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Leave Boston at 8.15 A. M., 12 M., 3.30 P. M.
" Portland, 6.15 A. M., 9.10 A. M., 3.15 P. M.
" Rochester, 11.23 A. M., 3.23 P. M., 6.50 P. M.
" Newburyport, 7.30 A. M., 2.40 P. M.

Bangor and Machias line of steamboats will run their boats in connection with the Boston and Maine R. R. at half rate of fare. Superintendent Furber has consented to run an extra train from Portland to Alton Bay on Wednesday, Aug. 19th, Friday 21st, and Monday 24th, leaving Portland on the arrival of the boats. We would recommend this route, as you can reach the ground the same day without delay, and make sure connection. Tickets sold at Bangor, Winterport, Bucksport, Sandy Point, Searsport, Belfast, Camden, and Rockland, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

NORTHERN CONCORD AND CLAREMONT, N. H., R. R. Tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting via. New Market Junction, can be procured of the conductors on the Northern and Concord and Claremont R. R. at reduced rates, good to go and return. Notice that the tickets must be purchased of the conductors, and not of the station agents. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

CONCORD RAILROAD AND ITS BRANCHES. Call for Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets, to be procured at the following stations: Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Manchester, Nashua, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, and Portsmouth.

For the better accommodation of those who attend the meeting from Portsmouth and adjoining towns, a train will be run through the week of the meeting direct from Portsmouth and intermediate stations to Alton Bay, with baggage car attached. Baggage will be checked through via. New Market Junction. By this route you will save the expense and inconvenience of transporting baggage from one depot to the other in Dover; also have the benefit of the reduction of fare, as this road has (for our accommodation) made this arrangement. We would recommend this conveyance. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

GRAND TRUNK. From Lewiston and Auburn via. Grand Trunk, connecting at Portland with Boston and Maine, purchase Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay, and have baggage checked through. By this line fare will be reduced to half rate, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

PORTLAND AND ROCHESTER R. R. Leave Portland at 4.15 P. M., to connect at Rochester with Boston and Maine, fare one way. Fare reduced from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

MAINE CENTRAL. Tickets will be sold at half fare at the following stations: Bangor, Newport, Belfast, Augusta, Hallowell, Gardiner, Richmond, Brunswick, Lewiston, Bath, Dexter, Waterville, Monmouth, Winthrop, Reedfield, and Farmington to Rochester, N. H. via. Conway Junction. All baggage will be checked to Rochester, N. H. Change cars at this place, taking the cars for Alton Bay on the Boston and Maine. Have your baggage rechecked at this station for camp-ground at Alton Bay. No tickets will be sold on this road by conductors, or at any other stations than those named above, unless due notice is given. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

CONN. AND PASSUMPSIC R. R. On this road you will procure tickets only to Wells River. Return passes will be furnished at the meeting for this road. At said Junction purchase tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting at reduced rates, from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

BOSTON AND ALBANY. Tickets sold at the following stations: Natick, Westboro, Worcester, Palmer and Springfield, via. Boston and Maine, to Alton Bay Campmeeting. Fare reduced one third to Boston. $4.70 for the round trip from Worcester; $6.70 from Springfield to Alton Bay. Return passes will be given at the meeting by J. D. Swain. Good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

A reduction will probably be made on the B. C. and M. Road, notice of which will be given hereafter.

We have endeavored to secure, for the accommodation of all who may attend this meeting, the best Rail Road arrangements possible; and it is now very important that the following directions be observed: You will notice that the arrangements of the several Rail Roads differ very much in regard to procuring tickets and checking baggage. In every case call for tickets for

as there are other meetings at the same time of ours. See that you have your baggage properly checked, as advertised by the road over which you pass.

Further particulars may be expected.

KANSAS CAMPMEETING.—The Southern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Topeka, Shaunee Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 13th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been apppointed as committee of arrangements, and are expected to be on the ground the day appointed to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: A. S. Covey, Chairman, Ployboy, Shaunee Co.; J. H. Peak, Mont Cenis, Dick. Co.; Orson Lewis, No. Lawrence, Douglas Co.; C. Crowell, Pleasanton, Lim. Co.; Levi R. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co. Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Bring your baskets well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. R. F. CLARK, Sec., Peach Creek, Wash. Co., Kansas.

Special Notice.

Our History of the Second Advent Message and Mission is now in the hands of the binders, and is to be ready for delivery at the Springfield Campmeeting, and those that follow. As only a limited number can be bound so soon, we hope all who have subscribed and can take them at the campmeetings, or send by friends who will attend to getting them, will do so as early as they can. Others who design to have the book will be supplied if we can do so. All will see the propriety of this when we say, that the postage is about forty cts. on each copy. (We cannot say exactly how much the book will weigh.) All this will be saved by taking them at campmeetings.

All who have subscribed will have them at the prices agreed on, although it is much less than the cost of the book, as we intend to keep covenants. Such will be gainers. Some will want to pay all the book costs when they see it.

We have added near one thousand dollars to the expense above our original design. We might have left out much of this expense on those to subscribers, and kept our covenant, but we preferred to act the generous part, and allow others to do so. The book contains 710 pages of matter, besides 22 portraits, beautifully bound, and on excellent paper. The price will be $3.50 to all who have not subscribed, and 40 cts. postage. The symbols of Daniel are given with fine wood cuts, prepared expressly for the book. Our binder says it ought to sell for $5.00. He showed me a class of books with less work in them, which sell for that price. But we wish the story to go as far and as cheap as possible.

We have done all we could to make it a work that believers will have, and that inquirers will think best to have.

All subscribers who can take them at Alton Bay, Bethel, Vt., Pittsfield, and Mechanic Falls, will be gainers to do so, and all who can buy them at those meetings. We hope to be able to send out by mail to all, as fast as ordered, after Aug. 15th, except perhaps a few days delay while at the campmeetings.

Send your orders plainly written—name, town, and State, and enclose the amount, to secure the book. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

☞ NOTICE is hereby given that the Alton Bay Campmeeting Association will meet at Alton Bay camp-ground, FRIDAY, AUG. 21st, 1874, at two o'clock P. M., to transact business authorized by an act of incorporation passed June 26th, 1874.

COMMITTEE: J. Couch, J. G. Smith, J. D. Swain, T. H. Ford, Benj. Young, H. K. Choate, J. W. C. Pickering.

ALTON BAY.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. COUCH, for Com.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.—The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D. V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th, instead of August 29th, as previously announced. H. F. C., for Com.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Sept. 5th, and hold over Sept. 13th.

W. H. MITCHELL, for Com.

THE campmeeting located at Coventry Centre, R. I., will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

TENT FOR SALE.—A wood cottage, on the camp-ground, near the tabernacle, size 12 by 14. Inquire of Charles Newell, 76 Pendleton Avenue, Springfield, Mass.

EDWIN BURNHAM will preach in the Tremont Temple, Boston, every Sabbath, till Sept. 1st. Perhaps longer. E. BURNHAM.

Pittsfield Me. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting for the eastern part of Maine will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year, in Hathorn's grove at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th. The grove has been much improved by clearing, grading, and deepening wells. It is expected that all who can will put up tents for themselves, and furnish plenty of bedding and food. The Maine Mission Tent will be on hand, and will afford lodging for those who cannot put up tents for themselves; but all must provide bedding for themselves. Be prepared for cold storms. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent. Breakfast and supper, 25 cents each; dinner, 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when dinner will be fifty cents. Also horse keeping, hay, straw and board, will be provided on the ground for all who wish, at reasonable rates. The committee will do their best to obtain reduction of railroad fare, and give timely notice.

COMMITTEE: Jer. Carr, F. A. Baker, S. K. Partridge, Oren S. French, J. M. Tozier, Oscar Farnum, M. W. Corliss, G. L. McKenney, William Clark, Abner Millet.

PORTLAND AND OGDENSBURG R. R.—Persons intending to pass over this railroad to the Mechanic Falls Campmeeting, can secure a return pass free of charge by dropping me a line, stating from what station they are to start.

C. H. SWEET, Steep Falls, Me.

THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. CAMPMEETING will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. The fare is reduced one third on the Hartford and Providence R. R.,—one dollar from Providence and return. The same from Plainfield Junction. Inquire for campmeeting tickets at all way stations between Providence and Plainfield. We expect all our preachers within the limits of this meeting, and others from abroad. Come, brethren and sisters, make a little sacrifice to attend. Do not let trifling things keep you away. Bring your children and unconverted neighbors. We will do the best we can for your comfort. Let much prayer go up from all hearts for the salvation of the people. Do not fail to carefully read Brn. Couch's and Grant's articles on Campmeeting interests. If all take heed to those instructions, we cannot doubt the good results. The Lord will help. Board and horse-keeping the same as last year. E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

WOLFBORO' CAMPMEETING.—There will be a campmeeting at Wolfboro', N. H., commencing Saturday, August 15th, and continuing over Sunday, August 23d. This meeting will be held by believers in the speedy coming of the Son of God, to establish his kingdom in righteousness, to raise his sleeping saints, and change the living ones to immortality. This beautiful and consecrated grove is the one our Trine brethren occupied last year, and is situated on the shore of the charming lake Winnipiseogee, a few rods from Mill Village Station, on the Wolfboro' R. R., and a short distance from the steamboat landing. A reduction of about one half fare has been made us by the Boston and Maine R. R., and also the Eastern and Maine Central. Tickets good from Aug. 10th to Sept. 1st inclusive. Board will be furnished on the ground at 80 cts. per day, or 30 cts. for breakfast and supper, and 40 cts. for dinner, except Sundays, when it will be 50 cts.

JASPER STONE, for the Committee.

NEW PRESTON TENT MEETING.—If the Lord will, the Mission tent will be pitched in Camp's grove (the old place), on Tuesday, Sept. 1st. The meeting is to hold over the following Sunday, and should it be thought best, the meetings will be continued longer, either in the tent or hall in the village. We hope to have a general gathering at this meeting. Come prepared to camp out as at campmeeting. What you lack, we will do the best we can to help you to obtain. We propose to cook and eat together as one family. Come the first day, and stay through. We wish the preaching Brn. to come, whether we have spoken to you or not. To all we say, Come. Whether you have anything to bring or not, come.

H. J. BALDWIN.
C. L. CALHOUN.

THE meeting in the Wayne Co. Tent, at Ontario, N. Y., will close next Sunday, Aug. 9th. The discussion on the state of the dead, between Eld. Hardy, the Methodist minister of the place, and myself, will close on Friday evening. We hope to see a large number of brethren and sisters at our last meeting. The Lord is doing a great work at this place. Thursday evening, Aug. 13th, we expect (D. V.) to commence meeting in this tent at Williamson, Wayne Co., N. Y., on the Ontario Shore R. R. We will find homes for all who will come. Jesus is at the door, and we shall not meet many more times before he comes.

JAS. E. WELLS.

NOTICE.—As I expect my labors in this section will soon close, I would say I shall be ready to go and preach "the gospel of the kingdom" anywhere, as the Lord may open the way, the coming fall and winter. Any wishing to correspond with me can direct for the present to A. P. MOORE, Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y.

THE first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wisconsin A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Big Creek, commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, to hold over the Lord's day. We expect a number of the preaching brethren to be present to assist in preaching the word.

E. P. GRAVES.

IOWA CAMPMEETING.—There will be a campmeeting in Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, beginning Aug. 28th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, also groceries for those who desire to board themselves, also feed for horses. Help from abroad is expected as the Lord may direct.

For the Committee, J. RIDLEY.

BARN MEETING.—There will be a meeting in B. W. Moony's barn, near the neck road, Moultonborough, N. H., Saturday, Aug. 8th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. S. BRAGG.

FOR SALE.—Tent 148 Alton Bay camp-ground is for sale. It has accommodations for six or eight persons, having a cook house or L connected, with stove, etc. Price $100. This tent has a front view on Lake Avenue, overlooking the Bay, steamboat and railroad landings, within five rods of the boarding tent. Inquire on the ground of Bro. T. E. WOOD, or of H. K. CHOATE, Augusta, Me.

WE commenced our tent meeting at this place (Elmira, N. Y.) Wednesday, July 29th, and it will continue as long as duty demands.

JOHN T. ONGLEY, C. F. SWEET.

THOSE who desire to preach in Rochester, N. Y., will please correspond with J. S. Maynard, 34 Lorimer St., or A. G. Andrews, 27 Comfort St., Rochester, N. Y.

ALTON BAY.—We wish to sell our house and furniture, at much less than cost, built last year; first house north of McKinstry and Wallace tent. Price $44. Inquire of Wm Hawkes, 74 Meridian St., East Boston, or Jasper Stone, on the ground.

THE IOWA GENERAL UNION CONFERENCE AND CAMPMEETING will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonables rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding. J. RIDLEY, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting. J. R.

THE Evangel Tent will be pitched in Boothbay (near the harbor) Aug. 11th, and continue as long as thought best. Brn. and Srs. will provide for themselves. Room in the tent for lodging, etc. Come and help. This is a new place for our faith. Pray for us. H. B. SEVEY.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Repriuted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. AG'T.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

DISCIPLESHIP.

Follow me faithfully,
If thou wouldst truly be
My disciple, saith the Lord.
Nothing doubting, though the way
Seemeth darker every day;
Sorely tried, and oft beset,
Stumbling into Satan's net,
Strong in faith, though weak in flesh,
Pray, and gird thyself afresh.
Follow me, follow me, faithfully.

Follow me patiently,
If thou wouldst truly be
My disciple, saith the Lord.
What he gives thee may be small;
Thankful be he gives at all;
'Tis, perchance, a lowly seat
Keeps thee near the Saviour's feet.
Be thy portion mean or spare,
Eat as if 'twere angels' fare.
Follow me follow me, patiently.

Follow me joyfully,
If thou wouldst truly be
My disciple, saith the Lord.
Wear thy cross as 'twere a crown
Casting heavenly radiance down;
Walk so free and far from sin,
As if thou hadst entered in
Yonder city, fair and bright,
Where the dwellers walk in white.
Faithfully, patiently,
Joyfully follow me, saith the Lord.

THE RESURRECTION BODY.

H. BRITTAIN.

II.—Its Aspect.

In continuing the extracts, I would commend to the readers the statements that will be put before them, and urge upon them the necessity of always getting as clear insight as it is possible of the things relating to the future glory of man. Secret things do indeed belong to the Lord our God; but the things that are revealed belong to us and our children. While we cannot understand the means by which God, through the Lord Jesus, performs his wondrous works, yet we do understand that his works will be done in accordance with the word he has given us; and, the the imperfection of man made like unto the perfection which exists and has ever existed in other parts of his dominion, visible there, though, at present, invisible here.

"In the last section, the identity of our present body with the resurrection was maintained, so far as its essential characteristics are concerned; but I must now proceed to show how, as I believe, it will in some respects differ materially from it.

"With this purpose in view, it will be necessary that we should again recur to St. Paul's words in 1 Cor. 15, upon the subject of the present and of the resuscitated body, and on the points of contrast between them. 'All flesh,' we hear him saying, 'is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; but one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body.' vers. 39–44. It was, I conceive, abundantly proved in the last section, that the apostle's remarks in the passage do not, as many suppose, militate against the true materiality, or the real physical character of the resurrection body; but are in perfect harmony with both.

"While, however, this is undoubtedly true, his description of it clearly shows that most material changes will be wrought in its condition, which will make it differ in some respects very greatly from the present. Some of these changes we have already had to notice, as, for instance, the change from mortality to immortality, which, as we saw, will be caused by a change in the animating principle, the pneuma, or Holy Spirit, taking the place of the psyche, or animal soul. But there is another point of difference which we must now notice, and that is the change from 'dishonor' to 'glory,' which we are told shall take place. What the glory will consist in, we are not here told; it is simply declared that such a change will take place. But the expression implies that a most material change will be wrought in the actual condition of the body itself; for (as should be carefully noticed) the various expressions of the apostle do not refer to a state or condition external to the body—to one, in short, in which it will be placed—but to the condition of the body itself. It is sown in a state of corruption, weakness and dishonor; it will be raised in one of incorruption, power, and glory.

"It is by no means difficult, I conceive, to show wherein this 'glory' of the future body will in all probability consist. There is nothing here to point it out, but there is so much in other parts of the inspired volume, which would evidently seem to bear upon it, that there can be no reasonable ground of doubt as to what will be its nature—in some respects, at least. This, I believe, can be clearly proved; viz., that *the resurrection body will be distinguished by a visible brightness. And if so, then we cannot but connect the fact with the 'glory'† which we are told shall mark its condition. But be this as it may, the proposition just stated admits, I conceive, of full and conclusive proof; and this I now proceed to endeavor to show.

"1. It will be found directly asserted in numerous passages of Scripture. The first we would select for consideration is the following:—'And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever.' Dan. 12: 2, 3. Here we are surely taught these two things, viz.: First, that a visible brightness will distinguish the persons of the saints hereafter; and, Secondly, that it will admit of degrees; for there is first the brightness of the visible firmanent, and next that of the stars. This passage alone, therefore, ought to be considered sufficient to decide the question, and no doubt would be at once admitted to be so, were it not for the old controversy about literality—spirituality; if, in short, the notion had not taken possession of some minds that the words are to be understood in a purely spiritual sense, and not in a literal one, and therefore that the brightness foretold will be, not visible or physical, but purely moral. It would be found, however, to be no very easy task to show how such a view can be made to comport with the words, or what in this case the expressions actually mean. That brightness, or light, is employed in Scripture in a figurative sense, there can be no doubt, as, for instance, by our Lord—'Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is heaven'; but it would be absurd to argue from this that the term is always so used; e. g., when it is said, 'Let there be light, and there was light.' In short, the nature of the subject, or the context, it may be, must in all cases decide the meaning. These are abundantly sufficient in the present instance to show that the literal and obvious meaning of the words is the only true one. I repeat, therefore, that we are here taught that the persons of the glorified saints will be distinguished by a visible brightness, and that brightness will be marked by degrees.* And this agrees with the illustration of St. Paul upon the subject, as—'One star differeth from another star in glory; so also is the resurrection from the dead.' His primary object, I conceive, in the passage of which these words form a part, is simply to show that the resuscitated body will in some respects differ materially from the present one, though in all that is essential to its true corporal nature, it will be the same; hence his other illustration—'all flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds'; but when he draws a comparison between the various celestial bodies, and observes that 'one star differeth from another star in glory,' he certainly seems to refer to the different degrees of glory which will distinguish the saints hereafter, and which will, as I conceive, undoubtedly mark the degree of their reward.

* This view was held by the author of a treatise "On the Hope of the Faithful," given in Coverdale's Remains, and is thus stated by him:—"Wherefore the glorified bodies shall be clear, bright, and shining bodies, even as the body of Christ was in his transfiguration upon the Mount of Tabor; of whom it is specified in the gospel, that his face was as bright as the sun, and his clothes did shine as the light. After the resurrection, did the Lord show unto his disciples his palpable and visible, that is, his very true, substantial body; but the brightness and shine he reserved (in order) to teach and instruct the weak here beneath. Like as also after the resurrection he did eat and drink, not that he needed any such thing, but that he so would declare and prove the true resurrection of the body. The glorification also is set directly against the low estate and dishonor, as Paul evidently declareth, saying: 'He shall change our vile body, that he may make it like unto his own glorious and glorified body.'"—Remains, p. 179. Parker Soc. ed.

Bullinger also writes to the same effect, and employs the same argument.—Decades, vol. 1, 174, 175. Parker Soc. ed.

† St. Paul applies the term "glory" to the visible splendor of Moses' face when he came down from the mount, and has thus, I conceive, determined the question. (2 Cor. 3: 7.) It is also used after the same manner by St. Luke in his account of the transfiguration: "And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias, who appeared in GLORY." (Luke 9: 30, 31.) So in reference to the light that shone round the shepherds to whom the birth of the Savior was announced: "And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them." (Luke 2: 9.) So also by St. John: "And after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his GLORY." (Rev. 18: 1. See farther, Ezek. 43: 2; and 1 Kings 8: 10, 11.

* "I am very desirous that all that appears in the text of this Essay, in the way of direct proof, should be made to rest as much as possible solely upon the evidence of Scripture. I therefore give the following in a note, rather than embody it in the text, though it is rather intended for illustration than for proof.

"We have already heard the apostle say, 'All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds'; that is, they are all alike, material and physical, but they differ in kind. And thus, he says, will it be with the present one—'So also is the resurrection of the dead.' He has exemplified his subject thus far, it will be observed, by a reference to the animal world; though he does so afterward, by comparing 'celestial bodies' with 'bodies terrestrial'; but his first examples are taken from different kinds of animal bodies.

"Now, it is perfectly legitimate, and the example of the apostle proves it to be so, to illustrate great things by small, however great may be the difference between them, if only the principle on which the comparison is made be but a sound one. I venture, therefore, to remark that even now we have animal bodies which are truly self-luminous—which shine, that is, with a brightness sufficiently great to make themselves visible by night, though not by day, when the superior light of the sun prevails. I need scarcely say I refer to the various orders of luminous insects of which this is true. As for instance, our own glow-worm (Lampyris noctiluca); the fire-flies (Elater noctilucus) of South America, and the lantern-flies (Fulgora lanternaria) of India, all of which, though diminutive creatures, are yet as true examples of self-luminous animal bodies, and serve as much to exemplify the idea involved in such an expression, as if they were among the magnates of creation. They are quite sufficient to illustrate our subject, and to show us that there is no reason whatever why we should regard the idea as any thing so very extraordinary, or even indeed new, that the resuscitated body shall be distinguished by a visible splendor; for we see that we have something of the kind already. The difference would seem to be only one of degree. The creatures above referred to, as belonging to the present creation, are luminous; but yet their light is only sufficient to make itself visible by night; that of the resurrection will be sufficient to do this by day, and that too, as we have reason to believe, under conditions of light far higher than those which prevail at present.

"But it must be remembered that an actual case of this kind,—that is, of a human body, distinguished by a visible brightness, and that, too, sufficiently great to render it conspicuous even under the light of day,—has already occurred. I now refer to the case of Moses, when he came down from the Mount, and when 'the skin of his face shone' with a splendor that, until he had covered it with a veil, the Israelites were unable to bear, for (to use St. Paul's words) 'they could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance' (2 Cor. 3: 7); see also Ex. 34: 29–35). How exceedingly intense, therefore, must have been its splendor! And it must also be remembered that, however typical or symbolic this circumstance may have been,—and that it was symbolic we learn from St. Paul's remarks upon it,—still its real and actual character remains the same. The brightness may have been emblematic of the glory, or excellence of this dispensation; and the veil, of its metaphysical character, seeing that its various rites and ceremonies covered, as it were, spiritual truths; and it might also have been a significant emblem of the darkness of the Jewish mind, in reference to the true meaning of the law; but all this leaves the reality and literality of the event, viz., of the brightness of the face, and the veil put upon it, untouched and unaffected. The brightness, notwithstanding any spiritual signification it might have, yet afforded a true and actual case of man's person being distinguished by a visible splendor; and this shows us that the very same thing may hold true hereafter in reference to the brightness which will distinguish the person of the glorified saint. That too may be, and, I doubt not, will be, emblematic,—emblematic, that is, of their moral condition,—but it will not on this account be the less real and actual. The two things; viz., the reality and the signification, are not opposed to, or destructive of each other, as many seem to suppose, but are mutually supporting, and add greatly to each other's significancy. The bodily splendor or glory will be throughout eternity a visible emblem of their moral glory, the different degree of the latter being, in all probability, marked by the varying degrees of the former; but that must be real and actual, or its use and significance as an emblem could not exist."

THE WORK IN THE TENNESSEE RIVER VALLEY IN ALABAMA.

To the Board of the A. A. M. Society.

Thanks and honor be to the Lord for the good news I am about to report. I reported to you from Dodsonville how the work had gone on up to that time. Since then, I have continued daily in the work. I think I have preached to more people in the last thirty days, than I ever did in the same length of time in my forty years ministry. A majority of my meetings were in the night, the farmers all being too busy to leave their crops in the daytime. I visited this valley last fall, and preached from house to house, leaving tracts all along the route. Bro. Jas. T. Evans, a Methodist minister, has been so much interested as to write me for tracts for distribution, which I sent him. These opened up the way for a hearing of the word by my mouth. Bro. Evans has been reproached, and an effort made to defame his moral character since he came into these views; but he has lost nothing in consequence. His own people have the utmost confidence in him.

After Bro. Cargile left me at Concord, I filled an appointment at a private house, and had a large turn out. Bro. Joseph Wheeler of the Christian order, cheerfully assisted in the services. From there I went to a Presbyterian church, and found a packed house, all seeming anxious to hear more of "the new doctrine." I preached on the signs of the coming of the Savior. The Lord helped me. I distributed tracts to the eager crowd. I trust the seed has fallen on good ground. Next, I went on foot over the mountains, ten miles, under a scorching sun. Stopped with Bro. Wheeler, the preacher. I found him to be better acquainted with the Scriptures than most men of learning and study; though his learning is limited and his opportunities poor. He labors for the support of his family, yet studies and preaches much. His amiable wife teaches her children at home. Her son, nine years old, hearing that I was coming over with my prophetic chart, and wishing to understand it, had in four days found time to read the prophecies of Daniel nearly through, the second time. At night, we preached on the perilous times. Hope some were awakened. Bro. Wheeler is becoming deeply interested.

The next day I stayed till noon with Bro. Wheeler, and some of his intelligent friends who are inquiring for the truth. The time passed so pleasantly, I over-stayed my time. Under the most oppressive sun, with heavy luggage, I "struggled up a mountain," threaded my way along a narrow path overhung with bushes, dripping with rain from a recent shower. I reached the chapel in time, but I was pretty wet. I tried to preach to a small assembly, it being too wet for the people to turn out. After meeting, I went two miles for lodging, and went to bed wet. Got up with sore throat, headache and fever. A good brother furnished me with a horse to ride over the mountain six miles to my appointment for eleven o'clock, at the village of Woodville. I arrived in time, but was glad to learn that owing to another meeting near town, no appointment was announced for me till night. Here is a new field on the Memphis and Charleston R. R. None of us, or our tracts were ever known here. Here is a fine, thickly populated valley of thrifty farmers. Some are Methodists, and have a good house in town which they tendered to me; but nearly all of them are primitive Baptists, the people that had thrown away their best preacher; our Bro. J. A. Cargile. They knew that we preached the same "heresy." By night, with rest and care, I was somewhat refreshed. Met a full house. Was introduced to six primitive Baptist ministers. One of them consented to open the service with singing and prayer. I preached on the inheritance, from Gal. 3: 29. I had liberty in speaking, and tried to make it plain that the saints will have an inheritance on the glorified earth.

Sunday morning I went to a Baptist meeting. Was not invited to participate with them, and did not expect it. But there were no signs of war on Adventists. I announced my intention to preach in town at 3 o'clock P. M., from the prophetic chart. At the hour the house was full to a jam in every standing place. The doors and windows were crowded with faces, all eager to see and hear. The preachers were on hand again, and heard without any signs (so common to them) of approval or disapproval. I never had better liberty, till the heat overcame me, and twice I came near fainting. I begged to be excused, drew off my coat, took breath a moment, and went on to the end very well. Here I distributed a good many tracts, but held in reserve the doctrinal for the ministers, several of whom expressed a willingness to investigate. I guess by this time they have found out what the "heresy" is, of which they have heard so much. I think a deep impression was made on the minds of many. I was kindly entertained by one of the preachers, who propounded a great number of questions, which I answered with the Bible.

Monday, my throat was very sore. Had to rest, and refrain from conversation, but God's blessing on "Cotton's French Pain Cure," relieved me in time for Tuesday night's appointment. Many out, for a night meeting in the country.

Wednesday night I preached in the town of Larkinsville. The congregation was said to be the largest that had assembled there for five years past. My subject, the visions of Dan. 2nd, 7th and 8th chapters, had been previously announced. As I retired in the dark to my lodgings, I could hear the people's remarks about the discourse. One said, "The old man is crazy and that sure." Another, "He hit off the Catholics mighty well." Another, "He never did anything but read all his life."

Thursday, I turned again towards the river valley. Met with Bro. Wheeler and his people at Liggin's chapel, six or seven miles south. Had a small, but much interested congregation. Some had come out to hear me on the chart, but I did not use it. At the close, I was called upon to exhibit and explain it. My walk through the hot sun, and preaching without rest, had prostrated me. I gave the chart to Bro. Wheeler, who hung it up, and proceeded to explain, much to the satisfaction of the people. Bro. Wheeler is awake now. Stopped with Dr. Story, a very intelligent brother, who appreciates Bible truth, come from whom it may. He kindly furnished me with a horse to ride to my appointment next day. I crossed over to the south side of the Tenn. river. Preached Saturday night, and Sunday, 10 o'clock. Congregations small. Many hard things had been said of the "old heretic" in this section, and much prejudice prevailed; but some were willing to hear and had their prejudice killed. In the afternoon, I recrossed the river, and by special request preached at the Goose Pond church, now open to me, without any dissent. Thanks to the Lord for that grace that helped me to preach his truth in love by moonshine, in the groves, till he opened their hearts to attend unto the word, and induced them to open their doors. I met with about twice as many as could get into the house. We took the seats to a grove for the ladies. The men mostly sat on the ground. I had been requested by a Presbyterian to preach on the destiny of the wicked. I complied. I am told that many have changed their views since I began to preach in that neighborhood. The Presbyterian minister, John A. Bryan, is as thoroughly changed as any of them. He told me that on the first Sunday in this month, having prepared his notes for his sermon, he found that he could not preach upon a subject that his mind was not upon. He had diligently studied Adventism as presented to his mind in our preaching and tracts. He felt it to be his duty to inform the elders of his church that his views of God's plan of redemption had undergone a change. He could not preach around the doctrine of the Adventists. He must preach it, or his mouth was sealed. His elders told him that they would not dictate what he must or must not preach. O! how free he was now. Two months ago, he said if Smith preached his stuff in that pulpit then he would never preach in it again himself. He has recanted, confessed, and apologized. Now he rejoices in the privilege of entering that desk with the same message, now precious to him. Truth is precious when it reaches an honest heart. Bro. Bryan proposes, as his church accepts his preaching, to continue with them until the meeting of Presbytery. It remains to be seen whether his church will stand by him or not. He is fully prepared for the worst.

Bro. B. is not quite twenty-six years old. Has been preaching five years and teaching school. Is a fair English scholar, amiable in disposition, and devoutly pious; is much beloved in the community. He is a married man, having an amiable and intelligent wife, with one child. Confinement does not agree with Bro. B. He proposes to travel down through the center of the state in Sept., and says he would be pleased to distribute tracts all the way, if you will furnish them. He thinks if I should go with him, he could introduce me to points where much good might be done. Two other preachers have proposed to me to go with them into the interior of the State, one to spend the month of July, the other August; Bro. B. September and October. If I had the means to supply the wants of my family, and the necessary expenses for the journey, I should like to carry the judgment message to those people. Can you help me a little? I do not feel able to make many long trips on foot as I have been doing.

Bro. J. O. Gray, minister of the Christian church, proposes to make the July trip. He is with us except in one point.

J. J. Smith.

"AS CHRIST ALSO RECEIVED US."

C. H. SWEET.

Says Paul, "Wherefore, receive ye one another, as Christ also received us." Rom. 15: 7. How did Christ receive us? Read Matt. 18: 21–35, and you will find it beautifully illustrated. We there have presented the kindness of the Lord in forgiving the truly penitent, fitly illustrated in the forgiveness of a debt of nine million dollars. The course of ingratitude, and the exacting spirit of the natural heart, are illustrated in the course of the man with his fellow, who owed him the comparatively small sum of twenty dollars.

Not only does this portion of Scripture teach us how merciful the Lord is to us, and that the same spirit of kindness and forgiveness should actuate us in our intercourse with each other; but we are taught in the reversing of the merciful decision in this case, that our course of action with our fellow-men is to decide the case, whether we remain in the favor of God. This Scripture sets before us the manner in which Christ receives the repenting sinner. May we have a heart to cherish the same spirit toward each other.

A CROWN.

B. S. WILLARD.

"I expect a crown to be placed upon this unworthy head of mine," said the man of God, while the perspiration was coming from every pore, as he was closing a Noahic testimony to this age, that the day of doom is at hand. Noah's work of faith, and its reproach, was vividly set before us, and then its counterpart in our own age and work, in the light of Scripture, and its fulfillment was flashed out in such clearness and power, that conviction of its truth ruled the hour. sSaint shouted, and sinners must have feared.

It was our privilege to hear Elder Bowman, from South Carolina, under the tent now spread in Camden, N. J., on the 19th, afternoon and evening, and as the services closed, our hearts exulted in the use of the words we used to sing in '43,—

"I'm glad I'm in this band—Hallelujah!"

Haddonfield, N. J.

God's law ennobles; obedience to it develops nobility, develops capacity, develops volume of character, and gives strength, stability, and refinement of character, as nothing else can.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Where shall we go? How shall we spend the day? are questions that came up for decision in the Crisis of June 17th, by Bro. Hemenway. To the beautiful grove which he proposed, we could not go, so we decided to spend the day at our chapel with the children of our Sabbath school. We gathered there of all ages, from the old lady of four-score years, down to the little infant. Four generations were represented in one family. The exercises of the day were commenced by singing the hymn, "Shall we gather at the river." A portion of Scripture was read by the superintendent, and prayer offered. The time was then devoted to the children. Some read selected pieces, others recited beautiful hymns and texts of Scripture, interspersed with singing. Then the older ones were called. Interesting remarks were made by brethren and sisters; some who had been connected with Sabbath schools for over half a century. We were then called to partake of the food which the table showed had been bountifully provided for us. After all were satisfied, what remained was gathered and distributed to the poor, whom we have among us. We were then called to order, and remarks were made by the superintendent. Singing followed, and with prayer, the exercises of the day were closed.

July 5th, Bro. Pratt was with us, and administered the ordinance of baptism to three happy souls, all heads of families. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and let all within me praise his holy name. R. L. Parker.

HYMN.

Bear the burden of the present,
Let the morrow bear its own:
If the morning sky be pleasant,
Why the coming night bemoan?

If the blackened heavens lower,
Wrap thy cloak around thy form;
Though the tempest rise in power,
God is mightier than the storm.

Steadfast faith and hope unshaken
Animate the trusting breast;
Step by step the journey's taken
Nearer to the land of rest.

All unseen, the Master walketh
By the toiling servant's side;
Comfortable words he talketh,
While his hands uphold and guide.

Grief, nor pain, nor any sorrow
Rends thy heart to him unknown;
He to-day and he to-morrow,
Grace sufficient gives his own.

Holy strivings nerve and strengthen;
Long endurance wins the crown;
When the evening shadows lengthen,
Thou shalt lay the burden down.

SANCTIFIED THROUGH THE TRUTH.

My mind has been in a condition of bewilderment. Like a vessel in a fog, I could not ascertain my position, or satisfy myself that my course was either right or safe. I felt that I was not living that life of faith and obedience which the Scriptures clearly require.

But how to reach that position of divinely wrought holiness, I knew not. That I was not right was as clear as a sunbeam, but how to get so, I knew not. I read everything that came to hand on the subject, and corresponded with several individuals whom I supposed capable of assisting me; but all apparently to little purpose. Not that all this was really labor lost, but it seemed at the time that I was gaining nothing.

I was ignorant, and the Lord was leading me in a way I knew not. But I was in the hands of a kind and skillful Physician, who gave his remedies adapted to my wants rather than my tastes. I now see that what the Lord does to save us from sin, is just the thing calculated to effect the object aimed at. He did not leave me to my own way; neither did he trust me with my own management. He undertook for me, and the way I have been led has proved itself to be right.

But I must now tell where I am, and what has been done for me. And here I must proceed cautiously; we have doubtless a right to tell all that the Lord really does in us and for us. In the first place, I will say, that I can now understand fully the idea of having a Bible experience. The Lord has taught me by his word. This is a new field for me, but the most glorious of any experience I ever had. When I first read the views of the author of "Faith and its Effects," I did not see the power of the thing. But the Lord took that very course with me, and I was amazed at the result!

It does seem to me now that I obtain a clearer knowledge of more Scripture in one day than during a month formerly. And then what conviction of the truth! I cannot describe it; but those who have experienced it alone can know. The prophet says, "All thy children shall be taught of God, and great shall be the peace of thy children."

And now how inestimably precious is the Bible! Let him that hath a dream tell it, but I prefer this method of instruction. The word of God is my meditation day and night. I can lean on nothing else with confidence now. How full of meaning is every passage of Holy Writ! It meets my every want, answers all my difficulties, solves all my perplexities! I do indeed find it "profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction and instruction in righteousness," so that I am thereby thoroughly furnished for every good work. If I ask the Lord for instruction on any point, I am sure to get my answer by reference to the word, and that in most instances before I rise from prayer. I do not wonder that the natural man understandeth not the things of the Spirit, for they are spiritually discerned. My heart says, "Praise the Lord!" and those who read these lines will say so too.

Another experience I will mention called the "rest of faith." The term expresses the idea as I now apprehend it. My experience verifies the Scripture declaration: "We who believe, do enter into rest." This rest is truly ceasing from our own works. For it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure. My labors, and toils, and struggles are over, and my soul rests in God. I am given up into his hands as his instrument to be used by him for the accomplishment of his purposes. I am no longer my own, but his by purchase, and to be used wholly in his service.

As to the extent of holiness I see no end. It is just as illimitable as the source from whence it proceeds. The term, when used as expressive of a state into which mortals, through the blood of the everlasting covenant may enter, implies a life hidden in God. Without Christ we can do nothing. Through Christ, who strengtheneth us, we can do anything that he would have us to do.

When John was asked who he was, he replied, "I am a voice." God was using him to point out a Savior. This is my will to be a voice, and have the Spirit of the living God furnish the matter and manner. What an idea does the Scripture present in the declaration, "Ye are the temple of the Holy Ghost!" "I will dwell in them and walk in them." And are we indeed thus called to be the representatives of God on earth? Has the great God no better way of manifesting himself than to take our bodies and act out himself in us? Surely professed christians do not realize the fact. I do not wonder that the Holy Spirit leaves so many, for they do no honor to the being they represent. Most surely christians are called to exhibit before the world an indwelling God, for the Triune Deity takes up his abode with the disciple who loves him and keeps his words.

My all-absorbing desire is to be literally lost in God. To have no wish or aim apart from the will of God. To keep all, body, soul, and spirit, at the service of God. This is my idea of Scriptural Sanctification. —Rev. Dr. Huntington in Guide to Holiness.

LEARNING TO WALK.

A little child about to be taught to walk—the mother knows that child won't learn to walk by sending to London and purchasing a discourse on the necessity of walking and reading it; she is equally certain of another thing, that, all her threatenings would not make her child walk; it would not take a step for all that. Mothers are wise enough to know that the only way to teach a child to walk is to allure it. What doth she do? She sets it up against a chair, and then holds out an apple, or a sweetmeat, or toy. The young one deliberates—"If I take a step I know I shall fall;" at last the temptation overweighs all the deliberation; it takes the first, tottering step—one, two, three; it reaches its mother's finger, and rests awhile; then a little further, and further and further; till, step by step, the feat is performed, and in the family annals it is recorded—"the child has walked the first time across the room."

Some smile, and say, "Such humble metaphors should not be used." But my Savior talked about "eggs," and "fish," etc.; you can find the parables out if you like. And in Hosea, there is a similar figure employed; "I taught Ephraim also to go; taking them by the arms," which means, he taught him how to walk. This is the figure; now mark! it is just the way Christ brings us to heaven. There we stand, trembling to take the first step; but he holds out his beauty—his own fair character—and says, "Come unto me, all ye that are meek and lowly of heart." We take the first step. Then he holds out another bait. "I will give you rest." Then we take another step, and all the way he allures us on by the recompense of reward, and I don't know that we are not allured by the black river of death; wading through that dark stream, with the hope of the resurrection of the just, and with the glory of the righteous in heaven. This I do know, if I hope to bring sinners to Christ, it can't be by frightening them; it must be by alluring them.—Spurgeon.

HOME AND HEALTH.

"HE GETS DRUNK."

"He's the smartest young man in our class."

"Yes, but he gets drunk."

"Oh, but he is so fine looking, so noble, and so talented withal! His composition yesterday was the very best in our division. He writes splendidly! They say he's writing for a magazine, no older than he is, and not out of school yet! Won't he be a great man, though, some day?"

"No, I don't think he will."

"Why not?"

"He gets drunk."

"O, that's nothing; a good many smart men get drunk. Every young man has his wild oats to sow; and because a fellow gets a little boozy once in a while, I wouldn't condemn him forever; quite likely he'll outgrow it when he gets older and sees the folly of it."

"More likely that will outgrow him, and as to his getting a little boozy, I'm afraid he was a good deal so when the boys found him beside the walk, the other night, and had to carry him to his room, dodging around street corners, and skulking through byways, so that none of the Professors would see him. I tell you a person that drinks at all isn't to be depended on. The only young men that I have any confidence in, are those that let intoxicating liquors entirely alone."

"Well, I don't care, he's good and smart, any how, and I like him."

"I don't, he gets drunk!"

So the conversation ran on between two shoolmates who were walking just ahead of me. Ah, how those words, "He gets drunk," kept ringing in my ears! Possessed of a noble manhood and a glorious intellect; blessed with the greatest and best of God's gifts; having the love and approbation of teachers; admired and looked up to by associates; the pride and hope of a fond father, intertwined in the heart and life of a doting mother, united in close and tender bonds with brothers and sisters; holding in his hand the honor and good name of the institution with which he is connected, of the society in which he mingles, and yet—"gets drunk."—Exchange.

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

An esteemed clergyman writes thus:

Very recently a little boy in my parish only six years of age, was sent by his mother to fetch his father from a public house.

He found his parent drinking with some other men. One of them invited the little fellow to take some beer.

Firmly and at once the boy replied: "No, I can't take that. I am in the Band of Hope."

The men looked at one another, but no one was found to repeat the temptation.

The man then said:

"Well, if you won't take the beer, here's a penny for you to buy some bull's eyes,"—a kind of confectionery.

The boy took the penny, and said:

"I thank you; but I had rather not buy bull's eyes. I shall put it into the Penny Bank."

The men looked at one another, and for some moments were entirely silent. At last one of them rose and gave utterance to his feelings in these words:

"Well, I think the sooner we sign the pledge, and put our savings in the Penny Bank, the better."

The men immediately left the house.

Such was the effect of the two speeches of a boy only six years old. How many old people have made much longer but less effective speeches! "A little child shall lead them."—Gem.

A WAYSIDE COURTESY.

I was once walking a short distance behind a very handsomely dressed young girl, and thinking, as I looked at her beautiful clothes, "I wonder if she takes half as much pains with her heart as she does with her body!"

A poor old man was coming up the walk with a loaded wheelbarrow, and just before he reached us, he made two attempts to go into the yard of a small house; but the gate was heavy, and would swing back before he could get through.

"Wait," said the young girl, springing lightly forward, "I'll hold the gate open," and she held the gate until he passed in, and received his thanks with a pleasant smile as she went on.

"She deserves to have beautiful clothes," I thought, "for a beautiful spirit dwells in her breast."—Home Guardian.

Ice Water.—Who among us will inaugurate a crusade against ice water, and institute a reform that is needed not merely by a few inebriates, but by all classes of civilized society? There is no question that the present immoderate use of ice water and other cold drinks is almost as pernicious as that of alcoholic stimulants. It does not produce disease and death in such horrifying forms; but it does induce dyspepsia and other derangements of the stomach, and, when taken after severe exercise or while perspiring freely, has often resulted in sudden death. Ice is good in its place, and very useful for preserving meats and vegetables and in preparing cooling drinks for the sick. But no person ever needs large potations of ice water, and he who has an intelligent regard for his health will be careful not to use any drink that is more than moderately cool in hot weather. As a rule, that person is healthiest who can go longest without drink of any kind; but constant drinking of ice water excites feverishness and thirst, and makes the meat it feeds on. We need a temperance crusade against this foolish and pernicious indulgence, of which those who call themselves "temperance" people too often furnish a dangerous example.—Troy Times.

DRINKING CAUSES APOPLEXY.

It is the essential nature of all wines and spirits to send an increased amount of blood to the brain. The first effect of taking a glass of wine or stronger form of alcohol, is to send the blood there faster than common, hence the circulation that gives the red face. It increases the activity of the brain, and it works faster, and so does the tongue. But as the blood goes to the brain faster, it returns faster, with no harm. But suppose a man keeps on drinking, the blood is sent to the brain so fast, in such large quantities, that in order to make room for it the arteries have to enlarge themselves; they increase in size, and in doing so they press against the more yielding flaccid veins, which carry the blood out of the brain, and thus diminish their size, their pores, the result being that the blood is not only carried to the arteries of the brain faster than is natural or healthful, but it is prevented from leaving it as fast as usual; hence, a double set of causes of death are in operation. Hence, a man may drink enough of brandy or other spirits in a few hours, or even minutes, to bring on a fatal attack of apoplexy.—Dr. Hall.

Tobacco and the Mental Faculties.—A distinguished French savant, the Abbe Moigno, contributes to the discussion of the tobacco question some interesting observations on the influence of the weed upon his own mental powers. For many years he had been addicted to the habit of snuff-taking, though conscious of injurious results flowing from the practice. He renounced it again and again, but a relapse always followed. In 1861 his daily allowance of snuff was over twenty grammes, and he observed a rapid decay of the faculty of memory. He had learned some fifteen hundred root words in each of several languages, but found these gradually dropping out of his mind, so as to necessitate frequent recurrence to dictionaries. At last he summoned resolution to break finally with the use of tobacco in any form, and after six years of abstinence writes as follows:

"It was for us the commencement of a veritable resurrection of health, mind and memory; our ideas have become more lucid, our imagination more vivid, our work easier, our pen quicker, and we have seen gradually return that army of words which had run away. Our memory, in a word, has recovered all its riches, all its sensibility. That tobacco, especially in the form of snuff, is a personal enemy of memory, which it has destroyed little by little, and sometimes very promptly, cannot be doubted. Many persons with whom we are acquainted—M. Dubrunafant, the celebrated chemist, for example—have run the same dangers, and escaped them in the same fashion, by renouncing tobacco, which, we do not hesitate to say, harms the greatest part of those who employ it, since for one smoker or snuffer who uses it there are ninety-nine who abuse it."—Exchange.

Waste of Life.—People talk very loudly about the waste of lives in war; I wonder to how many people it has occurred what is the waste of lives in peace. I doubt if the most sanguinary battle that was ever fought in ancient or modern history has carried off nearly as many human beings as die in England in every one year from purely preventible causes. Now, that is the state of things around us; of course we cannot change it in a day, but we can modify it.—Earl of Derby.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

COMING.

All my life I keep an inn;
And for guests I harbor there
Faith and Charity and Prayer—
Servants of a mighty King.

All my life I wait for Him —
Set my doors and windows wide,
That when all is purified,
He, the King, may enter in.

For so well he loves his own,
That when perfect beauty waits,
Straight he enters at her gates
With acceptance most divine.

Then my door shall open wide,
When his footsteps touch the sill;
Spread and open out until
Clayey beam and linten falls.

Then no more an humble inn
Where his servants sit at meat,—
When the King himself shall eat,
Deign to sit and sup with me.

All my days I look for Him;
But till that time come to me,
Faith and Hope and Charity
Make my heart their hostelry.

II.—ITS ASPECT.

"The apostle Paul and the penitent thief will be alike in the kingdom of heaven; but the reward, and therefore the glory, of the one will be immensely greater than that of the other. On this subject, however, though so deeply interesting, it is not my intention to enter further, but rather to confine myself to the establishment of the former truth; viz., that the persons of the glorified saints will be distinguished by a visible brightness, which may be termed their 'glory.'

"Another passage, which may be cited in favor of this view, is the following—'Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.' Matt. 13:43. It is unnecessary to comment on these words. They declare, as plainly as words can, the truth they are cited to prove. To give them any other than a literal meaning, consistently at least, is, I conceive, impossible. Such an attempt must strip them of all their value, and reduce them to a mere poetical expression; and how could this be reconciled with the solemn command immediately attached to them, 'Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.' But we are not left to mere conjecture as to how the words should be understood; we may compare them with others, with regard to the meaning of which there is no doubt; and it is only by 'comparing spiritual things with spiritual,' that we can hope to arrive at the truth. It is the only legitimate course to pursue. We observe, therefore, that to 'shine as the sun' is an expression which is used in a connection which fixes its meaning,—it is employed in reference to the person of our Lord himself, as seen on the Mount of Transfiguration. Thus we read—'And he was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.' Matt. 12:2. We shall immediately have to recur to this passage again, and need not therefore enlarge upon it here; but, I conceive, we have only to compare with it the declaration of our Lord with regard to 'the righteous'; viz., that they 'shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father,' to be satisfied that this 'great and precious promise' to them must, and shall be, literally fulfilled.

"2. The view propounded is still further supported by what is revealed respecting the person of our Lord himself. I must here be permitted to remind the reader once more of the frequency of the assurance given to us, that the saints shall hereafter be made like unto their Lord. 'For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.' Phil. 3:20, 21. 'Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.' 1 John 3:2. In these, as in many other cases, the idea of likeness, it will be observed, is still maintained. Now it admits of the clearest proof, I conceive, that the glorified person of the Redeemer will undoubtedly be distinguished by a visible glory, and when, therefore, we are assured that 'we shall be like him,' we cannot but conclude that the likeness will consist in a resemblance to him in this respect, at least, in whatever other way it may hold good.

"One mode of discovering what will be the personal appearance of our Lord, when he shall come to set up his kingdom, is to look to his transfiguration (which, as before shown, was undoubtedly designed to illustrate it), and to some points connected with that event, such as the parties who accompanied him, and the condition in which they too were likewise found. When he comes again, he will be attended by, in addition to the holy angels, first, those who sleep in him; secondly, those who will be alive at his coming, but who will then be 'changed.' Now these two parties were respectively represented on the Mount of Transfiguration; by Moses, on the one hand, who died; and by Elijah, on the other, who did not see death, but who was translated; and let us note the description given of the appearance of our Lord at this time, and of those who accompanied him. The facts have been recorded by three of the evangelists. St. Matthew (chap. 17:2) tells us, in reference to our Lord, that he 'was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.' St. Mark (9:30), that 'his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow, so as no fuller on earth can white them.' St. Luke (9:29–31), that 'as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering. And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias; who appeared in glory.'

"From these accounts we learn, first, with regard to our Lord, that both his person and his raiment were bright and shining; and secondly, with regard to Moses and Elijah, that they too 'were in glory,' that is, were in a glorified state, being distinguished by a visible splendor after the fashion of their Lord. The terms and expressions used in reference to Christ and his raiment, convey the idea of exceeding splendor,—'His face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light," "white and glistering." And it is admitted on all hands that this event was designed to give us some idea of his glorified person, now that he is at the right hand of the Father; and also when he shall come again to judge the quick and the dead, and to enter upon his kingdom. It forms, I conceive, only an illustration; more than this, however, was at that time impossible, seeing that other things would not admit of more; and for the same reason, the visible glory was not exhibited by him after his resurrection, because incompatible with the circumstances of the time, and because it was necessary that he should continue to hold intercourse with his disciples until his ascension into heaven, in order that he might teach them the things that remained, 'pertaining to the kingdom of God.' (Acts 1:3).* But we have reason to believe, that no sooner had he left the earth and entered heaven, than he assumed that glory which he will retain for evermore. This may be inferred, as from other things, so also from the fact that when he appeared to Saul of Tarsus, when on the road to Damascus, 'a light above the brightness of the sun' shone round about the future apostle, and those who journeyed with him. (Acts 26:13.) And in the description of his person, given in the first chapter of the Apocalypse, which, however, it must be remarked, is at least partly figurative or symbolical, which is not the case with the passage just given from the Acts; we read—'And his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength' (v. 16), which exactly agrees with St. Matthew's description of his appearance on the Mount—'His face did shine as the sun.'

All these passages, therefore, serve to throw mutual light upon each other, and they are, I conceive, all calculated to show us that the glorified person of our Redeemer will undoubtedly be distinguished by a visible glory; and seeing that, when he appears, he will 'change our vile body, that it might be fashioned like unto his glorious [or glorified] body,' it follows that our persons also will be distinguished in like manner; though, as we shall hereafter endeavor to show, in all probability in a far inferior degree. Moses and Elias 'appeared in glory' as well as Jesus, but it is only of his appearance that we have particulars afforded us, as if to show that, so great was his splendor, theirs might not be compared with it.

"Nor must we here fail to notice another point of identity or likeness between the personal aspect of the Redeemer at this time, and what we have reason to believe will be that of his glorified saints hereafter. We have seen that not only his countenance, but his 'raiment' also was 'white and glistering.' Now there is, I conceive, every reason to think that such will also be the case with that of the saints, to whom he has expressly made the promise, that they too shall be 'clothed in white raiment.' 'He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment.' Rev. 3:5.† We are not, indeed, expressly told that their raiment will, like that of their Lord, be 'shining,' as well as 'white,' but as much may, I think, be fairly inferred from a comparison of the different parts of the subject; and also from the fact (which we shall presently have to notice again) that, whereas in two or three cases, in which reference is made to Christ's resurrection, and again at his ascension, we are simply told they were 'clothed in white';‡ in others, we read that they were arrayed in 'shining'* garments; the brilliancy or splendor not being specified in the former cases, but, as we learn from the latter, is to be understood. Again, it is true, that we are told 'the fine linen is the righteousness of saints' (Rev. 9:8); i. e., is emblematic of it; but, as has been already shown in reference to the brightness of the body, this does not prove that the raiment will not at the same time be real and literal; on the contrary, its reality and brightness are absolutely essential to its being, what we believe it certainly will be, a visible emblem throughout eternity of that 'righteousness' which they will have secured through faith in the Son of God, Phil. 3:9; while the degree of the splendor, which will vary, will, in all probability, mark the degree of the reward. We may, therefore, thus see, I conceive, in what sense we are to understand those beautiful words of the prophet—'I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.' Isa. 61:10.

---

* Note by H. Brittain. It is certain that the glory was hidden after his resurrection, and that if God had not permitted him to become manifest as an ordinary human being after resurrection, we should have had no proof of his resurrection from the dead. The reading of Acts 10:40, 41, is, "Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly, not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead." Alford renders this 40th verse, "Him God raised up the third day, and granted that he should appear; and the Emphatic Diaglott, "Him God raised up the third day, and permitted him to become manifest." The glory was veiled because the circumstances surrounding his chosen ones were not compatible with it. But, when compatible, his, and theirs, will be manifest.

† See further, Rev. 4:4; 6:11; 7:9; 19; 8, 16.

‡ "In white," Mark 16:5; John 20:12; Acts 1:10.

* In shining garments," Luke 24:4; the same word that is used by him (chap. 9:29) in reference to the raiment of Christ, there rendered "glistering."

THE LORD JESUS THE COMING ONE.

There are three words in the New Testament Scriptures that refer to his coming. The first is represented by our word "presence," as contradistinguished from the word "absence" of our blessed Lord. He has taught his church to expect his presence—"I will come again." We are as those who believe in the truth of God's word. God's people set to their hand and seal that God is true, and every jot and tittle of that word, every holy promise, has laid hold upon the heart, and fills the thought, and moves the life of those that truly love and serve the Lord.

But the second word goes much further into this subject. It is represented by our English word "epiphany;" that is to say, not only shall he come, but men shall see him when he comes.

The third word is a still deeper and higher word, gleaming as in the light of a higher glory. It is our English word "apocalypse," the unveiling of his glory, the taking away of the mists between him and us, the bringing out the richness, and the fulness, and the depth of all he is, and all he has, when he comes to be glorified in his saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that believe.

Thus there will be the coming in presence, in epiphany, and in apocalypse, of that glorious Savior, whose we are, and whom we serve. And to this fact there is to be a witness. A testimony is to be lifted up, and the question is, by whom? My subject suggests that this testimony is to be rendered by the church, not merely by individual members. For there ever have been men, before their age, and above their times, who have been enabled to look forward to the coming and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. But what we now seek and desire, and should pray for, is not that a few sentinels only should be awake, but that the whole host should be afoot; that every man, woman, and child, who knows the Lord in all his fulness, and freshness, and beauty, should go forth and bear concurrent testimony, that the church, as a church, in its aggregate, corporate capacity, is expecting the personal coming of the Bridegroom, because it knows itself to be the Bride.

And when you begin to ask how is this witness to be given, I think you will find it in three directions.

1. There is the testimony of men who watch and wait. Paul describes it by what he calls "a stretching forth of the neck," the earnest expectation of the creature for the things that are to be revealed at the second coming of Christ. It is this expectation, this testimony of having the attitude of men that are looking for the coming of the Lord, that ought to be seen in the church's character, history, and work, especially at a critical time like this.

What are some of the marks of a waiting and watching church? One is, distinct separation from the world in which it stands, a plain and outspoken testimony for Christ always and everywhere. It must be seen also in you and me, not only that we are separate from the world, but that we are united one to another in the bonds of holy fellowship and love. Our own opinions and predilections, all those things that sunder and separate men, must be made so insubordinate, so entirely under our feet, that the characteristic mark of the age and church shall be, "See how these christians love one another." The church must assume the edge-like appearance of men in one phalanx, all stimulated by one prevailing principle, all animated by one powerful motive, and all moving in the direction of one great coming victory. There must, therefore, be consecration and union manifest in the church that professes to be waiting and watching for the Lord's appearing.

2. Then there must be also the witness of men who speak. Not only the preaching of the gospel of the passion of Christ. Most important is this, the very foundation stone of our acceptance in Christ Jesus. There must not only be the blessed experience which the Holy Ghost imparts to every truly christian man, by which he says, I am pardoned and accepted in the Beloved; I have entered into rest; I am now safe in Jesus Christ. But there must be a clear and distinct testimony before all the world that the Lord Jesus is King, that all the other thrones are lower than his, and that everything on his throne is a usurpation. There must be the plain, clear, distinct, and continuous testimony, that we are not ashamed of the gospel in all its bearings and realities. Christ crucified, Christ enjoyed, Christ realized, Christ expected—this is the witness which the church of God ought to give regarding the coming One.

3. Then there is also the testimony of men who prepare. You recollect the case of the prophet Ezekiel, when it was said that he should be a sign unto the people, and the explanation given was, that he should prepare his stuff for removing in the presence of all the people, so that as he was ready to go forth out of a country that had no longer God's blessing on it, so the people, by the preparedness of the prophet, might know the act to be true of which the prophet spoke.

You remember, too, that Noah, when he prepared an ark for the saving of his house, gave a testimony, and the men who looked on, however they might say that he was mistaken and fanatic, had still the evidence before their sight that he himself believed in the thing he evidenced to others. So there must be in us readiness to depart whenever the call may come, to separate ourselves from all we love, because we love something better than all below.

If we have this testimony, of the lip, and of the life, and of the preparedness, then the church will bear witness, and the blessed effects will be seen on those who observe us.

And so our hearts, and thoughts, and lives will be in harmony with our Master. When he says, "Behold I come quickly," the instinct of the heart within, and the echo of the life without, will be "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." If you would enjoy life, see man in his true character, read existence in its proper development, know God's purpose of grace to men, go forth everywhere and bear your humble, earnest testimony in the presence of friend or foe, with no mincing words and with no shrinking heart. The Lord Jesus is coming in the clouds of heaven with ten thousand of his saints, and when he comes the world will put off her coil of evil and be clothed with the garments of salvation, and become the beauteous blessed thing that God ever meant her to be.—Signs of our Times.

HOLINESS—THE UNIFIER.

WM. D. BRIDGE.

In Christ's remarkable prayer (John 17), we find some very rich and precious utterances of his soul. He prays that the men which the Father gave him out of the world "might be sanctified through the truth," or "truly sanctified," as the margin correctly renders it. These men were the disciples. He had prayed (ver. 2) "that they might be one as we are," but could not limit his prayer to petitions for them merely, and so prays on: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one," "that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Here we have the grand doctrine of sanctification and christian oneness blended in the prayer of our adorable Christ. The "truly sanctified" were all "to be one," as Christ and the Father were one, in order that, to the end that, "the world may know that thou hast sent me." What more needful to-day, than a cordial, heartful co-working of all true believers? And yet how painfully separated,—believer antagonizing believer, christian church withstanding christian church, and the world gloating over the disruption.

How shall we come together? How see eye to eye? How find the elements of unity in each other? How find a common basis of inter-communion and joyous brotherhood? Is it not in holiness? We have been told of the marvellous displays of sanctifying grace, as found at the National Campmeetings for holiness; but the unifying character of these meetings is remarkable. The denominations, creeds, distinctions, differences, confessions, all go down, unrecognized and unthought of; whilst christian holiness, the unity of the Spirit, the pure Christ life come up as things altogether perfect in loveliness. Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Adventists, like their Methodist brethren, are of "one heart and one mind" in this matter of holiness, "striving together for the faith of the gospel," getting its sublime richness, and proclaiming its divine fulness. It is a rare sight to see christians of diverse names so sweetly interlinked in christian love. Nothing else will do it but holiness of heart.

We do not stop to ask whether this, that, or the other doctrine of the churches square with our own or not; but we do ask frequently, "Brother, are you completely saved from indwelling sin?" "Do you feel clean through the bood?" O, what a unifier is this! It causes me, a Methodist, to take my Adventist brother by the hand heartily, to fight with him against the world, the flesh, and the devil. Differing radically with him on certain vital points of doctrine, yet I count it all joy to be at one with him on this vital point of experience.

"What we have seen and felt,
With confidence we tell;
And publish to the sons of men
The signs infallible."

This experience assimilates us amazingly. It says: Diversities of the head weigh but little in the scale against unities of heart. The church has long been praying that the will of God may be "done on earth as it is in heaven," and I verily believe that as holiness is the "song of seraphs old in the years of God;" so holiness is to be the unifying, heaven-generating, soul-entwining power which now is answering our prayer for "heaven begun below."

Maintain we our several churchly distinctions, but oh! in the name of the holy child Jesus, let us seek for the unities of heart in holy faith, holy love, holy joy, holy lives. I may not accept your "unconsciousness of the dead," and you may not believe in the "endless conscious punishment of sinners;" but let us clasp hands on the "holiness of the saints," and we, the saints, henceforth are "one in Christ." O for a grand baptism of love to fall on all the churches, sanctifying the ministry and the laity, and thus endowing the faithful few for their work and warfare against sin and hell.

CONSECRATION.

Happy wilt thou be, if thou hast no thought but to die to thyself; then wilt thou become victorious, not only to thine enemies, but what is more, victorious over their own evil nature; a victory in which thou canst not fail to find a great increase of spiritual wisdom, the experience of pure love and perfect peace.

And to this end, be not afraid of those trials which God may see fit to send upon thee; it is with the wind and the storm of tribulation that God, in the garner of the soul, separates the true wheat from the chaff. Always remember, therefore, that God comes to thee in thy sorrows as really as in thy joys. He lays low, and he builds up. Thou wilt find thyself far from perfection, if thou dost not find God in everything.

Seek not consolation, but God. Desire of God only one thing, that thou mayest spend thy life for his sake in true obedience and subjection. The way in which our blessed Savior trod, was not one of softness and sweetness, nor did he invite us to any such, either by his words or by example, when he said, he that "will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."

Resign and deny thyself wholly; for though self-denial is harsh at the beginning, it is easy in the middle, and becomes sweet in the end.

If thou wouldst arrive at the sublime region of eternal peace, thou must pass through the rugged path, not only of outward trials, but of inward temptation. Temptation also is for thy good. In such an hour of trial stand firm. When temptation assaults thee, put on the mighty armor of resignation, of constancy, of quietness, and thus purge, renew, and purify thyself in this burning furnace.

Among other holy counsels, which thou must observe, remember well this that follows: look not so much on other men's as on thine own faults. Thou knowest thine own faults, but it is difficult to know the true nature and degree of the faults of others. A disposition to judge others, turns the soul from its true center in God; brings it outward, and takes away its repose. "Judge not that ye be not judged."

It is impossible for a man to be able to live a life of holiness, a life which depends entirely upon the wisdom and support which are communicated from God, if he does not first die to himself by a total denial of all wrong appetites and passions, and by the crucifixion of the pride of natural reason.

The soul which is thus purified is always quiet and serene; always possessed of evenness of mind, both in favors and sufferings. Tribulations never disturb it, nor do the interior, the continual and divine communications from God, render it vain and conceited. It remains in wonderful serenity and peace; but still always full of holy and filial reverence.

It is in such souls, purified and quiet, that God hath the place of repose; souls in whom the waters of affliction have washed out the darkening stains of inordinate appetite; souls in whom the fires of tribulation and of inward temptations have consumed the remains of earthly passions. In other words, God reposes himself nowhere but where self-love is banished, and quietness reigns.

Be silent and believe. Hold thy peace and let thyself be quieted by the hand of God. Suffer in patience, and walk on in strong faith; and though it seems to thee that thou doest nothing, and art idle, being so dumb and resigned, yet, it is of infinite fruit. The blinded beast that turns the wheel of the mill, though it seeth not, neither knows what it does, yet it doeth a great work in grinding out the corn.

Be nothing in thyself, that thou mayest be strong in the Lord. When thou art nothing, thou canst experience no harm that will trouble thee. How is it possible for him to experience a grievance or injury, who thinks nothing of himself, and has no interest of his own, but refers all things to God?

There are three kinds of silence. Silence from words is good, because inordinate speaking tends to evil. Silence, or rest from desires and passions is still better, because it promotes quietness of spirit; but the best of all is silence from unnecessary and wondering thoughts, because that is essential to internal recollections, and because it lays a foundation for a proper regulation and silence in other respects.

Let nothing affright thee. All things will pass away. God only is he that is unchangeable. Patience will bring about all. He that hath God hath all things; and he that hath him not hath nothing.—Selected by S. S. Baxter.

ONENESS.

J. M. BUCKLIN.

For more than eighteen centuries the wheels of time, in their relentless round, have swept creation on, until it nears the sunset shore, where the ocean of eternity just dawns in sight, since the prayers of Jehovah's chosen people were wafted to his throne on clouds of fragrant incense, above the smoke of the burnt offering from the sacrificial offering, whose blood made atonement for ther sins, in type of the Lamb of God; the offering of whose blood, shed once for all, was soon to be given in atonement for the sins of the whole world. No more is heard the sound of the silver trumpets from the top of Mount Moriah, calling the children of Abraham to the worship of their God. Never again shall sound the music of the harp, sackbut, and psalter, as they did of yore, through the palm and olive groves of Jerusalem, once queen of the world. No startling trumpet note that thrills the souls of the multitude; no sweet tone from the mighty temple choir of two thousand singers; no sound of the voices of chanting Levites have survived the lapse of time; but, outliving the clangor of trumpets and the singing of hosts, there comes to us, echoing through the long ales and corridors of the mighty past, that prayer of heavenly tenderness and compassion that fell from the lips of our divine Master, when he petitioned the Infinite for the unity and oneness of his beloved followers, even as the Son and Father were united in one. Never to be lost, though coming faintly, ofttimes to the inattentive ear, absorbed in earth's discordant music; sounding its notes of love and entreaty through all ages and each generation; when all the grandeur, beauty, glory, hopes, fears, and passions that make life what it is to-day, were waiting, ages back, in voiceless quiet—for their natal morn—as now, we hear them clearly, sweetly saying—"be ye one! one in faith, in hope, in purpose; held close in bonds of love and unity; having one Lord, one baptism, one Father of all."

"Neither pray I for ye alone," oh, beloved disciples! but for all who shall believe on me through Thy word. So, unto us who live far down the winding river of time, almost unto the point where it shall lose itself in a ray of endless day, that prayer still ascends. Remember, 'tis the blessed Savior, who died for us; took upon himself the sins of a world for our redemption, beseeching the Father that we, as they, his professed followers, may live in peace, and harmony, and love. And why? The Savior says—"That the world may believe that thou hast sent me, . . . and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." Thus, one with Jesus and each other, we shall prove to an unbelieving world the love of God for them, in that he sent his only Son to die, that, believing on him, they might live forever. Then, as Paul writeth—"Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from us, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." That the Savior's prayer—be ye one, even as I and my Father are one, may be answered with us.

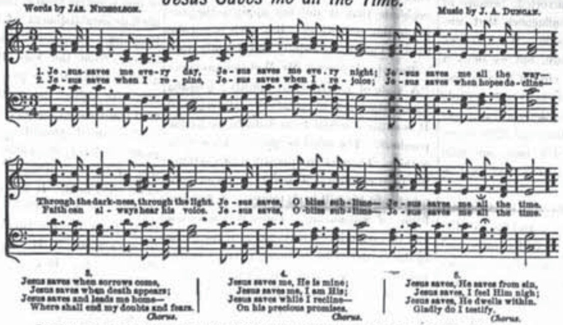
Jesus Saves me all the Time.

Words by JAS. NICHOLSON. Music by J. A. DUNCAN.



1. Je-sus saves me ev-e-ry day, Je-sus saves me ev-e-ry night; Je-sus saves me all the way—
2. Je-sus saves when I re-pine, Je-sus saves when I re-joice; Je-sus saves when hopes de-cline—
Through the dark-ness, through the light. Je-sus saves, O bliss sub-lime— Je-sus saves me all the time.
Faith can al-ways hear his voice. Je-sus saves, O bliss sub-lime— Je-sus saves me all the time.

Jesus saves when sorrows come,
Jesus saves when death appears;
Jesus saves and leads me home—
Where shall end my doubts and fears.
Chorus.

Jesus saves me, He is mine;
Jesus saves me, I am His;
Jesus saves while I recline—
On his precious promises.
Chorus.

5.
Jesus saves, He saves from sin,
Jesus saves, I feel Him nigh;
Jesus saves, He dwells within.
Gladly do I testify.
Chorus.

HISTORIC PROOFS OF THE RESURRECTION OF OUR LORD.

Strauss and other rationalists are obliged by their theories of Christianity to explain the early and general belief in Christ's resurrection. "Beyond controversy," says Strauss, "the truth of Christianity stands or falls with the resurrection of Jesus." Yet there are those who, like him, would not accept a miracle on any testimony whatever. They would not believe a demonstration of a miracle to their senses. They consistently reject testimony, which has the force of a demonstration, as to the fact of that resurrection. As a fact, whether believed or rejected, it is unchangeable.

It is asserted that the gospels, having been written from fifty to one hundred years after the death of Christ, are not sufficiently near testimony to such an incredible thing as his resurrection. They only record a belief that had gradually found place in the superstitious minds of the first century christians.

But let us measure the force of the testimony of four writings earlier than the gospels, which confirm those latter assertions concerning the resurrection. These are Paul's first and second epistles to the Corinthians, and his letters to the Galatians and Romans. These writings are indisputably genuine. Bauer admits that they were written by Paul as early as A. D. 60. Paul died during the reign of Nero, who was succeeded by Galba in 68. He was a prisoner two years at Cæsarea before Festus took the place of Felix, which was in A. D. 60. These letters were written while he was still at liberty. They date, therefore, before A. D. 58, or just twenty-five years after the crucifixion.

Will the reader think for a moment how he regards events which transpired twenty-five years ago. If only thirty-five years old, you may recollect distinctly the incidents of the Mexican War which began in 1845 and closed in 1847. You can recall when a child of eight years, the sight of the departure and return of troops, and the excitement which the reports of victory or defeat produced.

Thus awakening the historic sense we can appreciate Paul's assertion in 1 Cor. 15:6, that of five hundred persons who saw the risen Jesus at one time twenty-five years before, two hundred and fifty were still alive and able to give testimony to the fact from personal knowledge. Having previously asserted this to the Corinthians, and no one having disputed it, he here repeats that at least two hundred and fifty were living and able to testify that they had seen Jesus alive within six weeks after his acknowledged death. At the time they had testified to it with others, and had been believed. For twenty-five years they had adhered to the same testimony. Now would a sane man assert that two hundred and fifty of my readers could not be trusted in your assertion of having personally seen our soldiers returning from the Mexican war, or declare that you did not know what you were saying?

The first letter to the Corinthians give us then this strong proof of the resurrection. Christ's death is indisputable. His reappearance was real to five hundred persons, who were compelled to believe what was contrary to their reason and experience; that a man who was dead and buried could be alive again, often and distinctly seen, and even handled by some of them. Two hundred and fifty living persons are ready to confirm Paul's statement of what they saw twenty-five years before.

The second letter to the Corinthians gives this still stronger concurrent evidence of the resurrection. Paul speaks of himself as a christian fourteen years before it was written. Add three years to this, (Gal. 12:1:1; 18), after which he went up to Jerusalem, and we find that only seven years, or at the most ten years, after the resurrection of Christ, he himself fully believed it, and in the testimony concerning it. Could any one now rationally deny the truth of the assertions of five hundred living persons, as to the assassination of President Lincoln, who saw him shot in Ford's Theatre, in 1865, or nine years ago? Paul would have been equally unreasonable in refusing to believe those who told him they had seen and handled the risen Jesus? After fourteen or twenty years he believed their testimony more firmly than ever.

In the epistle to the Romans, the same writer assumes in his argument that the christians at Rome had for many years believed in Christ's resurrection. In fifteen years, at least, after the death of Jesus, this belief was undisputed at Rome without Paul's preaching it, and at Jerusalem. The real resurrection is the most reasonable cause for this widely-spread belief; making its way against national prejudice, worldly pride, the ambition and the present comfort of those who held it in persecutions.

Galatians (1:12–15) takes us one step nearer to the fact of the resurrection. Paul's conversion occurred within five years after the event. As a fierce and stubborn enemy of Jesus, he then acknowledged the spiritual power of his death and resurrection, in its personal relations to himself. Accepting it in full view of the ruin of all his earthly hopes, twenty-five years after he can declare that he had not thrown away his life on a delusion, but found the resurrection an abiding and ever-increasing source of peace, and joyful hope, and support amid all tribulations.

These epistles then bring us much nearer testimony to the facts recorded than do the gospels, if we regard only the times in which they were written. The historic sense can receive them as almost concurrent with the great miracle.—H. O. Ladd in Chris. Union.

In no case address letters on business connected with the papers, or office, to any of the clerks, compositors, or helps in this office. Agent.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD

"If a man die shall he live again?" This is one of the most interesting and important questions relating to our race, propounded in heaven or on the earth. Upon its truthful answer depends the existence of a future state to them. If the dead do not re-live, they are "perished," and there is no future life or experience for them. If the dead do live again, there is for them a future existence of some kind, and in some condition. To believe that there is no future life for us produces a dark shade over this life; for we know it is very brief at longest, and not secured to us an hour from the present. This short period, full of sadness, is all that we can have; the future is a dark blank—an eternal silence.

Death is the ending of life, the cessation of the action of life forces, so that the results of that action cease. Man dies when the pulsative forces cease, so that the life fluid stops circulating, which produced sight, hearing, and all the fruits of life. In death there can be no results of life, as seeing and hearing, for then it would not be death. A living tree produces foliage and fruit; but a dead tree can produce neither. Life means force, action; death means the opposite,—absence of force—no action. All intelligence is the fruit of life forces, and cannot exist without them. A thought cannot be produced without a design and a power to execute it; for nothing can produce itself. Happiness and woe result from intelligence; the volume of which depends upon the degree of intelligence producing it. The Scriptures represent the dead as having neither knowledge, wisdom, or device. They are represented as being in the land of "darkness"and "silence;" that is, where they can neither see nor hear. Their thoughts are represented as perishing the very day they die, and that they cease to remember and praise God.

Death is a terrible enemy to our race,—an exterminator of life, intelligence, society, happiness, and all that can be desired. It is a terrible foe to fallen humanity, and we instinctively fear it, notwithstanding our arguments to disprove its fearful results. Human theology and poetry may call it the gate to endless joys, but God represents it as a punishment for sin. Men, in their dreams, talk of the loveliness of death, and their triumphs in his embrace; but when they are awakened by the heavy tread of his approach, and feel the smart of his sting, they recoil under the pressure of his iron hand, and seek protection from his fatal darts.

The gospel hope is hinged upon the resurrection of the dead, and depends upon nothing else, for Paul says, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep [died] in Christ are perished." The apostle's argument is logical and conclusive, that if there be no such an event as a re-living of the dead, then no one has thus re-lived; consequently the faith which is produced by evidences that Christ was resurrected "is vain" (false), and the preaching of the gospel was vain, for it all rested upon an event which had not and could not take place. This also proved that those who had died in the hope of a resurrection had perished; for it was the only legitimate hope they had of life and happiness beyond death. Not one ray of divine light has ever fallen upon men, giving them a hope of a future existence beyond death, without a resurrection.

All would be darkness beyond the terrible threshold, were it not for the glorious radiance from a resurrected Christ. He opened the door of hope for a bright and happy future for a redeemed race. The day of his re-living is the grand anniversary day of our world. The dawning awakened the melodies of heaven, as the angel-honored head arose from the sepulchral pillow by the power of an endless life. That was the glorious epoch which gave our world an open sepulchre. The seal of Satan was broken, the bars of his charnel-house were rent asunder, the tree of hope was planted by the river of eternal life, the triumphs of Immanuel were written in the book of God.

Then let Satan rush through the field of blood, and roar as a hungry lion devouring his prey, he bears the captive's chain held by the changeless purpose of God, and will soon reach the limit of his destructive work.

Standing at the parting of the river in Eden, and hearing the seducing words of the serpent, and seeing the rebellion of sinners, and hearing the immutable sentence of Jehovah which blighted a beautiful world and draped it in the darkness of night, and beholding it drifting down through six millenaries of earthly woes, witnessing the relentless work of death, gathering the generations into the vast store-house of oblivion; the question seems to be repeated by countless voices of angels and men—"If a man die, shall he live again?" The answering note from the throne of Omnipotence, through his prophet, sweeter than the Temple's morning music, is heard saying, "Thy dead men shall live." Glorious answer! Echo it, ye servants of God, to weeping humanity! Sound it in the ear of the widow and fatherless! Proclaim upon the mountain top that the Crucified will spoil death and rob the grave! Then by faith we will wait by the sepulchre of Abraham, until he and Sarah shall stand up in immortality. The dreamless sleep of Daniel will soon end by limitation, and the tombs of the countless dead be opened. Wonderful thought! Sublime anticipation! Hope of the church! Glorious jubilee for the dead! We wait with earnest longings for its dawning; to feel the vibrations of its rending; to hear the matchless music of its greetings, and the swelling sounds of its triumphs.

O thou conquering Immanuel, thou spoiler of death and exterminator of the curse, come back to our dark world and illuminate it with thy heavenly radiance! Awake the echoes of thy life-giving voice, and let Lazarus hear it again! Visit our planet once more,—the world where thy mother suffered the pangs that gave thee birth, and her heart-grief caused tears of anguish at thy death! O Jesus! we do not pray for thy returning that our soil may again be wet with thy tears and crimsoned with thy blood, or the mountains echo with the plaintive songs of thy night-long prayers; nor would we have thee drink our vinegar and gall, and suffer the terrible pangs of death for rebels again; but we pray that thou wouldst come to raise our dead and give us a sinless and eternal kingdom. O come speedily! for thy espoused Bride is exposed to dangerous snares, and is watching at her altar with tears and prayers day and night for thy appearing. J. C.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

We are living in a period when candid, thinking, observing men, are sincerely inquiring, what is coming? They are convinced that these are times of no ordinary interest. They find that political, social and financial matters, saying nothing about the religious, are getting into a terrible muddle, from which they can see no way of escape. Years ago, they could calculate with considerable correctness concerning the results of business transactions; but not so now. All is uncertain. They feel as never before, that they know not what a day may bring forth. Honesty and justice have fallen in the street, and only here and there one manifests any sympathy for their protection. Bribery rules the judge on the bench; covetousness controls the business men, and the lasciviousness of Sodom is fairly poisoning the social atmosphere. Political matters are managed by rings of rotten men, whose secret lives are a disgrace to humanity. Selfishness, self-will, and self-gratification, are the leading traits of character that manifest themselves among a large proportion of the men who exert the controlling influence in the world at the present day. This state of things is rapidly increasing.

It is a well-known fact in the history of this world, that when the rulers of a nation, or a church, become corrupt, those nations or churches have never been known to reform as bodies. They have filled up their cup of iniquity, and then been overturned like Babylon and Nineveh, Tyre and Sidon, Jerusalem and Rome.

The following from a Chicago paper gives a true picture of the condition of things in this country:

> "There is no necessity for entering upon an argument to show the necessity for a general and most radical purification of the public morals. The minds of the thinking men of the country are filled with consternation at the evidences of wide-spread debasement of conscience; the moral sense of the people of the whole land is horrified at the oft-recurring disclosures of a general degradation of virtue, and the unhappy ghost of our national pride is robed in the garments of shame and mortification at the terrible disgrace we have encountered upon the scene of a world's gala day.
> A general spirit of corruption pervades life in all its forms, commercial, domestic, political, and religious. The operations of business corporations, the delicate conditions of social existence, the management of parties, and the schemes of churches, are all affected with the poison, which is rapidly enervating all that is good in human nature. The country is in imminent peril. Never before in history was a nation's downfall so clearly apparent, or its approaching ruin so manifestly susceptible of scientific demonstration."

There is no more reason to look now for the conversion of the world, than in the days of Noah. We do not know of one passage in Scripture that teaches the world will be any better than it is to-day, before the coming of our Savior to set up his kingdom. The prophet has marked the progress in "the last days" with the term "worse and worse." Satan would make men believe the opposite if he could. So far as his interests are concerned, he is reaping a great harvest from this last generation. He might call a jubilee meeting, and sing triumphant songs at church fairs and festivals.

We may expect to see a steady increase of wickedness in all its forms from now till the coming of Jesus. We may expect a corresponding increase of infidelity, and of indifference to sacred things, with less and less effect from the preaching of the gospel of Christ. It will be more and more difficult to reach the unconverted, because of the powerful Satanic influences that surround them on every side. We know we are drawing a dark picture, but we think it is short of the reality. One of Satan's best snares at the present time is to cause people to fall into the belief that the world is growing better. If this is true, the Bible statements would be false; but facts are with the Bible, showing a perfect harmony in every particular.

We may expect an increase of covetousness, pride, fashion, frolic and fun, of dishonesty, drunkenness, licentiousness and murder, and the most horrifying crimes possible for men to commit, aided by demons.

Among the mass of professors of religion, we may expect to see an increased conformity to the world in dress, spirit, manners, conversation, and amusements, supported by the presence and favor of many professed ministers of Christ; but who are truly affording great help to the powers of darkness.

But, in the midst of these Sodom-like times, when men of iniquity hold the political and ecclesiastical reins, we may expect to see a church more fully consecrated to Christ than at any period since the one living at the time when our Savior ascended to his Father in heaven. The Scriptures plainly teach that there will be a church all "ready" to welcome Jesus when he returns in glory to gather his faithful disciples. It will be composed of all the true christians in every denomination, probably not a tenth of the members of any one church. All who are ready to meet him will be free from sin, and clothed with Christ's righteousness. They will love the Lord with all their hearts, and their neighbor as themselves. They will not be mixed up with the vanities, fashions and follies, now so common among professors of religion. They will be truly "separate" from the world, and fully united to Christ, longing for his coming, as ardently as any loving bride ever wished to see the object of her affections. They will all be one through the power of the Holy Spirit, filling their hearts. Their theology may differ widely on many points, not essential to salvation; points which have been made tests of fellowship, and caused many sectarian divisions in the christian body, producing most disastrous results; leading thousands to stumble and fall into sin and the snare of the devil, and thousands more to turn away disgusted from a religion that produced such disagreeable fruit. In this way Satan has been very successful in paralyzing and destroying the healthy influence of Protestant churches since the Reformation. The sectarian walls and spirit have become so strong, and have stood so long, there is but little hope that they will ever be removed before the coming of Christ. Knowing, from the tenor of the Scriptures, that the true children of the Lord would be brought into loving union a short time before the coming of the Son of man, Satan has been trying to get up a counterfeit of this, as of other things. Hence he has been quite willing to have sectarian doors opened sufficiently for the different sects to come out and mingle in union fairs, festivals, excursions, picnics, etc., calling it "christian union." But such is not a union in Christ. Those who are to compose the true bride of the Lamb will be led to "turn away" from all such mere policy unions, controlled by a worldly spirit, that has nothing in common with christianity The union produced by "the spirit of holiness" is quite another thing. It is free from all those things that lead to a union in some pleasure scenes, where even worldly people can have a merry time without restraint. The union of hearts now going on is deep and abiding, continually becoming stronger and more precious, because the warmest sympathies and affections centre in Christ. Let us all be members of the "one body," waiting for the Head to appear. M. G.

Springfield National Campmeeting.—As several have asked why the time of this meeting was changed to the 8th, of August, instead of the 15th, as first announced, we would say that the only reason was to avoid the worms on the trees. Those who were thought to be good judges, came to the conclusion that if we did not have the meeting as early as the 8th, we should not escape that most disagreeable worm visitation that so annoyed us last year. M. G.

Bro. R. E. Ladd is dead. He died in Springfield, Mass., Wednesday, Aug. 5th. In his death, the church and world have parted with a true christian. His place cannot be easily filled. Says the Springfield Republican:—"In truth, he was a model of God's noblest work." M. G.

Send your name.—Those who wish their articles put in the paper should send their names. We frequently receive articles for the Crisis from new writers, which would have been published had they sent their names. Do not be ashamed to be known in the family. M. G.

Consecration.—We have seen nothing better on consecration than an article in this number of the Crisis, selected by S. S. Baxter, Providence, R. I. M. G.

"PERFECT PEACE."

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."—Isa. 26: 3.

Here is a plain statement, from inspired authority. Does the reader know this to be true from happy experience? If not, of course his testimony is of no more value than it would be concerning a case in court, of which he knew nothing. Is the statement strictly true? Most certainly. The witnesses are abundant, who can positively affirm its truth from blessed experience. They are men and women whose words are most reliable; those who would sooner die in the poor-house than tell a lie. If there were none who could testify to an experience corresponding with the text, we might conclude that it did not apply to the people in this generation. But such is not the case. The text is strictly and literally true.

But what is peace? Mr. Webster answers: "A state of quiet or tranquility; freedom from disturbance of agitation; calm repose." It is entire freedom from disturbance by the passions. The mind is quiet. All is calm within. There is no opposition to anything the Lord requires. There is complete submission to his will in all things. A freedom from all murmuring. Those who have not had this experience may feel a doubt rising in their mind as to its being enjoyed in this world of trouble and harrassing perplexities. Let such take the following as a sample. Said a minister of Christ:—

> "A few years since, in the lower part of this city, in my pastoral visitations, far up an alley, in an old frame tenement, I found the wreck of what was once a very beautiful young lady. She had stood before me thirty-five years previous, and was married to the youth whom she loved; but death had long since separated them, leaving her alone with several children, who were now all grown up. She was the most pitiable object that I ever beheld. Her lower limbs were drawn up and distorted. Her arms and fingers were equally out of their natural shape and position. Perfectly helpless, not able even to even feed herself or change her position in the bed, and had not been for ten years, but was waited upon by a faithful daughter. On entering her room, I inquired how long she had been such a sufferer? She replied, 'The rheumatic suffering commenced twenty years since, but I have been about as I am now for only ten or twelve years.' 'How much you must have suffered during those years! Death certainly would be a relief, and I suppose you desire it very much.' 'Oh, no,' she replied, 'I would not wish it otherwise. I would not turn my hand to change anything. Christ is everything to me, and he keeps me as happy as I can well be on this side of heaven. I have not had one pain too many. All is right that Christ does, and I am perfectly content, and you know that is great gain.'"

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on thee; because he trusteth in thee." Many examples like the one just named might be given as proof of the absolute truthfulness of the text, when applied to the most difficult cases. We may be kept in "perfect peace," without the least disturbance, so far as any feeling of hatred, variance, or unkindness are concerned, when we are abused by insult, slander, misrepresentation, or any other evil treatment. It is not our own keeping: but by the power of the Most High. It is just as easy for him to keep one in "perfect peace" amid all the multiplied perplexities any poor mortal ever felt, as the one who has the smallest number of trials. Indeed, we think the larger number who are enjoying "perfect peace," are those who are having more than an ordinary amount of severe trials and temptations. There is no situation in this world, right for one to occupy, where the saint may not be kept in "perfect peace" every day in the year.

There are only two conditions specified to secure this result. 1. Keep the mind staid on the Lord. 2. Trust in him. These are both simple and easy terms, and within the reach of everybody, everywhere. The lame, the blind, the deaf, the dumb, old and young, rich and poor, bond or free, learned or ignorant, sick or well, black or white, one and all, have the same privilege of being kept "in perfect peace."

The promise is not to those whose minds are staid on the world, its fashions, friends or pleasures. It is not to those who keep looking at their troubles and trials with a murmuring spirit; not to those who trust in riches, pleasing society, literary attainments, choice friends, or any other earthly good, but only those who trust in the Lord. He does not propose to keep any others; hence those who do not keep their minds staid on him, with trusting confidence, have no reason to expect to be kept in "perfect peace."

We have great reason to praise the Lord that he is so willing to do such great things for us, on such simple, easy conditions, that no one need to be deprived of the blessed privilege of enjoying that which is of more value than diamonds, or thousands of silver and gold. Said Jesus to his disciples: "My peace I give unto you." It is a gift worthy of the Giver. It has been truly called by an inspired writer, a "peace that passeth all understanding." No tongue can tell it; no pen can describe it. It must be felt before its worth can be known. As it is one of the fruits of the Holy Spirit, it cannot be enjoyed when the Spirit is grieved away. It remains no longer than the Spirit abides in us; and that fills the heart no longer than we continue consecrated to Christ, keeping the mind staid on him in unwavering trust.

Those who are afraid to trust the Lord, cannot expect to be kept in "perfect peace," but all who have tried it have found his word positively true; yea and amen to every one who complies with the conditions. Nothing offends those who have this "great peace." Blessed gift! Take it and be happy. M. G.

Pray for the Preachers.—Under this head, Bro. E. G. Merrill has said some excellent things. We hope his suggestion will receive special attention. It is just what is needed. M. G.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting has, without any expectation or design on the part of its managers and friends, become the largest permanently established Advent meeting in the world; and was designed especially to promulgate the doctrine of Christ's speedy second advent. It has drifted, providentially we doubt not, from a small beginning, eleven years ago, to a very important and responsible position. Hundreds of thousands of people have learned to turn their eyes in the direction of this consecrated bower, to determine the progress, harmony, purity of faith and worship, holiness of life, and spirituality of devotion of this peculiar people, looking for the immediate establishment of God's everlasting kingdom. People of nearly all grades of society, from the Vice President of this great Republic to the poverty-stricken pauper, have visited the auditorium of this sacred leaf-covered temple.

The tented ground is a broken, picturesque, curiously diversified spot, partly hidden by an oak and maple forest, and partly in an open field. It is situated directly on the shore of Lake Winnipisaukee, 96 miles north from Boston, twenty-five miles east from Concord, N. H., and fifty west from Portland, Me. It has about two hundred and fifty permanently but rudely constructed cottages, capable of lodging from two to fifty persons each. When the meeting is in session, it has from one hundred and fifty to two hundred cloth tents. It has in all a lodging capacity of from five to six thousand. The Rail Road Depot and Steam Boat landing is within ten rods of the tented grounds. It has ten or twelve chapels, or rooms prepared as such, which will seat from one to four hundred each. It always has two, and sometimes more Mission Tents, which will accommodate for worship a thousand each. The auditorium will seat four thousand, and accommodate a hearing audience of seven thousand within the circle. All its buildings, streets, and appurtenances silently present the faith of its worshipers. All seems temporary, designed only for a brief period. It looks like a rudely constructed staging upon which workmen can labor to prepare a permanent and beautiful residence. This is as it should be. We ought not to do as the Jews did, insult our God by beautifully ornamenting the groves in which we worship, contrary to his instruction. We tremble at the mania which seems to have seized this generation to perfect the antitype of the grove idolatry, by expending hundreds of thousands of dollars, needlessly, to make beautiful places of summer resort, where the people profess to worship the God who has positively prohibited such worldly extravagance connected with his sacred worship.

A few words of instruction and exhortation to those who anticipate attending this meeting may be beneficial. First, come early if you wish to enjoy the largest blessing attainable by attending the meeting. It is reported by nearly all who have been there as an excellent place to improve the health, especially those who live in crowded cities on the sea coast, or who are overworked. Many have tried it with very satisfactory results. There are on the ground, at this date, July 31st, about thirty families who seem to be as happy, sympathetic, and united in their associations and devotions as any community of the size we ever saw.

Peace and plenty flow here in great abundance. Not an echo seems to disturb the quiet of this sacred place, from the mountain, wood or lake. We shall have preaching (if the Lord will), every Sabbath, and worship nearly every evening until the great meeting commences. We believe that God will bless the efforts of his servants in this meeting, as well as all of our large meetings, if we remain humble and hold the purity of the faith of the gospel committed to us to be published in all the world as a witness of Christ's speedy coming.

The meeting is located on the line of the Boston and Maine R. R., therefore we are largely dependent on that for accommodations. It is giving us larger accommodations, more time on our tickets, and more special trains and better connections than ever before. These advantages will be secured by extending to them our patronage as far as we can without detriment to ourselves. The public consider their road managed as well for safety of transit as any one in the country. This is quite a consideration in travelling at this season, when there are so many heavy trains on the road, making it more dangerous travelling, especially in connection with large meetings. We have realized the importance of going on as safely managed a road as we can find, since a train going to a campmeeting two years ago, was wrecked near our door, and thirty-seven persons lost their lives. The Maine Central Road has been very liberal in giving us half fare to Rochester, and we are confident it is the best arrangement and route that our brethren will find coming to the meeting from the line of that road east of Portland.

Let all be strictly careful to follow our published directions for all the roads and boats, and much trouble and confusion will be saved. Let all be careful to treat all Conductors and Baggage Masters of the roads courteously, by which you will commend your religion to them, and secure better treatment. A great opportunity is presented in travelling to such a meeting, to recommend and honor the precious cause of Christ by chaste and mild conversation, exhibiting real humility with true christian dignity. On the other hand the cause of Christianity is reproached, and present truth despised, on account of the careless conduct of some of those who are taken as its representatives when mingling with the world. Vain conversation, jesting, loud discussions, boisterous singing, with an evident intention to attract the public ear, together with a rude and uncultivated appearance, generally produces great harm.

Brethren, we are evidently holding our last meetings, and exerting the last influences that we can ever bring to bear upon our friends and a wicked world to lead them to Christ. We cannot be too careful in all we say and do everywhere, and especially when we are before the public. May God give us great measures of grace sufficient for these extremely perilous times, that we may, like faithful servants of Christ, finish the work appointed us to do in the triumphs of eternal life. Amen. J. C.

A Mistake.—In the notice for the Alton Bay meeting of the Maine Central R. R., it says the half-fare tickets "good for August 12th." It should read "from August 18th." Let all take notice. J. C.

LOOKING BACK.

In boyhood days, when the new snow lay spotless and trackless in the open field, we have often tried to walk in a straight line to a distant object, but always made a crook in our pathway if we looked back when walking. So in the christian journey; we are sure to make a misstep when we look back. We heard a professional racer say that in one of his races, he was ahead of all his competitors, and sure of winning the prize, but looked back to see how far they were behind, when he made a misstep, and before he could recover himself, his companions outstripped and won the race.

When persons think of making a full consecration to Jesus, that they may be kept in "perfect peace," Satan is sure to make an effort to get them to look back on their past lives, to convince them they are not good enough to receive the gift of the Spirit. A few moments thus spent in looking back are sufficient to create a feeling of discouragement, doubts and darkness.

After wandering around in a sort of dismal swamp until their position seems almost unendurable, while they have been looking back on their many failures, they again resolve to submit all to Jesus, and at once feel relief. The darkness passes away, hope wakes up, and points again to the loving Savior as waiting to receive with a hearty welcome whoever will come to his embrace. Just then Satan comes again to persuade the poor wanderer to "look back" on his past life. Then follows another stumbling and discouragement. Thus many go on from year to year, while others give up entirely, and exclaim, "It is no use for me to try to live a christian, with my surroundings."

Whoever would run the christian race successfully, must stop looking back. After a sin is pardoned, never look back on it again. The Bible teaches us to forget the things that are behind, and to look forward. This was why Paul ran the race so successfully, and finished his course with joy, and could say, "I am ready." The christian racer should not allow himself to look back on his pardoned misdeeds any more than he should plan to commit a crime in the future. When the suggestion comes from Satan to look back, look at once to Jesus, and say, "Jesus, keep my thoughts." Say it over till Satan leaves. Do this instantly every time the thought of past evils are suggested. One may look at his wrong doings for a whole life-time, and receive no benefit whatever. His sky would only become darker and darker, till he ended in despair. When we are conscious of committing a wrong in word, thought, or deed, go at once to Jesus, confess it, ask for pardon, and NEVER look back on it again. NEVER, NEVER. Look to the Sun of righteousness, and not into the darkness of sin. Keep the eye single, and the whole body will be full of light. M. G.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

As there are a number of new board tents going up, we wish those who are not coming would tell us in season, that we may let others have their spot. If we see no tent pitched, and do not hear from them by Tuesday night, August 11th, we shall conclude they will not want their tent spot, and may let others occupy it. We are expecting a large and good meeting. There are some ten families on the ground (July 30th), and some have been there a week, to live in the woods for health. The grove is clear, with nice water, pure air and fruit plenty. We have secured plenty of tent-room for those coming without tents. Bring blankets, and you are all right for lodging. Do not bring much provision, for we have it on the ground for sale to accommodate all, and as cheap as you can get it. Also lumber, nails and oil. Bring plenty of good, warm clothing, and leave the fashionable stuff at home, with your jewelry. Bring the necessaries, such as lamps, tools, cord, etc., which are often forgotten. We make arrangements to supply, but can only to a limited extent. You had better direct baggage as freight, or by express, to me, on the ground. It will come more safely. Letters should be directed there, to save trouble and delay. There are good facilities for baptizing.

TRUTH SPREADING.

I enclose to the Crisis the following lines, which were received a few days since from the new field visited by Bro. J. J. Smith and myself in May. The Bro. Bryan referred to is a Presbyterian minister, who has come into the light. Bro. Word referred to is the one who, two years ago, declined to meet us in debate; but now it seems that since he finds that nearly a whole church and its pastor are gone off after these heretics, it is time for him to rush to the battle, and, if possible, rescue his lost people. We have accepted the proposition to meet him in Sept. or Oct., the Lord willing, and let the people see who has the truth. The following is the letter:—

"Goose Pond, Jackson Co.,
Ala., July 13th, 1847.

Rev. John A Cargile, Stevenson, Ala.:—

Dear Sir and Bro.:—We have waited long for a letter from you and Bro. Smith, but as yet have heard nothing direct from either of you. We are doing the best we can under the persecutions of the world, the flesh, the churches, and the devil. Many of those who cut a wide through when you were here, are doing all they can against us now. The sun has arisen and persecution is lowering over us; but we feel that we have the Bible, and so are not disheartened. We wish to hold a protracted meeting in this section in the latter part of Sept. or first of Oct., if you and Bro. Smith will come and help us. Bro. Word came up to assist in our sacramental meeting the first Sabbath in this month, and preached a 'big sermon' from 2 Tim. 1: 9, 10. Immortality was his theme, and Josephus his main support. On last night Bro. Tucker preached at Oak Grove (Meth.) from 'The wages of sin is death," etc., etc., and you ought to have heard him.

Things are uncertain in this section now. You and Bro. Smith ought both to come back again at your earliest convenience and preach for us, and let us know if you can help us out. We have many friends here now, and if you would hold a protracted meeting, we think it would be easy to organize a church here, of good material. If you neglect too long, people will become dull on the matter, and your work be harder. Bro. Bryan is having a rough time with his people on Adventism. He sticks to the track, though, as yet.

Bro. Word says he will meet you on halfway ground and debate your doctrine. We are anxious for it here. Come ahead, and make the truth shine in darkness. Please write soon, and let us know how soon you can preach for us, and whether you will hold a protracted meeting or not. Direct your letters to J. W. Flowers, at Scottsboro, or to J. O. Gray, at Park's Store, Jackson Co., Ala. Yours, etc., J. W. Flowers, J. O. Gray, B. M. Skelton, W. A. Dover. John Pierce, John Kirby, John Presly, and others."

May God bless these dear brethren, and sustain them till help can reach them; but do not be afraid of those who love the truth of the Lord's coming becoming dull on a matter of such importance. Those who are only friends in excitement or peace, are not worth much in a storm or a battle. We would prefer waiting for a calm in which to form a church. J. A. Cargile.

A Change.—After much prayer and consideration, we have decided to close our labors with the church here at Whitefield, and accept an invitation extended to us by the church at Exeter, N. H., where we shall begin our labors as pastor of the little flock, trusting that, under God, we shall be enabled to do the people good. In severing our pastoral connection with the church here in W., we do so with some reluctance, aware as we are of the scarcity of gospel laborers, in these northern regions especially.

During our stay here of one year, we have formed some very pleasant associations outside, as well as in the church. We have ever been treated with courtesy and kindness by the people generally. While here, our experience has been somewhat varied, and of that character that has proved unto us that the Lord's hand is not shortened or his ear heavy. We have been permitted at times to enjoy our labors here very much. As to their results we have nothing to record. We expect the day is not far distant when every man's work will be proved as by fire. W. M. Harmon.

Whitefield, N. H., July 28th.

P. S.—Our address hereafter will be at Exeter, N. H., P. O. Box 215.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Jane Benson.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, Greeting:—I thought, while around all seemed to be in motion, going at lightning speed, after a lapse of ten months, you would like to hear from the king's daughter. In the month of Sept. I started for the South with my seed basket in hand, where I felt that the Lord would have me go and sow some of the precious seed to a starving people. In a little while I found myself in Wilmington, Del. There I staid for ten days, sowing the seed. I saw a number arise and bless the name of the Lord. Oh, how my soul gave glory to God, and I sang again and again, "I am glad I am in this army."

I then took my basket and passed on to Baltimore. This is a beautiful city. When we began to hold up Christ in all the beauty of his first and second coming, and that he should be the Christian charmer, then the swords were made ready; but after some severe trials, we got to work. We held meeting in a hall, corner of Franklin and Howard streets. This had once been a Baptist church, but now a den, and every thing else but a place where God meets his children. They said we might have the place to hold meeting in free of charge, but they must have the collection. We went to work in the name of the Lord, and bless his holy name, he is a strong hold in the day of trouble, and I have found him so. We went to war upon the enemy. It was a hard pull, and a steady pull, and a pull all together. The Lord, who is our battle-axe, did not leave us to fight alone. He was before us a leading lamp, and behind a protecting angel, and on either side he was our guard; how could we fall? O that I could find language to speak forth the goodness of our God; some would believe on him, I know.

We held meetings here for seven weeks. Many professed faith in Christ. Both old and young bowed at the feet of Jesus; and I am sure that, when the roll is called, they will be there. But in the midst of this blessed work the enemy got into a rage, because he did not get money enough, and we had to leave the hall; but the Lord had another field opened about thirty-six miles from this city, in a place called Havre de Grace.

We commenced our labors afresh, and have held meetings here for three months. This is one of the almost God-forsaken places, but was not too hard for the Lord to work. He visited this place in mighty power. Sinners fell before him, not only in the meetings, but at their homes. Day and night, the cry was, Come and pray with me, or make special prayer for me in the meeting. The Lord did a blessed work in this place. A number were converted. Alas! how much seed must be sown to secure a little fruit. But these are the last days, and I believe we are near the judgment. What a solemn thought! Let us work while it is day.

I think, for a small place I never saw such daring wickedness. But the mercy of the Lord is great. The people crowded the place, white and colored. One evening, one of the citizens, a man of note, came to the meeting. I felt some one was getting their last message. The burden was so heavy upon me, I said, If some one in this house does not take a decided stand to-night for the Lord, he will never have another chance. O, I cannot find language to tell the weight of that message. The text was from Eccl. 11: 9. The man stood in perfect silence. Nothing seemed to attract his attention, until the meeting closed. The burden left me. The man went home, was taken sick next day, and in a day or two he breathed his last. His last words were, "I am glad I heard that sermon." I trust he sleeps in Jesus. O how many such cases I might mention. Many were brought back who had got off the track, and I hope many more will come back who have got cold and weary; even those who once were looking for their Lord; and now they say, My Lord delayeth his coming.

I am holding on to the old chart, and it says, "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever"; and let us believe it.

Here we went from house to house, holding meetings and trying to get them into the ark, ere the burning day comes. Sometimes I would get discouraged, and think if the Lord had sent me there, I should have had things more comfortable; but we cannot get to glory without trials. Trials make the promises sweet, and give new life to prayer. Sometimes food, and then none; sometimes it looked clear, and then very dark; but nevertheless, Paul says it is "a good fight," and I say so too. I returned to Baltimore, and held meetings again in the same hall ten weeks. Here I saw scores of souls at the altar of mercy. Sr. Brown, old mother Howard, and myself, by the help of the Lord made battle with the enemy, and took some of his strongest officers. Then they went down into the water and were baptized. We left a church and Sabbath school in full bloom. Thank our dear heavenly Father for what he has done. I am not tired of the blessed work, for "there remaineth a rest" over there—just over there. For the past months I have been digging for gems to deck the heavenly Jerusalem. I have now returned home to rest awhile. Like Abraham, I seek a city. Jesus is coming. My soul leaps for joy. Remember the King's daughter.

Courtland St., So. Worcester, Mass.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Having closed our tent-meeting at Morton's Corners, Erie Co., N. Y., I report our labors. Sectarianism and bigotry were so strong, that it was almost impossible to break the crust. We put up our tent July 3d, and took it down on the 20th. Well, thank the Lord, we were permitted to present the glorious truths of the gospel and the coming kingdom, although the enemy raged. Some precious souls have believed and obeyed the gospel, and are rejoicing in the blessed hope. Six put on Christ by baptism, witnessing a good confession before many witnesses. Quite a number of others were almost persuaded. Hope they will yet come out on the side of truth and for Christ, and thereby gain eternal life in the kingdom of God, soon to be realized. How few there are who are willing to take the reproach for Christ's sake, and meet the scoffs and frowns of a wicked world.

We were glad to have a few of like precious faith from Yorkshire, Arcade, and Collins Centre, to help cheer us on, and to wait on the candidates for baptism. After the discussion, and Bro. Sweet had started for home, we were permitted to preach in the Baptist church, and at the close became fully convinced that the prejudices of the people were broken in a measure. This was evident by the hearty shake of the hand, and the "God speed you," and the anxious desire for us to "come again" next fall, or winter, and preach to the people. Think the Baptist house will be open for us. The Baptist minister gave us his appointments through the time of the tent-meeting, and opened meeting for me by prayer at different times, and attended the meetings quite often. Hope the truth will do him and his people good.

Sunday morning, the 26th, I left for Yorkshire, in company with Bro. Chas. H. Nichols and wife, and Sisters Mary and Clara Empson, four of the candidates in baptism. The Brn. at Y. had arranged to have the Lord's Supper. Hope the good Lord will strengthen them in doing every duty, and at last may they, with the redeemed, sing the song of triumph, and share in the glory soon to be revealed.

From Bro. Geo. D. Clowes.

I have been a constant reader of the Crisis for more than two years, and from it have obtained much light and comfort. My partner, a daughter of affliction, has often expressed the pleasure and profit derived from perusing its pages. We trust our loved ones have been benefitted by the same. Thank God for these precious helps.

For more than thirty years, we were members of the Methodist Episcopal church; but after living in this world for half a century, our heavenly Father gave us light. The light was to us, at its dawning, "a strange light." Its first effect was painful, but the sublime question had to be settled, Is it truth? The agony that wrung our hearts, mingled with prayers and tears, in the twilight of this investigation, I shall not attempt to describe; but it proved to be the "light of life." How sweetly we realized, "The entrance of thy word giveth light." All our trouble lay in the fact we were unwilling to give up the "creed" for the blessed truth. This being accomplished, many perplexing questions were made plain, and our faith rested on the tangible basis of the word of God.

We could not hide the light by policy, or what is styled a "prudential course." It would leak out of the "old bottles," or overflow from our hearts, resulting in my trial for "heresy," and expulsion from the M. E. church. It was in that hour I realized the power of truth, resting calmly and serenely upon it. I learned how to sympathize with, and pray for, dear Brn. Bowman, Cargile, and others; and I found myself at the feet of Jesus, singing—

> "Then let men rage, since thou wilt shed > Thy shadowy wings around my head."

And now, after a lapse of two years, as the rays of truth fall on my pilgrim pathway, I realize the precious fact, "Thy word is a light to my path." The old family Bible was never so precious. It is "Yea, Yea," and the many great and precious promises are "Yea and Amen." The very best help I have found to a correct understanding of the word is the deeply purifying influence of the Holy Spirit.

We have a small band of dear brothers and sisters here, waiting and watching for Jesus, living in the "unity of the Spirit and the bonds of peace." We have fellowship one with the other. I have tried to preach the word to this noble little company for eighteen months past. We have preaching twice each Sabbath; school and adult Bible class each Sabbath afternoon; prayer and conference meetings evenings. The Lord is with us. To his name be all the glory. Yours in the blessed hope.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. J. Feather writes from Ailanthus, Kan., July 4th:—"I have been trying for a number of years to lay aside prejudice, sectarianism, and every hindering cause, and search honestly for truth, being willing to acknowledge it on all occasions, whether popular or unpopular. A few days since a Bro. Moss, of this vicinity, handed me two or three second handed copies of the Crisis, which, after perusal, I think to be the nearest truth, without mixture, of any thing that has fallen into my hands for a great while, excepting the Bible. May the Lord bless the Crisis, and send it far and wide. If any of the preaching brethren of that order should pass through here, please give us a call on Salt Creek, and let us hear the glad tidings of the coming kingdom. I could not promise pay in money, but he will be rewarded at the resurrection of the just. We have a good people here, but have never heard 'the gospel of the kingdom' except in the foggy way of going to heaven when we die. Oh, for a pure and undefiled religion, a consistent Bible faith, and the speedy return of our absent Lord, to gather his people home, is my prayer."

Sr. N. Darling writes from Bellows Falls, Vt., June 1st:—"This is the second year I have taken the Crisis. It is a great help in the divine life. It is a beautiful paper. It comes laden with spiritual food to cheer my lonely hours. As I am nearly alone in this faith, it is a great comfort to me. I daily rejoice in the God of my salvation. How precious are his promises! It is good to trust in him at all times. It is blessed to give all for Jesus. I lend my paper to all who will read it, hoping there will be some who will see Bible truth. My heart's desire is to live a life which will be pleasing to the Lord. I believe that in a little while the trials and cares of life will be over. Then, if I am faithful, I shall be 'clothed' with a robe 'of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.' May God bless and reward all who are laboring for the Master."

Sr. M. J. Olmsted, Savannah, writes:—"My heart is filled with joy to-night that I was ever led to search the Scriptures, for in them we think we have eternal life. O blessed thought, that we, through the goodness and mercy of God, may have eternal life in the kingdom of God by obeying the requirements of the gospel. I believe we must be pure in heart, for none but the pure in heart shall see God. Let us all obey the Savior; be meek and humble children; come out from the world and be separate; be not 'conformed to the world, but be ye transformed.' This I am striving to do, and the grace of God assisting me, I am determined to overcome all things, that I may have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city. Praise the Lord, for his loving kindness endureth forever. I love him because he first loved me.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us love Jesus more and serve him better, for there is a future life beyond in the glad new earth home; and how it makes my heart rejoice to know it soon will come. Sinners, come to Jesus now. Do not longer delay, for 'now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation.'"

Bro. W. H. H. Arnold writes from Richmond, R. I.:—"I am still laboring in the cause of Christ, and firm in the faith that was once delivered to the saints. I spent May 2d at Escopeag, R. I.; had a goodly number out, and an interesting meeting. From there to Wyoming May 3d. Had a good meeting for the place. May 10th at Bro. Albert Wilcox's, near Oscobeag. Had a crowded house. The old professors all took hold in the Master's cause, as though they were in earnest about their eternal welfare. Bro. Wilcox, of like precious faith, is poor, and has been lame for six years, so that he could not go without crutches, and now he is confined to his chair all the time."

Obituaries.

Worthing. In Palermo, Me., July 20th, Wilbur M., eldest son of Bro. J. M. and Sr. Roxanna Worthing, in the ninth year of his age.

The death of this dear child was caused by the tine of a pitchfork entering his side, penetrating to the lung, while descending from a load of hay. He lived about three days, suffering extremely, but with great patience, when he fell asleep, as we believe, in Jesus. May God comfort the stricken hearts of fond parents, sisters, and little brother.

> Willie sleeps, "but not forever,
> There will be a glorious dawn;
> We shall meet to part, no, never,
> On the resurrection morn."

Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Eld. J. Carr. John R. Hall.

Ransbottom. In Rochester, N. H., July 19th, Miss Clara A. Ransbottom, aged twenty-six years and eight months.

Her illness was distressing, yet she was patient, believing in Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. Service attended by J. G. Downs.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing and continuing till the 17th.

Saturday, August 8th,

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced, and will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Westboro, Worcester, and the stations to Springfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the New York, New Haven, and Hartford R. Road, we are very sorry to say, that no reduction of fare can be obtained for this year.

On the Connecticut R. R. fare is reduced from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Central Vermont, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vermont Valley Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a Campmeeting ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—provided twenty-five or more shall have come over the line operated by the Vt. C., of which we think there is little or no doubt—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Central Vermont Railroad.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Springfield, Athol, and North Eastern Railroad fare is reduced one-half.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R., Campmeeting Tickets will be sold at Nashua, Ayer Junction, Clinton, and Sterling Junction. Be sure and call for Campmeeting Tickets, as no passes will be given out this year.

Fare is reduced on the Boston and Fitchburg Railroad one half from Boston and Fitchburg.

Buy regular tickets at Boston and Fitchburg for Springfield, and receive from the Secretary at the meeting a return pass free.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from July 27th to Aug. 18th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

From New York via. New Haven Steamers. Fare reduced on this route so that friends can come from New York and return for $5.25.

Pay the regular fare, $3.00 from New York to Springfield, and if you wish to return back the same way, call for a return ticket from New Haven to New York, on the boat, which will be furnished for 50 cents, this ticket to be endorsed on the camp-ground by the Secretary.

As they sell R. R. tickets on the boat only to Springfield, on your return you will have to buy a ticket at the depot in Springfield for New Haven, which, with the return ticket from New Haven to New York, obtained on the boat previously, will take you to New York.

Boat leaves Peck slip at 3 P. M. 23d street E. R., at 3.15 P. M., connecting with steamboat train for Springfield. Also at 11 P. M.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 10 A. M., and at 3, 4, 5, and 9 P. M.

Mr. Burr's carriages will take passengers from depot to camp-ground for 10 cents each.

Kansas Campmeetings.—The Northern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Clyde, Cloud Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Sept. 10th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been appointed as committee of arrangements, and are prepared to be on the ground the day appointed, to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: Frank Wilson, Chairman, Clyde, Cloud Co.; W. H. Rich, Clifton, Washington Co.; T. J. Hay, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; J. Roberts, Lake Sibley, Cloud Co.; C. M. Collins, Bransford, Washington Co.; B. S. Conley, Glen Elder, Mitchell Co.

Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. Let your baskets be well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

The Iowa General Union Conference and Campmeeting will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonables rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding. J. Ridley, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting. J. R.

Iowa Campmeeting.—There will be a campmeeting in Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, beginning Aug. 28th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, also groceries for those who desire to board themselves, also feed for horses. Help from abroad is expected as the Lord may direct.

For the Committee, J. Ridley.

Notice.—As I expect my labors in this section will soon close, I would say I shall be ready to go and preach "the gospel of the kingdom" anywhere, as the Lord may open the way, the coming fall and winter. Any wishing to correspond with me can direct for the present to A. P. Moore, Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing

Saturday, August 22nd,

and continue over the Sabbath, Aug. 30th. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 85 cents per day. Single meals—breakfast or supper—35 cts. Dinner 50 cts. Horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cts. per day.

Boston and Maine R. R. The meeting being located on this road, we rely chiefly on its management for conveyance. The superintendent has made an extra effort to meet the demands of the meeting, and the convenience of those attending, in arranging with lines connecting, so there may be no delay on the part of this road in conveyance. Fare reduced on this road and its branches from August 12th to Sept. 5th.

Purchase campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay at the ticket office at Boston, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Leave Boston at 8.15 A. M., 12 M., 3.30 P. M.
" Portland, 6.15 A. M., 9.10 A. M., 3.15 P. M.
" Rochester, 11.23 A. M., 3.23 P. M., 6.50 P. M.
" Newburyport, 7.30 A. M., 2.40 P. M.

Bangor and Machias line of steamboats will run their boats in connection with the Boston and Maine R. R. at half rate of fare. Superintendent Furber has consented to run an extra train from Portland to Alton Bay on Wednesday, Aug. 19th, Friday 21st, and Monday 24th, leaving Portland on the arrival of the boats. We would recommend this route, as you can reach the ground the same day without delay, and make sure connection. Tickets sold at Bangor, Winterport, Bucksport, Sandy Point, Searsport, Belfast, Camden, and Rockland, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R. Fare reduced from Aug. 15th to 31st inclusive. Tickets will be sold from all stations on the road. A steamboat will run between Weirs and Alton Bay via. Diamond Island, connecting with trains both ways twice a day, commencing Saturday, Aug. 22d, ending the 31st. Tickets can be procured at Worcester to pass over this line at reduced rates. $4 90 for the round trip.

Northern Concord and Claremont, N. H., R. R. Tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting via. New Market Junction, can be procured of the conductors on the Northern and Concord and Claremont R. R. at reduced rates, good to go and return. Notice that the tickets must be purchased of the conductors, and not of the station agents. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Concord Railroad and its Branches. Call for Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets, to be procured at the following stations: Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Manchester, Nashua, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, and Portsmouth.

For the better accommodation of those who attend the meeting from Portsmouth and adjoining towns, a train will be run through the week of the meeting direct from Portsmouth and intermediate stations to Alton Bay, with baggage car attached. Baggage will be checked through via. New Market Junction. By this route you will save the expense and inconvenience of transporting baggage from one depot to the other in Dover; also have the benefit of the reduction of fare, as this road has (for our accommodation) made this arrangement. We would recommend this conveyance. Tickets good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Grand Trunk. From Lewiston and Auburn via. Grand Trunk, connecting at Portland with Boston and Maine, purchase Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets for Alton Bay, and have baggage checked through. By this line fare will be reduced to half rate, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Portland and Rochester R. R. Leave Portland at 4 15 P. M., to connect at Rochester with Boston and Maine, fare one way. Fare reduced from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Maine Central. Tickets will be sold at half fare at the following stations: Bangor, Newport, Belfast, Augusta, Hallowell, Gardiner, Richmond, Brunswick, Lewiston, Bath, Dexter, Waterville, Monmouth, Winthrop, Readfield, and Farmington to Rochester, N. H. via. Conway Junction. All baggage will be checked to Rochester, N. H. Change cars at this place, taking the cars for Alton Bay on the Boston and Maine. Cars leave Bangor 8.00 A. M., and 7.45 P. M. Leave Augusta 6 00 A. M., and 11.30 P. M. ☞ Have your baggage rechecked at this station for camp-ground at Alton Bay. No tickets will be sold on this road by conductors, or at any other stations than those named above, unless due notice is given. Tickets good from Aug. 18th to Sept. 5th.

All parties intending to visit the Alton Bay Campmeeting on the Maine Central Railroad west of Brunswick, will purchase regular tickets to Morrell's Corner, where they will change cars for Alton Bay via. Rochester, N. H. Call for Alton Bay Campmeeting tickets.

Those attending the Campmeeting on the Portland and Ogdensburg Road, will purchase tickets to junction of Portland and Rochester Road, where they will purchase tickets for Alton Bay via. Rochchester. This arrangement will accommodate the brethren living in these localities, making the meeting easy of access and reasonable in price. One half fare on Portland and Rochester Road.

Conn. and Passumpsic R. R. On this road you will procure tickets only to Wells River. Return passes will be furnished at the meeting for this road. At said Junction purchase tickets for Alton Bay Campmeeting at reduced rates, from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

Boston and Albany. Tickets sold at the following stations: Natick, Westboro, Worcester, Palmer and Springfield, via. Boston and Maine, to Alton Bay Campmeeting. Fare reduced one third to Boston. $4.70 for the round trip from Worcester; $6.70 from Springfield to Alton Bay. Return passes will be given at the meeting by J. D. Swain. Good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th.

We have endeavored to secure, for the accommodation of all who may attend this meeting, the best Rail Road arrangements possible; and it is now very important that the following directions be observed: You will notice that the arrangements of the several Rail Roads differ very much in regard to procuring tickets and checking baggage. In every case call for tickets for

as there are other meetings at the same time of ours. See that you have your baggage properly checked, as advertised by the road over which you pass.

Notice.—The new steamer "Ossipee" will run from Melvin Village to Alton during campmeeting week, as follows, viz.: Leave Melvin at 7 o'clock A. M. Sunday, Aug. 23d, and will call at the Bay, and Tuftonborough Neck, if signals are seen; arriving at Alton about 10 o'clock. Returning, will leave Alton at 3 o'clock P. M., arriving at Melvin about 6 o'clock. It will run thus through the meeting (Monday and Tuesday, the 24th and 25th excepted.) It will run Monday, Aug. 31st. Fare one way, 50 cts.; both ways, 75 cts. Said boat is new, with good accommodations, owned and run by Bro. Hall. We think this is the best route for all on the north side of the Lake.

T. W. Piper.

Kansas Campmeeting.—The Southern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Topeka, Shaunee Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 13th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been apppointed as committee of arrangements, and are expected to be on the ground the day appointed to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: A. S. Covey, Chairman, Ployboy, Shaunee Co.; J. H. Peak, Mont Cenis, Dick. Co.; Orson Lewis, No. Lawrence, Douglas Co.; C. Crowell, Pleasanton, Lim. Co.; Levi R. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co. Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Bring your baskets well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Wash. Co., Kansas.

The first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wisconsin A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Big Creek, commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, to hold over the Lord's day. We expect a number of the preaching brethren to be present to assist in preaching the word.

E. P. Graves.

We wish some of our preaching brethren would call on us. We will find a place for them to speak in, for we are in need of help here. Please correspond with A. P. Scribner, New Market, N. H.

☞ Notice is hereby given that the Alton Bay Campmeeting Association will meet at Alton Bay camp-ground, Friday, Aug. 21st, 1874, at two o'clock P. M., to transact business authorized by an act of incorporation passed June 26th, 1874.

Committee: J. Couch, J. G. Smith, J. D. Swain, T. H. Ford, Benj. Young, H. K. Choate, J. W. C. Pickering.

Alton Bay.—As many are desirous of obtaining rooms, to be rented by the Campmeeting Association for the present season, let all who wish to secure them, whether they have spoken for them or not, notify Eld. J. G. Smith immediately. Direct Farmington, N. H. J. Couch, for Com.

Tent for Sale.—A wood cottage, on the camp-ground, near the tabernacle, size 12 by 14. Inquire of Charles Newell, 76 Pendleton Avenue, Springfield, Mass.

Bethel, Vt., Campmeeting.

The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D.V.) Saturday, Sept. 5th. The camp-ground never looked prettier than now. It smiles in beauty and neatness. It awaits in loveliness to greet all who can come. Friends are arranging to put up several new tents. We are expecting a better meeting than ever. We expect the same R. R. arrangements as last year.

Pay full fare from any station upon the Vermont Central R. R to the meeting, and receive from the committee a free return pass. This includes also all the roads operated by the Vermont Central, for the names of which see late copies of the Crisis. We also expect a reduction of fare on the Montpelier and Wells River R. R.

Bro. Chapman is preparing to furnish good board at seventy cents per day. As we expect quite a number of preachers, those churches that can, would do well to adopt one, and furnish a home for him in their tent. Private lodgings and horse keeping can be very readily obtained near by at reasonable rates.

Tent Building. The committee will be on the ground Aug. 31st, and through the week, and all who intend to build tents of wood are especially requested to have them completed before the meeting commences, as it seems a pity to sacrifice so much of the spirit and power of devotion to the sound and toil of the hammer. We need the entire meeting from Sept. 5th to Sept. 14th for worship. Come, brethren and sisters, come up to this feast. Lay aside toil and care, and come. We have engaged efficient help from abroad. We shall expect you, coming with holy hearts and happy faces. H. F. C., for Com.

☞ Lost!

Left on the Tremont camp-ground, the curtain of the New Mass. Mission Tent. Whoever can give any information in regard to it, will please communicate the same to me, as I am responsible for the loss. The curtain was two and one half yards wide, fifty-eight feet in length, new and of the best material, costing about ten dollars. The line by which it was suspended was attached to it, running through the ring. Any one having a knowledge of the above article, will do me a great favor by addressing me, Box 355, Boston, Mass.

I. I. Leslie.

Pittsfield Me. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting for the eastern part of Maine will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year, in Hathorn's grove at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th. The grove has been much improved by clearing, grading, and deepening wells. It is expected that all who can will put up tents for themselves, and furnish plenty of bedding and food. The Maine Mission Tent will be on hand, and will afford lodging for those who cannot put up tents for themselves; but all must provide bedding for themselves. Be prepared for cold storms. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent. Breakfast and supper, 25 cents each; dinner, 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when dinner will be fifty cents. Also horse keeping, hay, straw and board, will be provided on the ground for all who wish, at reasonable rates. The committee will do their best to obtain reduction of railroad fare, and give timely notice.

Committee: Jer. Carr, F. A. Baker, S. K. Partridge, Oren S. French, J. M. Tozier, Oscar Farnum, M. W. Corliss, G. L. McKenney, William Clark, Abner Millet.

The R. I. and East Conn. Campmeeting will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. The fare is reduced one third on the Hartford and Providence R. R.,—one dollar from Providence and return. The same from Plainfield Junction. Inquire for campmeeting tickets at all way stations between Providence and Plainfield. We expect all our preachers within the limits of this meeting, and others from abroad. Come, brethren and sisters, make a little sacrifice to attend. Do not let trifling things keep you away. Bring your children and unconverted neighbors. We will do the best we can for your comfort. Let much prayer go up from all hearts for the salvation of the people. Do not fail to carefully read Brn. Couch's and Grant's articles on Campmeeting interests. If all take heed to those instructions, we cannot doubt the good results. The Lord will help. Board and horse-keeping the same as last year. E. R. Wood, Secretary.

Wolfboro' Campmeeting.—There will be a campmeeting at Wolfboro', N. H., commencing Saturday, August 15th, and continuing over Sunday, August 23d. This meeting will be held by believers in the speedy coming of the Son of God, to establish his kingdom in righteousness, to raise his sleeping saints, and change the living ones to immortality. This beautiful and consecrated grove is the one our Trine brethren occupied last year, and is situated on the shore of the charming lake Winnipiseogee, a few rods from Mill Village Station, on the Wolfboro' R. R., and a short distance from the steamboat landing. A reduction of about one half fare has been made us by the Boston and Maine R. R., and also the Eastern and Maine Central. Tickets good from Aug. 10th to Sept. 1st inclusive. Board will be furnished on the ground at 80 cts. per day, or 30 cts. for breakfast and supper, and 40 cts. for dinner, except Sundays, when it will be 50 cts.

Jasper Stone, for the Committee.

New Preston Tent Meeting.—If the Lord will, the Mission tent will be pitched in Camp's grove (the old place), on Tuesday, Sept. 1st. The meeting is to hold over the following Sunday, and should it be thought best, the meetings will be continued longer, either in the tent or hall in the village. We hope to have a general gathering at this meeting. Come prepared to camp out as at campmeeting. What you lack, we will do the best we can to help you to obtain. We propose to cook and eat together as one family. Come the first day, and stay through. We wish the preaching Brn. to come, whether we have spoken to you or not. To all we say, Come. Whether you have anything to bring or not, come.

H J. Baldwin.
C. L. Calhoun.

Campmeeting Notice.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should send a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W Smith, President. C. C. Marston, Sec.

Kansas.—Notice is hereby given that the Kansas Mission Tent will be pitched at Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas, August 27th, if the Lord will. Services will commence at eight o'clock P. M., and continue over two Sundays. A cordial invitation is extended to all christians to come; and let us work for the advancement of the cause of Christ, and the salvation of sinners. Come one, come all.

R. F. Clark, Sec. Adv. Chris. Conf., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

For Sale.—Tent 148 Alton Bay camp-ground is for sale. It has accommodations for six or eight persons, having a cook house or L connected, with stove, etc. Price $100. This tent has a front view on Lake Avenue, overlooking the Bay, steamboat and railroad landings, within five rods of the boarding tent. Inquire on the ground of Bro. T. E. Wood, or of H. K. Choate, Augusta, Me.

Alton Bay.—We wish to sell our house and furniture, at much less than cost, built last year; first house north of McKinstry and Wallace tent. Price $44. Inquire of Wm Hawkes, 74 Meridian St., East Boston, or Jasper Stone, on the ground.

NO FRIEND LIKE JESUS.

There is no friend like Jesus,
In this wide world of ours.
For he from sorrow frees us,
And strews our path with flowers.

There is no friend like Jesus,
When darkness gathers round;
For then, with joy and gladness,
He makes our hearts to bound.

There is no friend like Jesus,
So constant, true and kind;
So full of love and pity—
So holy and refined.

There is no friend like Jesus
To succor the oppressed,
To help the poor and needy,
And comfort the distressed.

There is no friend like Jesus
To drive away our fears,
To heal our wounded spirits,
And wipe away our tears.

There'll be no friend like Jesus,
When at death's door we lay;
There'll be no friend like Jesus,
When comes the judgment day.

CONFORMING TO THE WORLD.

A. P. MOORE.

That we are in a time when the masses of professors of religion are "at ease in Zion," and are conformed to the forms, fashions, maxims, and pleasures of the world, none can deny. Paul says, "In the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." The present condition of the church shows us we are now in the last days; hence in "perilous times;" and we need the watching spirit constantly, lest we be drawn into the formality of this pleasure-loving age. There are but very few that stop to question any worldly measures that are resorted to in these last days to "keep up the interest" of the churches.

Church fairs, festivals, levees, picnics, lotteries, sociables, mite societies, donations, Sunday school concerts, and the whole list of gatherings that are resorted to in these "perilous times," show that we are where men want pleasure, fun and frolic as a stimulus, rather than the "grace of God." O! how different is the popular religion of the day from that of our forefathers. Speak to the aged of the religion of the day, and they sigh for the days of old. Go to the week-day prayer-meeting in most any of the large places, and how many do we find there? In churches that number five or six hundred, perhaps you will find five or six of the members present. If there is a fair or festival, or some gathering for pleasure the next evening, you will find the church packed to its utmost capacity. Why is this? It speaks plainly for itself; for men are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

As a people we have been greatly opposed to these things, but I see in some places our own Brn. resorting to these same things with the same plea of "getting up an interest." Can people think the true position is not manifest? When people become cold and formal, and do not enter into the work of the Lord's house with a heart, it is vain for them to substitute some worldly pleasure or amusement to get back the flagging interest. It only draws the cords of formality tighter, and lessens the little spiritual life there may be left. I have watched this whole catalogue of pleasure gatherings for seventeen years, especially to see the spiritual effect upon churches as well as individuals, and must say from a full heart, I believe them to be productive of evil and only evil. They began with the "sociable;" getting together to spend the evening in fun and feasting, ministers taking the lead. Now they have led to the fair, festival, lottery, grab-bag, post-office, Christmas trees, Sunday-school concerts, in which "pious" theatrical pieces are acted out. So great has this mania spread, that in several places the civil authorities have been obliged to interfere and put a check to them. I have seen very many backslide from God by these things, and many a young man has acquired a thirst for gambling and lottery by his first good "luck" in one of these "pious" (?) gatherings.

We have no precedent in the history of Christ or his apostles, for resorting to these things to please the world, to draw them in. Alas! the drawing is invariably the other way. The world draws professors away from Christ. Our "perils" consist in the danger of being thus drawn away. "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty." "Whosoever will be the friend of the world, is the enemy of God."

Paul says of this same class, who love pleasure more than God, that they have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof." "From such turn away." Do not join in with them. Do not resort to these things. But some say, We shall be looked upon as odd. Well, what of it? But they will think us so peculiar. Well, thank God that you are a "peculiar people," and "zealous of good works." But if we do not resort to some of these things, they will draw our congregations away. Well, let them go then. If the "Spirit" and "gospel of Christ" presented in its purity, will not draw men to Christ, nothing will. O how the natural man dislikes being in the minority. People forget that the way of "life" is "straight" and "narrow," and only a "few there be that that find it;" while the masses press the broad road that leads to "death."

O, my beloved brother, do not fear to "lift up your voice like a trumpet." "Cry aloud, spare not." Men may frown, but God will approve. Everything is at stake. Faithful obedience now, and eternal life when Jesus comes. Do not compromise with sin in any form. Compromise is the order of the day. Be bold for God. Our warfare will soon be "accomplished." Let us be true and faithful, and we will certainly be victorious. Fear not the frowns of men. Keep "unspotted from the world." Perils thicken on every hand. There is no safety but in living near the Lord. Let "holiness to the Lord" be shown in all we say or do. Bride of the Lamb, lay off thy world-conforming garments, and robe thyself for the wedding. Soon it will be said, The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." Who, oh who, will stand in that day? Will it be you, my brother, or you, my sister? Then be not conformed to the world. Stand firm for God and his truth. Stem the popular current. Let the world see that Christ is a satisfying portion. That you do not have to "whistle to keep your courage up," or resort to the fashionable amusements of the day to keep from having the "blues." God bless you forever.

WORSHIP—WHAT IS IT?

H. MUNGER.

July 12th, I preached in the Adv. Christian chapel in New Haven, and the Spirit of the Lord was in the congregation. On coming home, we heard loud singing in one of the colored churches. There are about one thousand colored people in that vicinity, and most of them own comfortable houses, are good citizens, and attend church. This church had a quarterly meeting that day. They began at seven in the morning. We heard singing before many were up, and they continued their meeting until eleven at night, most of the time. When they got tired or hungry, they went out, and others took their places and kept the ball rolling, as they called it.

At four o'clock, our meeting being out, we went into their meeting, where they were worshiping. But what a difference in the mode of worship! I cannot describe it, but will note a few things witnessed. After the preacher had done, some ten or twelve stood up and began to sing; others joined sitting down after the Southern style of singing. No instruments dare to venture in one of these meetings. In about ten or fifteen minutes the Spirit came down, as they called it, and they began to keep time with their feet, and motion out the time with the body. Those engaged in singing, whether standing or sitting, when the "power" came, as they called it, would begin to jump, all keeping perfect time with the plantation tune, which was always on the resurrection or Jesus' coming. We saw two or three begin to jump and shout glory. In a few moments others would catch the Spirit's power, as they called it, and begin to jump, until some twenty to thirty were all up at once. Some seemed to be serious, and the tears would run down like rain. At that time they would have to leave the house or join in jumping. One near us hesitated whether to quench the Spirit and go out, or go to work; finally she screamed out and began to jump. Some of the white ladies near by looked for a chance to escape, for there was a power in it. At this time, the meeting was up to fever heat; nearly all were more or less affected. One woman neatly dressed jumped off her fashionable hat, then her false hair jumped off. Another was keeping time with her babe in her arms, but could not jump until some one took the child.

We staid about an hour. All was novel and solemn. Some nearly white and slim, others large and black as a crow, old and grey-headed and young people. We have seen many such performances at colored meetings before, but this would be a novelty to many of our people back in the country. It is their way of worshiping God. No form of worship is binding under the gospel.

A tent's company talk of coming to Springfield to campmeeting this year. I hope they will, for their worship is simple, honest and powerful, and they have no hobbies to push. They rejoice in the coming of the Lord to give them a second freedom. They think the Lord heard their prayers and delivered them from slavery; if so, they are his children, and their mode of worship is as acceptable to him as ours.

MY THOUGHTS.

I. B. WEAVER.

Here I still lie, a prisoner to suffering and pain, longing for rest, sighing for home, waiting for deliverance, and hoping soon to see Him whom my soul loveth. Without, the rain is pouring down upon the earth that was parched with heat, and above the clouds look dark and threatening; but beyond the clouds the sun still shines as brightly as ever, yet we see it not. These things remind me of the christian's life. How often we feel we are strong, and can do almost anything; yet how soon, when trials come, and the dark clouds gather over us, we begin to see how weak and frail we are. At such times we almost forget that Jesus is just as near in the midst of trials and sufferings, yea, more so, as in the bright sunlight of his blessedness and love.

Trials are like the dark clouds that shut the bright sun from our gaze; yet it shines just as brightly as in the clear sunlight of the most brilliant day. Just so with the christian life. We start full of joy and love, sweet peace filling our hearts, causing us to praise God with our whole soul for the blessed light of his smiling countenance; till all at once the light is shut out, and we feel sad, and look back on our course to see what we have done to cause these dark clouds to arise and shut out the sweet light, love and happiness we were enjoying so richly. Oftentimes we call it condemnation, and we look our faith over, see we have not omitted any duty that presented itself, and often wonder what is the matter. By and by, by experience, we learn there is need for these things. We take the word of the Lord, and we read for our encouragement, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." Why is it so, blessed Father? It seems hard sometimes to endure trials, and what blessing can we receive from them, dear Lord? The answer comes back—"For when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."

Then we can gladly and willingly bear it, for it is only purifying us, and making us better, and bringing us nearer to Jesus. We all pray for the Lord to make us ready for translation, and for a home in the kingdom; and if we submit ourselves to God, willing to be anything he requires of us, then we shall say, "Not my will, but thine be done." We read in another part of the blessed volume of truth—"That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ. Then we can bear it all without a murmur, for it is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. I know from my own personal experience that it is sad, oftentimes, to be in trials; but if they are for our good, we can bear them.

Oftentimes during my christian life have trials come for which there seemed no real cause, and these seemed the hardest to be borne; but by the help of God I have rested all upon Him who has said, I will never, no never forsake; and all has been for my good. So I can say from the heart, and feel it too when I say it, Let the trials come, if needful; they show us our weakness, teach us to trust in God, and reveal to us our idols, if we have any. From my sick and weary and fainting heart, I can say to-day, Let me bear the cross and the rod; they are tokens of my Savior's love and care. Let us not murmur or fret, whimper or complain, beneath the chastening or correcting hand of our dear Father in heaven, who knows far better what is for our good than we poor, short-sighted creatures. Nay, let me utter no complaint. Save me from it, blessed Master. Make me pure and holy; take all my sin away; be my strength and help and deliverer, and my portion here and hereafter. Let me know thy faithfulness, even in the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Let me never despise thy correction, nor grieve at thy chastenings, for it is all permitted in love; and a dear Father's hand, loving and kind, bears us up in the midst of it all. Let me rather kiss the rod, and say, Not my will, but thine be done. Let me have grace to bear it all without complaint.

"I trust thy faithfulness and power
To save me in the trying hour."

I cling to thee for help. I rest my all in thee. Thy promises can never fail. Thou wilt never forsake thine own.

Let my strength be made perfect in weakness. Let me bear and reflect thine own blessed image more and more. Help me to show to others the life and purity that is in thee, by my own godly life and example, and may I reflect thy likeness in all I do or say. Dear Father in heaven, I praise thee for all thou hast done for me, and for every trial thou hast seen fit to cause me to bear. I bear thee witness that thou hast been faithful to thy promise in all things, and I now fly to thee for shelter. I rest in thine arms. I bless thee for thy love, and be thou still my Father and Friend, and save me at last for Jesus' sake.

No. Dana, Mass.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

Out of the depths I call,
For help and light to know
The meaning of the life
That's given me below.

In anguish and unrest,
In longing for some ray
To rift the clouds of doubt
That shadow all my way.

The goal of earth's best gifts,
In vain my hands would clasp;
Beyond my farthest reach,
It still eludes my grasp.

"Hush, child!" the Father says;
"Thou knowest not the best;
The things of earth and time
Can never give thee rest

Thy hunger and thy thirst
Are for diviner things;
To know and quaff the good
That flows from 'living springs'

The joy thy heart doth crave,
Thy strivings cannot reach:
My hand undoubting take,
Let me the pathway teach.

Bliss far transcending all
Thou dreamedst in other years,
Thy cup shall overflow;
No room shall be for tears"

"Out of the depths" I call;
Father, whate'er betide,
Ever I'll cling to thee;
Thy hand shall be my guide.

PRAY FOR THE PREACHERS.

G. E. MERRILL.

If any need the prayers of christians, they are those who stand on the walls of Zion, proclaiming to the world the last great truth, the speedy coming of Jesus, and a preparation to meet him—which is holiness. From every believing heart, fervent petitions should ascend to the throne of grace, that God's blessing might rest down upon them. There are many reasons for this. We are near the consummation of our hope—the coming of Jesus; therefore, we wish to have the preachers in earnest for the salvation of souls. Many, doubtless, have had their ardor chilled by the coldness and worldliness of the brethren, and are in need of the quickening power of Christ's Spirit. Unless they have it, their preaching will be in vain, and sinners will never be moved to repentance.

How important that every preacher be filled with the Holy Spirit. When thus filled their success is sure. Why not, those of us who have access to the throne of grace, begin now to pray for them, if we have not before? How much better they can preach, if we will pray for them; and how much better we shall enjoy their preaching. Our preaching brethren are just as weak as we, the lay brethren. They can do nothing without the aid of the Spirit of God, more than we. Then let us pray for them, and they for us, and not find fault one with the other, but "trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

If we will but pray fervently for the watchman, the Lord will hear and answer, and they will begin to feel pressed as a "cart under sheaves." They will go forth weeping, bearing precious seed. The truth will be as fire in their bones, and men will confess that "God is with them of a truth." Let all pray for the preachers, that they may be "filled with the knowledge of the will of God in all wisdom and spiritual understanding."

"COME OVER AND HELP US!"

My dear brother laborers in the gospel, duty seems to prompt me to make use of the above language. Fields are ripe for the harvest, and no reapers.

"Ho! reapers of life's harvest,
Why stand with rusted blade,
Until the night draws round thee,
And day begins to fade?"

Yes, the day begins to fade, and souls are yet to be saved. Who will come to Nova Scotia? I want the Lord to direct the right one. Through the blessing of our God, and aid from Shelburne, Bear River, Liverpool, and other places, I have a tent to labor in new places on this shore. The word is, Come and preach, but no one to go. I cannot go alone; I have been disappointed in my help. Who will come? My prayer is, Lord, send some one, and send the right one, and do not send any one with a horse (a hobby-horse); but send one to save souls through the truth. The tent will hold about three hundred people. Come in the name of the Lord, and he will give reward.

Now, dear Brn., think it over, and ask of the Lord, and answer through the Crisis as soon as possible. Yours, all for Christ,

A. B. SWANEBURG.

Shelburne, N. S., July 29th, 1874.

P. S.—Any one coming can come to Yarmouth by steamer, and from Yarmouth to Shelburne by steamer, or by coach. A. B. S.

USE OF SILENCE.

A pity that so few people understand the full effect of well-timed silence! How eloquent it is in reality! Acquiescence, contradiction, difference, disdain, embarassment, and awe may all be expressed by saying nothing. It may be necessary to illustrate this apparent paradox by a few examples. . . . Should you hear an assertion which you may deem false, made by some one of whose veracity politeness may withhold you from openly declaring your doubt, you denote a difference of opinion by remaining silent. Are you receiving a reprimand from a superior? You mark your respect by an attentive silence. Are you compelled to listen to the frivolous conversation of a fop? You signify your opinion of him by treating his loquacity with contemptuous silence.

Again, how much domestic strife might have been prevented, how often might the quarrel which by mutual aggravation has, perhaps, terminated in bloodshed, had it been checked in the commencement by a judicious silence! Those persons only who have experienced them are aware of the beneficial effects of that forbearance, which to the exasperating threat, the malicious sneer, or the unjustly imputated culpability, shall never answer a word. A soft answer turns away wrath; but sometimes erring humanity cannot give this soft answer in moments of irritation; in such cases, there stands the fortress of silence, with doors wide open, as refuge for the tired spirit until calmer moments come. Think of this seriously, you who glory in having "the last word."—Pen and Plow.

NOT DEEP ENOUGH YET.

When you see professing christians jeweled up, tipped off gaily, costly, and fashionably, with gold in their ears, gold in their bosoms, gold on the wrists, gold on their fingers, gold, gold, gold; when you see gold watch chains and seals dangling, rest assured the work of grace has not done its perfect work. Their religion is only skin deep. The fallow ground is not yet broken up.

President C. G. Finney says: "After I became a christian (though no one spoke to me about it), I was ashamed of my ruffles, and of my great bunch of watch-keys. I now saw that I had worn them for mere show, and abandoned them at once."

Only a few Sabbaths ago, we saw a minister on the stand, beautifully dressed up in the finest broadcloth and silk, with a gold breast-pin, and two gold keys, dangling from his vest pocket in full view; one of them quite large, in a square form, the other smaller in size. They were of the most bright and sparkling gold; dazzling. These gold keys were so arranged as to be clearly seen by the whole audience during his delivery. How exceedingly pretty and dandy-like he looked! The whole audience seemed absorbed in viewing his pretty dangling gold keys, his breast pin and his fine broadcloths and silks.

Reader, this man was a professed watchman over Christ's flock, thus bedecked. What think you of the effect of his example on his hearers—young ladies and gentlemen fond of golden trinkets, pearls and costly array? Could he point them to Isaiah 3: 16–18 reprovingly? or to 1 Peter 3: 3; Tim. 1: 2-9; Rom. 12: 2? "Lord, help, for the godly man ceaseth."—Ex.

THE RIGHT RING.—At the Mildmay Conference, England, June 24th, 1874, Bro. R. C. Billing said:—

"Go away from this conference, and tell the whole of England that the Lord is coming. Tell it in the churches; tell it in the market-place, in the shop, in the office, in the drawing-room, everywhere; let the church and the world know that the Lord is coming. And not only tell it forth, but oh! let us learn to live as those who are expecting and waiting the return of the Lord. Let us live in that peace and harmony which the Lord himself has commanded, and let us ever be putting up the prayer, 'Lord Jesus, come quickly! come and take thy waiting people to thyself; come and take to thyself thy great power, and reign.' For, remember, the Lord has promised him the throne, and he shall reign for ever and ever. May the God of peace and comfort fill us all with all peace and joy in believing, that we may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost. And in that power may we go forth to testify not only to a crucified and a risen, but also to a coming Jesus. 'Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly.'"

Gems.

— The wealth which the gospel bestows is increased by distribution.

— Beware of spoiling your faith by suffering it to lie idle. Exercise is as necessary in the spiritual life as in the natural.

Moments are life's richest treasures,
Use them well!
They will bring eternal pleasures
If we never treat them lightly,
But improve them ever rightly.
Use them well!

— Proportion your giving to your income, or God will proportion your income to your giving.

— The human heart is made for love, as the household hearth for fire; and for truth, as the household lamp for light.

— He who reforms himself has done more towards reforming the public than a crowd of noisy impotent patriots.

— If religion be your vineyard to labor in, eternity shall be your bed to rest upon. Every grace that is here exercised, shall there be glorified.

— The habitual remembrance of the divine presence is the most ready and effectual means to discover what is wrong and to restrain us from it.

— The more you enjoy the smiles of God, the more you will shine in the eyes of those saints who judge of the trees of righteousness by the fruits.

— As it is a christian duty to love others, it is likewise obligatory on us to use all helps that may make us lovely, and warm ourselves into the good affections of those around us.

— God has unmistakably connected our true happiness with our duty. Hence religion calls for no sacrifice which a genuine regard to our well-being alone would not lead us to make.

— When you are tempted to give way to your angry passion, look above; for there is One who never fails to catch the faintest sound, and he will give you strength to overcome all things.

— No man is so dignified as when he is in the line of service. No soul is so beautiful as a soul consecrated to the service of God and humanity. As the earth never looks so beautiful as when she has her bosom loaded with summer or autumnal blessings for men.

SYDNEY SMITH once remarked: "After you have written an article, take your pen and strike out half of the words, and you will be surprised to see how much stronger it will be."

GOOD ADVICE.—The following is from one of forty years' experience. It is given to those seeking the Spirit:—

"My brother, my sister, stop teasing the Lord for it, but take it by faith alone. Then be sure and profess it in public, and God will set his seal of assurance to the word. Don't try the experiment of living it with sealed lips; thousands have been wrecked on this fatal reef and gone down forever. It is just the idea the devil would have you do; the same rule holds here as in the case of justified persons, who confess and profess what God has done for them, and then fall back into the ways of sin. Forty years wandering in the wilderness did not bring the Israelites into Canaan, but obedience. So when the enemy assails me on my wanderings, as he often has, I refer him to the omnipotence of faith, and exclaim, Important spiritual destinies await me in this life, and press on to conquests of the cross."

JESUS, ONLY JESUS.

Be our joyful song to-day,
Jesus, only Jesus;
He who takes our sins away,—
Jesus, only Jesus.
Name with every blessing rife,
Be our joy and hope through life,
Be our strength in every strife,
Jesus, only Jesus.

Once we wandered far from God,
Knowing not of Jesus;
Treading still the downward road,
Leading far from Jesus:
Till the Spirit taught us how,
'Neath the Savior's yoke to bow,
And we fain would follow now
Jesus, only Jesus.

HOW TO PROMOTE PEACE IN A FAMILY.

Remember that you will be likely to be crossed every day, so prepare for it.

Everybody in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore we are not to expect too much.

To learn the different temper and disposition of each individual.

To look on each member of the family as one for whom we should have a care.

When any good happens to any one, to rejoice at it.

When inclined to give an angry answer, to "overcome evil with good."

If from sickness, pain, or infirmity we feel irritable, to keep a very strict watch over ourselves.

To observe when others are so suffering, to drop a word of kindness and sympathy suited to them.

To watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.

To speak kindly of the servants, to praise them for little things when you can.

In all little pleasures which may occur, to put self last.

To try for "the soft answer that turneth away wrath."

When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves: "Have I not often done the same and been forgiven?"

In conversation not to exalt ourselves, but to bring others forward.

To be very gentle to the young ones, and treat them with respect.

Never to judge one another harshly, but to attribute a good motive when we can.—Ex.

CAMPMEETING SUGGESTIONS.—Consecrate your time, talents, and yourself, to the great work before you. Keep all merely secular interests out of sight. Avoid all conversation on ordinary topics. Shun all jesting and evil-speaking. In no case allow yourself to be drawn into controversy.

Be strict in your observance of all the rules of the meeting. Hear the word, join the prayer meeting, and improve every opportunity to do something for Jesus. Work! work! Attend to your private devotions. Be much alone with the Master. Read a portion of the word of God daily. Pray for and persuade your unconverted friends to come to Jesus. Take proper care of your bodily health. Shun excess in eating. Retire and rise early. Do all things for divine glory. Watch, wait, pray, hope, and trust God for victory and success.

FORGETTING HIS ERRAND.—A person came to Mr. Longdon, of Sheffield, one day, and said:

"I have something against you, and I am come to tell you of it."

"Do walk in, sir," he replied; "you are my best friend. If I could but engage my friends to be faithful with me, I should be sure to prosper. But, if you please, we will both pray in the first place, and ask the blessing of God upon our interview."

After they rose from their knees, and had been much blessed together, he said:

"Now I will thank you, my brother, to tell me what it is that you have against me."

"Oh," said the man, "I really don't know what it is; it is all gone, and I believe I was in the wrong."—Sel.

WHAT ONE TRACT WILL DO.—A clergyman while residing at the west, became acquainted with a very devoted minister, who was converted under the following circumstances:

He was long a most abandoned, dissipated character. One night he was found trying to get into a neighbor's house at a late hour. The family were aroused by the noise, got up, helped him in, and made him comfortable till morning, and then put a small tract in the crown of his hat, and sent him home. When he discovered the tract, he wondered how it should have come there. He read it again and again, still wondering where such a message should have come from. He was finally brought under deep conviction for sin, and fled to the Savior; was drawn to the ministry, and is now a very successful preacher of the gospel.—Ex.

"WHO IS YOUR MASTER?"—A free negro was working one day by the side of a road, when a traveler, who happened to pass that way, observing that the black man looked stout and healthy, stopped to look at him. The traveler thought he would like to have such a strong black man for a slave, so he began to talk with him:

"Will your master sell you?" he asked.

"No, my master won't sell me."

"Are you sure your master won't sell you at any price?"

"Yes, I am sure my master won't sell me at any price."

"Who is your master?"

"My Master is Jesus Christ. He will never sell me. He never sells any of his servants."

TO PREACHERS.—In preaching be short and lively. Load up before you enter the sacred desk; announce your text, when the time comes, with distinctness, and dash right into the discussion. Keep your eye on the drowsy hearer, until he becomes wide awake. Hold the children and those restless young folks under good command. Give a portion to the aged ones, who try so hard to catch every syllable you utter. Stir all the people! Shake off dull sloth, in manner and tone. Be in earnest. Time is passing, eternity is near, judgment is at the door! Make an impression, if you can, inside of thirty minutes; if not, ask God to give his blessing, and—close.—Ex.

WITH men it is a good rule to try first and then to trust; with God it is contrary. I will first trust him as most wise, omnipotent, merciful, and try him afterward. I know it is as impossible for him to deceive me as to be deceived.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HO! TOBACCO USERS.

Some of you may not have read the following candid reasons for refraining from tobacco using, which we clip from a secular paper:

The habit is at war with temperance. Tobacco is an intoxicant. It is a part of the merchandise of dram-shops, and an incentive to drunkenness. The toper, rebuked by a professed teetotaler, with a quid or a cigar in his mouth, might pertinently respond, "Physician, heal thyself."

The habit is a self-indulgence in flagrant conflict with the self-denying spirit of the divine Founder of christianity. It numbers among its slaves more than one hundred and fifty millions of human beings. It hinders moral reform, and impedes progress.

The habit is essentially filthy, and "cleanliness," says the proverb, "is next to godliness." Ladies of refinement involuntarily shrink from the man who chews, or smokes, unless custom has rendered them indifferent to these vile practices.

The lips of a tobacco chewer or habitual smoker are swelled and saturated with a disgusting poison; the gums are spongy and tender, and the whole mouth and throat affected by its use.

The habit of using tobacco is inconsistent with the character of a christian gentleman. "St. Paul," Bishop Hooker tells us, "was emphatically a gentleman." Would he have poisoned the air with sickening smoke, or deluged it with liquid filthiness? Never!

The habit injures the voice. The smoker articulates huskily. The chewer often croaks. The snuffer speaks through his nose.

The habit is costly. Official statistics show that more money was spent for tobacco in the United States during 1871, than for bread, the staff of life—$350,000,000 for tobacco in its various forms; $200,000,000 for flour within the year!

The habit often lowers the self-respect of those who practice it. "I love my pipe," said a clergymon, "but I despise myself for using it."

The habit disturbs the regular pulsations of the heart. Tobacco users are thus in constant danger. Many fall dead suddenly.

The habit weakens the mind. It enfeebles the memory, paralyzes the will, produces morbid irritability, diseases the imagination, deadens the moral sensibilities, and is therefore an "assault and battery" on the nervous system, the intellect, and the soul.

The habit is a rebellion against conscienc. Those who indulge in it know that it wastes time, money, strength, and life, and tramples on the laws of God. Hence it is sin.

The habit is as contagious as the cholera. Every mature smoker infects dozens of youths with a desire to follow his pernicious example. Thus the evil spreads.

Bondsmen of "tobacco," break your chains! After a month of abstinence you will not care for the poison, and within a year after your self-emancipation you will loathe it. It is God's command that you do yourself no wilful harm. For this reason, added to those already placed before you, give up the use of tobacco forthwith and forever!

Let christians take the lead in this reform, and let our people be first in the ranks. God was particular to have the Israelites physically clean. Would he have us less so?

TO TRAIN A CHILD.

A little tract issued for distribution by the Ladies' Sanitary Association, of London, gives wise suggestions for the nurture of children in health of body and spirit:

Never refuse a thing if it is harmless, but give it, if you are able, without delay.

Never give anything because it is cried for, that you have refused when asked for.

Be careful to observe real illness, and avoid causing bodily uneasiness from over clothing, or cold, or unwholesome food, such as candy, sugar-plums, sour fruit, or giving buns or cakes to quiet the child.

Avoid false promises. They are sure to be found out false.

Avoid threats of all kinds. If believed, they make children timid, and injure both mind and body; and if not believed, they are useless. Such threats as "bogie," "policeman," "black man," are sure to be found out to be false if the child lives.

Never say anything untrue to a child.

Do not wreak your own bad temper, or visit your own feelings of fatigue and trouble on children by being severe with them, or by saying, "You shan't have it," or "I won't give it to you," when there is no reason for refusal, except that you are yourself tired, or in trouble, or out of sorts.

Avoid giving orders, such as "Stand still," "Go on," "Hold your tongue," "Put it down," etc., unless you really mean that they should be obeyed; and the fewer orders you give the better.

Neither give too much pity, nor yet be vere and unkind when a child tumbles down or hurts itself.

Do not worry a child. Let it alone and let it live in peace.

To sum up all in a few words, try to feel like a child; to enter into its griefs and joys, its trials and triumphs. Then look forward to the time when it shall have numbered as many years as you have seen, and pray for health and strength to do your duty by it. You may fail, as we all may; but if you sow the seed with humility and faith, you will have done all that is permitted to us imperfect creatures; and if you have reared up a cheerful, loving, truthful, and brave spirit in a healthy body, you have been working with Him who told us it was "not the will of our Father in heaven that one of these little ones should perish."

PLANTS IN SLEEPING ROOMS.—All vegetables throw off oxygen—an element that supports life through the day, but that function is suspended through the night. While exhaling oxygen from one side of the leaf, the other imbibes carbonic acid gas, which is prejudicial to life, and the solid part of stalk, stem, and wood, are formed from it. But while sleeping, as the whole vegetable kingdom does, through the night, the absorption of that deleterious gas is partially suspended, though it collects about them by virtue of a law not very well understood. It is that accumulation in a room, the inhalation of which into human lungs is so very injurious. Therefore it is always on the safe side not to keep flowering or any other pot plants either in dormitories or close family drawing-rooms.—Ex.

THE MOST HEALTHFUL DRINK.

Water is the only drink. A diseased appetite or pernicious habit may add to it tea, coffee, acid, sugar, or drugs more or less injurious; still, the fact remains, as stated, that the water part of the mixture is the only part that is drink. The question, then, resolves itself into this: Can any foreign element be added to water to better adapt it to the purpose for which God intended it? To this we unhesitatingly answer No. Pure water is perfect; no improvement is possible—none is needed. A drink is needed to quench thirst; pure water will do it. To cool a fever, pure water is all that is needed. If we have taken into the system an undue quantity of salt, soda, or any of the neutral salts formed from soda by the processes of modern cookery, drink is called for. Pure water is readily mingled with the blood, and, passing off by natural channels, it washes the impurity from the blood. No additional impurity can make it better for this purpose.

"But," says one, "without coffee, I have no appetite for my breakfast."

Then don't eat. If the system really demands food, there will be a natural appetite for it. Food that is "forced down," or taken at the call of a stimulated appetite, does no good. Far better fast.

"But without food, I feel faint and weak."

Then rest; wait until the system demands food—until you can eat without forcing, without stimulants. Then you can eat without drinking; and, if you use plain food, with very little or no salt, you will probably need no drink until the food is digested; then a drink of pure water is quickly absorbed and mingled with the blood, cooling and refreshing it.—W. J. Young.

SUNSHINE.—It is sad to drive through the sweet country roads, and see house after house looking as deserted as if the funeral of the last occupant had taken place the day before. In the rear there is usually to be found a small kitchen, with one or two open windows, but this is the only sign of life in the whole establishment. To the door of this kitchen comes sometimes, at the sound of wheels, a thin and sallow woman, with an expression of languid curiosity in her half-alive face. She and her children, if she has any, are pale and sickly, simply from lack of light, just as the sprouts of the vegetables are in her cellar.—Hearth and Home.

"JESUS WILL GO WITH ME."—A little girl, four years old, grew ill. One day her father was sitting beside her bed, and she turned to him with the question,—

"Papa, doesn't the doctor think I shall die?"

Her father with a very sad heart, told his little girl the truth. Then her pale face grew very sad, and she mused awhile on the dark graves she had sometimes looked down into, where the people were buried.

"Papa," she said, mournfully," "the grave looks very dark. Oh, it is very dark, indeed! Papa, won't you go down with me into it?"

That strong arm she had been accustomed to lean on seemed to her a safeguard in every hour of dread and danger.

With a bursting heart her father told her he could not go with her till the Lord called him.

"Papa, won't you let mamma go with me?"

If she could nestle close in that loving bosom, and feel those loving arms around her, the grave would lose its gloom. The same answer it almost broke her father's heart to give. She turned her face to the wall and wept. The dear lamb had been taught of Jesus, and she poured her heart out to him in a child's full faith. Soon she looked up with a joy-lighted face and said,

"Papa, the grave is not dark now. Jesus will go with me!"—The Little Folks.

BAD WAGES.—"I have left my place, mother," said a poor boy one day, when he returned from his work.

"Why have you left?" said the mother; "was your master unkind to you?"

"No, mother, he was kind enough," said the boy.

"Didn't you like the work?" asked the mother.

"It was the wages I didn't like," said the boy, solemnly. "My master wanted me to sin, and the wages of sin is death."

His master had expected him to lie about the goods, and deceive, and cheat the customers; but the boy said:

"No, sir, I can't do such things; I will leave your service first."

And he did leave it, and he was right about it, too. Such boys will make mothers' hearts glad, and will find that the Lord takes care of those who trust in him and will not work for Satan, nor earn the wages of sin.

Such trials do the faithful good. It may seem hard to suffer because we will not sin; but the rough sea makes the best sailor, the hot furnace makes the pure gold, the strongest faith comes from the hardest trials, and they who suffer for conscience' sake, shall be blessed here, and crowned with joy hereafter.—Little Christian.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, the poet and editor, gave to a young man, who sent him an article, the following excellent advice, which we commend to all who would learn to write:—

"My young friend, I observe that you have used several French expressions in your article. I think, if you will study the English language, that you will find it capable of expressing all the ideas you may have. I have always found it so, and in all that I have written, I do not recall an instance where I was tempted to use a foreign word, but that, on searching, I found a better one in my own language."

"IF YOU PLEASE."—When the Duke of Wellington was sick, the last he took was a little tea. When his servant handed it to him in a saucer, and asked if he would have it, he replied, "Yes, if you please." These were his last words. How much kindness and courtesy are expressed by them! He had commanded great armies, and was long accustomed to the tone of authority, but did not overlook the courtesy of life. Ah, how many boys do! What a rude tone of command they often use to their little brothers and sisters, and sometimes to their mothers. Do not forget these three little words—"If you please."—Ex.

LEARN TO GIVE.—Let every boy and girl acquire the habit of giving when young, and to give something that they have themselves earned, or saved. The kind-hearted, benevolent child is always the happiest one.

II.—Its Aspect.

"3. It is in harmony with what we know respecting the condition of the holy angels, the future companions of the saints. I beg it may be distinctly understood, that all I affirm here is, that the view I am maintaining is in harmony, so to speak, with what we know of the angelic state; and further, that this is not adduced as proof, but simply to corroborate what was before supported by direct proof; to show, in short, that, if it be true of angels that they have been seen distinguished by a visible glory, there can be no valid reason why the glorified saints should not be distinguished in like manner. It will soon be shown, indeed, that the two parties will hereafter be directly associated together, and this affords a still further ground for believing in a probable similarity in their condition. But apart from this, it is satisfactory to know that actual cases of the kind, such as are expected hereafter, have already occurred. This, I say, removes all ground of assumption against their future occurrence. It proves that there is nothing unnatural, or improbable, or so marvellous as to be incredible, in the idea of glorified saints being distinguished by a brightness of person. Angels are so, and why should not the saints be honored in the same way? We are not indeed expressly told that we shall be made like unto the angels,* as we are that we shall be made like to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and it must not be supposed that I am proceeding on any such assumption; all I am anxious to show is simply this: that we have reason to believe, from the testimony of Scripture, that the saints will hereafter be distinguished by a visible brightness, and that this is in harmony with what is revealed to us respecting the actual state of angels, as well as with regard to that of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Divine Head of the church.

"It has already been shown that some, at least, of the angelic host, who have been seen on earth, were bright and shining in their aspect;† and it has also been pointed out that the same was in all probability true of others with regard to whom it is simply said that they were 'clothed in white.' But there is another case which has not yet been referred to, but which must now be noticed, that, namely, of the mighty angel who rolled back the stone from the sepulchre of the Savior, and whose appearance is thus described by St. Matthew—'And, behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow.' Matt. 28: 2, 3. There is something additional here, it will be observed, to what was given in the other cases recorded. Here the person‡ is represented as bright and luminous, as well as the raiment; while in all the other cases the raiment alone was said to be so. It may be further observed that, as in the case of our Lord, so here also, the brightness of the countenance exceeded that of the raiment. 'His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow.' So with regard to our Lord—'His face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.' Matt. 17: 2.

"Now it must not be forgotten, that in all these cases we have actual examples of a visible glory distinguishing the person; and that, moreover, we are not dealing with accounts which are of a figurative or allegorical character, but with pure history, the history of real and actual facts, which were witnessed by living men. If, then, such things have been already, why scruple to believe that they may occur again? Or why, if we believe them in reference to angels, should we think it incredible that similar things should be true hereafter of glorified men? We are expressly told that, in some respects at least, they will be 'equal to the angels.' Luke 20: 36. Why think it strange that in others they should be like them?

"And then, as already intimated, it must be borne in mind, that angels and glorified saints will hereafter be associated together. This forms no proof, indeed, that they must naturally resemble each other in the brightness of their persons, but it certainly gives increased probability to it, and tends to corroborate the view which has been taken of the whole subject. When we reflect that the angels, and the glorified saints, and their divine and glorified Head, will be all associated together, and that they will, as now shown, be alike distinguished by a visible glory, we cannot but feel that the whole subject is in keeping, one part being in harmony with another. How glorious, then, the company that will then appear! Surely, 'eye hath not seen, nor heart conceived,' the transcendent glories of that assembly.

"That the angels and saints will, in some way, be associated together, is, I conceive, certain. In the first place, we know that they will both accompany our Lord at his coming. The Son of man 'shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.' Lk. 9: 26. 'They which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.' 1 Thess. 4: 14. But it would also seem clear that the companionship will be permanent, for this is held out as one of the objects of hope to the believing church,—'Ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels.' Heb. 12: 22. To explain this of anything but the future is absurd. The heavenly Jerusalem is not yet set up,* and though we are already come to the ministrations of angels,—for 'are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?'—we are not come into open fellowship with them, which is the thing evidently contemplated in the above passage. But the truth is, they will be the attendants of our Lord while on his throne, and in his kingdom, and we shall behold them as such, doing honor to his person, and engaged in performing the high behests of his will, and that of the Father, and thus maintaining a continued and visible communication, apparently, between earth and heaven. This would certainly seem to be the meaning of our Lord's words, when he said, 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.' John 1: 51.

"I purposely avoid doing more than thus briefly introducing this subject, for it is one on which we know so very little, that to attempt to go into detail would certainly lead into error. I would, therefore, merely add that the connection which I have supposed as about to be maintained hereafter between the glorified saints and the angels will be further seen in Rev. 8: 7–14, with which, perhaps, Dan. 7: 9, 10 should be borne in mind, though by no means directly related to it; and further, that it would seem to be involved to some extent in every such passage as the following: 'Also I say unto you, whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God; but he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God.' Luke 12: 8, 9. We know that one of the parties here spoken of, those namely from among men, will be visible at the time; it follows that the other party, the angels, namely, will be so too.†

"4. It is still further in harmony with what is revealed respecting the amount of light that will prevail hereafter. I must here again repeat a similar remark to one I made before; namely, that there is no such necessary connection between the brightness of the saints' persons, and the truth about to be propounded, as that if the one be true the other must likewise be so. On the contrary, the one may be correct and the other not so; but supposing them to be both true, it will be readily seen that they are in keeping one with the other, and that there is a kind of natural connection between them. What I am now about to show is this: THAT THE AMOUNT OF PHYSICAL LIGHT WHICH WILL PREVAIL HEREAFTER WILL BE MUCH GREATER THAN THAT WHICH PREVAILS AT PRESENT. If this will be the case, then there is what may be called a natural connection, or affinity, between it and the future condition of the saints' persons. The two subjects are in harmony. They have both reference to the same thing, namely, the element of light. They alike prepare us to expect a new state of things, which will be marked by a peculiar feature or character to which they are both related. I need scarcely remark that the subject is one of pure evidence. It must be decided solely upon the testimony of Scripture. The question of probability must not be allowed to interfere with it, nor to intrude itself in any way. We are not in a position to judge of its probability; we must take the evidence supplied by the word of God, and adopt whatever that would seem to teach us. The result may seem very wonderful, but that forms no reason why it should not be true. It is the besetting sin of our minds to be ever ready to make our present experience and knowledge the standard of what is probable and possible; and it requires no small amount of philosophic schooling and care to correct it. But the advance of knowledge ought to do this for us. Things not dreampt of in the earlier philosophies are not familiar truths. It is surely high time that we should be prepared to believe and expect anything which is not absolutely impossible. If it can be shown that the Scriptures clearly point to a certain state of things as about to prevail hereafter, then we must look forward to it, however wonderful it may seem, as sure to be accomplished in its time. Their disclosures on the subject before us relate, it must be remembered, to a time when the general standard will be immensely in advance of the present. It is not in one respect only, but in all, apparently, that 'eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor heart conceived,' what will then be realized.

"The following expression, used in reference to the future inheritance of God's people, is of the greatest significancy and importance:—'The inheritance of the saints in light.'* What 'light' are we to understand—spiritual, or physical light?† That the saints will enjoy a great amount of spiritual light or knowledge hereafter, is certain; but that surely is not the only thing referred to here, though it may be, and often is, included. But if it were the only thing referred to, the phrase would not be what it is. The expression is evidently used in reference to the condition of the inheritance in which the saints will be found, not in reference to the amount of knowledge which they will possess. It has regard to the glorious and transcendent character of that inheritance, and is intended to point out the privilege which they will enjoy in being made partakers of it. It shows what will be its great distinguishing feature; namely, that it will, like their own persons, be marked by abounding light. If the phrase stood alone, we might hesitate in attributing such a meaning as this to it; but such is not the case; there are others which convey, or involve, the same truth, and when taken together, they compel us, I conceive, to admit that the future inheritance will certainly enjoy an amount of actual light which will vastly exceed that which prevails at present."

* Note by H Brittain. The phrase in Luke 20: 36, "they are equal unto the angels" (Diaglot: because they are like angels), I think, is proof that the resurrected saints will be like unto the angels. In what the likeness consists, is a question to be determined by those passages in which angelic visits are recorded.

† It may be well to notice the following in connection with the cases already quoted, and with those about to be so:—"And after these things, I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory." Rev. 18: 1—"And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shone in the prison."—Acts 12: 7.

‡ There is a case recorded in the Old Testament, which should be compared with this; namely, that of the angel who appeared to the wife of Manoah. In relating the matter to her husband, we find her saying: "A man of God came unto me and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible." Judg. 13: 6. It is not expressly said that his face shone, and was thus "terrible," or awful to behold; just as the Israelites felt that that of Moses was when he came down from the mount; we cannot, however, but infer this from what we know of other cases. On comparing this, for instance, with that of the angel who rolled away the stone from the door of the sepulchre, whose "countenance was like lightning," we must feel that, in all probability we are to understand that in both cases the face shone with a visible splendor. And if the case of Stephen, when before the council, be compared with these two, thus compared with each other, no doubt, I think, can remain as to whether his face, too, was not distinguished by the same, or a similar supernatural brightness. We are told that, "all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." Acts 6: 15.

* Note by H. Brittain. I think "not yet set up" visibly to us, but visible to the Lord and his present associations in heaven. With the permission of the Editors of the Crisis, I will shortly submit an essay on this subject.

† I have often thought that some of the lofty imaginings of Milton may help us in forming some slight conception of what shall be realized and seen by us hereafter. Possibly we may find that there has been more actual truth in them than has been generally supposed. But look, for instance, at his description of the form and aspect of the angel Raphael, his departure on his mission to earth, and the effect produced by his presence, as he approaches Adam and Eve in the garden:—

"So spake the eternal Father, and fulfilled
All justice; nor delayed the winged saint
After his charge received; but from among Thousand celestial ardors, where he stood
Veiled with his gorgeous wings, up springing light Flew through the midst of heaven."
—Par. Lost, b. v, 24 p.

"Haste hither, Eve, and worth thy sight behold,
Eastward among those trees, what glorious shape
Comes this way moving; seems another morn
Risen on mid-noon; some great behest from heaven
To us perhaps he brings, and will vouchsafe
This day to be our guest."
—Ibid. 30 s.

* "Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." Col. 1: 12. It is only at first sight that the next verse, in which we read of "being delivered from the power of darkness" will seem to be opposed to the literal interpretation of the term "light" in this. That "darkness" is frequently used in a figurative sense, e. g., for sin and error, there can be no doubt; but most will be prepared to admit that, in such passages as the following, some of which refer to the same "power," though these things (sin and error) may be embraced, yet that something more is certainly meant: "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." 2 Pet. 2: 4; compare Jude 6. "In everlasting chains under darkness"; "To whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 13.

"But I have no doubt whatever that both physical and spiritual light are embraced by this text (Col. 1: 12), and so, probably, all will be prepared to allow, whether they hold that heaven is the locality referred to, or earth; and whether they believe that the words relate to the condition of glorified saints—[whom they believe are in heaven.—H. B.], or to their state at the coming of the Lord. The only difference between my treatment of the passage and theirs, consists in this: that, while they dwell chiefly on the spiritual view of it, I, on the contrary, dwell almost entirely on the physical. They, in a word, view it from a spiritual, and I from a physical stand-point. This, it will be remembered, is rendered necessary by the design of my essays."

† Note by H. Brittain. Referring to the previous remarks on light and darkness, I would bring before the reader the statement found in Ex. 10: 21–23—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt. And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days; they saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days; but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings." This was the last plague prior to the slaying of the first born. The real plague was emblematic of the darkness of Pharaoh's heart, in his continued, persistent opposition to God.

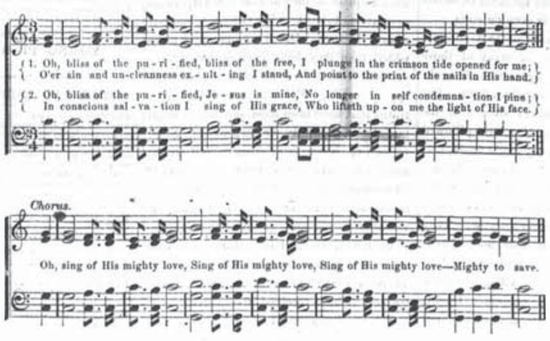
OH, SING OF HIS MIGHTY LOVE.

WORDS FROM "GUIDE TO HOLINESS." MUSIC FROM "FRESH LAURELS."



1. Oh, bliss of the pu-ri-fied, bliss of the free, I plunge in the crimson tide opened for me;
O'er sin and un-cleanness ex-ult-ing I stand, And point to the print of the nails in His hand.
2. Oh, bliss of the pu-ri-fied, Je-sus is mine, No longer in self condemna-tion I pine;
In conscious sal-va-tion I sing of His grace, Who lifteth up-on me the light of His face.
Chorus.
Oh, sing of His mighty love, Sing of His mighty love, Sing of His mighty love—Mighty to save.

3.

Oh, bliss of the purified, bliss of the pure,
No wound hath the soul that His blood cannot cure;
No sorrow-bowed head but may sweetly find rest,
No tears but may dry them on Jesus' breast.
Chorus.

Oh, Jesus the crucified, Thee will I sing,
My blessed Redeemer, my God and my King;
My soul filled with rapture shall shout o'er the grave,
And triumph in death in the Mighty to Save.
Chorus.

WATCH AND PRAY.

C. MENDENHALL.

"Watch and pray" is a command which needs just at this time to be implicitly obeyed. There are many things transpiring in this our day, which should warn us to be ever on the alert, lest we stumble and fall. We are truly living in a trying time. Dangers surround us, temptations assail, evil presses hard on every side, error with its subtleties would lead us into dark and tortuous paths. We stand upon dangerous ground, and in perilous times. It is no time now for idleness, but rather let every child of God rally around the blood-stained banner of Christ, having on the whole armor, and ready to do the Master's will.

We are in the land of the enemy, and need to watch with diligence and pray with fervency. All our surroundings indicate the coming of Jesus. We are being informed in unmistakable language, that this dispensation is near its close. The times and seasons of which we need not be ignorant, are now upon us. Are we alive to this fact? Do we realize it? If so, we will be spurred to activity in the great work of arousing, warning, pleading, and leading sinners to the ark of safety, even Jesus Christ our Lord. Self must sink, hobbies go by the board, every weight laid aside, and all devoted to the great cause. Arouse! arouse! arouse! ye who are listless and idle. When upon the brink of earth's dissolution will ye not trim your lamp, gird your loins, "watch and pray?" He will come suddenly, and cause great alarm like a thief in the night. Are we on the lookout? Soon, the heavy clouds which now are gathering, thickening, and darkening around us, will break forth with mighty force, showering all their pent-up fury upon a doomed earth and a guilty people. Oh sinner, for Jesus' sake, take refuge in the ark of safety. Flee to Jesus, while mercy lives, and God forgives, and with the "little flock" watch and pray.

Brethren, pray for me, pray for your friends, pray for each other. Our only hope is in full trust in Jesus. Pray without ceasing, and a never-ending watchfulness. Soon the day will dawn, the clouds scatter, and glory and peace shall shine over a renewed earth, and we shall enter into that rest which remaineth for the people of God. May we now watch with renewed earnestness, knowing that yet a little while and our blessed hope, our joyous anticipation, will be consummated in a reality, far exceeding our expectations. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly, relieve and reward thy saints; fit up an habitation for them, and live and reign with them world without end. What a glorious thought! "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Is it not a true solace to the plodding pilgrim, enabling him to sing,

"Lift up your glad voices, he cometh again,
Sound out the tidings o'er earth and o'er main!
Sing, for the dark days of evil are ending;
Shout to the Bridegroom with angels descending."

WHAT IS SIN?

I. I. LESLIE.

I find no better definition of the word sin than the one given by the Holy Spirit: "Sin is the transgression of the law." If we accept this definition, we should abide by it. That the law and its violation creates sin is too obvious to need argument; for again the Spirit says, "For where no law is, there is no transgression" (sin). Sin being a violation of law, it is an act, and not a principle in mankind, as some seem to think. It may be asked: Do not men sin when they decide in their minds to do that which is a violation of the law of God? The reply is: Deciding to do that which is unlawful is an act; and although it be an act of the mind, it is nevertheless something that is done, rather than a principle or thing previously existing. To resolve to do a wrong is a sin, as well as the act of doing it; but there must be the act of resolving before sin can be imputed. It is the act, after all, that breaks the law, whether it be the act of the mind or body.

Temptation itself is never a sin. Until there be the act of yielding, sin does not exist. The first pair, so long as they resisted the temptation to eat of the forbidden tree, did not sin. Sin came into the world only when the woman took of the fruit and ate, and gave to her husband and he did eat. Christ was tempted, but did not sin. There was no sin in Adam nor Eve before they yielded to the serpent's temptation. There was none in Christ, who resisted to the end. Sin, therefore, is not a something that dwells in us, to be developed by temptation, or brought out by Satan.

It may, however, be asked: Is not the inclination to do that which the law of God forbids a sin? The reply is, If by inclination is meant a propensity, that is not a sin. To illustrate: If an individual has an inclination or propensity to steal, and this is controled, so that he never takes what belongs to others, he cannot be guilty of the sin of stealing. So in regard to all that the law of God prohibits. We are not sinners because there is in us a tendency to sin. We are not condemned for having within us natural appetites and desires. But the gratification of these beyond what God allows is sin, and this brings condemnation.

Sin, in respect to each individual, is by his own act and creation. There is no sin in the little child. Jesus would not have said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," if there had been sin in the hearts of those little ones. Sin is committed. It is produced by those who disobey the law of God. We are guilty and condemned by transgression on our own part, and not by being in a world where others have sinned. The sin of Adam only effects us so far as the calamity of death is concerned. We are as free from sin when we enter the world, as he was when created. We have no stronger temptations than he had. We are as free to resist the tempter as was he. He was on probation; we are just there. He became a sinner by transgressing the law of God; we have become the same in the same way. Sin was not originally in him; it was not in us until we sinned.

PERILOUS TIMES.

Just at this time, when the whole world seems to be troubled, and everywhere "upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity" is plainly observed, "men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth;" it is well for us to heed the voice of inspiration.

Paul in his second letter to Timothy (3. 1–5), declares that "in the last days perilous times shall come," and then assigns the following reasons, to wit, "Because men shall be—

1. Lovers of their own selves; 2. covetous; 3. boasters; 4. proud; 5. blasphemers; 6. disobedient to parents; 7. unthankful; 8. unholy; 9. without natural affection; 10. truce-breakers; 11. false accusers; 12. incontinent; 13. fierce; 14. despisers of those that are good; 15. traitors; 16. heady; 17. high-minded; 18. lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; 19. having a form of godliness; 20. but denying the power thereof."

What a truthful pen-picture of the present time! It takes in the whole world, and professed Christianity comes in for its share, "having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." In the professed christian church there are men who are "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth," simply because they are too selfish, too proud, too boastful, and they are too much the lovers of pleasures. The true disciple of Jesus will obey the apostle's solemn injunction, and "FROM SUCH TURN AWAY."

Those who "come to the knowledge of the truth" are not surprised that in these "last days" "evil men" "wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived," because it is but the fulfillment of those Scriptures, which predict the return of him "who shall judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;" and they do not expect the doctrines of the Bible to become popular in this world (age), because the same writer says (2 Tim. 4: 3, 4), "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

Reader, "if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?"—Bible Investigator.

THOUGHTS ON WATCHING.

"What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch," was the injunction of the Savior of men to his followers. And hence the duty of watching is obligatory upon all mankind; and there is a positive necessity, as every christian feels and knows from experience, to attend to this important duty of watching, by reducing it to practice, considering the dangers and difficulties of this transitory and unfriendly world, which is so full of flattery and deceit, that nothing can be depended upon as permanent here below; but snares and temptations accompany every lane of life.

As temptations generally come in through the medium of thought, there is need to watch over our thoughts, and keep our minds composed and solemnly stayed upon God; otherwise we will be as a ship, which, having slipped her cables, is liable to be carried away by the tide, and stove against the rocks. Examples also should be watched over, lest we corrupt society by our misconduct. Children should be watched over, from an early period, in a tender manner, and diligently restrained from apparent evil. Our weaknesses demand that a double guard be placed at every weak place, that we may not be taken unawares, by any sudden or unforeseen event. The world, the flesh, and Satan, should be watched against with unwearied diligence.

First, the world. The riches and cares of this life are both captivating and deceitful; the mind being overcharged, we are surfeited, and hence disqualified for devotion. Therefore, says one, "save all you can, and get all you can, that the things of this world may prove a blessing, and not a curse."

Watch against the love of the riches of this world, against the spirit of the world, and also the practice and fashions of the world, by not conforming to those which are wrong and improper; but be transformed by the inward renewing of the mind, and so have the adorning of truth and virtue.

The devil, called the "prince of this world," will flatter the imagination with promises which he never can perform, endeavoring, by vain allurements, to attract from the path of holiness. And, moreover, he will exhibit all the difficulties and trials of the cross of Christ, to deter the traveler from the happy road to Zion, saying, "Mercy is clean gone, the day of grace is passed, of course there is no hope," and thus strive to drive us to despair, and, if possible, to suicide. But those thoughts should be resisted, with a hope in the merits of a Redeemer for acceptance with God; for while the desires remain, the spirit strives, and of course mercy may be sought and found by conformity to the will of God, depending upon his Son for salvation.

The tempter, also, after pardon is received, strives to destroy all our confidence in God, by reasoning in the mind, so as to give way to doubt, and be filled with unbelief; for this abiding witness in us is to be kept by a constant exercise of faith in God, under the operation of his Spirit; and hence it is obvious that this mental exercise is a reaction upon God. Therefore, a christian is as one rowing up against the stream; by diligence, there is progression, but if the exertion stops, the boat will float with the tide. So we must diligently keep our minds as we ought, continually looking to God, and depending our all upon him.

When people backslide from God, it is not by giving away to great sins at first, but gradually, little by little—from an omission of a thing of small beginning, until conscience is lulled to sleep, and enormities can be committed without remorse. Hence their fall from their steadfastness is so gradual, as to be almost imperceptible; and when they are become poor, and blind, and naked, they still are ready to conclude that they are rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing, and like Samson, though shorn of his strength, and wist it not, they go out as of other times, but fall an easy prey to their conquerors. Thus many strong men have fallen. Therefore we should remember the caution to "abstain from all appearance of evil." For it is easier to keep out of a snare while one is out, than to get out after we once get in.

Instead of reasoning with the tempter, we should betake to the stronghold in prayer, knowing that the devil cannot counterfeit the love of God, and a delight to do his will. For those sensations come from God alone.

Watch for opportunities for meetings, private devotion, family instruction, reading the Scriptures, and strive to get all the good you can, and extend all the good within your power to others, which Christ will consider as done to himself, and will so acknowledge it in the day of judgment, if they flow from a spirit of obedience and love to him.

In such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh! Blessed are those that are found watching. But those who say in their heart "My Lord delayeth his coming"; and are eating, drinking, quarrelling, and sleeping, etc., such will be taken by surprise and appointed to their portion with hypocrites and unbelievers, where will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Watching without prayer, or prayer without watching, is of no account. For they are mutually connected and dependent on each other. Hence, being joined by the God of grace, that which God hath joined together, let no man put asunder. For if one is a drunkard habitually, and prays to be kept from it, and yet will not be guarded nor watch against it, what can his prayer avail? And on the other hand, if one will watch but not pray, the resolution is soon broken, in consequence of the want of power to cope with the temptation and evil habit. Then we must "watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation."

Sometimes watching and praying will not avail and make headway against the foe; then fasting or a degree of abstinence must be used; as our Lord said, "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting."

And the spirit of prayer, which is the spirit of devotion, is the spirit of Christ, the enjoyment of which is a blessing, and those people, even if it be but the husband and wife who meet together thus, have the Lord Jesus with them!—Lorenzo Dow.

THE DEVIL'S LAST AND GREAT VICTORY.

L. C. KERN.

"Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." Rev. 12: 12.

It seems to me that there never was a time when the devil had such a full control of the human heart and conscience as at the present period. There is not a vice of any kind imaginable but what is practiced more or less by human agency now. Considering our time of civilization and enlightenment, and the advancement of the knowledge of good and evil, and that of the dark ages of barbarism and ignorance, and the latter comes far, far behind in the work of iniquity. The means which God has provided for the benefit and comfort of man, and to the honor of himself, are appropriated to the use of the devil and the accomplishment of his evil purposes, so that as knowledge increases, sin multiplies. But not alone that man is so much more a demon than before, but that the devil sees that he has a short time, and such an advantage to perform his will, that he goes to work stronger, and with greater energy than ever before, and this accounts for the increase of wickedness that is so prevalent in our world at the present time.

The Lord said that "because iniquity should abound [just before he comes], the love of many should wax cold." Matt. 24: 12. Paul said that evil men and seducers should "wax worse and worse." 2 Tim. 3: 13. And so it is that we have now arrived at the time which they spoke of. I defy all history of the past to present such a time of immorality and ungodliness throughout Christendom as the present, which must be clearly manifest to every one who reads the daily news. Crimes of all sorts and of the worst degree are being perpetrated everywhere. Murders, adulteries, debauchery, rape, seduction, theft, incendiarism, and every other crime imaginable, are becoming so common that people hardly give them the second thought. You cannot take up a public paper scarcely but you will find a list of some or other of the above mentioned crimes. And surely it must lead the anxious inquirer to ask, "What shall the end of these things be?" And the answer is obvious: The resurrection of the dead, of the many that sleep in the dust of the earth. See Dan. 12: 8; Luke 21: 26, 27, 28; John 5: 28.

It seems as though the consciences of some people are becoming so depraved and hardened, that the feeling of mercy and sympathy had entirely forsaken them, and the devil had taken full possession, directing all things to suit himself. And when this takes place, what worse condition can a man be in than to be left alone by God, and chosen of Satan? for when the Lord gives him up, and the imagination of the thoughts of his heart are only evil continually (Gen. 6: 5), what evil will he not be bad enough to do? The devil has no mercy.

Among the other crimes which dishonor God and man appears the brutal crime of "cremation," which is one of the devil's devising. How men in authority can sanction such brutality and barbarity is more than I can account for. I call this a crime. Though it is committed by the men in the administration of justice, they do not always perform their functions of justice. Crime is the violation of a human or divine law, or command. God has always commanded to bury the dead, and to disregard this is to break the command of the Lord. Then burning the dead, in lieu of burying them in the earth, is a violation of this command, and is a crime. What man of feeling could find it in his heart to take his poor old aged father or mother out, for the sake of saving expense, and build a fire upon their dead body, and show himself a beast, or barbarian enough to burn and fry it to cinders? I think I am right in my opinion, and I say that the man that first proposed that inhuman mode of disposing of dead bodies was more adapted for the community of barbarians than for the society of civilized people, and ought to go among his kind. The wild Indians of America used to bury their dead. They were heathen, but manifested more regard for their fellow-creatures than is now prominent among some of those who pretend to be the wisest of our day.

But all these things are omens of coming deliverance, and speak plainly that the Lord is near. We know that "a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." So that we wait with the greater patience, "knowing that in due time we shall reap if we faint not." And with this confidence, we keep up courage, expecting soon to witness the end of sin and its author, who is marshaling his forces for the last conflict, in pouring out his fury upon all that are outside the ark of safety. In this he is going to be very successful, as there are many submissive to his will. Our only refuge is in Christ, the ark of safety, and it behooves us to cling closer to that rock than ever before. And I advise all who are out of the ark of safety, while we are anticipating Satan's career, to take warning by it, or it is too late.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

Another National Campmeeting at Springfield has just closed. Every year the consecrated spot becomes more and more inviting to those who assemble there to worship the God of our fathers. New houses are built each year; the people come earlier, feel an increased attachment to the blessed place. Every one, whom we heard express their feelings, said it was the best meeting we had ever had on the ground; and most said it was the best meeting they ever enjoyed. It was a common remark by those present "that they had learned more about true christianity this week, than during any other one in their christian experience." The subject of Bible holiness received much attention, which resulted in leading many to consecrate themselves to Christ without reserve. In return, the dear Lord bestowed upon them the gift of the Spirit. We have never before, since 1844, seen so many at any of our campmeetings who seemed so fully given up to Christ, and who enjoyed such "great peace," and full assurance of their acceptance, and such readiness to meet Jesus at his coming. The evidence keeps increasing in favor of the position that the bride is truly getting ready to meet the coming Bridegroom. At a large meeting before the preachers' stand, the inquiry was made, How many have felt within the last year or two, a special and increasing desire to be pure in heart and more than ever like Jesus? Almost the whole audience raised their hands. So far as we can learn, throughout the whole extent of Christendom, this feeling is prevailing and increasing among all the true disciples of Jesus. The time seems to have fully come for a special preparation to meet our coming Savior. Members of other denominations were present, and took an active part in the meetings, sharing in the same rich blessings, and being led to look to rejoice in the same "blessed hope."

For thirty years we have not seen a more remarkable manifestation of God's power and approval than at this meeting. Satan made a powerful effort to cause trouble, distract and divide the flock of Christ, but was most signally defeated in all of his plans. It seemed as though the Lord took the meeting into his own hands to bring about the proper results. He poured his Spirit upon us in a remarkable manner, producing a most heavenly union and communion among "the saints of the Most High." It was a great privilege to be present at this "feast of tabernacle," and participate in the heavenly exercises. There was less opposition to the subject of holiness than in any other year. Those who have been opposed found their opposition was based largely on a misunderstanding of the subject as held by its advocates.

Instead of calling it "Methodist sanctification," by way of reproach, as some have done, they now admit it is in harmony with the teachings of the sacred Scriptures, and the experience of devoted men and women throughout the entire christian dispensation. It is no new thing, but the old revived; such as the disciples of Jesus preached and enjoyed in the first century. Christ left a living church, longing for his return; and we believe he will find such a one waiting for him at the time of his second appearing, made up of all the christians in the world. It was a feast indeed to see such brotherly love manifested as was exhibited by the members of Christ's body at this meeting. It was not artificial, and put on for effect; but the genuine christian union and sympathy, produced by the presence of the Holy Spirit in the heart. There were several very marked manifestations of the Spirit's purifying power, and in producing a rest and peace that passeth all understanding. Persons came in darkness, and went away in the light; came empty, and were filled; came in sin, on the broad road; went away pardoned, rejoicing in the narrow way; came hungering and thirsting, and were richly fed on heavenly manna. They came discouraged, and departed full of hope of eternal life.

The results of the meeting were glorious. A goodly number were converted, and fourteen were baptized. We had preaching by Brn. J. Couch, E. McCulloch, M. Batchelor, S. G. Mathewson, R. D. Grant, S. Cook, H. Davis, H. K. Flagg, P. S. Butler, Geo. A. Streeter, A. A. Phelps, A. Ross, M. R. Miles, P. G. Bowman, A. W. Sibley, H. L. Hastings, A. C. Newell, H. Munger, Srs. R. F. Clark, J. Benson, M. A. Durand, L. M. Stoddard, and the writer. The prayer meetings were excellent and well attended.

Good order prevailed during the entire meeting, and great good was accomplished in the name of the Lord.

Sabbath, Aug. 16th, was the last great day of the feast. At 8.45, we had the closing love-feast at the preachers' stand. It was a most precious season. We never before saw persons more anxious to speak a word for Jesus. Over two hundred spoke in the first half hour, and three hundred and seventeen in one hour and twenty minutes, besides fourteen songs. It was a heavenly season, that will be remembered with much pleasure by those present. It surpassed any love-feast we ever enjoyed. An ardent desire was expressed to see Jesus coming in his glory. During the day, there were ten sermons to accommodate the crowd of people, estimated at ten thousand.

In the evening we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which was another precious season; and thus closed the best campment we ever enjoyed. Praise the Lord. The future looks bright. We expect to see Jesus in a short time. We cannot tell the day and hour, but see no reason to doubt that we are near the close of the last generation. What is done must be done quickly. Let all get ready as soon as possible.

M. G.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Old Granite State is, in territory, small among the broad empire States of the Great Republic; but it is rich in grandeur of scenery—lofty mountains, winding rapid streams, narrow fertile vales, bordered with cragged, towering hills, dotted with silver lakes shaded with forest trees of endless variety, and vocal with nature's varying music. The hoarse note of rattling thunder, the swelling sounds of rushing winds, the sweeter melody of evening zephyrs, the murmur of countless waterfalls, and the inspiring charms of forest songsters blend in a grand chorus to the great Creator. It is the Sitzwerland of America. It is nature's gallery of sublimity. It is God's city of mountains,—the laboratory of creative skill. Here the naturalist and scientist can scan the pages of nature's open book, and read the infinite wisdom and boundless resources of its great originator. Here is seen the matchless artistic skill of the unvarying hand which produced the angles of its crystals, the regularly formed blocks of its vast masonry, its ever changing vegetation,—annually dying and relieving the immutable rotation of its seasons, from the scorching July to the frost-biting January.

Here stands in silent grandeur the far-famed Mt. Washington. Its uncovered head speaks with mute reverence its unconscious praise of the great Creator. Its lofty summit looks down in haughty triumph upon its less exalted neighbors, and seems to bid defiance to the changing seasons, howling winds, and the whirl and convulsions of a cursed world. Generations of humanity have had their birth and burial in its changeless presence; but its broad shadows have not varied an inch in their latitude and longitude through its historic eyes. The threatening clouds wrap it in the darkness of night, and the thunders shake its solid masonry, while the lightnings blaze from summit to base, threatening all things with dissolution; but when the dark mantle is gone, it still appears as dauntless and unmoved as of old.

There stands, grouped around it in silent and motionless grandeur, like sentinels watching the changing seasons and passing ages, towering mountains, numerous as the hay stacks on the broad Atlantic marshes. They mock the pyramidal mountains of Egypt, presenting their Maker in glorious contrast to the Egyptian kings who attempted, by these vast structures, to immortalize their inglorious fame. The beholder, from its lofty summit, views the land as did Abraham in prophetic vision, northward, southward, eastward, and westward. He sees the Atlantic waves dashing around the harbor of Maine's Forest City, and also looks upon the gray heads of Vermont's lofty peaks. He seems to be standing on an angelic watch-tower, looking down upon a broad expanse of strangely variegated landscape. The mountains stand in court robes of changeable green, with uncovered heads, as if in acts of devotion to the great Divinity. The clouds seem to have lost their elevation, and wildly drift below his feet. The deep-toned thunders sound as if their echoes came from some vast subterranean hall. The rays of the morning sun are reflected from a thousand hill sides and verdant vales, where the crystal waters of countless rivulets and broader streams murmur amid the waving forest trees. Cultivated fields, roaring water falls, and busy villages appear before him, where sounds from joyful laborers and humming machinery blend in strange harmony.

There the sympathetic heart fills with strong emotions, alternating between joy and sorrow, as if contemplating the varied experiences of the teeming thousands around. There exists in every direction peace and war, plenty and want, love and hatred, happiness and woe, life and death. Here is joy that a man is born, and there is grief that a man is dead. To-day the earth is carpeted with green lawns of waving grass and growing grain, the majestic forests beautifully attired in their spring dress, gracefully waving their branches in praise to their Creator; to-morrow the naked fields, leafless forests and drifting snows manifest the desolations of the curse. There is the home of industry and civilization, where a few decades in the past unbroken forests were seen, and the native's war whoop which echoed through the solitude of a howling wilderness, and the uninterpreted chatter of squaws and children were the only sounds heard from human lips. But how vast the change. The savage war cry has ceased to echo through these valleys, and sweeter melodies of Christianity now greet the ear with more joyful harmonies. The Puritan fathers, wearied with intolerant oppression in the Old World, hastened to the rock-bound coast of our beloved New England, and, with axe in hand, and a purpose as fixed as the polar star, broke the hitherto unbroken forests of the Old Granite State, and made themselves homes and christian altars. Rude cabins were erected, and the dauntless father and heroic mother, with their rosy-cheeked children, gathered around the newly-built camp fires. Bears and wolves were their neighbors, and the howl of beasts and screech of owls their evening song.

The sadness and gloom of that solitude was greatly diminished in many of those primitive homes by the light of God's book, and the joys of a true christian faith. But those fathers and mothers sleep with the dead, and their children also have pillowed their heads in the newly-made fields, first cultivated by their hands. Those rude huts multiplied in every direction as the dauntless axemen swept away the heavy forests like grass before the mower's scythe. They were soon succeeded by more noble dwellings dotting the hill sides, and scattered in the valleys, clustering in villages at the waterfalls and municipal centers. Doubtless this mountainous State, notwithstanding its sterile soil, has produced as noble a type of christian civilization as can be found. All the fruits of the arts and sciences, literature, political economy, social refinement, and the gospel of Christ, is found among its citizens.

The tourist hastens to leave the tardy stage coach, and, with an air of triumph over the fathers, he stands upon the deck of the marvelous steamboat as it puffs and strikes its strange revolving wings on the waters of the silver lakes and flowing streams, and flies like an eagle to its destined mooring. Here is also seen a sight which would be strange indeed to the restored vision of the slumbering dead,—a curious iron network girding the mountains, circling the lakes, piercing the hills, bridging the streams, elevating the valleys, and converging to the cities. Upon its parallel roads glide gilded chariots, filled with busy, bustling human freight, drawn by iron horses, tramping with heavy tread, running like the lightnings, roaring like a tempest, darting like a shooting star among the mountains.

The wandering eye now falls with strange emotions upon another scene, which appears almost unearthly, and beyond human skill and art to produce. A marvelously constructed machine commences with the whiz and puff of its pent-up power to roll its ponderous wheels up the steep sides of the king of the hoary-headed mountains—the great Washington. It seems like an angel chariot bearing humanity to some upper world. It rises majestically above the plain of human habitation, and melts away from the sight of gazing eyes in the floating clouds above. But how strange and diversified must be the emotions of the intelligent mind as the marvelous chariot bears him to the grand observatory of Washington's frigid summit. Deep streams of sublimity pour into the mind from every point. The eye sweeps around with renewed life, viewing the endless variety and grand proportions of the far-reaching landscape around him. Here faith seems to hear a voice from some unseen place, saying, These things are only a broken, blighted fraction of the great Creator's work.

This is the State of our nativity,—the land where our ancestors sleep unconsciously. Reminiscences of our early experiences carries the mind to historic places among these familiar hills. Here our childish sports were enjoyed, and we tasted the first bitterness of the curse. There stands, near the evening shadow of Kearsarge, the old farm-house where we experienced the pangs of repentance, and felt the agonies of dying to sin. The murmuring brook still runs through the meadow where the man of God buried us in the likeness of Christ's death. Yonder stands the ancient cottage, where, in the buoyancy of youthful love we gave our hand in holy wedlock to a pure-hearted maiden, who now rests in saintly slumbers under a leafy curtain upon the bank of the great Merrimack. There stand the sculptured stones in mute and solemn silence, marking the resting-place of true and cherished friends. They present the record of terrible days of lamentation and bitter weeping, when hearts were torn, and the unbroken silence of death banished every earthly joy and swept from our vision every human prospect.

Thus we glance the eye over a page of the past and present history of the good old mountain State. But who can present to our eye a page of its future history? Will these mountains forever remain unchanged? Will these waterfalls forever roar, and the rivers flow on eternally? Will the seasons continue their rotation forever? Will the sun-rays scorch and the star-beams chill unhindered? Will the generations of humanity rise and fall like the grass through endless ages? Upon the page of inspiration, written by a divine hand, is the answer—No. God will cast these mountains—foundations, base and summit—into his great furnace, and melt them "like wax." He will mould a habitation for redeemed man, a new earth more glorious than the eye ever saw, or wandering feet ever trod. These sad changes, which echo the fall, will be substituted by that which will be God-like, changeless and eternal.

A SUGGESTION.

Allow us to suggest what seems to us as eminently practical. As there are many places in each State, where the glorious truths we love so well have not been proclaimed, we would recommend that every State conference take measures to keep at least one evangelist continually visiting new fields, to hold meetings for a week or more, as the Lord may direct. In this way, thousands would have a chance to hear about the "blessed hope," who are now in darkness and doubt, deprived of what is to us of priceless value. This State evangelization should commence at once. The coming season should be one of most earnest work for the salvation of our fellow men. No effort should be spared. Eternal interests are involved. Stupid indifference should have no place in the christian's heart. Jesus requests us to work in his vineyard, and our reward is sure. Doors are open now more widely than they have been for twenty-five years to receive the evidence that shows the speedy coming of Jesus, and other great truths that have been much obscured. Shall not the opportunity be improved? Shall we be free, if we keep silence, and do not make a special effort to meet the demand? These truths have not been opened to our minds merely for our own enjoyment. If valuable to us, and we love our neighbors as ourselves, we shall be willing to devote labor and money to give them to others. There is no patent on them. Said Jesus: "Freely ye have received, freely give."

The State evangelist should also be well furnished with tracts. Great good, with little means, may be accomplished by these silent messengers. The people have now an eager desire to obtain and read them. Thousands of dollars should be devoted to this object. We hear of rich fruits resulting from this department. We think there is no other way by which a few dollars can be used to better advantage in the cause of Christ. Let every one do something.

Truth Spreading.—The good news comes increasingly that able ministers are seeing the light now shining on the sacred page in relation to the entire mortality of man, and the final destruction of all who will not repent of their sins. They are also seeing the evidence that Jesus is soon coming.

New Theological Manifestoes.—The Rev. R. W. Dale, of Birmingham, who is regarded as the leading man of the younger generation of Congregational ministers, has publicly announced his acceptance of the doctrine of the non-immortality of the soul. Only those who believe, according to his notion, will receive the gift of eternal life. A similar declaration of opinion was recently made by the Rev. Arthur Mursell; and the view is said to be rapidly spreading in all the churches. The Rev. Dr. Raleigh, formerly of Glasgow, has made perhaps the most remarkable of all the missionary speeches heard at the May meetings this year. It was to the effect that the friends of missions did not necessarily believe that all the heathen would be lost. But even supposing them to be safe, Dr. Raleigh contends that it would still be the duty of christians to send them the message which would make them purer and better; and on this ground he would be content to rest the vindication of missionary effort. The speech setting forth this view was a very eloquent and fervent one, and was well received by a crowded audience. It was also warmly praised by Sir Bartle Frere, who was one of the speakers at the same meeting.—Mail.

Ordination.—Bro. Roland D. Grant was ordained to the work of the ministry, Saturday, August 15th. Bro. S. G. Mathewson offered the prayer, and Bro. J. Hemenway gave the charge and the right hand of fellowship. Bro. Grant bids fair to be a useful and successful preacher of the gospel of Christ. We commend him to the churches as one worthy of their confidence. Let him enjoy your sympathy and support.

M. G.

Sr. R. F. Clark, of Kansas, has shown herself worthy of the confidence of all christian people. She is a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. We commend her to the churches in Christ, wherever she may be called to labor.

Bro. J. T. Ongley writes:—"We closed our tent-meeting at Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 9th. We had a very good meeting for such a place. In the cities and large towns there are so many things to draw the attention of the people, that we do not get as large audiences as in the country. The aristocratic are above going, and the popular church-going people have to go to their several churches. Some few were regular attendants at the meeting, and appeared to pay particular attention to the word spoken; while others went to their places of amusement. One man held forth one evening in the Opera hall, and made $600; the same evening we received in our tent $1.80 for our services and expenses. Truly, 'truth is fallen in the streets,' and 'equity cannot enter.' The man or men who stand up for the truth make themselves a prey and derision to the world and the professed church; but the day of bright glory is at hand. We conclude that it is better to be 'good servants' and 'give meat in due season.' Financially, our receipts have been very small—sixty-nine cents per day since we started the 6th of June—grove and other meetings included, up to the 10th of August. We leave our work in the hands of the Lord. A Paul may plant, and Apollos water, yet it is the Lord that giveth the increase."

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM BRO. J. J. SMITH.

The Cause in Ala.—Light Spreading.

To the A. A. M. Society.

Dear Brethren:—I will report very briefly, that in my tour down the Tenn. river valley in May and June, the labors of your unworthy brother seem to have been abundantly blessed of the Lord, as preachers and people all heard the new doctrine with candor, Bro. J. A. Bryan, whose letter I see in the Crisis, is a Presbyterian, who never boldly, but meekly proclaims the truth as we teach it. In the last six weeks, I have confined my labors nearer home, my family having all been sick for some time, and other pressing necessities requiring my attention at home more frequently. I have visited the churches, and they seem to be in a healthy condition, increasing in Bible knowledge and zeal, as well as practical godliness. I gained access to one point in Tennessee, where our views had been preached down by those who would not hear us, but who take the representations of others. I gained the ear of three of those opposing preachers, two of whom took part in the service. A great deal had been said here about what Sheldon, Smith and Cargile teach. I told the people that I would not trouble them with the teachings of these men; that God made promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; that Peter, Stephen and Paul were inspired by the God that made the promises to give an infallible interpretation of these promises. The way is opening there. Some among them, I learn, have decided to come out from them.

Last Sunday, I met a congregation in a grove, which heard the word attentively; it was new to many of them. Eld. A. Allison, who debated with Bro. Cargile last year, was present. I invited him to preach after a short recess. He did so, and read as a text, Acts 3:22:23. He endorsed my view of the earth in a renewed state as the saints' eternal home, and quoted several scriptures to prove that the wicked would be destroyed. He contrasted the future of the wicked and the righteous thus: The wicked doomed to eternal darkness, the righteous to eternal light; the wicked to everlasting death, the righteous to everlasting life. This seemed to me to be a yielding since the debate.

On Monday, I went over to the Bethesda church. Here we had a revival meeting a year ago. Nineteen persons professed a hope in Christ. Bro. Cargile told them that if spared, he would call there that day, twelve months, and inquire for them. So he and myself met a large assembly there; preached, prayed, and exhorted. Had a precious season with these loved ones. Several of those nineteen had turned away from the Savior, but many are firm. It was hard to part with these old and young pilgrims, who are rejoicing together. We repaired to the water, where I buried seven happy ones in baptism. It was a very impressive scene. I never saw persons more happy in obeying this ordinance than were some of those. I feel that our work is not in vain, though we have severe trials of our faith, and oppositions from without.

Bro. Prime, of El Dorado, Ark., wants some one to visit his section. He has been sowing the good seed, but is too infirm to get around much. But I have not the means to make the trip, nor to feed my family for a long absence. I am now reduced to a pressing and painful necessity; viz., to seek day's work for bread, at a season of the year when there is but little demand for labor; and the little remnant of corn now in the market commands the ready cash. Hence I find great difficulty for the present. But that precious promise comes up often—"Trust in the Lord and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed." I have always found it so. But in very dark places faith falters. How frail we are. O for that faith that fails not in trials. I enclose you a letter from Bro. Prime. If you think it proper, and the Lord wills, I should be pleased to visit El Dorado and vicinity in Oct. or Nov. next. May the Lord direct. Yours in love and labor till Jesus comes.

J. J. Smith.

Long Island, Ala., Aug. 4th, 1874.

BRO. GEO. M. PRIME TO J. J. SMITH.

"El Dorado, Ark., July 17th, 1874.

Eld. J. J. Smith, Long Island, Ala.—Dear Bro.:—It has been a long time since I received a letter from you. But I have received a large package of papers from the Crisis office (second hand) to distribute; all of which I have done; also a large package of tracts from the Crisis office, Boston; and I have been very agreeably employed at times in distributing these tracts and papers (all having once been read by, or sent to, Bro. Boutell). I have produced quite a stir for tracts, the Crisis, and A. C. Times, even among the negroes. They (some of them) can read, and they are becoming much excited about the coming of Jesus to judgment. I received a small book, or pamphlet, the other day, and so I presume that you mailed it to me. Your name was on it. I had one like it sent to me by some one last spring. I like it very much, and believe all of it. It was entitled—'The Prophetic Views of the Kingdoms,' etc. I don't know how I shall ever recompense you for your many kind acts toward me.

O that I could do something more than I am doing. I firmly believe that Christ is even at the door, ready to announce his kingdom and usher in the day of glory. O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

The Baptist church here in El Dorado, Bro. Hart pastor, through him announced to me last month that they would receive my letter, and be glad to do so, if I would present myself for union with them. I asked him how they could get over my so-called heresy; to wit, non-belief in natural immortality, and disbelief in eternal torments, etc. He said he considered those things as matters of private belief, which would not conflict with a membership in his church. I do feel it in my heart to love all mankind, and Him that begetteth as him that is begotten."

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

N. D. BABCOCK.

As our friends who never have the privilege of attending our National Campmeeting are expecting a short report from our pen, we shall have to repeat the same old story, that it was the best we ever attended, with a higher emphasis on the word best. We were on the ground as early as the Tuesday before the meeting commenced, and remained until the last day. The preaching, prayer and conference meetings were extra good; every one seemed so terribly in earnest. Most all felt that time was very short, and some felt that this might be the last campmeeting we should ever have ere Jesus comes. I never before saw such strong bonds of unity, such strong and bold determinations to put and keep all on the altar till Jesus comes.

Our half-past five holiness meetings, held in one of the large tents by Bro. Grant, were the deepest-toned we ever attended, and the result was, that scores are thanking God that they ever heard on that subject. Through all the business meetings there was a deep, abiding peace in the hearts of the brethren and sisters that no roughness could disturb, and victory was gained through our Lord Jesus Christ. There were five large tents on the ground, and many were converted in them. We were happy to meet with Bro. Bowman and wife from the South. Their reports were good; also Srs. Hemenway and Barnes; they are still resting at the cross, and looking like holy women of old. We had the pleasure of meeting with Sr. Clark, from Kansas, whose labors there have been very efficient, she having established thirteen churches. She is of medium size, very fair complexion, with a keen eye, that tells you at a glance that she is decided and determined. Modest in appearance, not foremost to be seen, but found oft by herself praising God. A very interesting speaker, not lost for thought or word. On the soon coming of Christ, and the subject of holiness, she is with us heart and hand. All seemed glad to meet with our brethren from California. Their reports of Bro. Grant's labors among them were very interesting and profitable. There are many more things we might speak of, and much more we might say, had we time; but Bro. Grant will give a report, which will be read with interest. We now leave for Alton Bay, expecting a good meeting there.

"TRINE IMMERSION."

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

That timely article on the above subject by Bro. Grant has reminded me of a partly-formed purpose to furnish a series of articles for the Crisis on "Baptism and Rantism," which I may yet fully decide to do. At present, however, I content myself with noticing a claim set forth in the argument for what is called "Trine Immersion"; to wit, the claim that the original Greek verb is, as the advocates of the "trine" method designate it, "frequentive," and, hence, requires more than one act to be performed in the administration of the ordinance; and, therefore, one immersion cannot be the "one baptism" spoken of by Paul.

The claim is a specious one, and has the appearance of being so profoundly learned as to stagger some honest souls, who desire to be all right, and they are led to think the argument conclusive, and go straightway and are dipped three times face downward. There are several other points which may be noticed, such as calling each a baptism when the act is performed, the administrator saying, "I baptize thee in the name of," etc., and dipping the candidate in water each time, so making each an admitted baptism. All I shall care to say of this is to notice that the language of Christ's commission, which it is claimed requires three immersions, is given us in the form of an ellipsis, which omits the repetition of the verb, and leaves it to be understood, so that in parsing it the verb is to be supplied. It would read, if fully written out—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and baptizing them in the name of the Son, and baptizing them in the name of the Holy Ghost." When, therefore, a candidate is dipped at the mention of each name, each immersion is actually called by the administrator a baptism; and while it may be claimed that there are three immersions necessary to constitute "one baptism," there are really three baptisms, and if there is after all but "one," then there are three, and but one after all, and "three in one, and one in three," is precisely the expression and doctrine of the Trinitarians.

But we notice the claim that the verb is frequentive. The real word which should be used is not "frequentive," but frequentative, and means a repetition of acts, or more than one act. That the verb for baptize is of that character, I admit, and do not even wait to admit it, but affirm it, and should in an argument for "one baptism," as it is generally performed. More than one act is necessary to fill the meaning of the Greek verb, and more than one act is performed in administering baptism, and therefore "trine immersion" is not called for. The proof is in this, that the meaning of the verb is, literally, to dip in a vessel and draw it out,—the dipping and drawing of a bucket, for instance,—and the candidate is immersed in the water and lifted out of it, and hence two acts, or frequentative acts, are performed in one immersion, followed by one lifting out of the water. Any one can therefore see at a glance that "trine immersion" is uncalled for, either by the commission or the verb itself. One can see, also, that even immersion alone does not constitute baptism, as that is only one act, and is not frequentative, unless one is also lifted or drawn out of the water; for immersion only, leaves the thing or person in the water. So baptism is more than immersion, and yet is not of necessity more than one immersion, and one emersion; for it is simply both.

If it is asked whether a frequentative verb will not allow of more than two acts under any circumstances? I answer, Yes, when more than two acts are required; but not otherwise, for two different acts as in "one baptism" constitute the frequentative action. Let all who want the truth on this question ponder well this fact, and be careful not to let a show of reasoning lead them to doing more than is required of them. One should be careful to do all that is commanded, but overdoing spoils the ordinance by robbing it of its simplicity and beauty and impressiveness, and destroys it entirely, by turning it into something else.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. C. Smith.

Dear Editors, and all of like precious faith in the Master's cause, we should be very glad could we be with you at the yearly Springfield meeting; also at Alton Bay; but duty demands our attention in this destitute State, where there are but few laborers, and where hundreds of places have never been warned of the approaching judgment that is just before us. How glad we should be could we attend those meetings, and listen to the words of eternal life as they flow from those filled with the Spirit of Christ. The Lord grant that you may have a heavenly sitting together in Christ Jesus, and that his saving power may be felt and made known, and that all may be united together in the love of Christ and the spirit of patience, that you may endure unto the end. My heart's desire goes out even now to the Lord for your welfare, and the prosperity of Zion. "O for a closer walk with God," should be the desire of every heart, as we near the port of rest and glory. O that each one may be filled with the Spirit of life from on high, and so live that others "seeing their good works may be led to glorify our Father in heaven."

Will not some of our preaching Brn. from the East come to this State and labor during the fall and winter months? We do hope some may feel the woe of the gospel resting upon them, and move forward as did Abraham by faith, and receive the recompense at the resurrection of the just. We do need some whole-hearted men here, that are entirely given up to the work of the Lord. Many doors are open on every hand for faithful laborers. We hope none will come to cause divisions, or create a strife. The cause is weak here, but the Lord has done a great work, and the seed scattered is springing up all over this large State. O for more noble-hearted workers; those who are willing to help bear each other's burdens and fulfill the law of Christ. We need men who are willing to be men of low estate, and who will help all they can for Jesus' sake and his blessed cause. O that such men as these may be sent out to help build up, instead of tearing down, and finding fault, and destroying the cause, making many hearts to mourn and sigh over the desolation of Zion, caused by unprincipled men, not having the grace of God. O that such men would see, and repent, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance, doing their first work, esteeming others better than themselves. Brn. and Srs., let us all strive for the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace.

We have already had five tent-meetings in this State. Our last was at Ottawa, Franklin Co., where much good was done in Jesus' name. We were with them over two Sundays. Brethren from Centroplis, twelve miles away, helped in putting up the tent. Brn. Hunt and Rote aided in preaching the word. We had full attendance most of the time. A goodly number were stirred up to search the Scriptures, and some embraced the "gospel hope." A great door of usefulness has been opened at this place, and an impression left that will redound to the glory of God.

Aug. 4th, we took the tent down and had it shipped to Topeka, the capital of the State, where it will be erected again, the Lord willing, on the 13th, to continue over two Sundays. Then we rode a distance of twelve miles, to where we labored last winter, having meeting in the evening, and then again the next evening at another school-house. Both were powerful meetings. One Bro., a Methodist formerly, came out, and the next day, with a Sr. Whitney, went forward in baptism. The members of the church in this place are doing well, because they are in the Living Vine, and I do trust they will ever continue steadfast unto the end, warning their neighbors and friends around them of the impending judgment.

The crops in many counties in this State have been almost entirely cut off, and hundreds of families must suffer the coming fall and winter, unless they receive help from some quarter. They have nothing with which to help themselves. Their farms are mortgaged, and nothing to do with, and on the whole, they are in trying circumstances. The Lord raise up helpers for the poor, is our earnest prayer. On our return to Arvonia, we found all well. We must soon start again into other new fields. We hope the friends East will remember the work in Kansas, and that prayers may go up for our welfare in the Lord.

One thing more I desire to mention, and that is, our mission for tracts, books, etc. O that every one may feel an interest in this matter, and send means to help on the Publication Society. Great good is being done by these silent messengers. May thousands of them be sent forth, and means provided to send them. The Lord bless you all, is our earnest prayer, and may we soon meet where partings will never be known.

Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

I am situated where I have but few to sympathize with me in the doctrine I believe and love. As I have none to talk with, I have to talk with my pen; so you must excuse me if I write too often. I am old and infirm, yet I do not forget God the great Creator, nor Jesus Christ my Redeemer; and I do not forget his blessed word, nor his people. I remember the hospitable homes, and kind treatment of brethren and sisters all over the country, and I want to say a few words of counsel and comfort to them.

I still remain firm in the doctrine I have so long believed and advocated, and I think I have progressed some in knowledge in the thirty years I have been searching and investigating the Bible; but I see there is much yet to learn. Some have intimated that we have got to the end of the Bible; but it is not so. There are some prophecies yet to be fulfilled, and great and important events to transpire. Thus far the prophecies have had a literal fulfillment; so we may well expect that the remaining prophecies will have just as literal a fulfillment. We see how literally every prophecy concerning Jesus' first advent was fulfilled; such as, he should be born in Bethlehem of Judea, be called out of Egypt, be called a Nazarene; they should give him vinegar to drink, should part his garments among them, and cast lots for his vesture; that he should be numbered with transgressors, and make his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death. All such prophecies were literally fulfilled to the letter. Now, then, may we not expect that other prophecies will be just as literally fulfilled?—such as, "If I go away I will come again"; "This same Jesus shall so come, in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven"; "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him"; and the wicked "shall hide themselves in the dens and caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord," and "their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation"; and "they shall build houses, but not inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but not drink the wine of them; they shall pour out their blood as dust, and their flesh as dung upon the earth; their silver and gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; and the slain shall be from one end of the earth to the other, and they shall not be lamented nor buried."

Now, brethren and sisters, keep searching the Scriptures; keep your minds open to conviction, and when you get the evidence of a truth, receive it, but not before. We have to learn little by little. Keep your hearts in order, your lights shining, for the signs of the times show plainly that Jesus' coming is very nigh. Brn., write to me, for I am alone.

Chelmsford, Mass.

From Bro. August L. Kling.

One of the tracts published by you, in the year of our Lord 1866, called the "Personal Coming of Christ," the only true time of our redemption, was sent me in the German language, and one in the English language. I have been spreading the mighty truths contained in the tract, and shown it to five of our German preachers, and thereby got myself into trouble. I will pay you whatever the charge will be, for the tracts I published in the New York Free Zeitung, if any one could help me to a copy of the same; but all to no avail. On the 29th day of June, I was brought before the Essex County Court, to answer the charge for spreading and advocating the doctrine and contents of said tract; and probably next Monday I will be heard again by the said tribunal. I must hereby let you know that I am at present in Essex Co. Jail, awaiting my trial for the above offence. I must further profess that the tract contains some prophecy which is gospel truth. I could write a great deal, but I fear I may disturb your good feeling with my scribbling.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Hoosic Valley Advent Christian Conference met for its third quarterly session at Woodford, Vt., July 23rd, 1847, as per appointment. The preachers present were Elds. A. W. Sibley, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt.; R. L. Harrison, Hoosic, N. Y.; Wm. Blanchard, Pownal, Vt.; E. D. Kemp, Pownal, Vt.; W. O. Higley, Bennington, Vt.; Sr. Mary Tower, North Adams, Mass.; Bro. J. B. White, Hoosic Falls, N. Y., Treasurer. There was preaching by Brn. Sibley, Blanchard, Sr. Tower, and Bro. Munger, from Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Conference business was taken up Saturday, 25th, the meeting being called to order by the President. In the absence of the Secretary, W. O. Higley was appointed Secretary pro tem.

The delegates present were S. Worthington, Christopher Lawton, Hoosic, N. Y. Oscar Munson, Wm. Lincoln, Hebron, N. Y.; Geo. F. Townsend, Woodford, Vt.; A. W. Sibley, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt. Bro. Hiram Munger being present, was invited to take a seat with us.

The reports of preachers and delegates were cheering. Eld. Flagg reported that as pastor of the church in Rutland, his labors were mostly confined there, though he had preached at Whipple Hollow, Clarendon, and other places. As a result, some from these places had united with the church in Rutland. Since he had taken the pastorate of the church, seventeen had united with it, and others will probably unite with them soon. The church is alive and at work for God. They have a very interesting Sunday school.

Eld. A. W. Sibley reported that his labors were mostly confined with the church in Sandy Hill, N. Y. Since the April conference, five had united with the church, and others think of uniting with them soon. He had preached in the school-house, on Morse St., where there had been a good interest to hear, and as a result some have united with the church. Had preached at the Presbyterian church once, and had another appointment to preach there in the absence of their pastor. A spirit of union prevails. Had a very interesting Sunday school, which numbers about ninety. It is under the care of Bro. French, formerly of Rutland, as superintendent, and is prospering finely.

Eld. Wm. Blanchard reported that he had preached in Pownal, North Adams, Cambridge, and Hebron. Had seen the work of God revived. Had many trials, but meant to live for God.

Eld. R. L. Harrison reported that he had not preached any during the last quarter on account of ill health; but his heart was in the work. He loved the doctrine of the coming of the Lord.

Bro. E. D. Kemp had labored some in the Methodist Sunday school in Pownal, and had been invited to preach for them.

Brn. Munson and Lincoln reported that the church in Hebron is holding its own. They have preaching one half of the time by Bro. Blanchard. Have a Sunday school.

Bro. Lawton reported for the church in Hoosic, N. Y. Have lost one member by death since last conference. Have preaching three-fourths of the time.

Bro. G. F. Townsend reported for the church in Woodford. Eld. W. O. Higley was laboring with the church as pastor, and superintendent of the Sunday school. The church is in harmony. They had prayer-meetings, though there was not as good attendance as could be wished.

The conference decided that there should be five tent meetings this season within the limits of the conference; the first to commence immediately after the Springfield campmeeting; notice of which will be given by the tent committee in due time. A vote of thanks was rendered to the kind friends in Woodford, who so hospitably entertained members of the conference.

Voted, That a report of the Conference be sent to the World's Crisis and Advent Christian Times, after which the conference adjourned until the annual meeting in October.

Our new chapel was dedicated to the worship of God, Friday, July 24th. Bro. A. W. Sibley delivered the dedicatory discourse, which was founded on the words of Paul, as recorded in Heb. 3: 4. It was full of deep thought and was generally appreciated.

It was found that nearly $300.00 were needed to clear the church from debt, which was speedily raised in cash and pledges. Brn. from Hoosic most kindly and generously put their shoulders to the wheel, and finished up the chapel, after the church had gone about as far as they could without borrowing money; and now, by the blessing of God, we have a very neat and attractive place of worship, and we hope it may be a place where God will love to record his name. We have received help in this work from christians of other denominations, as well as from those of our own faith. To God be all of the praise; for every good gift, and every perfect gift cometh from him, the great source of all blessing.

W. O. HIGLEY, Sec., pro tem.

WEBB—STOCKWELL. At the residence of the bride's parents, in Royalston, Mass., June 28th, 1874, by Elder J. A. Packard, Mr. CHARLES F. WEBB, of Winchendon, Mass., and Miss SARAH A. STOCKWELL, of Royalston.

HOWARD—McKEEN. In Chatham, N. H., July 4th, by I. E. Clay, Esq., Mr. JOSEPH C. HOWARD and Miss NANCY McKEAN, both of Stowe, Me.

SMALL—MOULTON. At Whitefield, N. H., Aug. 3d, by Elder W. M. Harmon, REUBEN A. SMALL, of Pittsfield, Me., and SUSIE M. MOULTON, of Whitefield.

GRINNELL—LITTLE. In Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 15th, by Eld. E. Owen, Mr. WILLIAM H. GRINNELL and Mrs. SUSAN E. LITTLE, both of Portsmouth.

Obituaries.

MIXON. In Darlington Co., S. C., July 11th, 1874, Bro. C. C. Mixon, aged fifty-seven years and seven days.

Bro. Mixon is the first one seized by death from the church in Darlington Co. He fell asleep in Jesus in the full assurance of a part in the first resurrection, at the last trump, when this mortal shall put on immortality. Bro. Mixon was converted under my ministry, in the Methodist church. After my suspension, he was among the first to embrace our views of the Bible, and unite with us in covenant brotherhood. He lived and died a good and blessed man, and I hope to see him soon among the redeemed. May a holy God bless his widow and children, and prepare them all to meet the Lord when he comes.

P. G. BOWMAN.

A. C. Times, please copy.

BARTLETT. In Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 13th, 1874, John H. Bartlett, aged seventy-two.

Bro. B. was converted in early life, and for many years was actively connected with the Christian church, but when the good tidings of Jesus' coming and kindred truths fell upon his ear, he heartily embraced them; and through years of suffering they have proved a perennial source of comfort and strength. The last year of his life has been one of unusual suffering, but for six or eight months past, they seemed unparalled; yet he bore them with christian fortitude, grace abundantly triumphing over the infirmities of flesh. His end was peace, his life consistent. "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

E. OWEN.

LOOMIS. Bro. Alvah Loomis died of paralysis, at Champlain, N. Y., on Aug. 7th, 1874, aged seventy-three years, nine months.

Our brother died suddenly, stricken to insensibility in an hour, and living but two days without speaking; died in full vigor and strength, and in fulness of bodily form. He has been an Adventist since 1842, and a prominent, active, and respected citizen. He loved and defended our doctrines. He came six miles to hear Eld. Munger when here last; it was the last adventual sermon he heard. D. T. Taylor buried him, speaking from Heb. 9: 27. A large audience was in attendance. A wife, a son, and numerous daughters weep, in hope of resurrection.—Com.

GOODWIN. Died in the Lord, suddenly and unexpectedly, while at church in Edinboro, Pa., Aug. 9th, 8 P. M., Sister Sally Goodwin, aged seventy-four.

She was a sister of our lamented Bro. Jacob Goodwin, who was among the first here to embrace and preach fearlessly the grand fundamental Bible truth of immortality for the poor sin sick and death-stricken soul of man in and through our Lord Jesus Christ only. Like him she believed, and lived and loved and died in the Lord. Her quiet, peaceful life, went out like a lamp from which the oil was consumed, and to her the mode of dissolution was a most merciful and gracious dispensation of divine goodness. Funeral services on Tuesday P. M., from 2 Saml. 14: 14.

G. W. STETSON.

KINGSBURY.—Fell asleep in Jesus in Amherst, Mass., Aug. 11th, 1874, our dear mother, Annie B. Kingsbury, aged eighty-five years.

She loved the word of God and the place of prayer. While we mourn for her, we mourn not as those who have no hope; for we have the blessed assurance that she will come forth in the morning of the resurrection, clothed with immortality and eternal life, and live with Christ forever on the new earth. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Eld. H. F. Carpenter, from 1 Thess. 4: 13–18.

E. G. and C. F. KINGSBURY.

SMITH. In Marion, N. Y., June 1st, 1874, Sr. Sarah Smith.

She sleeps in Jesus. For many years she had loved the blessed hope, and died with a longing desire to see Jesus, and an ardent expectation that she should soon be awakened to see him coming in glory to gather the faithful.

DR. STEWART of Leghorn, Italy, gives a rather discouraging account of the work of the Protestants in Italy. He says that the country has been fully open to the Protestants for fifteen years, but that the results have been very meagre. There are in all one hundred stations where Protestantism is preached, but the great hindrance is the spirit of opposition and rivalship between the missionaries of different sects. Especially in Rome the missionaries have crowded in so thickly, attracted by the prestige of the place, that they actually tread on each other's heels and give the priests a fine chance to expatiate on Protestant divisions. Including the Waldensians, the Evangelicals in Italy number 30,000; excluding the Waldensians but 10,000, out of the 24,000,000 of Italy.

OTTAWA, ONT., Aug. 18. The destructive fires raging in the vicinity of Ottawa are a repetition of the devasting fires of 1870. The most disastrous scene is in the direction of Aylmer, where the fire is three miles in length, and making rapid progress towards Duchine. On the farms of Messrs Telinstle and Mulligan the fire is raging most fiercely. One of the Ottawa engines and fire brigade was sent to fight the flames near Skead's mills. The citizens are hard at work fighting the element. Business operations are suspended this afternoon, and the city is enveloped in a cloud of smoke and ashes. Many are packing up their valuables preparatory to flight.

CALIFORNIA.—Of seventy-nine cities and towns in California in which the question of license or no license of the sale of intoxicating drinks has been submitted to the voters, fifty-nine have given a majority for no license. A very good showing for the Pacific State. In the smaller villages and in the townships where most of the people are farmers, the temperance party almost always triumphs. The large towns and cities are the stronghold of rum.

Notices.

☞ TICKETS can be obtained to Alton Bay Campmeeting and return by the Nashua, Concord, Wiers, and the Lake R. R., for $4.90. From Worcester and return, good from Aug. 12th to Sept. 5th, inclusive.

E. G. HIGGINS.

Bethel, Vt., Campmeeting.

The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (D.V.) SATURDAY, SEPT. 5TH. The camp-ground never looked prettier than now. It smiles in beauty and neatness. It awaits in loveliness to greet all who can come. Friends are arranging to put up several new tents. We are expecting a better meeting than ever. We expect the same R. R. arrangements as last year.

Pay full fare from any station upon the Vermont Central R. R to the meeting, and receive from the committee a free return pass. This includes also all the roads operated by the Vermont Central, for the names of which see late copies of the Crisis. We also expect a reduction of fare on the Montpelier and Wells River R. R.

Bro. Chapman is preparing to furnish good board at seventy cents per day. As we expect quite a number of preachers, those churches that can, would do well to adopt one, and furnish a home for him in their tent. Private lodgings and horse keeping can be very readily obtained near by at reasonable rates.

TENT BUILDING. The committee will be on the ground Aug. 31st, and through the week, and all who intend to build tents of wood are especially requested to have them completed before the meeting commences, as it seems a pity to sacrifice so much of the spirit and power of devotion to the sound and toil of the hammer. We need the entire meeting from SEPT. 5TH to SEPT. 14TH for worship. Come, brethren and sisters, come up to this feast. Lay aside toil and care, and come. We have engaged efficient help from abroad. We shall expect you, coming with holy hearts and happy faces. H. F. C., for Com.

Pittsfield Me. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting for the eastern part of Maine will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year, in Hathorn's grove at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th. The grove has been much improved by clearing, grading, and deepening wells. It is expected that all who can will put up tents for themselves, and furnish plenty of bedding and food. The Maine Mission Tent will be on hand, and will afford lodging for those who cannot put up tents for themselves; but all must provide bedding for themselves. Be prepared for cold storms. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent. Breakfast and supper, 25 cents each; dinner, 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when dinner will be fifty cents. Also horse keeping, hay, straw and board, will be provided on the ground for all who wish, at reasonable rates.

☞ No reduction of Rail Road fare can possibly be obtained.

COMMITTEE: Jer. Carr, F. A. Baker, S. K. Partridge, Oren S. French, J. M. Tozier, Oscar Farnum, M. W. Corliss, G. L. McKenney, William Clark, Abner Millet.

THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. CAMPMEETING will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. The fare is reduced one third on the Hartford and Providence R. R.,—one dollar from Providence and return. The same from Plainfield Junction. Inquire for campmeeting tickets at all way stations between Providence and Plainfield. We expect all our preachers within the limits of this meeting, and others from abroad. Come, brethren and sisters, make a little sacrifice to attend. Do not let trifling things keep you away. Bring your children and unconverted neighbors. We will do the best we can for your comfort. Let much prayer go up from all hearts for the salvation of the people. Do not fail to carefully read Brn. Couch's and Grant's articles on Campmeeting interests. If all take heed to those instructions, we cannot doubt the good results. The Lord will help. Board and horse-keeping the same as last year.

E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

NEW PRESTON TENT MEETING.—If the Lord will, the Mission tent will be pitched in Camp's grove (the old place), on Tuesday, Sept. 1st. The meeting is to hold over the following Sunday, and should it be thought best, the meetings will be continued longer, either in the tent or hall in the village. We hope to have a general gathering at this meeting. Come prepared to camp out as at campmeeting. What you lack, we will do the best we can to help you to obtain. We propose to cook and eat together as one family. Come the first day, and stay through. We wish the preaching Brn. to come, whether we have spoken to you or not. To all we say, Come. Whether you have anything to bring or not, come.

H. J. BALDWIN.
C. L. CALHOUN.

CAMPMEETING NOTICE.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should send a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W SMITH, President.
C. C. MARSTON, Sec.

THE first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wisconsin A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Big Creek, commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, to hold over the Lord's day. We expect a number of the preaching brethren to be present to assist in preaching the word.

E. P. GRAVES.

I WOULD say to all the brethren and sisters in the State of Kansas, that I am now traveling with the Advent Christian Mission Tent of Kansas, with Bro. and Sr. Smith. I expect to go with the tent until the last of September; after which time, I will visit and hold meetings with all who may write to me, and inform me of their whereabouts. If it is the Lord's will, and the people desire it, I will devote Oct., Nov. and Dec., to holding meetings from place to place, as the interest demands. Let all who want me to visit their neighborhoods during those three months, and preach the word, write to me, and inform me when they would like me to come. Direct to VIRGIL HUNT, Wellington, Sumner Co., Kansas, Box 104.

I HAVE moved to Raymond, Iowa, and taken the pastoral charge of the church there.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

THE campmeeting located at Coventry Centre, R. I., will commence Aug. 26th, and continue to Sept. 4th. E. R. WOOD, Secretary.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a campmeeting will be held at Mechanic Falls, Me., commencing SATURDAY, SEPT. 5TH, to continue over Sunday, Sept. 13th. Provision will be made for board and horse keeping. The boarding tent is under the management of Bro. J. Moulton, who will furnish single meals,—breakfast or supper at 35 cts. each; dinner 50 cts.; or 85 cts. per day. The stable is managed by the committee the same as last year. Teams will be provided to convey all from the depot to the ground who wish to ride. The fare on the Grand Trunk Road will be about one half the usual rate. The Maine Central utterly refuse to make any reduction of fare.

Committee: M. H. Mitchell, C. Dennen, I. N. Thompson, Geo. Humphrey, Joshua Howard.

PORTLAND AND OGDENSBURG R. R.—Persons intending to pass over this railroad to the Mechanic Falls Campmeeting, can secure a return pass free of charge by dropping me a line, stating from what station they are to start.

C. H. SWEET, Steep Falls, Me.

West Hawley Advent Campmeeting.

Two and a half miles from the old time honored camp-ground in Savoy, Mass.

An Advent campmeeting at Fullerville, West Hawley, Mass., will commence Saturday evening, August 29th, and continue through one week, including two Sabbaths, and closing Monday morning, Sept. 7th. Good and able preachers from abroad are engaged to preach the word during the meeting. Board will be provided for those who wish, by the day, or through the meeting. Those wishing to board themselves, bring your provisions with you; or, if you prefer, you can have at common prices the provisions you want at a large grocery store near by. The large Hoosick Valley preaching tent will be on the ground for meetings, and also for lodging to all those who come to camp out during the meetings. Those who intend to camp out nights, should bring an empty bed-tick, blankets, etc.

It is evident from an extraordinary increase of the last-day tokens, that this will be the last great gathering of those who love Christ's appearing and kingdom, who are dwelling in this Hoosick mountain region. Brethren and sisters, do lay aside all your cares and labor, for one week's rest at this feast of tabernacles. Those coming with teams will find ample provision for their horses.

H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY, } Committee.
E. McCULLOCK,

VERMONT CONFERENCE.—The next annual Advent Conference will be held on the camp-ground, at Bethel, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, at four o'clock P. M. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate to every ten above the number of ten. Let this conference be fully represented, and thus show your interest in the cause we so much love.

R. N. STETSON, Sec'y.

Central Vermont R. R. arrangements for the campmeeting as last year. R. N. S.

TENT MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting at Groveland, Mass., on the Newburyport Branch R. R., three miles from Haverhill, commencing Tuesday evening, Sept. 8th, and continue afternoons and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, Sept. 13th.

ENOCH MORRILL.

TENT MEETING.—We expect to have the N. H. Mission Tent pitched in Sutton, N. H., to have meeting over Sunday, Sept. 20th, and onward as duty may demand. Particulars hereafter.

ENOCH MORRILL.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The first quarterly meeting of the A. C. Quarterly Conference of N. W. Kansas, for the second conference year, will be held, the Lord willing, with the A. C. Church of West Creek, Republic county, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 25th, and continuing over Sunday, and as long as the interest demands. Bro. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist, is expected to be present with the State Mission Tent, to assist in preaching; also Sr. M. J. Clark is expected to be present to preach the word. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend.

E. N. BLISS, Pres.
J. S. THORP, Sec.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The Bolton District Meeting, the fourth and last of the Conference year, will be held in the Page school-house, East Bolton, P. Q., to commence Thursday, Sept. 3d, at two P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. A full attendance is earnestly desired and expected. Let the true friends of the cause of the coming Savior come together from Magog, Orford, East and West Bolton, and parts adjacent, to confer upon its wants, and unite in earnest labor for its promotion. Ministers, official and leading members, are especially expected to be present. Let all the friends circulate the appointment. Elders Marsh and Chadsey, and others from the Farnham District, are expected to attend. Come, all who can, and unite in the good work. CHAS. P. DOW.

KANSAS CAMPMEETINGS.—The Northern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Clyde, Cloud Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Sept. 10th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been appointed as committee of arrangements, and are prepared to be on the ground the day appointed, to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: Frank Wilson, Chairman, Clyde, Cloud Co.; W. H. Rich, Clifton, Washington Co.; T. J. Hay, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; J. Roberts, Lake Sibley, Cloud Co.; C. M. Collins, Bransford, Washington Co.; B. S. Conley, Glen Elder, Mitchell Co.

Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. Let your baskets be well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. R. F. CLARK, Sec., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

THE IOWA GENERAL UNION CONFERENCE AND CAMPMEETING will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonable rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding. J. RIDLEY, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting. J. R.

NOTICE.—Edinboro, Pa., local (adjourned) S. A. C. Quarterly Conference is now set for August 29th, 2 and 7 P. M.; and Sunday, 30th, love-feast at 9 A. M., and preaching at 10 A. M. and 7 P. M. Lord's Supper at 12 to 1 M. Ordinance of baptism from 1 to 3 P. M. Let as many as can, come up to this meeting of God's loved ones.

G. W. STETSON, Pastor.

NOTICE.—I understand that there is a young gentleman traveling as a book agent, and claiming to be at work for George T. Adams. He pretends to be preparing for the ministry, asking people for money to assist him. He called at one place in Ct., and wanted to go to North Adams to hear Bro. Munger preach, and to see his mother, etc., claiming to be a nephew of mine. I would like to say, that I have not any nephew traveling, and that this is an impostor. Beware of him, and all others like him. Let me here suggest that whenever any one claims to be a relative of any of our preaching brethren as a passport, you had better write to such an one at once, and have the matter settled. Your Bro. in Christ,

GEO. A. STREETER.

NOTICE.—As I expect my labors in this section will soon close, I would say I shall be ready to go and preach "the gospel of the kingdom" anywhere, as the Lord may open the way, the coming fall and winter. Any wishing to correspond with me can direct for the present to A. P. MOORE, Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y.

WE wish some of our preaching brethren would call on us. We will find a place for them to speak in, for we are in need of help here. Please correspond with A. P. Scribner, New Market, N. H.

☞ I cannot visit Scitico, Ct., until Sept., in consequence of previous engagements. Will the Sr. Pease, from Scitico, please send me her address? Address H. C. SMITH, No. 44 Chesnut Street, Hartford, Ct.

☞ Believing it to be my duty to give my labors to the protracted meeting in Philadelphia during the next three weeks, I shall be obliged to withdraw my N. H. appointments for the present. Will replace them at earliest convenience.

ROLAND D. GRANT.

THE BIBLE BANNER.

This is a large, illustrated, monthly paper, conducted by A. A. PHELPS, A. M., assisted by an able corps of Contributing Editors. It contains various departments—Doctrinal, Prophetical, Practical, Bible Class, Miscellany, and Items of Interest. It is devoted to a critical exposition of Bible Truth, and an earnest advocacy of Bible Salvation. Only One Dollar a year, with a book or engraving free. Address THE BIBLE BANNER, New York City, Box 2289.

The World's Crisis and Bible Banner will both be furnished to one person for $2.75 a year. Address all orders for both papers to the WORLD'S CRISIS, 160 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

"THE MYSTERY EXPLAINED:
or,
AN EXPOSITION OF THE WOMAN AND THE SCARLET-COLORED BEAST
In the 17th Chapter of Revelation.
SHOWING WE ARE NEAR THE END OF THE PRESENT DISPENSATION."
BY MILES GRANT.

This valuable and interesting tract is now ready, and for sale at this Office. Price by mail, single copy, 8 cts; four copies for 25 cts.; per dozen, 75 cts. AG'T.

PAPAL ROME.
BY ELD. S. S. BREWER.

This work states the predictions concerning the Papacy in its glory, its gloom, and destruction, together with the most reliable points of history showing their fulfillment, with a graphic statement of her present dying state. The widowhood, the moaning over her fate, the dying struggles under her afflictions, losses, poverty, and burning, are brought out in present history. It is a work of value for its historical quotations, which will be wanted by all interested in this subject.

Single copy 15 cts. by mail; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per hundred by express. AG'T.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." For sale at this Office. AG'T.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. AG'T.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT,
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

LOOKING FOR HIS APPEARING.

In the lonely midnight watches,
Hear us, Father, while we pray;
We are watching, we are waiting,
For the coming of thy day;
Day for all our woes atoning,
Of our mortal life the end,
Day of glorious appearing
With our ever-blessed Friend.

Lo, he cometh! Lo, he cometh!
Our redemption draweth nigh,
Soon our eyes shall see the glory
Of his banner in the sky;
Unto earth our King descending,
By his saints shall be adored,
While the wicked flee, astonished,
From the presence of the Lord.

O ye mortals, vain and sinful!
Must we call on you in vain?
When the heavenly Bridegroom cometh,
Shall your lamps unlit remain?
Will ye linger 'mid your pleasures,
Heeding not the warning cry,
Seeking still for worldly treasures
While the world's last hours go by?

Come, Lord Jesus! O come quickly!
End our sighing and complaints;
Come to judge the nations truly,
And to reign o'er all thy saints!
We are weary of our waiting,
And the world is sick with sin;
Open now the gates of glory,— Let thy faithful people in."

"WHY IS IT?"

As men look around and see the uncertainty of terrestial things, the sudden changes that come in the midst of seeming prosperity blasting earthly hopes and ruining earthly prospects; as they behold the downfall of kings and potentates, the sudden and unforeseen breaking up of social compacts, and the rending of societies and ruin of many who were trusted to the utmost by their friends because of their faithfulness; as men see and feel these things in their observation and experience, they are led to exclaim in wonder and perplexity, "Why are these things so?" And while they make the inquiry with an earnest desire to know the truth, they are told that these things are but an indication of the general corruption that exists, and that the uncertainty in the elements, and the rottenness of society is only an indication of the coming judgment; a general demand as it were for the coming of one who alone can save the good from the general ruin that is inevitably impending, and destroy the unrighteous and the corrupt by the purging fires of judgment.

Men are told that society is becoming too corrupt to exist much longer in its present state; that churches are so without God's truth that they cannot prosper, and among all the sectarian bodies in the land there is not saving truth enough, so but that the devil runs almost the entire machinery of church organizations, and that no one should be surprised in the least at the breaking up of church bodies when they have departed so far from the theological truths that are due the present time. And when the sects succeed in outliving and covering over the cases of corruption and fraud among them, it is said they flourish because the devil prospers them, and that their time will surely come at last.

But there is another cry in the land, a wail as it were from the spirits of heavenly ones who trusted in God that they would escape the general plague, and that while other churches were to receive vials of wrath, there remained for them nothing but peace and tranquility from God.

Those who have the truth so much needed in these last days as a means of saving men from infidelity, scepticism, and ruin; those who have a mission from God to proclaim his last message to a judgment-bound and guilty world, and who are moving on in their work trying in the spirit of Jesus to faithfully perform their duty and gather a people out from the world to stand on the glorious platform of the great dispensational truth of these last days, find in their own ranks the spirit of contention and strife, and men who are pledged to build up only seek to destroy. Leaders quarrel, and show more of the spirit of Belial than of Christ; conferences are scenes of strife and contention; those who were trusted as angels prove to be false in their ways and rotten in their hearts; and the class who ought to wield a mighty influence in the world as a people, are left without worldly fame and name.

"Why is it thus?" writes one and another from all parts. We are not surprised. We have been surprised heretofore, for we verily thought the Adventists were the people, and wisdom would die with them. We thought they were the only peculiar people of God, being built upon God's truth, but we have learned that if all those numbered as Adventists should die, God would have some people yet left upon the earth. Being built upon God's truth is not enough. Men must build upon Jesus Christ himself. Truth is the material for procuring the fabric, but the building must be on some other foundation besides abstract truth. The foundation must be in God, and the dwelling in God.

There is too much human policy in our conferences, and too little of God. There has been too much head work, and too little heart work. There has been too much catering to human talent and leadership, and too little use made of the arm that is mighty to save. Men of corrupt minds—unconverted men—men of worldly principle rather than heavenly indwelling have done their work in their own way, and no wonder there is trouble. And now is the time men and women should speak out plainly in this matter; we cannot cover up wrong and think to prosper. God has a work for us to do, and a work for all to do, and amid all the overturnings of our confidence in men, or all the apparent sad results to follow sectarian division, we need not fear to follow Jesus, and with the holy sanctifying influence of an indwelling spirit to stand firm for the right. If Adventists prosper, it may or it may not be because Jesus is with them. If Adventists go down, Jesus does not fall.

Let no one fear, if he is on the rock Christ Jesus. Remember, if men fall it only indicates that man's work cannot stand. The blasts that blow across us now are only ripening us for judgment. If God brings out the hidden things of darkness let no one tremble at the result. Let us not seek to hide wrong or to cover iniquity, for fear our sect will come in disrepute. Far better for us to clean out guilt if it is in our midst, than seek to cover it up among us from the sight of men. God is blessing the labors of his true servants everywhere. And the signs of the times among those who proclaim the coming of Jesus are full of evidence that his coming draws nigh.—A. C. Times.

WISDOM IS PROFITABLE TO DIRECT.

J. W. THOMAS.

"And entering into a ship, we launched."—Acts 27:2.

Two sea captains are about to sail to some foreign port. One is wise, the other unwise. One says, "The voyage I am about to take across the ocean is a long and perilous one. I will have my vessel overhauled, and repaired, and everything made strong, and sure as possible, so that she may be able to stand any storm, and take my cargo safely to the distant port." He does so. At great expense and pains he makes due preparation for the voyage. He goes to the Custom House officer and gets his clearance papers, and is all ready to hoist sail and away.

The other captain makes no preparation. He says, "My old craft has made many successful voyages. I cannot go to the expense and trouble of having her overhauled. I know she needs repairing, but I will risk it." He loads her. He does not go to the Custom House officer to get his clearance papers. He is presumptuous, and runs the risk of entering a foreign port without anything to show who he is, or where he is from.

All is ready, and they sail. Down the harbor they go. One apparently bids as fair to make as successful voyage as the other. They sail on. By and by they get out into the ocean, where the mighty waves and winds test the power of each vessel. One rides on majestically, cutting her way through the foam, showing no signs of leakage, and giving the captain and crew no uneasiness concerning her safety. The other snaps, and creaks, and tosses about in a fearful manner. The captain and crew are frightened, and work night and day at the pumps to keep her from sinking. The recklessness of this captain has caused them a great deal of trouble, but this is not the worst of it. After a while the distant port heaves in view. They anchor. An officer is sent off to inspect the vessels, and to call for the papers of each captain. The first shows his clearance papers, and gives satisfactory evidence that everything is all right. He is permitted to pull up to the wharf, discharge his cargo, buy and sell, and is protected by the authorities. The papers of the other captain are called for. He has none to show. Who are you? Where are you from? He has nothing to show. He and the crew are taken and bound as prisoners. The vessel and cargo is taken, and perhaps sold, or anchored near to some port, where the enemies guns are levelled at it. This captain came to a miserable end. He had a perilous voyage, and when he reached the other side was captured, lost his vessel, cargo, and perhaps his own life.

These captains may illustrate the conduct and destiny of two classes of men. The wise and foolish. The wise man says, "I am destined for another world. I am going to a distant port. I know that my voyage will be attended with perils. I shall need strength to meet the difficulties. I shall also need something to recommend me at the end of my journey. I will prepare for it. I will overhaul my heart, and get all sin out of it. I will repent and amend my ways. I will go to the throne of grace and get my clearance papers signed by the Lord Jesus Christ."

The foolish man says, "I know I cannot always live here. My judgment tells me I am sailing on to the great future, but then I guess it will be well enough with me. I cannot fuss and bother about repentance and holy living. I think I will come out about as well as the best of them. I will risk it."

A few years pass on. They come to the judgment seat. The officers of heaven are sent out to examine them. Where are your papers? "Here they are," says the wise man, "sealed with the blood of Jesus." "Come ye blessed," says the officer. The face of the foolish man looks pale, and he hears the words "Depart."

MORAL COURAGE.

"They are slaves who fear to be
In the right with two or three."

A zealous reformer was pushing an unpopular but a just measure. His friends urged him to desist, assuring him that all the world was against him. "Then," said he, "I am against all the world!" That man was a moral hero. We are short of this royal and most important quality of christian character—moral courage.

No symbol of christian life is more common than that of a warfare. Christ emphatically declared that he came not to send peace on earth, but a sword. This conflict of ages must continue until sin is completely vanquished. This moral warfare requires moral courage no less now than when the church passed through its ten great floods of persecution. Cross the wicked purposes of the world; attack the strong dominions of selfishness; or even stand on the defensive against the tremendous forces of unbelief, worldliness and wickedness, and you will need more moral courage than a military patriot. True moral courage is not founded upon obstinacy, pride, revenge or mere natural resolutions, but on intense moral convictions and a sense of willing obligation to God and man.

Moral courage is courage in obedience to God and in the service of man, regardless of difficulties and dangers. It is opposed to hesitancy, guile, time-service and cowardice. It is the medium between fear and rashness. It is an eminent christian grace. "Add to your faith, virtue," that is, virtue in the Roman sense, namely, courage. A hundred texts of sacred Scripture, emphatically inculcate this virtue. The "boldness" of Peter and John, when forbidden by the authorities to preach in the name of Jesus, awakened even more amazement among the people than the notable miracle which they had just before performed. Some one says, "A preacher without this is like a smooth file, a dull knife, or a sentinel who fears to let off his gun when the evening approaches."

Bunyan graphically sets forth christian courage in the conduct of his pilgrim at the house of the interpreter. "Armed men obstructed the doorway. A great company of men halted near by, afraid to enter. A man sat at a little distance with a book and his inkhorn to take the names of those who should enter.

At last when every man started back for fear of the armed men, Christian saw a man of a very stout countenance come up to the man that sat there to write, saying, 'Set down my name, sir;' the which, when he had done, he saw the man draw his sword and put a helmet upon his head, and rush towards the door upon the armed men who laid upon him with deadly force; but the man, not at all discouraged, fell to cutting and hacking most fiercely.

So after he had received and given many wounds to those that attempted to keep him out, he cut his way through them all and pressed forward into the palace; at which there was a pleasant voice heard from those that were within, even those that walked upon the top of the palace, saying,

'Come in, come in!
Eternal glory thou shalt win!'"

How deficient is our present Christianity in this sterling element. How often we see a moral poltroon in the pulpit, unwittingly allowing carnal men to sink into the slumbers of perdition, when an apostle would thunder and lighten to rouse them. How much useful activity is lost to the church because men and women are afraid, and bury their one talent. How many churches are coming to ruin by a carnal and cowardly policy.

The early christians were bolder than we are, and yet the Holy Spirit saw fit to endue them with an amazing increase of boldness again and again.

The church stands mainly on the defensive to-day. It ought to assume the offensive. But this we can never do without more moral courage. The church needs reformation from worldliness, but where shall we find the men brave enough for reformers?

We need men like old Noah, who stood up against the world. We need men of backbone, men of spiritual muscle, men made of stern stuff, men who will neither fear nor brag, run nor yield; men with whom self and what the world can give or take away are nothing, and God, humanity and the cause are all—men upon whom the mantle of an apostle, a Latimer, a Luther, or a Knox has fallen? God send us the men! —Sel.

ANYWHERE WITH JESUS.

Anywhere with Jesus,
Clinging close to him,
I shall surely conquer
O'er the world and sin.
Cho.—Anywhere, anywhere,
I will follow Jesus;
From the fear of aught but sin
His perfect love hath freed us.

Though the clouds may gather,
Darkness shut me in,
Anywhere with Jesus,
Any thing but sin.
Love shall be our motto,
Self we will deny;
For our blessed Jesus
We will live or die.

"JESUS WEPT."

GEO. THOMSON.

How full of import are these sweet words; how fraught with intense affection and sympathy: "Jesus wept." Oh, what a volume, yea, what volumes of tenderness, kindness, pity and love are couched in that blessed brief sentence, "Jesus wept." The Son of God made tears forever sacred, while sin and suffering remains. If you would realize the force and beauty of that act, you must be a sufferer. Mary and Martha were sufferers, and they were not the only ones present on that memorable occasion, who appreciated the tears of the Son of God; even the hard-hearted Jews could exclaim, "Behold how he loved him." What a beautiful narrative. I never read it but I feel drawn nearer to my dear Savior, and nestling down in his great heart of love, every feature of that event gives evidence of the Savior's divinity and love. It was designed to strengthen the faith of the disciples on these two points, yet how strange the Savior's proceedings must have seemed to them. After the messengers from Mary and Martha had announced the sickness of Lazarus "He still abode two days in that place." This indeed looked like a want of sympathy, but no doubt the struggle of affection was then going on; and when the Lord told them subsequently that Lazarus was dead, and remarked that he was glad for their sake he was not there, how strangely they must have regarded such an utterance; and yet that utterance reveals to us the great sympathy of Jesus. If he had been present, his love and sympathy for that dear family would have caused him to prevent the death of Lazarus, and they would not have witnessed his resurrection. Mary and Martha said truly, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." But as it was, they had the privilege of witnessing an exhibition of this divine power as well as his great love.

While lying in bed, suffering on one occasion, during my present illness, and trying to meditate on God's goodness, this blessed promise came to me with a force and power I never before realized; he is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." I was overwhelmed with joy, and shouted aloud the praise of God. Can it be, I thought, that Jesus feel what I feel? that the pangs which stir my system from center to circumference also thrills the humanity of Jesus? Yes, he looks upon me, and then remembers sin, Gethsemane, and Calvary. O Jesus, Jesus, who can love like thee? Thy name is love, thy nature, sympathy, compassion, pity, still extends to me. O suffering ones, lean hard upon Jesus. He will sustain you. Said one to me not long ago, I confess I cannot sympathize with you, for I was never sick a day in my life. Not so with Jesus. He was a sufferer. He can enter with us into our deepest griefs, and share our keenest sorrows, and the fiat hath gone forth, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."

Some people look upon tears as a sign of effeminacy; but let us remember that "Jesus wept," and thus made tears not only a token of manhood, but of divinity. Brethren, beloved, restrain not the tears of sympathy. The sufferer knows how to appreciate them when not a word is spoken.

Prairie du Sac, Wisconsin.

Fashion.—"I have seen a woman," said a late preacher, "professing to love Christ more than the world, clad in a silk dress costing $75; making up and trimming of the same, $40; bonnet (or apology for one) $35; velvet mantle, $150; diamond ring, $500; watch, chain, pin, and other trapwings, $450; total, $1,250; all hung upon one frail, dying woman. I have seen her, at a meeting in behalf of homeless wanderers in New York, wipe her eyes upon an expensive embroidered handkerchief at the story of their sufferings, and, when the contribution box came around, take from a well filled portemonie, of costly workmanship, twenty-five cents, to aid the society formed to promote their welfare. Ah! thought I, dollars for ribbons, and pennies for Christ.

SHALL WE YIELD?

The following letter speaks for itself. It is in reply to one asking for counsel in regard to compromising conscientious scruples against pic-nic religion, for the sake of peace in the church. I give it to the readers of "our paper," that others may gain courage and help to faithfulness thereby. A. P. M.

LETTER TO BRO. A. P. MOORE, ON FIGHTING THE FIGHT OF FAITH.

Yield? brother, yield? what for? Rather die the death; suffer crucifixion! "Stand for Jesus," even if the heavens fall, and the sun refuses to shine. Resist unto blood? Have we? Didn't the holy prophets? Didn't Christ? Are we better than the Master? Is the servant above his Lord? "Go forward," beloved! "Stand, and having done all, to STAND." See Ephesians 6th; begin at verse 10. "Go forward," "go forward," "cry aloud, spare not," cease not. Give the devil an inch, he will take an ell. Stand for Jesus, and he will stand by you. All alone in the battle field? No, you aren't, brother. The Lord is on your side. Who else? If we have God, what more? All heaven.

Counsel? give counsel? Certainly. "Go forward"? Yield to the time-serving, the man-fearing, the pleasure-seeking,—those carrying religion in one hand, and the world, the flesh and the devil in the other? When? what for? What! give up the ship? sacrifice a crown of glory? No, you won't, brother. You've too much wisdom for that; too much grace. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth." "Go forward," brother; put on the whole armor of God; burnish it; let it be bright, shining, glistening. Fight the good fight. It's glorious. Angels look on with complacency, and God himself. Does the battle wax hot, and still hotter? Praise the Lord; "go forward." Hope is yours; salvation, glory, eternal. "Go forward."

Counsel—what better can I give? what better wish? Look at Hebrews, chapter 11. Go over it and over it; then chapter 12th; then the 10th of Matthew. Cast your eye on Daniel in the lion's den, the three men in the fiery furnace, heated seven times. In a word, take Jesus, the Lamb slain. See him in the manger. "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests"; but how with the Son of man? he "hath not where to lay his head." Look and see; then on the cross cast your eye. Hear the blessed Lord crying, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" No stimulus here to "go forward"? Is there not? What! look for a crown that fadeth not, eternal in the heavens, and no fighting for it? "No cross, no crown."

"Take up thy cross, the Savior said,
If thou would'st my disciple be;
Deny thyself, the world forsake,
And humbly follow after me."

Sometimes the cross is great, almost insupportable, like the cutting off a right hand, the plucking out a right eye. But thanks to the Father, the Son, the Holy Spirit, for grace equal to the day. "My grace is sufficient for you." "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man." 1 Cor. 10: 13. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation."

The cross will be lighter and lighter as we follow on to know the Lord, the path of duty clearer and brighter. Sometimes little crosses are great crosses, and great crosses are little crosses. Satan often magnifies molehills into mountains. But no matter how little or how great the cross may appear, to enjoy peace of mind, hope eternal, it must be taken up forthwith.

"Take up thy cross; let not its weight
Fill thy weak spirit with alarm;
His strength shall bear thy spirit up,
And brace thy heart and nerve thine arm."

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Matt. 16: 22. Our blessed Lord and Master, holy, harmless, undefiled as he was, bore the cross. "O that this cup might pass from me. Nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." "The disciple is not above his master. It is enough that the disciple be as his master."

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No; there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me.
The consecrated cross I'll bear,
Till Heaven shall set me free,
And then go home, my crown to wear,
For there's a crown for me."
"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee."

Paul says, "I am crucified with Christ." Those who tell us the offence of the cross, or persecution, has ceased,—that the great battle for truth and righteousness is fought, and that henceforth the church is to move on smoothly and prosperously, "on flowery beds of ease," are not the ones to stand at the cannon's mouth, place themselves in the battle's front, beard the lion in his den, wage open warfare with the combined powers of earth and hell. Satan is not very likely to trouble those that shun the cross, are at ease in Zion, oppose agitation, cry "peace, peace, when there is no peace," bow the knee to a time-serving age, loving the the praise of men more than the praise of God. "I came not to send peace on earth, but a sword."

"What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops." "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

"Must I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?"

D. F. Newton.

SUPPOSITION.

Only suppose the Bible to be false—extinguish all the light it sheds on the human race, make void all its promises, annul all its hopes, eradicate from the human breast all the motives which it imparts, and what remains to explain the universe, to develop the moral character of God, to dissipate the gloom which envelops in eternal night the destiny of man, to solace and cheer him during the incessant struggles of life, to soothe the bed of affliction and death, to countervail that inward dread and horror of falling into nothing, of being forever lost in the promiscuous wreck of nature, of sinking down into the grave, the prey of an eternal death? It would be like annihilating the sun in the heavens. An eternal night would ensue. There would be no beauty, form, nor comeliness in creation.

The world without the Bible is a universe without the sun. The atheist is but an atom of matter in motion, belonging to no system, amenable to none, without a destiny, without an object to live or to die. He boasts there is none to punish him; but then there is none to help him—none to reward him. He has no Father, no proprietor, or ruler—no filial affection, no sense of obligation, no gratitude, no comfort in reflection, no joy in anticipation. What an abortion is the system of nature if man lives not again? It is a creation for the purpose of destruction. It is an infinite series of designs, ending in nothing. It is a universe of blanks without a single prize. It cannot be. The Bible is necessary to the interpretation of nature. It is the only comment on nature—on providence—on man. Man without it, and without the hope of immortality, has nothing to rouse him into action. We are compelled then to admit that the Bible is true, unless we put out the eye of reason, and refuse to hear the voice of nature.—Selected.

THE INWARD CHRIST.

The outward word is good and true,
But inward power alone makes new;
Not even Christ can cleanse from sin,
Unless he comes and works within.

Christ in the heart! If absent there,
Thou canst not find him anywhere;
Christ in the heart! O friends, begin,
And build the throne of Christ within.

And know from this that he is thine,
And that thy life is made divine,
When holy love shall have control,
And rule supremely in thy soul.

A FEW WORDS.

M. COBURN.

After a prayerful investigation in relation to the time in which we are living, and the things that are to take place between this and the coming of the Son of God, I am pretty well satisfied that the sign of the Son of man is the next event to take place. If that is the case, it is a matter of fact that we are in the watching time, as Jesus tells us to watch because we know not the day or hour when he shall come. So we are to watch, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping.

May the Lord help us to draw very near to him. May we all have on the wedding garment. O get ready. Make no delay. It is better to be a little too soon than to be everlastingly too late. It is a blessed thing to be all ready having salvation in the present tense. The way to get it is to do all you know you ought to do, calling upon God with all your heart, and continue to do so until you feel the assurance that you are his, that he owns you for his child. Guesswork don't amount to much. Remember the promise is, if we seek we shall find. Give all for Christ. I am trying to do this myself. "Remember Lot's wife," but not to do as she did.

The time of Christ's first coming was given by angels, and I think the second will be likewise. I think the sign of the Son of man, and the midnight cry, and the coming of Christ will be close together. I think the word of God assures us, that when the midnight cry is given, and the sign of the Son of man, it will be too late to get ready. O then, let us be ready before that time. Pray for me.

A TRUE PICTURE.

About a year ago, one of the Chicago papers drew the following graphic picture of matters and things in the United States. Time advances and its truthfulness is made to appear with greater force as reform is becoming impossible, and things are growing worse and worse:

"There is no necessity for entering upon an argument to show the necessity for a general and most radical purification of public morals. The minds of the thinking men of the country are filled with consternation at the evidence of wide-spread debasement of conscience; the moral sense of the people of the whole land is horified at the oft-recurring disclosures of a general degradation of virtue, and the unhappy ghost of our national pride is robed in the garments of shame and mortification at the terrible disgrace we have encountered upon the scene of a world's gala day.

A general spirit of corruption pervades life in all its forms, commercial, domestic, political, and religious. The operation of business corporations, the delicate conditions of social existence, the management of parties, and the schemes of churches, are all affected with the poison, which is rapidly enervating all that is good in human nature. The country is in imminent peril. Never before in history was a nation's downfall so clearly apparent, or its approaching ruin so manifestly susceptible of scientific demonstration."—Bible Investigator.

Significant Names.—Did you ever consider the significance of the names of places connected with the earthly career of Jesus Christ? He was born at Bethlehem, the house of bread. He is the living bread for our souls. He was brought up at Nazareth, the place of shrubs or sprouts. He is a tender shoot out of the stem of Jesse. He agonized at Gethsemane, the oil press. "He trod the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with him.—Dr. John Hall.

Gems.

— It is a grand thing to feel that Christ's fidelity is pledged to his saints. He will keep them: asleep or awake they are his.

— Early safety in Christ is the only way to be prepared for trials. Everything comes right to the obedient believer in Jesus.

— The recognition of God in all our ways, and the expression of gratitude for his promises, are at once our duty and privilege.

— Charity, or love, is the most Godlike grace that can adorn the character of a human being. "God is love."

— He is the wisest and happiest man, who, by constant attention, discovers the greatest opportunity of doing good, and with ardent resolution, breaks through every opposition, that he may improve these opportunities.

— A man is known by the company he keeps. So the thoughts which we harbor within us, and which go out through the doors of our mouths and our hands, determine our real character.

— A profession of faith should be the result of the possession of grace. Let the heart be Christ's, and the lips will show forth his praise.

— No man is so foolish but he may give another good counsel sometimes, and no man so wise but he may easily err, if he takes no other counsel than his own.

— We have need of patience because we are under discipline. We are already saved, if believers, but we only get the earnest of the inheritance here.

— The Lord's power over Satan and all his legions reminds us that, if we are his followers, he will bruise the enemy under our feet shortly.

— One of the clearest proofs of the divinity of the gospel is found in the benevolence which it creates in the heart. The Christ-like man delights in doing good as well as in being holy.

There are forty-two catacombs in and around Rome, with galleries 587 miles long, and it is estimated that from four to seven millions of bodies have found sepulture therein.

A WIFE OVERJOYED.

A man at whose house I was a guest, says Gough in his Autobiography, told me he had been a hard drinker and cruel husband; had beaten his poor wife till she had almost become used to it.

"But, said he, "the very moment I signed the pledge, I thought of my wife—what will my wife say to this? Strange that I should think of my wife the first thing; but I did, and as I was going home I said to myself, 'Now, if I go home and tell her all of a sudden that I have signed the pledge, she'll faint away, or she'll up and do something; and I must break it to her by degrees.' Only think of it. Why, the night before I'd have knocked her down, just as like as not, if she hadn't looked to please me; and now I was planning to break good news to her, for fear it would upset her."

As near as I could gather from what he told me, he found his wife sitting over the embers, waiting for him. As he came into the house, he said:

"Nancy, I think that—"

"Well, Ned, what is it?"

Why, I think I shall—that is—I mean to—to—Nancy, I mean—"

"What's the matter Ned? Anything the matter?"

"Yes," said he; "the matter is just this: I have signed the temperance pledge, and, so help me God, I'll keep it."

"She started to her feet, and she did faint away. I was just in time to catch her; and as she lay in my arms, her eyes shut and her face so pale, thinks I, she's dead, and I've done it now. But she was not dead; she opened her eyes, and then she put her arms around my neck; and I didn't know she was so strong, as she pulled, and pulled, till she got me down where I had not been before for thirty years—on my knees. Then she said:

"'O God help him;' and I said 'Amen!' and she said, 'O God! help my poor Ned, and strengthen him to keep his pledge;' and I hollered 'Amen!' just as loud as I could holler. And she kept praying and I kept hollering. You never heard a Methodist in the biggest revival you ever saw holler as loud as I did. I had like to split my throat, I hollered 'Amen' so loud. That was the first time we ever knelt together; but it was not the last."

The Great Want.—In view of the corruption that exists in the political world today, the words of Dr. Holland, which we insert here, speak volumes of the great want of the day:

God give us men! a time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men who the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue,
And spurn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty, and in private thinking;
For while the rabble with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps.

The Neighbor's Field.—I was walking with a farmer through a beautiful field, when he chanced to see a tall thistle on the other side of the fence. In an instant he sprung over the fence and cut the thistle off close to the ground.

"Is that your field?"

"Oh, no," said the farmer; "but bad weeds don't care much for fences, and if I should leave that thistle to blossom in my neighbor's field I should soon have plenty in my own."

I wish all fathers and mothers would think of that. The evil weeds in your neighbor's field will scatter seeds in your own.

HOME AND HEALTH.

TRUTHFULNESS.

Two country lads came at an early hour to a market town, and, arranging their little stands, sat down to wait for customers. One was furnished with fruits and vegetables of the boy's own raising, and the other was supplied with clams and fish. The market hours passed along, and each little merchant saw with pleasure his store steadily decreasing, and an equivalent in silver bits shining in his little money cup. The last melon lay on Harry's stand, when a gentleman came by, hand, placing his and upon it, said, "What a fine, large melon! What do you ask for it, my boy?"

"The melon is the last I have, sir; and though it looks very fair, there is an unsound spot in it," said the boy, turning it over.

"So there is," said the man; "I think I will not take it. But," he added, looking into the boy's fine, open countenance, "is it very business-like to point out the defects of your fruit to customers?"

"It is better than being dishonest, sir," said the boy modestly.

"You are right, little fellow; always remember that principle, and you will find favor with God, and man also; I shall remember your little stand in the future. Are those clams fresh?" he continued, turning to Ben Wilson's stand.

"Yes, sir; fresh this morning; I caught them myself," was the reply, and, the purchase being made, the gentleman went away.

"Harry, what a fool you were to show the gentleman that spot in the melon! Now you can take it home for your pains, or throw it away. How much wiser is he about those clams you caught yesterday! Sold them for the same price as I did the fresh ones. He would never have looked at the melon until he had gone away."

"Ben, I would not tell a lie, or act one either, for twice what I have earned this morning. Besides, I shall be better off in the end, for I have gained a customer and you have lost one."

And so it proved, for the next day the gentleman bought nearly all his fruit and vegetables of Harry, but never spent another penny at the stand of his neighbor. Thus the season passed; the gentleman, finding he could always get a good article of Harry, constantly patronized him, and sometimes talked with him a few minutes about his future prospects. To become a merchant was Harry's great ambition; and, when the winter came on, the gentleman, wanting a trusty boy for his warehouse, decided on giving the place to Harry. Steadily and surely he advanced in the confidence of his employer, until, having passed through the various posts of service, he became at length an honored partner in the firm.—Chatterbox.

WHY EVERYBODY IS CROSS.

One day little John came running into the house, where his sister Mary was sewing. He held something in his hand which he had found out of doors.

"O! sister Mary," said he, "I have found a pretty thing. It is a piece of red glass; and when I looked through it everything looked red too. The trees, the houses, your face, and everything is red."

Mary replied, "Yes, it is very beautiful. And let me show you how to learn a useful lesson from it. You remember the other day you thought everybody was cross with you. Now, you were like this piece of glass, which makes everything red, because it is red. You were cross; so you thought everybody around you was cross too. If you are in a good humor and kind to every one, all will seem kind to you. The color of the world around us depends much upon the medium through which we view it; and the same world looks very different when lighted with the bright sunshine, from what it does when seen in the darkness or gloom."

A FLOWER LESSON.

Katy meant to be a good girl, but she had one "besetting sin," impatience. Her father, who often prayed that God would help her to overcome this fault, one day brought home a fine carnation pink in a pot.

"You shall have this beautiful plant, my Katy," said her father. "I have bought it for you because you have been so very pleasant all the week."

Katy was so pleased with her present, and the reason which her father gave for giving it to her, that a great many words and several kisses were needed to express her thanks, and she promised to attend to all the wants of her pink very carefully. True to her word, she watered it every day, and let the sun in at the window to warm the mould around its roots.

One morning, as she stood examining and enjoying her pet, she suddenly discovered a bud. Full of joy, she quickly called her father to look at it, exclaiming, "Now my pink will soon blossom! oh, how glad I shall be! how sweet it will smell! Will it be a scarlet one?"

"You must wait a week yet, my child," said her father. "By that time the bud will unfold itself, so that you can see its color. Don't touch it now. Be patient."

Three days went by, and Katy contented herself with watching over and wondering about the gradually swelling bud. On the fourth day she said to herself, "How very long before it opens." The fifth day she found the bud had grown a great deal during the night, and was so eager to see its color that she got the scissors and cut the light green calyx that was closed so tight, to make it open quicker.

On the morning of the sixth day—oh, sad to see!—the little wounded thing hung down its head. Katy wept bitterly over her disappointment. "Oh, if I had not been impatient," she exclaimed, "my pretty bud would be a flower to-day!" She repented of her fault, and the remembrance of the withered bud helped her greatly to become quite a patient girl by the time another bud appeared. Then how the father and the child enjoyed the patience and the pink.—Christian Weekly.

Care of Teeth:—The teeth are covered with a thin, hard enamel like glass, and anything which cracks this enamel, will cause the teeth to decay. Excessively hot or cold drinks will do this. Any housekeeper knows better than to pour hot water into a glass dish. Remember that your teeth are your glass ware, and use them carefully. Powerful acids will also destroy the enamel on the teeth. Most of the patent tooth powders and washes contain acids; and although they give the teeth a pearly appearance, they quickly eat through the enamel and destroy the teeth.

The teeth are designed to last as long as any part of the body, and it is only the neglect and abuse they receive which cause them to decay thus early. After each meal, the teeth should be thoroughly cleansed, and every particle of food removed from between them. Never use pins, needles, or jack-knives for tooth-picks; but some substance which is softer than the enamel of the teeth, like wood, goose-quill, ivory or gold. For cleansing the teeth, nothing is better than a good tooth-brush and warm water. The frequent use of the tooth-brush hardens the gums and keeps them healthy; and usually this is all the care necessary to keep the teeth clean and bright.—Selected.

Sunstrokes.—The season is now near at hand when divers people will be volunteering information as to how sunstrokes may be avoided. Some of the ideas expressed are quite amusing, if not useful, as witness the following: About a year since I saw in a newspaper an account of a case of sunstroke, written by the party himself. After suffering a long time, and having to a considerable degree recovered, he experienced suffering even from the rays of the moon. This led him to the reflection that it was not altogether the heat of the sun that produced prostration. After much research he discovered that the injury came from the chemical ray, and not from the heat ray. He was guided to this by the fact that a photograph could not be taken through a hollow glass. Accordingly, he lined his hat with two linings,—one of orange yellow to arrest the chemical ray, and one of yellow to arrest the heat ray. Thus prepared, he went where the rays of the sun were most intense, with impunity.

On Sleeping.—Every man must sleep according to his temperament. But eight hours is the average. If one requires a little more, or a little less, he will find it out for himself. Whoever diminishes his sleep, is destroying his life. A man may hold out for a time. But nature keeps close accounts, and no man can dodge her settlements. We have seen impoverished railroads that could not keep the track in order, nor spare the engines to be thoroughly repaired. Every year track and equipment deteriorated. By-and-by comes a crash, and the road is in a heap of confusion and destruction. So it is with men. They cannot spare time to sleep enough. They slowly run behind. Symptoms of general waste appear. Premature wrinkles, weak eyes, depression of spirits, failure of digestion, feebleness in the morning, and overwhelming melancholy—these and other signs show a general dilapidation. If, now, sudden calamity causes an extraordinary pressure, they go down under it. They have no resources to draw upon. They have been living up to the verge of their whole vitality every day.—Health Reformer.

II.—ITS ASPECT.

(Concluded.)

"The following is one such passage:—'Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be seven-fold,[*] as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.' Isa. 30: 26. Again, the question recurs, On what principle are these words to be interpreted? I confess, I see no other alternative than to take them literally. It is customary, we know, to regard the whole as 'an emblematical prediction of spiritual blessings'; and numbers are satisfied with the use of such an expression, without considering how far it really meets the case, and without attending to the grave and formidable objections which are ready to present themselves against such a mode of treating the passage. What, for instance, are we to understand by the 'moon,' and what by the 'sun'? Of what are they symbols? It is absolutely necessary, if they be regarded as symbols, to give a distinct and separate meaning to each, or the passage is made ridiculous; yet none of our figurative interpreters, that I am acquainted with, attempt this; but content themselves in this, as in other similar cases, with culling one general idea from the verse, leaving its particular expressions unattended to, as if it were quite unnecessary to suppose that they were designed to have any specific meaning. But anything more derogatory to the word of God cannot be conceived than such a course. No more fatal blow could be directed against its divine authority and plenary inspiration. It is, indeed, customary among those who favor the figurative principle of prophetic interpretation to regard the sun as an emblem of the church, or the ecclesiastical power in a State, and the moon of the civil power; but even supposing this to be correct, as a rule (which I altogether doubt), or to hold true in some cases (which I also question), yet it can scarcely be made to apply here, for on this supposition, or theory, what is that 'light' enjoyed at present by the civil power, symbolized by the moon, which is hereafter to be increased until it reaches the amount at present enjoyed by the church?[†] I feel that nothing approaching to a satisfactory answer can be given to this question; and I confess, I cannot but regard such a mode of treating the subject as highly objectionable. I hold, therefore, that we are compelled to take this passage literally. And why should we not do so? What is there involved in such a conclusion that should make us hesitate in adopting it? It is clear that, as in a multitude of other cases, so in this we are deterred from taking the obviously right course through imaginary difficulties conjured up by our present limited experience, and consequently contracted views. I confess, that it seems to be our obvious duty in the present case to take the prediction in a literal sense. Let this be done, and there is no difficulty in understanding it. It plainly declares that the amount of physical light hereafter will be vastly increased beyond what prevails at present; and this, it will be seen, is in perfect harmony with that expression of St. Paul, before noticed, 'the inheritance of the saints IN LIGHT.' The two passages, when thus viewed, alike point to one and the same thing,—to one and the same physical condition of the world, in reference to the element of light.

"A FRESH SOURCE OF LIGHT.

"We now approach a subject which, to my own mind at least, is one of the most wonderful and extraordinary of any that form the subject of prophecy in the word of God. It is, therefore, all the more necessary to approach it with care and caution, and to see that we do not allow our preconceived views to disturb our judgments, or deter us from embracing a truth which would seem to be clearly taught us in the word of God. It is when dealing with such subjects as are either new to us, or which exceed our present conception, that we need more particularly to keep rigidly to the evidence that should guide us, and be prepared to follow it wherever it would seem to lead us. What at first may seem so extraordinary as to appear incredible, may soon lose that character, or completely change its aspect. It would be folly in us to ask with Nicodemus, 'How can these things be?' It is sufficient for us that God has revealed them, and he will in his own time and way accomplish his word. It is not my intention, however, to enter at any great length into the discussion of the subject before us, but rather to content myself with briefly introducing it, and arranging, to some slight extent, the scriptural proofs which bear upon it.

We have seen that there is reason to believe that the light emitted by the sun and moon will hereafter be greatly increased; there is, I conceive, also reason to believe that there will be a fresh source of light, and that it will exceed in power that of the sun and moon, even in their altered condition. This is intimated, though only indirectly, in the following words:—'Then the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.' Isa. 26: 23. Now we learn from other parts of Scripture how and why it is that this will be the case; but here, it will be observed, the reason is not assigned, and the very fact that it should not be so is a circumstance to be carefully noticed. A great result is obscurely or indirectly alluded to, but its exact nature is not disclosed; and had we nothing more than this upon the subject, there would be great room to doubt as to what was precisely meant. But we turn to other passages, which yet would seem to have no direct connection with this, and, as will be immediately seen, we find there the key to the difficulty, the veram causam (true cause) of the predicted result. All this is calculated, I conceive, to show us the importance and magnitude of the subject which is thus slowly and gradually revealed, but which may be seen, from the glimpses afforded us, to be occupying the entire space behind the veil which now conceals its glory.

"The reason why the 'moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion,' is plainly and directly given in the following words by the same prophet—'The sun shall be no more thy light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.' Isa. 16: 19, 20. From this, therefore, we see that so transcendent will be the visible glory that will surround the person and throne of Emmanuel, that the brightness of both the sun and moon, though greatly increased from what they are at present, shall yet be eclipsed by it. Centuries elapsed from the days of Isaiah before the book of Revelation was produced; but we turn to it and to its closing pages, which are occupied in bringing the glories of the New Jerusalem before us, and we find the same great fact revealed to us there also, though with that variety which marks all the disclosures of prophecy, what is now said being simply that the sun and the moon are 'not needed': 'And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." Rev. 21: 23. So again (22: 5)—"And they need no candle, neither the light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign for ever and ever.'[*]

"Now there are two observations that I will make on this subject before leaving it.

1. "In the first place, it must be remarked that a light, exceeding that of the present sun (or of the sun in its present state) has been already witnessed; and further, that it was caused by that very Presence, that, namely, of the Son of God, the glory of which will, we are told, hereafter obscure by comparison even the brightness of the sun. In St. Paul's account of his conversion before Agrippa, we find him saying—'At MID-DAY, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven ABOVE the brightness of the sun, shining round about me, and them that journeyed with me.' Acts 26: 13. The slightest word of Scripture is important, and is designed by the Holy Spirit to be so. A single word[†] in the present instance gives us all we need. It supplies us with a fact that bears upon the entire subject, which has been occupying our attention, and the passage in which it occurs decides the question for us. We learn from it, that the presence of the Savior is even now accompanied with a visible glory that transcends in splendor the greatest degree of brightness with which we are acquainted; and we can therefore readily conceive how, when he comes again in the full blaze and power of his glory, and sits in majesty on 'the throne of his glory,' how, then, even the seven-fold light of the renewed sun shall be 'confounded and ashamed.'

2. "In the next place, it must be remarked that, wonderful as this may now appear to us, it is yet not more than may well be expected. For let us remember whose glory it is that will be so transcendent. It will be that of Him who, as a reward for his humiliation and sufferings while upon earth, is now placed at the right hand of glory in heaven. Can any honor which will be bestowed on him hereafter exceed that which he now enjoys, seated as he is on 'the Father's throne,' the throne of the universe, 'far above all principalities, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come.' Eph. 1: 21. On the contrary, we ought assuredly to expect that, when he leaves his present exalted state, he will take to one that in some way will correspond to it in honor and glory. For this purpose, we can understand why, with regard to the earth and all associated with it, it should be said by 'Him who sitteth upon the throne, Behold, I make all things new.' We should not marvel, if not only this earth, but the system of which it forms a part, should be greatly raised, or advanced in their condition, relatively to the other orbs of heaven; if, e. g., the sun, the great centre[*] of the system, should be made to shine far brighter than before, in order to distinguish it among the myriads of its kind; nor if even the brightness of the great centre of the system should be eclipsed by that globe on which the Son of God will have accomplished the mission on which he was sent forth of his Father. When we remember what will have taken place on, and in connection with this earth; when it is borne in mind that here the everlasting Son of God wrought out by his expiatory sufferings and active obedience the great work of man's redemption; that here, consequently, will be the locality of his throne forever, that he may reign where before he was rejected and despised; should we wonder if, among the orbs of heaven, this one, in reference to which all this will be true, should shine transcendent far above all? 'He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied.'"

[Note by H. Brittain. I bespeak the candid consideration of the readers of the World's Crisis on this glorious subject of the resurrected condition of man in relation to Christ. Let us cast aside any preconceived ideas of our own, and accept the truth in him. 'Every word of God is pure'; therefore let us boldly use his word, and become sanctified by his word of truth. Let us strive against the light becoming darkness within us, and so let our light shine before men, that they, seeing our good works, may glorify our Father in the heavens; for he is light, and in him is no darkness at all. What remains in us, or clings to us of the darkness of this world, let us strive to cast off more and more, and so enter more fully into the enjoyment of his marvelous light. We have entered into the excellency of the glory of the Spirit of God, having received the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts, we, who trust in him; and, when the fulness of the redemption has come, the earnest will be fulness; that which is known now only in part will be done away, because the perfect has come—the perfection of man in Christ, shining in the glory of the Head or Ruler of all.]

GONE!

Words by Mrs. AGNES HASKELL. Music by GEORGE E. LEE.

Affetuoso.
1. Gone—and the world to go on as be-fore! Gone, with a smile from the old homestead door, mp
p rit.
Dear, faith-ful heart, to come back nev-er-more! Oh,.......... sad nev-er-more!

2 Gone! and the seasons still to come and go,
Wreathing her grave in blossom and snow!
Snow on the bosom that sheltered us so,—
Cruel and pitiless snow!

3 Home is not home, for mother is not there!
Dark is her room,—empty is her chair;
Now will she rest from her labor and care,
Till that morning so fair.

4 Oft the dear eyes grew dim from sad tears,
Guiding our untried feet through the years;
Planning our future with hopes and with fears—
Drying our falling tears.

5 Sleep, mother, sleep, with your hands on your breast!
Poor, weary hands! they needed their rest:
Well have we loved you, but God loved you best!
'Tis thy God giveth rest.

IMMORTALITY.

This is the natural desire of the human heart. Some may imagine themselves immortal, but it is only imagination. I know the preachers and Spiritualistic lecturers say "there is no such thing as death," and sing loudly of "a never dying soul to save, and fit it for the sky." But this is not the way the sweet singer of Israel expressed himself upon this subject. Hear him: 'Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath (Heb., Ruah), goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 3, 4. Job. 4: 17, asks the question, "Shall mortal man be more just than God?"

This shows that all there is of man—soul, body, and spirit,—is mortal. The word immortal means "exempt from death" (Webster), and is found but once in the Bible (1 Tim. 1: 17), and is applied to the "King eternal," "the only wise God."

The word immortality occurs just five times in the Bible, and is used by only one sacred writer—a celebrated resurrection preacher called Paul.

I propose now to quote every passage where the word is found, and see if we can get any information upon this very important subject.

Rom. 2: 6, 7: "Who (God) will render to every man according to his deeds; to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, and honor, and immortality,—eternal life."

Thus we see that those at Rome who were "called saints," were exhorted by Paul to "seek for" immortality "by patient continuance in well doing." Do men seek for that which they already possess? Certainly not. If the church of God at Rome had at that time been in possession of an endless life, the meaning of the apostle is not so very clear and explicit, notwithstanding his learning and his justly merited reputation of being the best logical writer and reasoner known to sacred literature.

1 Cor. 15: 53: "This mortal must put on immortality." The apostle is here speaking of the resurrection. That is the time when those who "seek for" it will gain immortality. Then they "put on" immortality just as a man puts on his coat when he gets up in the morning. In the morning of the resurrection, "when . . . this mortal shall have put on immortality (says Paul in the next verse), then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written [in Isa. 25: 8], Death is swallowed up in victory."

There is no victory at all if man is naturally immortal. If there is no death, then it can't be swallowed up. We all know that death is the common enemy of mankind, and has gained the victory over the sons and daughters of Adam for nearly six thousand years, and until the very earth has become one vast charnel house. It needs no revelation to teach us this, but it was impossible for writers to speak of the "great salvation" without speaking of the death from which those who seek for immortality shall be saved and be permitted to sing—

"O death, where is thy sting?
O grave (hell), where is thy victory?"

In 1 Tim. 6: 16, the apostle in writing of God declares, that "he only hath immortality," and then again in 2 Tim. 1: 10, he says, "Our Savior, Jesus Christ, hath brought immortality to light through the gospel." Thus we see that the only way for mortal man to obtain immortality, is "through the gospel,"—the only conditions of which are faith and obedience.—Bible Investigator.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Launch out into the deep." LUKE 5: 4.

Deeper water. We have been fishing too near the shore. It is no wonder that we have toiled long and caught nothing. There are plenty of fish out a little further. Launch out, and drop the net. The disciples anciently had fished all night, but had been unsuccessful. Their nets had gathered nothing. They had been dragging them about in shallow water. Jesus told them to launch out into the deep, and let down their nets. At his command they did so, and behold, they had more fish than they knew what to do with. They called to their brothers to help them for fear their nets would break.

This lesson is instructive. There are many disciples to-day who have toiled long in the Master's vineyard, and are almost discouraged because they have caught nothing. They have good desires, and do many good things, yet they do not succeed in winning souls to Christ. What is the trouble? They need to launch out into a deeper christian experience. Their religion is too much on the surface. It does not go deep enough. In these days, it does not require much change in a worldly person to become a member of a church. The standard of nominal Christianity is so low, that it is difficult to distinguish between those who profess religion and those who make no profession. If an individual sheds a few tears, rises for prayers, he is hurried into the church, his name enrolled, and he considered all right for another world; when perhaps the fact in the case is, he has not been converted at all.

In ancient times, men were convicted of sin. They were made to feel their lost condition. The deeper and bitter sorrows of repentance pierced their hearts. They were made to feel their lost condition. The deep and bitter sorrows of repentance pierced their hearts. They were made to see that they had sinned against a holy God, and were guilty of death. They were shown the necessity of renouncing their own will, and of submitting unreservedly to the will of God. They saw that there was a wide distinction between those who served the Lord, and those who served him not. They repented, they came out from the world, they put on the whole armor of God, and the change in them was marked and visible. They had a deep, thorough christian experience. They knew the gospel as the power of God to their own salvation.

Now, just what vast multitudes of professors need to-day is a deep, thorough, heart-searching, renovating, sin-cleansing gospel. They need to repent, to turn to God, to cut loose from the world, to consecrate all to Christ, to launch out in faith, love, and obedience; trusting in God, and praying for the Holy Ghost to come down in mighty power. This done, and sinners would come in multitudes with penitent hearts, bowing at the feet of Jesus.

Again, might not this subject suggest the thought, that some ministers would do well to change their fishing ground. They have fished too long in one place. They ought to have launched out into a new field long ago. They have run in the old ruts, and preached to the same congregations for years. No great results have followed their labors. This should not be so. No minister should tarry long in a place where he is not successful, If you cannot catch fish in one locality, flee to another. Launch out into the deep. Go into the "regions beyond." Trust in "the living God," and go where men have not been preached to death. Let down the gospel net in faith and prayer. Be humble, and willing to obey the Master in all things. Go into school-houses, private houses, in groves, in tents, anywhere and everywhere. Drop the net on the right side, and you will be astonished at the result. Up and away. Do something. "Launch out into the deep."

"ENTER INTO THY CLOSET."

E. MORRILL.

Some suppose that the command of our Savior, "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet," allows no other than secret prayer. Hence they tell us that when we pray in public, we violate an express command of Christ. But let us examine this text closely, with its connection. The whole verse reads: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Matt. 6: 6.

We notice that in this text Jesus speaks in the singular number. "Thou," "when thou prayest," "thy closet," "thy door," "thy Father," "reward thee." Hence it appears that he is giving directions in regard to individual prayer for personal blessings. Now, I will suppose that Jesus is addressing me personally; and he is truly. Then I understand that he is giving me directions in praying for myself, for the supply of my own individual wants; and, in harmony with the promise, "Thy Father . . . shall reward thee." When I pray in secret according to these directions, I look for a personal reward. Let every christian apply this to himself individually, and all will be plain.

Our Savior does not, however, forbid us to pray and weep in secret places for our fellow men; and we believe it is our duty to do so, as the Spirit of God shall lead us; but this is not the kind of prayer he is speaking of. He is speaking of our making individual requests to God in prayer for ourself alone. We learn also from this text that we should not speak of our personal wants in social or public prayer. Let us, then, before going to the prayer-meeting, visit our closets, and there unbosom our feelings to God alone, and there receive a fulness of the Holy Spirit; then we shall be prepared to unite with our dear brethren and sisters in humble prayer to God for each other, for the perishing around us, and for every object for which we meet to pray.

We find nothing, then, in this text against social prayer, but in the next verse, and onward, we find directions in regard to social prayer. We find the language now changed from the singular to the plural form; and the same plural form is continued to the end of the subject, which includes the Lord's prayer. Verse 7 begins thus: "But when ye pray." This means social prayer. Then in ver. 9, we read: "After this manner pray ye: Our Father," not my Father." Then ver. 11: "Give us this day our daily bread," not give me. Verse 12—"And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," not forgive me. Ver. 13: "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us," etc. This must mean social prayer; for there is more than one in us.

The Savior also instructs us in regard to social prayer in the following language: "Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. 18: 19, 20. Here two or three are mentioned, which is the smallest number that can meet for prayer; but we understand that the same would be true of twenty or thirty, more or less; for if God will answer the united prayer of two or three, will he not much more that of a large assembly of humble christians?

East Concord, N. H.

DOUBTING is the most wearying work in which the mind engages. It wears out mental power to get into doubt. Reason, unfixed and restless, jogging along from from one uncertain premise to another, leads into torment interminable. Let the mind once determine on the truth and rest upon a basis such as God has revealed, and thenceforward there is strength and growth in grace, and real joy and peace.

ERRORS OF CONSCIENCE.

C. H. SWEET.

That an error of conscience may mitigate and not yet wholly excuse the wrong act that it results in is, I think, plainly taught in the Scriptures. Jesus prays for those who crucified him—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." This implies that their conscience was misguided. "They knew not what they did." But still they were guilty, for they needed forgiveness,—"Father, forgive them." But their error, or ignorance, was some palliation of their guilt. It was not so great as it would have been if they had crucified Christ with an enlightened conscience. Hence their ignorance is pleaded as a reason why they should be forgiven. Paul says of himself, "I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." Acts 26: 8. In carrying out this false conviction, he persecuted, imprisoned, and gave his voice to murder the saints. But though he acted according to an honest conviction of mind, still he was guilty before God. He calls himself a persecuter, a blasphemer, the chief of sinners, &c. His error, however, was a mitigation of his guilt, for he says, "I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly." 1 Tim. 1: 13. The Jews were called "murderers" because they crucified the Lord of life and glory, but the apostles bear them witness, "through ignorance ye did it" (Acts 3: 17); and for this reason he exhorts them to repent. The exhortation being grounded on a concession that they did it ignorantly, seems to imply that their hope of forgiveness was greater than it would have been if they had acted in opposition to knowledge then possessed by them.

The reason of the case is plain. To perform a wrong act, under the influence of an erroneous conviction, does not manifest the obstinacy and perverseness that it does when done against an enlightened and remonstrating conscience; but that this error, or misconstruction, should wholly excuse is unreasonable, because an error of judgment, in an important point of duty, plainly manifests some defect in the will, such as prejudice, neglilence, or failure to search and inquire.

The guilt in following, or rather in having an erroneous conscience, depends upon the cause. If the cause is obstinacy and perverseness in rejecting the means of information, it can scarcely abate the guilt at all, for a wilful rejection of known means of information is about the same thing as a refusal to perform duty after being enlightened. Total incapacity to obtain or apply the means, will doubtless wholly excuse.

They to whom Christ has not spoken cannot be said to have the sin of unbelief. For external disadvantages proportionable allowance will undoubtedly be made in the divine estimation of guilt. It is required of men according to what they have. Much or little will be required, as much or little has been given. The ignorance or error which results from negligence or prejudice, is blameable; but it is not as criminal as it would be if it sprung from direct obstinacy, for the first does not give evidence of as criminal a frame of mind as the last. This seems to be in harmony with the teaching of our Lord: "And that servant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes; but he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more." Luke 12: 47, 48.

SANCTIFICATION—WHAT IS IT?

There is no doctrine more plainly taught in the Scriptures of truth than entire sanctification. It may be found on almost every page of the Bible; it is taught by the inspired writers, by promise, command, exhortation, and prayer, and consequently worthy of the attention and serious consideration of all. This state in grace does not imply absolute, angelic, or Adamic perfection. It is not an exemption from errors, mistakes, infirmities, or temptations. But it does imply an extermination of inbred sin from the soul, a destruction of the carnal mind; it is being dead to sin, and alive to God. In other words, it is a state of moral purity that makes us at all times acceptable with God. It is loving God with the whole heart, with an undivided heart. It is when the heart is emptied, and cleansed from all sin and defilement, and filled with the constellation of the graces of the Spirit, that entire sanctification is experienced. The condition thereof is consecration, obedience, and faith. Consecration is submission to the will and government of God. Saving faith is a hearty, bold, and confiding trust in the merits of Christ. It is implied trust, reliance, or confidence in the word of God and the merits of Christ for present salvation. Rest assured God always saves the moment true faith is exercised. It is not to be sought as a gradual, but as an instantaneous work. God can cleanse the soul from sin, and fill it with love in a moment, and he is always able and willing to impart this full and free salvation to all who ardently and sincerely deserve to have it, and will accept it on his terms. Such a state is more desirable than the wealth, honors, or pleasures of the world, —and should be the experience of all christians without delay.

The fifth stage of christian experience is to cultivate and mature the christian graces. It is after the heart is emptied, and cleansed from all sin and defilement, that we are called on and required to perfect holiness in the fear of God, by serving him with a single eye and an undivided heart. To grow in grace, and in the knowledge and love of God, is to cultivate, improve, and strengthen the christian graces. This may be done much more successfully in a sanctified, than in a justified relation to God. We are exhorted to add to our faith virtue, and to virtue all the graces of the Spirit; to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; that we may become mature christians, ripe in the knowledge of God, and in the great and glorious mysteries of salvation. Full and ample provision is made in the atonement for this experience, and the terms are so easy, plain, and simple, that all, through grace, may comply with the conditions, and obtain the pearl of great price.

The motives to holiness are almost innumerable, but a principal and leading motive is, God commands and requires it, and when God speaks, man should obey,—as none of his commands are imposed to restrain us in the pursuit of happiness, but are intended for our present good and future felicity. By obeying all good is secured; by disobeying all good is forfeited in time and in eternity. The glory of God, the salvation of souls, our personal happiness, usefulness, and safety are so many motives to urge us on to the possession of this heavenly treasure.

Sublime privilege! exalted state! The life of God in the soul of man, and the glory of God, as the object and end of that life, a principle implanted in the heart by the Spirit of God, that brings our tempers, words, thoughts, and actions in subjection to the will and government of God. St. Paul prays that such may be the experience of all christians in every age: "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." Eph. 3: 17, 18, 19.

To be filled with God is to be filled with light, for God is light. To be filled with him is to be filled with love, for God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. To be filled with God is to be filled with consolation, peace and joy.—Guide to Holiness.

OUR MISSION.

D. K. BARRETT, JR.

No man, woman, or child is in the world without a mission. They have something to do which God has given the means of doing, and for the performance of which, he will hold them strictly accountable. However much we may shrink from the responsibility, or however little we may be awake to the fact, it is nevertheless the truth. Don't be frightened at this, for it need not be a great burden of care; for we are told to cast all our care upon God, for he careth for us. He will so fit and help us to make our mission a glad one. Yet there is accountability on our part, and we must be watchful and earnest.

What is that mission? In a general sense, our mission is the same as was Christ's. He said to his disciples just before leaving them, "Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." John 17: 18, 20, 21. When Jesus commenced his public ministry, he read in the book of Isaiah the prophet: "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind; to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4: 17-20.

Christ said to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Luke 16: 15, 16. Jesus "went about doing good;" and we are told to "do go good unto all men as ye have opportunity." The command to us is, "Go work in my vineyard." The human family seems to be the vineyard in which Jesus worked, and sends us to work. Our mission is not merely to do men present good, but also to work for their eternal salvation; yea, this is the main part. Jesus did a work for the salvation of men no other could; for "no man can by any means redeem his brother." The work of others is to get men to accept an already purchased salvation. And it may be said to each one, "You have a work no other can do."

Let us remember each act of our life, however small, has an influence—good, or bad. For all there is some good to do. Do you want a field of labor? you can find it anywhere.

"Helping the weak with a temper meek,
Is a duty laid before us;
Avoid the wrong as we pass along,
For Jesus watches o'er us."

Let us try to fulfill our mission faithfully, be it in the family, or elsewhere, in a wide or limited sphere. Now is the time for work. "There remaineth a rest to the people of God." When we have finished our course, there is a crown laid up to be received at the revelation of Jesus Christ. Then also it shall be said, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." Who will hear it?

EVAPORATION.—The great ocean is in a constant state of evaporation. It gives back what it receives, and sends its waters into mists to gather into clouds, and so there is rain on the fields, and storm on the mountains, and beauty everywhere. But there are men who do not believe in evaporation. They get all they can and keep all they get, and so are not fertilizers, but only miasmatic pools.

BRIGHT OMENS.

As the proclamation, thirty years ago, went everywhere, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," so now, we believe the final and full preparation for the "marriage of the Lamb" is rapidly progressing in the wonderful movement for the promotion of holiness. In conversation and correspondence with prominent men in different churches, who are leaders in the great meetings held for this object, we find they are being convinced that the church of Christ is truly getting ready to meet the coming Savior. Soon, we expect they will see the bright evidence of his speedy return, and rejoice with us in the "blessed hope."

The walls of prejudice against this subject are being rapidly removed from the minds of those who have consecrated all to Christ, and as they are being filled with the Holy Spirit, they are led to love the coming of Jesus; next, to see the signs of the times, and other prophetic evidence, and feel an anxious desire to hear, and read works on the subject. The omens are truly most heart-cheering, and never so bright and certain as now in favor of the speedy consummation of the christian's hope.

We look upon this general interest on the subject of holiness as a special preparation to meet our dear Lord, and it should receive the hearty support of all who wish to be ready. It is not something that can be treated even with indifference, without peril, and he who opposes it is but closing the only door that will ever open to let him enter the city of golden streets, in which are none but the pure and holy. As a people, looking for the speedy coming of Christ, we should stand in the front ranks of those who preach and practice holiness. Let us take our proper position at once, and let "HOLINESS TO THE LORD," with "THY KINGDOM COME," wave on every banner.

This holiness movement produces a wonderful union of hearts in christian love, like what we witnessed thirty years ago. Members of all evangelical denominations become one in Christ Jesus. The union is not one of creeds, but of hearts full of love for God. We have no record that the like has been seen since the days of the apostles. It is the Lord's doings, and is marvelous in our eyes. It is no sham, policy union, but one of real lovers in Jesus. Their hearts are knit together, and the bonds are continually becoming stronger. It means something. It is the work of the Spirit of the Most High. The results are most gracious. This, we believe, is the final gathering of the hosts of the Lord, preparatory for the closing conflict.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

We arrived on the Alton Bay camp-ground Saturday, August 22nd, and found quite a large number already present. Several families had been there for weeks. It is becoming quite a favorite place to spend the warm summer days. There are now some two hundred and seventy houses on the ground, most of which are rude, and indicate that the builders do not expect to need them but a short time. They are quite like the shanties of California miners in early days; and plainly say that the occupants are pilgrims and strangers, stopping but for a short time in their homeward journey. For want of room these houses are most densely packed together. When the campmeeting was first located there, they had no expectation that it would grow to be the largest in the United States; but such is the result. Besides the houses, there are about one hundred cloth tents, beside three large ones. There are several good-sized houses, in which meetings are conveniently held.

The ground is on the Winnipesaukee lake shore, and also at the end of the Dover and Winnipesaukee R. R. It is convenient of access, which is one reason why the meeting has enlarged so rapidly. Camp-grounds should be located near R. R. depots.

The gathering is larger than ever this year. We learn the meetings already held have been excellent, and indicate that the religious exercises will be characterized by a deep-toned piety and devotion. Holiness of heart is the key-note of the meeting, as a suitable preparation for the coming of our Lord. This is being felt more by all the faithful followers of Christ. While great men are falling, and leading many astray, it is time for those who wish to be ready when Jesus comes to put on the whole christian armor, that they may be able to stand in these trying hours. It will not do to live on the borders of salvation, but we must be in Christ if we expect to overcome the powerful temptations of these last days. Formalism is but flood-wood on the rising tide of iniquity, and is easily disposed of by Satan and his emissaries. It helps instead of hindering him in his diabolical work. He counts on his side all formalists and fashionable professors.

At the time of writing (Friday, August 28th), it is the general sentiment that the meeting is the best ever held on the ground. More anon.

"WHO CAN TELL?"

The impression continues to increase in the minds of the thoughtful and candid, that some overwhelming event is not far in the future. They cannot avoid the conclusion. The signs of the times compel them to make this decision. They would not have it thus, but the logic of events are so clear, their better judgment bows to the evidence. The following is from the Sept. No. of the "Science of Health."

"HARD TIMES."

Since the panic everybody, and all interests, have suffered. Many merchants failed; many more failed to pay expenses; and still more failed to clear anything. Most men have been content if enabled "to make both ends meet." What with a deranged currency, imbecile legislation, and general distrust, with a period of private, public, and political corruption before unknown, it would seem that the very "gates of hell" had been opened on a sinful world, and that we were being punished, as a nation, for many transgressions.

Are we over the worst of it? Who can tell? Our halls of legislation are still crowded with dissipated and ungodly men. Our lawmakers are, for the most part, low and bad. They smell of whisky and tobacco, and their moral sensibilities are as blunt and obtuse as their natures are perverted and corrupt. "Rum rules the roost." We cannot hope for general prosperity until we deserve it. When our churches preach and practice temperance; when physicians stop poisoning their patients; when judges in our courts hold the scales of justice in an even balance; when legislators cease from swindling; when labor and capital come together, without foreign interference, and each seeks the general good,—we shall have taken steps toward the restoration of "good times."

THE TRUE CHURCH.

D'aubigne, author of the Reformation, says:

"The true church may attain its highest state of excellence in the midst of the general defection of the external body. This will probably be realized in a remarkable manner when Christ comes to judgment. Believers, who shall then be looking for the Lord, may be standing on an elevation which the church has never yet reached. It is a natural consequence that the church, which is the body of the Lord, out of which there is no salvation, is not any society whatever governed by men, and of which their human decisions and written constitutions rule the admission, the constitution, the extent. The church is solely the communion of all those who have Jesus Christ for their head, his word for their rule, his Spirit for the principle of life."—The True Church, p. 13.

We believe the noted author of the history of the Reformation has expressed an important truth in the foregoing statement. It seems the very thing is now being accomplished. In the midst of the alarming conformity to the world, now manifested throughout Christendom, the true church of Christ is rising to higher ground than has been accomplished since the days of the apostles. Jesus is coming.

CONFEDERATIONS.

This is an age of confederations. From small beginnings, they have arisen to gigantic magnitude, and now stand forth a mighty power in the world. Among these are "the Catholic Militant Union of the Cross," the "National Eight-hour League," the "National Builder's Union," the "Grangers," the "International Workingmen's Association," and many more that might be named, including millions of people on both continents. As the hour of conflict approaches, the union will strengthen, and we may expect to see increased activity and interest in all these various companies, whose leaders are among the strong men of the world, who do not bow to Christ as their Savior; hence, it is certain that Satan is pulling the wires, ringing the bells, laying the plans, and mustering these fiery hosts in his own interest, as a professed angel of light, promising remarkable success, and effective reforms, that will introduce "the good time coming." To some, it is the millennium; to others, the overthrow of all oppression; to others, the elevation of the poor, and the humiliation of the rich; to others, the general sway of Spiritualism, and the suppression of all religion, expressed by their favorite motto: "LIBERTY, EQUALITY, FRATERNITY." When the whole thing is fully exposed, it means French Revolution made world wide. For this object, the powers of darkness are working night and day, unceasingly as the ocean's roar, to crush for ever the religion of Jesus. As hostile Indians trading peacefully and deceitfully one day with those whom they had planned to butcher on the next; so Satan, by all available means, is forming alliances with as many good people as possible, in secret associations, whose exhibitions consist in fairs, festivals, bazaars, picnics, excursions, and processions, where the name of Jesus receives no reverence nor songs of praise; whose real position is on the brink of the world's Niagara, about to plunge into the vortex of perdition. With all this before us in fact, still there comes the syren song from the enemy, singing "a good time coming," "peace and safety," "the world is growing better," "down with the kings," "smash the rings," crush christianity, and we'll soon have "LIBERTY," "EQUALITY," and "FRATERNITY."

Well did the inspired apostle say, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." We are in them. The embattled hosts of Satan are boldly advancing for the conflict. The spirit of their leading fiend is filling their hearts; they are becoming blind to all objects but one, which is to overturn in some way, the present political, social, financial, and religious order of things. Satan has persuaded them the world can be reformed by human agency, independent of the Lord. They say christianity has failed to convert the world; and now it is time to try some other measures. He would make them believe that his favorite religion, Spiritualism, is just the thing needed. This is the leading artery that supplies vitality to the great antichristian movement now agitating the world, and which must soon culminate in the final, terrible conflict between the powers of light and darkness, truth and error, Christ and Belial.

INQUIRY.

Please inform me (and others) through the Crisis if there is any proof extant that the prophecies purporting to be "Mother Shipton's" are genuine, and were made by her some three hundred and twenty-five years ago; also, whether or not she prophesied that the world would come to an end in 1881? Yours awaiting the coming King,

H. H. KLOCK.

Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas.

There is evidence that "Mother Shipton's Prophecy" was first published in 1448, four hundred and twenty-six years ago; and republished in 1641. The prophecy does read as follows:—

"Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe.
Around the earth thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at the foot of a tree.
Through hills men shall ride,
And no horse be at his side.
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, and green.
Iron in the water shall float
As easily as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found and shown
In a land that's now not known.
Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall at last admit a foe.
The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one."

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

The following is a portion of the address of the Right Hon. the Earl of Cavan, as reported in the "Signs of Our Times:"

M. O.

The subject of the second coming of Christ is one which I feel the strongest conviction ought to be more deeply impressed upon the minds of christians than is generally the case. Since our last Prophetical Conference in St. George's Hall, twelve months ago, there has been an an advance in the views of many dear people of the Lord in Scotland upon the subject of the Second Advent. There had not previously been so much consideration given to it in Scotland, or in England, but we have found that during this past winter as one result of the great religious awakening in Scotland—an awakening which has been so much promoted by the visit of the two American evangelists, very many have turned their attention to this subject who had not much thought of it before. The expectation of the speedy personal return of our Lord ought to be close to our hearts, and to be enshrined in our inmost affections. His words to us are, "Occupy till I come"—thus directing our eye not to death, but to his personal coming as the grand object of hope; and, again, "The Son of man is like a man taking a far journey who gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping." Don't let us work without maintaining our hearts in an attitude of constant longing and readiness for his personal appearing, for he says, "In such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Oh! if our whole hearts go out in grateful adoration to him for his wonderous redeeming love to our souls, we cannot rest content or enjoy true satisfaction until our eyes visibly behold the King in his beauty—even him who is the chief among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely.

And how quickening and enrapturing is the thought that "when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is," and let us keep prominently in view the assurance that at his appearing "he will change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his glorious body, according to the mighty working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." . . . I am certain that the very thought of this, that the Master is about to return in person, and to reckon with and reward his servants, should stimulate us to be more active and diligent in carrying out his precepts and injunctions, and in laboring to bear fruit to his glory, so that when he shall appear we shall not be ashamed before him at his coming.

We may rest assured that we shall be found of him in peace, if we are bearing the fruit that the Lord looks for. In the fifteenth chapter of John, where he is spoken of as the true vine, and we are described as the branches, we read, "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

We need to be purged and delivered from this world's thralldom, and to have our heart stayed on him, and drawing from him the sap of spiritual nourishment, that we may bear not fruit only, but much fruit; for he says—"He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." Are we abiding in union with the Lord, momentary union, and realizing our union with him? That is the grand secret of success in laboring for the advancement of the Lord's kingdom, and to win souls to him.

It should be our aim to be living branches steadfastly abiding in Christ, in these last days when the world at large is steeped in iniquity and luxury, in pursuit after material prosperity, and the making haste to be rich. Meanwhile many cry Peace, peace, and look for the continuance of all things, as they were from the beginning of the creation. . . .

I fervently hope and pray that God will open the eyes of many who are blind to the perils and judgments of the last days that are rapidly coming upon us. The great effort of Satan is by every means to keep people in the dark regarding these things, lest being forewarned they should be forearmed, and also lest they should be stirred up to increased activity in the Master's service, and to fresh efforts to wrest from the destroyer's grasp some of those who are now led captive by him at his will. For this would be the result of a firm belief in the speedy premillennial advent of Christ.

I would especially beseech every one to take heed and not suffer their eyes to be blinded by the wicked one, so as to imagine that the Lord's second advent is yet at some distance. It is in truth an event that is close at hand, and which many of us may live to witness. Yet, alas, there are some people who, through ignorance of the prophetic Scriptures, suppose that it may not take place yet for a thousand years. But let us not be influenced by the unbelief, or indifference, or even the opposition of some christians in relation to this Scriptural hope of the Lord's speedy coming. Let us stand as vigilant sentinels upon our watch-tower, in a posture of longing expectancy, like the Thessalonians "waiting for the Son of God from heaven," and in the position of the bride looking for the coming of the Bridegroom. And I trust that we shall all listen to the addresses that are now about to be delivered, with attentive ear and Scriptural desire to learn more in reference to those unspeakably blessed truths; and may the result be, that we shall all walk more closely, more faithfully, and more humbly, with our God, to the praise and glory of his grace.

"LITERAL AND UNVARNISHED."

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, in preaching his fifth anniversary sermon in the Brooklyn Tabernacle remarked:—The impression is abroad that you must fix up the gospel to suit the age, instead of fixing up the age to suit the gospel; and the young men coming out of our theological seminaries have the impression that they must palliate the prejudices of society, and must cover over the natural rottenness of the human heart, and that they must tell men what very clever people they are, and that they only need to be pressed in a little one way, and pulled out a little the other way, and then they will be all right. And they say: "All you want is development." Is it? Development! You might as well go to a man bent double with the cramps of Asiatic cholera, and tell him that all he wants is development. It is a lie. He needs to have his disease killed so that he may get well. Until our heart is changed by the grace of God, it is scabbed and ulcerous with a great leprosy; and it is not development we want, but it is the care of an eating, loathsome, blasting, damning leprosy. Our whole nature throughout, and throughout, needs to be made over and over again. I wish that every word of that passage could come down with five tons' weight of emphasis: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God;" though he had given one hundred thousand dollars to religious institutions, though he never used a bad word in his life, though he paid all his debts, though he lived on the tip-top round of respectability—"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." But so little do we hear about this doctrine of regeneration in this day, that it is considered almost indelicate for a man to read in a public assemblage the words of Christ to Nicodemus about the new birth. And as to there being any hell, if we make any allusion to that, it must be with exquisite circumlocution, as "the place of high temperature," or "the world insalubrious," or, as a minister recently called it, "the great elsewhere!" I say to the young men who are studying for the ministry, and there are thirty connected with this congregation, if you have any idea that it is necessary to preach an emasculated gospel in order to get people to come and hear it, you make a vast mistake.

An eminent minister of New York said to me some time ago: "I have a very large audience, but they are all christians. I can't get the worldly people to come in and listen to me. I hear that a good many worldly people come to hear you. You must preach some very strange things. What did you preach about yesterday?" "Well," I replied, "I preached yesterday morning on 'Seek ye the Lord while he may be found;' and in the evening I preached about 'Strive to enter in at the strait gate.'" Said he, "Is that all?" "Yes," I replied, "that is all."

Oh! my friends, there is a judgment seat in every man's heart, which tells him that the Bible is true, and that if it be true, the wicked and the righteous cannot go to the same place. So I say: Young men who are entering the ministry, if you really want a fresh theme, if you really want a novel theme to preach about, preach the old gospel. Do not preach about "development"—that is hackneyed. Do not preach about the Darwinian theory of the origin of our race—that is worn out. But if you want something new, really new, so new that tens of thousands of people in this day do not know anything about it, then give them "repentance" in the morning, and "faith" at night; and in order to variety, next Sabbath give them "faith" in the morning, and "repentance" at night.

I believe that within the next twenty years, there will be an earthquake amid the American and English pulpits, and that those which have adhered to the old gospel will stand, and that those which have preached anything else, will go down. Paul cries out with great emphasis: "If any one, though he be an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel let him be accursed."

BRO. FRANK KRUSEN, of Dacotah Ter., wishes to know the propriety of the different church names in the land. We believe in calling all things by their right names. If a church is a Baptist church, and belongs to a Baptist body, then call it Baptist. If an Advent church, and belonging to an Advent body, then call it an Advent Church. If the church is of Christ, or of God, and the body is of Christ, then call it the "Church of Christ." Call it just what it is. Don't be afraid. If a church is not a church of Christ, then it would be wrong to say it is.

Tell the truth. Call Baptists, Baptists, and Methodist, Methodists, and Christians, Christians, and you won't hurt anybody.

If one is an Adventist, then Adventists will probably fellowship him, and may be somebody else will abuse him. He can call it suffering for Christ's sake, or for Adventists' sake, just as he chooses, but the latter cause is more apt to be the true one. But if one is abused because he is a Bible christian, he need not guess twice to know who prompted the abuse. The nearer one lives to God, the less trouble we think he will have about names. He will find enough to occupy his heart and hands for Jesus; and Satan can't get him to quarrel over other men's matters or names.—Advent Christian Times.

PAUL, for preaching Christ, was stoned, beaten, cast into prison, and abused in various ways; yet, in the midst of it all, he shouted praise to God. And when let out of prison, instead of telling over his troubles, and seeking the sympathy of others, it is said of him that he comforted his brethren. What a noble spirit!

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

"LOVERS OF PLEASURE."

We clip the following from the Vermont Chronicle, an organ of the Congregational Society, published at Windsor, Vt. We are glad the devotees of the syren-song-temporal-millennium-doctrine are waking up from their theological lethargy to give action to their better judgment, produced by evidences unmistakable, which their eyes are daily beholding in the progress of sin and wickedness in the day and age of the world in which we live; even in our very home and neighborhood associations. We are glad to be informed, as we constantly are, that in every sect and association, in the civilized world, the eyes of intelligent men and women are being uncovered; the theological wool of world evangelization is being torn away, and the people are beginning to look at facts as they really exist.

"Are we come to the 'perilous times' foretold by the apostle, when he wrote to Timothy, concerning 'the last days,' saying men shall be 'lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof?.' If we may judge from the crowds that throng the temples of pleasure in our land, in these days, in preference to the temples of the Lord, we must certainly reply in the affirmative. Saying nothing of the multitudes in the great cities that hasten to the remorseless shrine of voluptuousness, there is evident even in country villages, a certain insatiable itching for pleasure, even within the fold of churches, which argues ill for spirituality and true godliness.

In some places a scorching thirst for amusements of doubtful propriety, if not of positively hurtful nature, appears to have seized the reins, and driven with furious speed through the course of passing months, inflaming youth, beguiling maturity, and deluding age. The great theme has been, 'wherewithal shall we be amused,'—not edified with the knowledge and love of God,—not made wiser and better, and stronger for life's conflicts and burdens? Restraints have been over-leaped. Admonitions have been disregarded. In some cases, even the children of light appear to have been deceived with the shining form of the tempter. A pitiful effeminacy usurps the place of masculine vigor, and they that, in a time of revival, would stand up boldly for Jesus, and stoutly resist 'lusts which war against the soul,' do smite their knees and hide their faces. Alas! is it so?"—Ex.

STRAIT GATE.

C. S. BRANCH.

"Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat."

"Because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—MATT. 13: 14.

It seems to me that the most skeptical must admit the truth of the above statement of Jesus Christ, although uttered more than eighteen hundred years ago. "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" If we find thorns where we look for grapes, and thistles where we expected figs, we may know of a surety that the root and stalk is thistle also, notwithstanding it may be long and loud in its profession of being a fig tree; or "do men gather grapes of thorns?" Christ says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." The fruit will be of the same kind and quality of the vine. It will be grapes, and not thorns; therefore it is not a hard matter to come to a correct conclusion which road my professed brother may be in, the broad or narrow one. He may be in the church, and at the same time be in the broad road; but not so if he is in Christ. If he is in him, he is in the narrow way that leadeth unto life; for Christ said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." The fruit will be in harmony with the vine, and the vine with the fruit. Will the vine be found in the narrow way, and the fruit in the broad? We think not. Both will be found inside the strait gate and the narrow way.

O watchman, sound the alarm; for the time that Paul spoke of is at hand—"lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained." The church in all parts of the country is fast drifting away into the broad road, and soon will be swallowed up in the great whirlpool of destruction.

Dear sinner, you are in the broad road that leadeth to destruction. What will you do in the great day of God Almighty? What awaits you but fiery indignation and wrath? O turn ye, turn ye into the strait gate and narrow way that leadeth unto life. Be sure and read and ponder the following passages of Scripture: Ezekiel 18: 4, Rom. 6: 23, James 1: 15, Rom. 6: 16, Rev. 21: 8. O, why will ye die? Turn ye into the narrow way, and if you die before the Life-giver comes, he will raise you up at the last day. John 6: 39. May God help for his Son's sake.

REPORT OF WAYNE CO. MISSION TENT.

Dear Brethren:—We have just closed our tent-meeting at Ontario, and will give a brief report of our labors there, and also at Honeoye, N. Y. We commenced a meeting at Honeoye June 3d, continuing it only ten days. At first we had considerable opposition from professed believers, which did not wear away until the last two or three days, when the spirit of unity seemed to prevail, and conviction settled on many minds that we were living in the last moments of time. Quite a number made a start for the kingdom, whom we hope to meet there when Jesus comes. The last Sabbath we buried seven happy souls in the likeness of Jesus' death. After we had taken down the tent, many friends declared we ought not to have done it, and earnestly besought us to pitch it again; but under the circumstances, we thought it best not to do so. Bro. W. E. Brown tarried with them, and preached the word the following Sunday, when five more determined that they would be followers of Christ. We were requested to return, as ten or more desired to put on Christ by baptism, but we could not. We have heard, however, that Bro. Hobbs, of Springwater, has attended to this matter, and we trust that others will follow.

From Honeoye we removed to Ontario, Wayne, Co. This we found to be a new field. We were invited to this place by Sr. Near, who felt that something could be done in this town by way of publishing the gospel of the kingdom, and to-day she has great reason to praise God that the tent was ever pitched in Ontario. We commenced meetings July 2nd, with much opposition from the ministers of the place, with the exception of the Baptist, who said to one of the members of his church (who had attended our meeting), "When the Adventists pitched their tent here, I intended to fight them; but I thank God I never did. The M. E. minister was one Mr. Post, who had published a work in Rochester exposing the errors of Adventism. Many statements in this pamphlet are base fabrications. I give you a sample: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment."—Bible. "These shall not go away into everlasting punishment."—Adventists. He took particular pains while we were there to circulate them, especially the night we unveiled Spiritism, when he engaged a son of one spirit medium to scatter them through the tent; but I will say, to the credit of this medium, that she would not permit him to impose on us or the audience, if Post would give him a dollar for every pamphlet he gave away or sold.

The Presbyterian minister advised his people not to go near us. The other preacher I wish to specially notice. He is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist connection. His name is G. M. Hardy; a good scholar, having a college education. From the beginning of our meeting, he did not seem to be satisfied only when he was reporting publicly and privately that "he had discussed with two Adventists and had cleaned them out" (his own words); and was good for two more, but, says he, they never will dare to meet us. Then he engaged the Ontario Sun, edited by his nephew, to challenge us to a discussion. When this challenge appeared in the paper, I thought it best to say to the congregation that as I had received no challenge from Mr. Hardy personally, I presumed that the discussion would not take place until we knew about it ourselves. Mr. Hardy, it appears, was in the tent when I made this statement, and he afterwards arose and challenged me to a discussion on the immortality of the soul. I did not desire to discuss this question, because I had but little faith that discussions were profitable; yet I could not avoid this, so I accepted it, hoping that it would be for the best.

The discussion commenced Monday evening, Aug. 3d, and continued five nights. Seven men were chosen as judges, who were to give in their decision in writing at the close of the debate. Before their decision was declared, the audience were to vote on the merits of the case. Let it be understood that before our tent went there, the people, with a very few exceptions, never heard a discourse on the nature of man, as we hold it. I shall not weary you with the Scripture citations brought out on either side. I will show you some of his arguments, that you may see the weakness of his position. His first argument was, that man has an immortal soul, because the Bible speaks of God as having soul, in such terms as "my soul," "his soul." Then he found scriptures where these terms "my soul," "his soul," etc., were applied to man; hence, as God's soul was immortal, man's soul is also. I asked if he wished us to understand that God was an organization, having a soul? Of course, this drove him from his position, because he does not believe that God has body or parts. He then admitted that "my soul" means "my self."

His famous argument throughout the discussion was Samuel appearing to Saul at Endor. He said God Almighty sent Samuel to consult with Saul, and to confound him and the witch; but I read to him that Saul died for his transgression, . . . and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit to inquire of it. 1 Chron. 10: 13. The entire audience, and among them were some noted Spiritists, saw at a glance that Eld. Hardy and the Bible did not agree, and that one or the other must fall. I submitted for his consideration nineteen propositions, among them this one: If he could produce two passages (for "by the mouth of two witnesses every word shall be established") of Scripture, that positively declared the soul to be immortal, or that man was conscious between death and the resurrection, I would give up the contest. He paid no attention to the propositions, because he knew he could not prove one of them. The last evening of the discussion was Friday night. The day previous, Mr. Hardy visited many of the public places, such as shops and stores, and some of the judges; and said to them that he would that night drive Wells through the tent. He would let the intelligent people of Ontario know that a machinist could not defeat learned men. The learning of Socrates, Plato, Homer, Josephus, Zoroaster, Clark, and others, were the principal authors he used as proof of the immortality of the soul, while we relied upon the word of God and common sense.

On the last night of our discussion, it was estimated that fifteen hundred persons were on the ground. Three hundred and four teams drove in the gate, while every available hitching place in the village was used besides. At the close of the discussion, the vote of the judges stood four for the negative (myself), and three for the affirmative. The vote of the congregation (only those voted who were inside the tent, the largest part of the congregation could not get into the tent) stood forty for the affirmative, while over three hundred voted for the negative. We felt quite satisfied with the result of the discussion, when we consider the fact that all in this town but about eight or ten believed in the immortality of the soul prior to our coming among them.

They also believe the evidences of the Lord's soon coming, for we made this theme prominent, as we feel this is and should be our great message to this generation. A number embraced Christ as their Savior for the first time; and we had the pleasure of baptizing them in the name of the Lord. Fifteen put on the Lord in this manner. A number threw up their creeds, declaring that they would take the Bible for their only rule. We expect to baptize a larger number still very soon. We formed a company under our little covenant of about twenty-eight members. On the whole, we have every reason to rejoice, especially that we all will soon meet in the kingdom.

Dear brethren, pray for us, that our labor may not be in vain at Williamson, Wayne Co., N. Y., the place of our next meeting. We will continue our meeting there until the first of September, or later. Bro. R. C. Brown has labored with me in the tent, preaching the word to acceptance. Your Bro. in Christ,

JAS. E. WELLS.

DEDICATION.

According to appointment, the new chapel at North Rutland was dedicated Sunday, Aug. 2nd. In the morning they began to gather until the chapel was full, which will seat about three hundred. Quite a delegation came from Worcester, Holden, and other places. The day was as fine as could be desired. They have a neat and pretty chapel, at a cost of a little less than $1,200. Preachers present, T. M. Preble, G. A. Streeter, and H. H. Tucker. Bro. Preble gave us a discourse in the morning from Mark 16: 15, 16. Christ, the author of the text, once lived here, died here, and is now at the right hand of God. The last commission to his disciples was to GO. Amid the trials of this life, amid the scoffs of an ungodly world, and amid perils and persecutions, it is still "GO." Go into all the world. That was Christ's last commission to his disciples. To the sinner, it is come. "Come unto me." But at the judgment it will be reversed. The first words to his disciples will be COME; "come ye blessed of my Father." But to the sinner it will be go—"depart." The gospel is good news of salvation, and deliverance, not only from sin, but from death. Christ will accomplish that.

Bro. Streeter came here three years ago, by the invitation of one person, and held meetings; then to the new one after that was built, then into this new chapel to-day. Thank the Lord. At the close of the morning services, a subscription was started to lift the remaining debt on the house; $220 of which was pledged upon the spot, and a guarantee was given for the remaining $382.58, in case it was not otherwise paid. At noon, two were baptized by Bro. Tucker, near the chapel. At the commencement of the afternoon services, a large Bible and harp were presented to the North Rutland church, from the Worcester S. S., by Bro. W. M. Hall, which was responded to by Bro. Streeter in an appropriate manner.

Bro Preble then dedicated the house, taking for a text Ps. 118: 25, 26. This psalm, prophetical of Christ, the head of the corner, refers to God's house everywhere. God's house at Jerusalem became a den of thieves because they had perverted it from its proper use, by desecrating it. He made application of it to the present time. It is not the material that constitutes the house of God, but it is the place where God can meet his people, if but two or three. It must be where God is known. This Bible, God its author, salvation its end, truth unmixed as its matter. To be God's house, his book must be here, his people must be here, and God's minister must be here, and study the word, and not write novels or keep fast horses. Said the author of "Norwood," "The man that can believe that God made the world in six days, is about as intelligent as the Egyptian mummy, and of the two should prefer the mummy." When men forsake His word, he will forsake them. In order to make it the house of God, we must preach his truth. God has blessed the effort in building. We must have the Spirit of God in the heart.

At five P. M., prayer and conference. Five received the right hand of fellowship by Bro. Streeter; others are to be baptized by the same the last Sunday but one in this month. At the close, Bro. Preble said we must not forget Bro. W. M. Hall of Worcester, who had not only labored with his hands to erect this house, but had labored spiritually, and had also given liberally of his substance as the Lord had prospered, to whom they owed in a great measure the success of the enterprise. God bless him. At the same time we partook of the Lord's supper, and thus passed away a day very pleasantly, and we trust profitably. Lord bless them all. Amen.

IF I HAD THE TIME.

More than once have fanciful visions been drawn of what life should be, were it not for the multiplied duties that press one down to the continual drudgery of manual service. Fretful lips cry out again and again, "Oh, I would love to be good; but then this everlasting round of cooking, and scrubbing, and washing, and ironing, and mending, week in and week out, year after year, consuming energy, and destroying all the finer feelings, and higher aspirations of my nature!"

Poor creature! she would love to be situated as Mrs. A., or Mrs. B., nothing she would enjoy more than being good, and doing good; but then there is no use thinking about it, for she has neither time, nor ease, nor talent, nor wealth,—to her, the seemingly needed requisites to usefulness,—so she must be content to be nothing, and do nothing that is sublime and elevating; but dependency clipping the wings of her soul, she dooms herself to hobble and grovel down amid the cares and fretting anxieties of life; never learning the precious lesson of casting all her care on Jesus, and while she toils with her hands let her soul and mind rise into a higher atmosphere, where heaven's air is breathed, and tranquility and peace is her rich possession.

These seemingly unfavorable circumstances amid which the Father hath placed many of his children, may, indeed, be the very best for developing a high christian character. It is the very soil needed to produce in them the fruits of the Spirit,—patience, gentleness, meekness, forbearance, love.

These many cares which we would almost reckon curses, are among our greatest blessings, our strongest helps to a holy life; teaching some persons, as nothing else could, to pray without ceasing, and to keep a steady trust. Where there is greater leisure, there is oftimes a proneness to set apart and depend too much on long intervals of prayer, during which the soul draws very near to God, and then away to duty, relaxing trust. But in the absence of much time for closet communings, the soul learns to do most of its praying as it goes; holding itself in a continually trusting attitude toward God. Thus it looks and trusts, and is saved, moment by moment, all the while the hands are busy.

There is a tendency sometimes to grow a little chafed, and rebellious against the Lord for having put us just where we are; taking away from us all time for self-improvement and devotional exercises, and working in the church. Ah, he knoweth best, and the leisure we so much covet might have been our destruction. We are poor judges of the best means for accomplishing in us the great work of perfecting and living holy lives. We might have thrown off the irksome yoke of household duties, withdrawn ourselves from contact with the temptations of an outside world, shut ourselves up in some monastic cell, and then said, "Now I shall be strong, and pure, and Christ-like." But not so; there is no growth; we behold only a weak, sickly babe. God sees where we need to be planted; and be sure if he puts us where the winds blow, where there are winter storms and summer suns, he designs that out of these influences we are to come as the giant oak of the forest. He does not intend that we are to be controlled by these circumstances surrounding us, but that we shall so handle and control them, as to make them minister to the very fullest development of our higher nature. This is what makes men and women of bone and sinew, nerve and muscle. It is not leisure to do as one wills, but it is trusting and serving God, right in the midst of every-day duties. It is not seclusion, but taking the seeming adverse circumstances, and assimilating them to our own nature; making them to supply the needed food for the spiritual man.—Advocate of Holiness.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Robinson.

To the saints scattered abroad, greeting: Thinking many of the brothers and sisters would like to know what had become of Bro. and Sr. Morgan, Bro. and Sr. Robinson, Srs. Pamelia Giddings and Ruth. G. Moore, we have concluded to write a letter for the Crisis. As we have been looking for the coming of Jesus since 1842, and have attended almost all the campmeetings in Wilbraham and Springfield until last year, I will say both families moved from Chicopee Falls, Mass., to Warbashaw, Minn., one year ago last May. Death has taken one of our number since we came here. Sr. Morgan died March 9th, but she died in the Lord. We have kept the faith, and are waiting for the great Restorer to come and give us eternal life. Sister Morgan was a mother in Israel, and a great expounder of the Scriptures. We miss her very much. Bro. Morgan, and the rest of us, request the prayers of the saints.

Wabashaw, Minn., Aug. 3d.

From Bro. N. Bezack.

One of Egypt's plagues has visited us in the shape of grasshoppers. They have destroyed all that was green,—gardens, corn, and trees. The summer was very hot and dry, so that the grass dried up in June, and we have had no rain since to do the least good. Cattle languish for grass; hogs have to die. I have eight of them, the best kind in the State. I offer to give them away, but cannot do it. Cows give but very little milk; so there will be no butter nor meat.

UNFERMENTED WINE.

More than fifty churches in New York and vicinity, and over one hundred and fifty in and around Philadelphia, have banished the alcoholic cup from the Lord's table, and substituted the unfermented wine, which is now so easy to obtain. Thousands of churches all over the country are using it with great satisfaction.

It is dangerous and highly improper to place fermented wine upon the communion table. We are as fully satisfied that the Bible no more sanctions the use of intoxicants at the Lord's table than it does American slavery. Christ nor any of the Lord's followers used it fermented. Besides it matters nothing where the viper lurks, whether on the communion table or the saloon keeper's bar. It is a viper still. If he has such a stultified conscience as to deal it out to his victims, let him bear his sin alone. We shall never, God helping us, be guilty of administering fermented wine at the communion table.

Our prayer is from Jesus, "Lead us not into temptation." And this petition is one of the most useful taught by the Savior, because it at once recognizes man's weakness and God's power. No temptations are stronger than those appealing to the appetite, and instances are by no means rare where promising men have been started on the road to destruction by the simplest means. To some appetites the taste of ardent spirits is more than they can withstand, and therefore it is both cruelty and crime to offer this taste. To provide, as far as we can, against the temptation being presented at the Lord's table, in the shape of an intoxicating drink, we have procured the following simple recipe for the manufacture of palatable communion wine, which we commend to our christian brethren, and ask the press generally to circulate:

Vinum Sacrum.—Take of raisins, one pound; boiling water, one quart; and the white of one egg. Having reduced the raisins to a pulp by pressure of the hand, pour the boiling water on it, let it stand for about an hour and strain through muslin—then, having previously beaten up the white of an egg, add to it the aforesaid infusion and heat until ebullition takes place, lastly filter through paper. "Filtering paper" may be procured at any drug store, and folded into proper shape if desired. Prepare the day before it is to be used.—American Wesleyan.

Obituaries.

Hancock. Poor, blind Samuel Hancock is dead. He was taken from the camp-ground by a friend, by the name of Burr, on Monday, the day of breaking up, and cared for in his family, until it was thought best to remove him to the hospital, a few rods distant. Here he had careful nursing, and good medical attendance, but his work was done. I visited him every day while he lived, after learning that he was in the city. He had strong confidence in the Lord, and great assurance of his abiding love. He vomited up all medicine until Thursday night, from which time he rapidly declined. Friday he breathed out his ardent love for Jesus; and though he seemed little inclined to converse, he still continued his adoration,—"Precious Jesus! precious Jesus!" Saturday I left him in the care of Bro. Payne, while I went to my appointment, and returned on Monday, to learn that he had been conveyed to his wife in a coffin, to sing no more his sweet hymn—

"We shall sleep, but not forever,"

but to be remembered and sung by the church until that day when death shall be swallowed up of life, and "the inhabitants will no more say, I am sick."

H. Pratt.

Robjohn. In New York City, July 22d, Thomas Robjohn, aged sixty-four years.

This affliction falls heavily, not only on a devoted wife and children, but on a large circle of friends and acquaintances, including all the Advent people in New York and vicinity, to whom he had endeared himself by a life-long devotion to the cause. In many a dark hour, Bro. Robjohn's contributions and words of good cheer have lifted the cloud, and shown the sunshine of our heavenly Father's approving countenance. He was a great inventor, and once constructed a small steam engine that actually moved in graceful circles through the air, over the heads of an entranced throng in a large room on Broadway. The writer was called upon to preach the funeral sermon, but Bro. P. G. Bowman arriving just in time from the South, we secured his valuable services, greatly to the honor of the truth he so nobly represents.

H. A. King.

Hervey. In Norton, Mass., July 24th, 1874, Caleb C. Hervey, aged forty-one years and twenty-eight days.

Bro. Hervey was for many years a lover of the Lord. In the latter part of his christian experience he embraced the doctrine of the soon speedy coming of our blessed Savior. Though suffering greatly with disease for several weeks, he did not murmur nor complain, but was enabled by grace to rejoice in the blessed hope, and the promise of God. He rests in hope of the soon coming of the Lord to give him immortality and a home in the better land. He leaves a lonely widow, nine children, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. May great grace be with them all. By special request of the deceased, the religious services were conducted on the Sabbath in the Baptist church, by the writer, assisted by the pastor. Text, "If a man die shall he live again?"

C. W. Rathbun.

Bracket. In Hermon, Me., June 21st, Sr. Phebe Bracket, wife of Bro. George Bracket.

The subject of this notice was one of loveliness, patience, and piety, amidst her extreme suffering, for the space of seven months. She had eight cancers cut from her breast, one burned out; had four more coming at her death, three inside, one outside. With christian submission and confidence, she was often heard to say, Let me die and rest in the grave till Jesus comes to raise to life the sleeping ones. She left a kind husband to deeply mourn her loss.

Israel Damman.

Smith. In Biddeford, Me., June 12th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Ida Smith, daughter of Isaac P. and Malisia Smith, aged one year.

Also July 21st, 1874, of scarlet fever, Laura Ella, daughter of Isaac P. and Malisia Smith, aged seven years, seven months, and seven days.

Two more lovely forms have been borne to the enemy's land, to sleep until Jesus comes to wake the dead, and give life and immortality to his chosen ones. May the grace of God sustain our Bro. and Sister in their great bereavement. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

G. F. Haines.

Cross. In Biddeford, July 15th, 1874, William Cross, aged forty-eight years.

Our Bro. rests in hope, so that the weeping widow and fatherless children expect to meet him again "where no farewell tear is shed or heart is sad." Services by the writer.

W. H. Mitchell.

Stone. In Biddeford, July 24th, 1874, William Stone, aged forty-eight years.

Our Bro. was of a doubtful turn of mind, nevertheless, he clung to his Savior, and calmly fell asleep, expecting to wake up at the trumpet's call. The funeral was attended by the writer, at the M. E. church, assisted by Bro. Ladd, Methodist, and Bro. Stevens, F. Baptist. May God bless the widow, children, and all the mourning friends.

W. H. Mitchell.

Wakefield. In Kennebunkport, July 16th, 1874, Reuben, son of Joseph and Olive Wakefield, aged twenty-six years.

This young man had been in feeble health for a number of years previous to his last sickness, but was patient and uncomplaining through it all, and without a murmur, fell asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep;
From which none ever wake to weep."

The writer improved the occasion of the funeral in pointing the mourners to the gospel plan of saving man.

W. H. Mitchell.

Emery. In Kennebunk, July 29th, 1874, Harriet A., wife of Bro. Jacob Emery, aged forty-three years.

Our sister hoped to meet the gathering saints the present season at the Alton Bay camp, but died without the privilege. She will meet a larger gathering ere long. The writer endeavored to comfort the numerous relatives who gathered at our chapel on the 31st, to pay their last tribute of respect, before consigning to the grave, a christian woman, with the gospel hope.

W. H. Mitchell.

Smith. In Kennebunkport, Aug. 12th, 1874, Clara Smith, aged sixty-two years.

For many years our sister has been looking for the return of Him who will destroy death, but she has had to lie down at last in the grave to rest awhile till he should return, when at the sound of his voice she will wake to sleep no more. Funeral attended bp the writer, assisted by Bro. E. S. Emery.

W. H. Mitchell.

Coolbroth. In Cape Elizabeth, June 16th, 1874, of consumption, Bro. Asbury Coolbroth, aged thirty-two years.

During his sickness, our Bro. felt the love of Christ in his heart, and seemed reconciled to the will of God. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

G. F. Haines.

Gates. In No. Adams, Mass., Aug. 3d, 1874, Charlie, son of Charles S. and Arlett Gates, aged eleven months.

"Though nature weeps when lovely ties
So strongly bound art riven,
Yet faith the Savior's words applies,
"Of such the realms of heaven."

F. R. Blanchard.

Bentham. At South Boston, Aug. 8th, 1874, Mabel, daughter of Edwin and Bessie Bentham, aged five years and ten months.

☞ A telegram from Rome says that on Friday night an armed band of forty persons quitted the town of Imola and proceeded to Bologna, destroying the telegraph lines and disarming the railway watchmen as they went. The band was pursued by a military force and nearly all of its members were arrested, and their arms and ammunition seized. There has been some excitement in Bologna, caused by the organization of revolutionary societies, but these have been dissolved, and the town is now tranquil. Another telegram received yesterday states that eight leaders of the Internationale have been arrested at Rome, and other arrests have been made in Florence and other Italian cities. Papers were seized showing that the Internationale has been making great progress in Italy.

Rome, Aug. 31. Mount Etna has been in a state of eruption since Saturday and streams of lava are pouring through three craters.

Notices.

Bethel, Vt., Campmeeting.

The Bethel (Vt.) Campmeeting will commence (d.v.) Saturday, Sept. 5th. The camp-ground never looked prettier than now. It smiles in beauty and neatness. It awaits in loveliness to greet all who can come. Friends are arranging to put up several new tents. We are expecting a better meeting than ever. We expect the same R. R. arrangements as last year.

Pay full fare from any station upon the Vermont Central R. R to the meeting, and receive from the committee a free return pass. This includes also all the roads operated by the Vermont Central, for the names of which see late copies of the Crisis. We also expect a reduction of fare on the Montpelier and Wells River R. R.

Bro. Chapman is preparing to furnish good board at seventy-five cents per day. As we expect quite a number of preachers, those churches that can, would do well to adopt one, and furnish a home for him in their tent. Private lodgings and horse keeping can be very readily obtained near by at reasonable rates.

Tent Building. The committee will be on the ground Aug. 31st, and through the week, and all who intend to build tents of wood are especially requested to have them completed before the meeting commences, as it seems a pity to sacrifice so much of the spirit and power of devotion to the sound and toil of the hammer. We need the entire meeting from Sept. 5th to Sept. 14th for worship. Come, brethren and sisters, come up to this feast. Lay aside toil and care, and come. We have engaged efficient help from abroad. We shall expect you, coming with holy hearts and happy faces.

We have completed arrangements with the Montpelier and Wells River R. R. You will pay full fare over the road, and receive a free pass from the committee on the camp-ground, the same as you do on the Vermont Central R. R.

Extra Quilts. Those who can, bring some for the preachers, and for those who cannot bring any. Let all come fully furnished with bedding that can.

H. F. C., for Com.

Tent Meeting.—The new Mass. Mission tent will be pitched in East Pepperell, Mass., Thursday, Sept. 3d. Meetings will be held each afternoon and evening during the week, and over the Sabbath. The evidences of the coming of Christ at hand will be given, and an effort made to have men come to Christ. The brethren living in the region where the meeting is held are invited to come and help in this work for the Lord.

L. Boutell, for the Committee.

Dearly Beloved, the Mass. Mission Tent is in the field. We have no funds in the treasury. Shall it stop, while the calls are being made upon us, for lack of means? L. Boutell.

Pittsfield Me. Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting for the eastern part of Maine will be held, if the Lord will, on the ground occupied last year, in Hathorn's grove at Pittsfield, commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 6th. The grove has been much improved by clearing, grading, and deepening wells. It is expected that all who can will put up tents for themselves, and furnish plenty of bedding and food. The Maine Mission Tent will be on hand, and will afford lodging for those who cannot put up tents for themselves; but all must provide bedding for themselves. Be prepared for cold storms. Good board will be furnished at the boarding tent. Breakfast and supper, 25 cents each; dinner, 40 cents, except the last Sunday, when dinner will be fifty cents. Also horse keeping, hay, straw and board, will be provided on the ground for all who wish, at reasonable rates.

☞ No reduction of Rail Road fare can possibly be obtained.

Committee: Jer. Carr, F. A. Baker, S. K. Partridge, Oren S. French, J. M. Tozier, Oscar Farnum, M. W. Corliss, G. L. McKenney, William Clark, Abner Millet.

The Adv. Chris. Conference of the Province of Quebec will (d. v.) hold its next annual session at the "old meeting-house" in Hatley, P. Q., on Wednesday, October 7th, and continue over the Sabbath. All of like precious faith, who are in sympathy with its objects and work, as set forth in its Constitution, will, we trust, make a special effort to attend, and unite in its business deliberations, and religious exercises of preaching, prayer, and song; which, we trust, will be so scriptural, so wisely and kindly performed, as to result in permanent good to the cause of our coming Savior. Especially we would say, let all the ministerial and lay members in the several districts, as far as is possible, arrange to attend. Come early, and come prepared to stay through the meeting. Let due reports, either written or verbal, be forthcoming from the entire field. Let isolated brethren and sisters who feel an interest, and cannot attend, write epistles to be read in conference, and direct to the President, or Secretary, at Ayres Flat. Please attend to this in good season. Christian union is strength; let us have it in action, feeling, and fact. Christian hospitality and kindness will be shown to all who come, by the resident brethren and friends, as on former occasions. Come praying for and expecting good.

Chas. P. Dow, President.
E. C. Orcutt, Secretary.

Campmeeting Notice.—The annual campmeeting of the A. C. Conference, in Northern Illinois, will be holden at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Illinois. The meeting will commence Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, and close Sunday evening, Sept. 6th. We anticipate a large and interesting meeting. It is hoped that every church will be represented by a tent, and that all will come to work for God and the salvation of the perishing. Eld. S. W. Thurber, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be at the meeting to labor in the gospel. Other prominent ministers will also be present. And above all, the Lord by his Spirit will be there. Come, then, to the meeting, one and all, and come early. Provisions will be made at an ample boarding tent for victualling all who may desire. The tents will be pitched on the old camp-ground, one half mile east of the depot.

The annual conference will also convene at the same time, but will be so arranged as not to interfere with social meetings. Each church should shnd a delegate or letter, and each minister should report either by person or by letter.

For the Committee, C. W. Smith, President.
C. C. Marston, Sec.

The first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wisconsin A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Big Creek, commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, to hold over the Lord's day. We expect a number of the preaching brethren to be present to assist in preaching the word.

E. P. Graves.

The Annual Meeting of the Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y. Conference will be held at Little Marsh, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Sept. 24th, to hold over the following Sabbath. Those coming by R. R. will leave the cars at Middlebury, on the Corning and Wellsboro road. Trains leave Corning at 7.50 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. Teams will meet the trains at Middlebury on Thursday and Friday.

E. C. Cowles, President.
J. W. Taylor, Secretary.

Notice.—As I expect my labors in this section will soon close, I would say I shall be ready to go and preach "the gospel of the kingdom" anywhere, as the Lord may open the way, the coming fall and winter. Any wishing to correspond with me can direct for the present to A. P. Moore, Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y.

Articles found on the Springfield camp-ground: One pair men's leather shoes; one pair men's rubbers; one Jubilee Harp; one Testament; one pair of gloves; one veil; a small rag carpet. The owners can have the articles by describing them, and paying charges.

Hiram Munger, Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Having closed my labors with the church at Clinton, Clinton Co., Iowa, I am now at liberty to go into other fields as the Lord may direct, and brethren and friends may desire. I expect to return to Illinois as soon as convenient. My address for a short time, until further notice, is Albany, N. Y., No. 14 Bleecker Place.

Silas B. Marry.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a campmeeting will be held at Mechanic Falls, Me., commencing Saturday, Sept. 5th, to continue over Sunday, Sept. 13th. Provision will be made for board and horse keeping. The boarding tent is under the management of Bro. J. Moulton, who will furnish single meals,—breakfast or supper at 35 cts. each; dinner 50 cts.; or 85 cts. per day. The stable is managed by the committee the same as last year. Teams will be provided to convey all from the depot to the ground who wish to ride. The fare on the Grand Trunk Road will be about one half the usual rate. The Maine Central utterly refuse to make any reduction of fare.

It is expected that Brn. Couch, Stockman, Phelps, and others will be at this meeting.

Committee: M. H. Mitchell, C. Dennen, I. N. Thompson, Geo. Humphrey, Joshua Howard.

Portland and Ogdensburg R. R.—Persons intending to pass over this railroad to the Mechanic Falls Campmeeting, can secure a return pass free of charge by dropping me a line, stating from what station they are to start.

C. H. Sweet, Steep Falls, Me.

West Hawley Advent Campmeeting.

Two and a half miles from the old time honored camp-ground in Savoy, Mass.

An Advent campmeeting at Fullerville, West Hawley, Mass., will commence Saturday evening, August 29th, and continue through one week, including two Sabbaths, and closing Monday morning, Sept. 7th. Good and able preachers from abroad are engaged to preach the word during the meeting. Board will be provided for those who wish, by the day, or through the meeting. Those wishing to board themselves, bring your provisions with you; or, if you prefer, you can have at common prices the provisions you want at a large grocery store near by. The large Hoosick Valley preaching tent will be on the ground for meetings, and also for lodging to all those who come to camp out during the meetings. Those who intend to camp out nights, should bring an empty bed-tick, blankets, etc.

It is evident from an extraordinary increase of the last-day tokens, that this will be the last great gathering of those who love Christ's appearing and kingdom, who are dwelling in this Hoosick mountain region. Brethren and sisters, do lay aside all your cares and labor, for one week's rest at this feast of tabernacles. Those coming with teams will find ample provision for their horses.

H. K. Flagg,
A. W. Sibley, } Committee.
E. McCullock,

Vermont Conference.—The next annual Advent Conference will be held on the camp-ground, at Bethel, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, at four o'clock p. m. Each church is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate to every ten above the number of ten. Let this conference be fully represented, and thus show your interest in the cause we so much love.

R. N. Stetson, Sec'y.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting at Groveland, Mass., on the Newburyport Branch R. R., three miles from Haverhill, commencing Tuesday evening, Sept. 8th, and continue afternoons and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, Sept. 13th.

Enoch Morrill.

Quarterly Meeting.—The first quarterly meeting of the A. C. Quarterly Conference of N. W. Kansas, for the second conference year, will be held, the Lord willing, with the A. C. Church of West Creek, Republic county, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 25th, and continuing over Sunday, and as long as the interest demands. Bro. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist, is expected to be present with the State Mission Tent, to assist in preaching; also Sr. M. J. Clark is expected to be present to preach the word. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend.

E. N. Bliss, Pres.
J. S. Thorp, Sec.

District Meeting.—The Bolton District Meeting, the fourth and last of the Conference year, will be held in the Page school-house, East Bolton, P. Q., to commence Thursday, Sept. 3d. at two p. m., and continue over the Sabbath. A full attendance is earnestly desired and expected. Let the true friends of the cause of the coming Savior come together from Magog, Orford, East and West Bolton, and parts adjacent, to confer upon its wants, and unite in earnest labor for its promotion. Ministers, official and leading members, are especially expected to be present. Let all the friends circulate the appointment. Elders Marsh and Chadsey, and others from the Farnham District, are expected to attend. Come, all who can, and unite in the good work. Chas. P. Dow.

Kansas Campmeetings.—The Northern Campmeeting of Advent Christians of Kansas will convene at Clyde, Cloud Co., Kansas, on Thursday, Sept. 10th, the Lord willing, and continue over two Sundays. The State tent will be on the ground, which will contain five hundred people. The following preachers will be there to preach the word: Eld. J. C. Smith, State Evangelist; Eld. Virgil Hunt, Asst. State Evangelist; Elder R. F. Clark, and Mrs. Clark. Others are expected. We have written to Bro. Sheldon to be present, and shall do all we can to have him there. The following have been appointed as committee of arrangements, and are prepared to be on the ground the day appointed, to make full arrangements. I will be there to meet you, if the Lord will: Frank Wilson, Chairman, Clyde, Cloud Co.; W. H. Rich, Clifton, Washington Co.; T. J. Hay, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; C. D. Potter, Peach Creek, Wash. Co.; J. Roberts, Lake Sibley, Cloud Co.; C. M. Collins, Bransford, Washington Co.; B. S. Conley, Glen Elder, Mitchell Co.

Now, my dear brethren and sisters, and all who love Jesus, we want a general rally from all quarters at this meeting. Shall we have it? Let us give up our worldly business and pleasures for a little time, and come and work for the Lord, that our souls may be blest, and sinners converted and come to Jesus. Preaching brethren who preach the word are invited to attend. Let your baskets be well filled. Come equipped for camping. All bring tents who can. R. F. Clark, Sec., Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

The Iowa General Union Conference and Campmeeting will be held in Brooklyn, Poweskeik Co., Iowa, beginning Sept. 11th, and holding over two Sundays. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonables rates. We desire to see a large attendance at this meeting. Bring your tents and bedding.

J. Ridley, Secretary.

P. S. The conference will convene during the first part of the meeting. J. R.

Mrs. E. S. Jennings will commence a series of meetings at Barnes' Corners, Lewis Co., N. Y., on Sunday, Sept. 13th, to continue over the 20th. The friends in that vicinity will please address me at that place. E. S. J.

Correction.—The postage on the "History of the Advent Message," will be 20 cts., the postage on books having been reduced one half.

I. C. Wellcome.

☞ Lost at Alton Bay campmeeting, my pocket gold pen, with gutta percha case and pencil.

E. Owen.

We wish some of our preaching brethren would call on us. We will find a place for them to speak in, for we are in need of help here. Please correspond with A. P. Scribner, New Market, N. H.

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. Ag't.

THE DIVINE LIGHT.

Lead us, O effulgent Light,
O'er life's dark, uncertain way;
Lead us through the realm of night,
To the splendors of thy day.

Weak we are without thy strength;
Faithless, but for faith from thee;
Blind, yet may our eyes at length,
Through thine own, be made to see.

Not a single step alone
Can we with assurance take,
Yet with thee, no trembling one
But its sure ascent will make.

Step by step the height shall yield,
Till the uttermost is won,
And the restful, heavenly field
Crowns the weary labor done.

There, no hindering stone can fall
To obstruct the level way;
There, no faithlessness can thrall
Eyes that greet the certain day!

Light sufficing! be our guide,
Hide no more thy radiant grace;
Lead us, till the throne beside,
We behold thee face to face.

LAST-DAY PERILS.

T. S. SCOVILLE.

Noticing in your issue of the 5th, "Signs of the Times," I am reminded of some other signs. At my residence, on one of the principal streets and thoroughfares of the city of Elmira, N. Y., I see from my window hundreds of gay carriages going and coming on the Sabbath, towards a beautiful lake and park in the suburbs, called Lake Eldridge, after its owner, through whose private generosity this lake and park have been called into notice, by an immense outlay of his own money. The whole is thrown open to the people free to the poorest as well as to the richest; and what is better than all, there is no place to spend money for anything on the whole grounds, which virtually renders all who visit it free and equal. But my design was not to speak of parks, or other pleasurable matters, except as connected with the phases of human life. I see the clergy leave off preaching in the heated term, close their churches, and leave the sheep to mix up with the world for two or three months in a year. Stray sheep are always in danger; so stray christians learn to live loosely.

The tendency of the church of Christ on earth is downward into the world. In the first place, they have elected worldly men trustees, who govern the financial; and the spiritual is too closely connected with the financial to allow this safely. No church ought ever to permit it. These worldly trustees want a finer church, finer organ, more exquisite music, and withal a pastor "who will draw,"—which means, be fashionable, collect more people, and get more money to run the machine on a grand scale; therefore the poor, humble christian comes into the church so finely fitted up, sees his fellow-christian with finer cloth and silks than usual, and withal there is so much more to pay than there used to be, that, in the first place, he cannot stand the show of architecture, and feels himself out of his element. He says, This is for the rich, and not for me; and seeing all the well-to-do dressed so much finer than they used to, he feels they must look down upon him, and so feels afraid to approach them. When the contribution box comes about, often laden with dollars, he has but a dime to contribute, and again he says, No place for me. The result is, he gravitates outward, takes his love of Christ with him, and leaves the great church to those who can afford it; therefore, the poor have not the gospel.

Our friend, the lake owner, in his generosity, having an eye only to the enjoyment of the people, hires a splendid cornet band, at a cost of forty dollars per a Sabbath day, and says to everybody, Come and enjoy my park and the music, and a ride on the waters, and be happy. This is very pleasant to the poor, who have but the one day of rest, and they go there. So these poor too, who love Jesus, feel more at home in the park than in the church, they go and enjoy with the world, while the weather is hot and the priests have gone for the same purpose away from home. Then, withal, our clever townsman, who owns the park, has invited the Young Men's Christian Association to have preaching at five o'clock each Sabbath, when the band march from one stand to another with martial airs, and assist in the musical features of the worship. This is mixing the world, the flesh and the devil all in one mass, like Barnum, who overcomes the scruples of christians to a circus by having a few animals, musty wax figures, and poppet shows mixed in, to call the unwary, or overcome religious scruples by the immense size of his great show. So now we see christians going to all shows without scruple, though sometimes they take a dram. They go with the world to lakes and parks, and sometimes on excursions, on the Sabbath day. We see the churches run with cook-stoves and feeding arrangements, and for a change theatrical performances, musical entertainments, fairs, grab-bags, and oyster suppers, while the people fold their hands in pious silence, and take their religion as manufactured to order.

I wonder what the early disciples would think of this way of serving up religion. Paul would repeat again, "I am of all men most miserable." I hear him say: I spent my life in servitude and toil, working for Jesus, and the good of a lost world. O, if I had only known this modern, easy way, how much trouble it would have saved me. If these are not signs of the last days, please tell us where to find them. "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God"; so says the prophet of "the last days." The church is sinking, sinking into the slime of the world, instead of lifting the world up to a higher standard. "How long, O Lord?" how long? When will the Master come?

AN EARNEST WORD.

Ministers of Christ! Men of God! to your knees for oil, to your Bible for light. Away with your trapping of worldly policy. Strip your party-colored robes of Satan's weaving. Take to your locusts and wild honey. Have done with the poisonous dishes of man's providing. Strengthen your loins as with a girdle, with the promise of his coming, with the blessed hope of the glorious appearing of the great God and your Savior, and let your voice be a united voice—the voice of one crying in the midst of this wilderness of apostasy, blasphemy, ignorance, pollution, and sin—"Prepare the way of the Lord." Thus will you be "like unto men that wait for their Lord;" and take the promise for your comfort, "When he cometh and shall find you thus watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make you sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve you."—Rev. Robert Atkins.

THE LAW OF GOD'S HOUSE—HOLINESS.

"Thou son of man, show the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities; and let them measure the pattern. And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, show them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof; and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them. This is the law of the house: upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house." Ezek. 43: 10-12.

Yes, the law of God's house is a law of holiness. His house is the church. "In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." We must preach holiness to the church; holiness as a specialty; that members of the church may see themselves as they are, and see what they should be. Then, if they are "ashamed of their iniquities," show them how they may walk in all the "ordinances of the Lord blameless." Holiness in heart, and holiness in life, word and thought, in going out and coming in, is not only to be preached from the pulpit, but it is to be the theme of the pen. "Write it in their sight." It is to be proclaimed for the hearing of the ear, and written for the seeing of the eye. "The whole limit" of the house is to be "most holy." Every believer is required to be wholly sanctified. There is no exception made, no distinction. "The whole limit" is to be "most holy"; not almost, but eminently, completely, thoroughly holy. "This is the law of the house." It is required; and if required, it is the privilege of every one. Are we all striving to keep this law? We may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them. This we may do by plunging first into the fountain opened for sin and uncleanness. Plunge in, plunge in now.—Sel. by G. E. Merrill, Worcester, Mass.

HOME.

S. S. CHRISTMAN.

"Home is not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the hearth hath builded.
Home! go watch the faithful dove,
Sailing 'neath the heavens above us;
Home is where there is some to love,
Home is where there is some to love us."

I was forcibly struck with the above lines, with the perfect truthfulness and simplicity of style with which the writer gives expression to her ideal of an earthly home. Alas! how many an earthly home is destitute of that holiest and strongest of all ties that binds the hearts of human beings together—love. But there remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God, and that rest will be enjoyed when we get home; not here, where everything is constantly shifting, and change is written on everything of an earthly nature; not here, where fragrant flowers bloom for a day, then wither and fade forever; where sickness and sorrow, pain and death carry their despotic sway in every household; not here, where the coffined forms of those we love are being daily carried from our sight, and our hearts are left crushed and bleeding, with only the hope of meeting them again at the last day; not here, where every sunbeam has its shadow, and every joy its grief, and every day its night; not here, where the short and fitful summers with their transient foliage come like a bird on the wing to fan us with their balmy breath, as it passes; and the faded leaf, and frosty air, hushing the songs of birds, tell us that winter is nearer with its icy touch, which reminds us of withered hopes and joys forever fled. Oh! no. That rest of which the apostle speaks is to be enjoyed only when the whole family, the redeemed of the Lord, shall return, and come to Zion with singing, and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away forever.

Oh! what greetings there will be, when we all get home; the whole family, the church of the first born, the spirits of just ones made perfect. There will be our home, yes, our eternal home, forever and ever with God our Father, and Jesus our elder Brother. And the former home and events of this life shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. Praise the Lord for that promise. The fulness of joy in that home will be complete—all love and glory.

Dear friends in Christ, take heed to yourselves, that no man take your crown. I am fully satisfied that Satan is trying every one of God's children. Beware of his devices. He that shall endure unto the end shall be saved. But there must be unity here among the disciples of the Lord, or how can there be when we get home? We must be one in Christ before the gathering time shall come. How can there be division in the kingdom of God? There cannot be. As love will be the controlling element in our heavenly home, so must it be among the family while journeying there. As I have loved you, said Christ, so love ye one another. Oh, blessed love! Oh, precious Jesus! who has gone to prepare a place for us—that glorious city for which Abraham looked—our eternal home.

Everything tells us in this world, in tones that cannot be mistaken, that we are nearing with mighty swiftness that final crisis which will forever decide our weal or woe. The earth is filled with violence. Famines, floods, fearful tornadoes, fires, earthquakes, plagues of Egypt, crimes of all descriptions, are rapidly on the increase. Trouble everywhere seems to be all the cry. God help us to watch and pray, that we may escape the things that are coming on the earth, and stand before Jesus; for some will say, "The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" They will call for rocks and mountains to hide them from that face we so much long to behold. That matchless voice, in tones of sweetest music, shall welcome us to the marriage feast, within those mansions not made with hands, in our Father's house.

"Oh home, sweet, sweet home!
Receive me, dear Savior, in glory my home," where changes never may come, nor the taint of sin to mar our perfect bliss in that heavenly country, towards which, as pilgrims and strangers, we are now journeying, and every day brings us nearer. We can now enjoy our anticipations here, but no imagination of ours can ever bring to our mind's eye a picture of the reality of what God has in store for all them that love him. So says the apostle.

What a glorious prospect for the church of Christ! As for me, the assurance of again clasping to my heart the forms of those whom I have laid in the lonely tomb to rest in silence and darkness, till the trump of God shall rouse them to life everlasting, is enough to cause me to forget the things which are behind, and to press forward to the things which lie before, where summer never ends, where flowers never fade, nor lose their sweetness; where our sky is never dimmed by a cloud, and our hearts never saddened by one pang of sorrow; where we never shall cease to eat of the tree of life, that shall grow by the banks of that river of waters, beside which we shall wander with our loved ones by our side; where birds of beauty, with their songs of melody, mingle their harmonies with those of saints and angels to Him who dwelleth among them, Jesus the Lamb, where loved ones never part, and all is peace and joy forever. Such will be our home.

STOPPED IN THE WAY.

Rev. W. E. Boardman describes the difficulties in the way of many who would seek heart purity. They are words fitly spoken:—

1. Fear of the brand, is one great difficulty. Not merely the brand of "perfectionism," this aside, we shrink from being marked as peculiar amongst christians. We should not certainly greatly fear to wear the star of an earthly nobility or knighthood in the army of Jesus is another thing.

Havelock fought three battles against terrible odds, to gain his first honors from the queen. But they were not his severest struggles nor his greatest victories. Many more he fought afterwards before he forced his way, at last, into Lucknow; but these were not his hardest contests either. The two battles with his threefold foe, the world, his own heart, and Satan, the first on the "General Kyd," and the last at Fort William, were the most trying of his life. Especially the last, when he put on the whole armor of salvation, and determined to "stand up for Jesus," even though it should cost him the loss of all favor and friendship and promotion from the crown. To be branded a saint, was another and a very different honor to look to, than to have the star of knighthood upon his breast, and the title, "Sir Henry, K. C. B.," prefixed and suffixed to his name.

But so it is. This battle must be fought, and he who conquers in it, comes to be willing to wear whatever title of reproach the world may see fit to confer. There is no victory without out.

2. Fear of becoming ultra. The danger of being led into fanaticism and error is another difficulty at the outset. And there is danger of this. Satan delights in nothing so much, if we will go forward, as to mislead us or to urge us on over the bounds of truth and wisdom out into the fields of extravagance and folly. Then, too, though old to the Bible, and to the experience of those who have gone before us, every step of real progress is new to us. We are blind to all before us, however clearly we see the ground already passed over, and our subtle enemy is always ready to decoy us into the specious network of some trap set for the unwary.

We cannot, therefore, be too careful. The fear is a wholesome one, for the danger is real. We are not without melancholy warnings in the many cases of those who have been duped in this way, and destroyed to all usefulness in this world.

Let us beware first of all of taking impulse, or suggestions, or the inner light, for our guide. Let us bring our own impulses and suggestions to the test of God's holy word. The inner light, if it be not according to the revealed truth of God, is only darkness. And if the light within us be darkness, how great is that darkness!—The mariner will hardly be so foolish as to supersede the chart by following his own fancies upon the sea. If he should, however, some rock, or shoal, or reef, or whirlpool, would bring him up while he was sailing in fancied security, and scatter his hopes and his cargo, and the fragments of his ship, with his crew and himself, upon the raging waves of the deep. Satan has that man fairly in his snares, whom he can get to put his own suggestions or impulses, under any name whatever, whether of the inner light, or a guardian spirit, or the Spirit of God, in place of the Bible as the chart of faith and of life.

Let us make sure, also, that we have the Bible truth, and not merely Bible words. It is a favorite and frequent thing with the arch deceiver, to couch his own lies in words of the Scripture. He takes out and leaves behind the kernels of truth, and catches the unwary with the empty chaff of mere Scripture phraseology. Beware of him.

But then, if common sense and common prudence do demand of us care lest we be deceived and ensnared, are we, therefore, to be stopped at the threshold of all that is good and great? No.

Rather let us be sure we are right, and then, with our face as a flint, yet with the docility of the child, and with the firm tread of a mind made up, and a faith leaning upon God, let us push resolutely forward to the conquest. There is just one thing that Satan likes better than to lure us into fanaticism, and that is to frighten us back from any great step of real advancement into the wilderness of doubt, and the tortuous paths of unbelief and sin.—Adv. of Chris. Holiness.

A BROKEN STRAND.

S. WOODRUFF.

A Bro. came to our house the other day to borrow my boy's fishing net. When we came to examine the net, we found several broken strands, which caused several holes. This forbade all effort with the net until repaired, and every broken strand fastened again. In years gone by, I have helped drag many nets. Ofttimes, old sunken logs and crags of various kinds have caught and broken a few strands, and when we drew the net to shore, nearly all of the fish had escaped through those broken strands.

Walking in a village one Monday morning in company with a Bro., said he, "I went to hear a young preacher at the big church last evening." While giving me a few ideas of the discourse, he turned and said, "There comes the preacher now." Never was I more disgusted with the sight from one who filled the desk of a large church. He was walking to the depot with head twisted on one side, the whole face disfigured by his endeavoring to keep a cigar in running order at one side of his mouth, much disfiguring his whole manly frame to get rid of the volume of smoke rolling at every puff. I could but remark, A broken strand, a hole in the net. Had I a nice fishing brook or pond, I would not fear that the fish would be diminished by the best of fishers who would drag their net with broken strands; so I would say to men who would be successful in saving perishing men, Beware of broken strands which make a hole in the net.

HOW MUCH DO WE LOVE HIM?

I. I. LESLIE.

How much do we love Christ? Words can never express the amount of love we have for him. By our acts alone can we make known to others the love we bear the Savior. We cannot substitute words for acts in showing the attachment we have to Christ. The extent to which we follow him, walking in his footsteps, alone indicates our love.

How much do I love Jesus? This is known by those who know me, better than by those who only hear me. My life tells if I love Christ. How much I love him all judge who see my daily walk. This judgment is righteous, and there is no appeal from it. We are known and read of all men by our lives, whether we live to Christ or to the world.

How much do we love him? Enough to have forsaken all for him? Has the sacrifice we have made shown that we have loved him with all the heart? Does it now indicate that our affections are all upon him? How much, then, do we love him?

He has shown how much he loved us. No sacrifice was too great for him to make in our behalf. His life of acts tells us how great his love was toward us. Must not our sacrifice for him, and our acts of life show how much we love him? Away, then, with the idea that by our words we can show our love for Christ. Once it did cost much to confess Christ; now it costs nothing. But it still costs everything to show that we love him with all the heart.

WEDDED TO CHRIST.

Jesus my Bridegroom is,
He's made me all his own;
And oh, how very sweet it is
To live for him alone.

The pathway to my home
Lies through a world of foes,
And Satan seeks in every way
My progress to oppose.

He says he'll have me yet,
Escape him I shall not;
But who can say, and bring to pass,
When God commandeth not.

He has no claim on me,
To Christ my spirit flies;
If faithful now, I know I'll meet
My Bridegroom in the skies.

While here, I'll honor him,
Obey, and ever love;
And by and by will celebrate
Our marriage feast above.

TO YOUNG MEN.

It is easier to be a good business man than a poor one. Half the energy displayed in keeping ahead that is required to catch up when behind will save credit, give more time to business, and add to the profit and reputation of your word. Honor your engagements. If you promise to meet a man, or do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time. If you have a work to do, do it cheerfully, and therefore more speedily and correctly. If you go out on business, attend promptly to the matter on hand, and then as promptly go about your own business. Do not stop to tell stories in business hours.

If you have a place of business, be found there when wanted. No man can get rich by sitting around stores and saloons. If you have to labor for a living, remember that one hour in the morning is better than two at night. If you employ others, be on hand to see that they attend to their duties, and direct with regularity, promptness, and liberality. Do not meddle with any business you know nothing of. Never buy an article simply because the man who sells it will take it out in trade. Trade is money. Time is money. A good business habit and reputation is always money. Make your place of business pleasant and attractive; then stay there to wait on customers.

Never use quick words, or allow yourself to make hasty or ungentlemanly remarks to those in your employ; to do so lessens their respect for you and your influence over them. Help yourself, and others will help you. Be faithful over the interests confided to your keeping, and all in good time your responsibilities will be increased. Do not build until you have arranged and laid a good foundation. Do not—as you hope to work for success—spend time in idleness. If your time is your own, business will suffer if you do. If it is given to another for pay, it belongs to him, and you have no more right to steal it than to steal money. Be obliging. Strive to avoid harsh words and personalities. Do not kick every stone in the path; more miles can be made in a day by going steadily on than by stopping to kick.

Pay as you go. A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond. Ask, but never beg. Help others when you can, but never give when you cannot afford it, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say No. No necessity of snapping it out dog fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully. Have but few confidants, and the fewer the better. Use your own brains rather than those of others. Learn to think and act for yourself. Be valiant. Keep ahead, rather than behind time.—Church Advocate.

THE LISBON EARTHQUAKE.

The following graphic account of the great earthquake at Lisbon, in 1775, is from Lippincott for July. We think that earthquake marked the opening of the sixth seal, mentioned in Rev. 6: 12. M. G.

The morning of Nov. 1st, 1755, dawned serene, but the heavens were hazy. Since midnight the thermometer had risen one degree, and stood at nine o'clock at fourteen above freezing, Reaumer. As it was the feast of All-saints, the churches were thronged from an early hour, and all their altars brilliantly illuminated with thousands of tapers, and decorated with garlands of various tinted muslin and thin silk. At a quarter of ten o'clock, the first shock was felt. It was so slight that many persons attributed it to the passage of heavy wagons in the street, and even to mere fancy. Three minutes afterward, a second shock occurred, so violent that it seemed as if the heavens and earth were passing away. This agitation lasted fully ten minutes, and ere it diminished, the greater portion of the city was in ruins. The dust raised obscured the sun; an Egyptian darkness prevailed, and to add to the universal horror, the fearful screams of the living and the groans of the dying rose through the air.

In twenty minutes all became calm again, and people began to look around them, and consider the best means of escape. Some were for going to the hills, but were soon discouraged from so doing by the rumors that those who had already gone thither were suffocating from the effects of the dense fog of dust which still rose from the falling buildings. Then they rushed toward the quays which line a part of the Tagus, but only to learn the horrible news that these had sunk into the earth, with all the people and edifices upon them.

Those who thought to put to sea were told to look at the river, and lo! in its centre they beheld a whirlpool which was sucking in all the vessels and boats in its vicinity, not a fragment of any of them being ever being seen again. The royal palace had been entirely swallowed up, and over its site is now the vast square of the Baco, or Black Horse, one of the largest public places in Europe. The great library of the Holy Ghost was in flames, and its priceless Moorish and Hebrew manuscripts were fast becoming ashes. The opera-house had fallen in, the Inquisition was no more, and the great church of San Domingo was a heap of stones, beneath which lay crushed to atoms the entire congregation. The Irish church of St. Paul was the death place of a thousand persons, and the palace of Bomposta, where Catherine of Braganza, widow of Charles II., lived and died, had fallen over from the heights on which it was built, and utterly destroyed the poor but populous part of the town which lay beneath it. In a word, where but an hour since was Lisbon was now nothing but desolation.

As to the people, who can describe their condition? At least seventy thousand persons had perished, and the majority of the survivors were cruelly wounded and in an agony of mind and body. Some went mad with fright, some lost forever the power of speech, sinners went about confessing their secret crimes, and fanatics, believing the last day had come, cried out to the horror-stricken multitude "to repent, for that Christ was coming to judge the quick and the dead."

As the day waxed on, the wretched Libbonese grew calmer, and it was universally declared that the safest places, now that the dust was diminishing, were the heights overlooking the city, and thither the majority fled. Here they found the Court assembled, for the Royal family was fortunately at Belem, where, strange to say, the earthquake was scarcely felt at all, and had hastened at once to the hills. The Cardinal Patriarch was here also, and so was Pombal; and these two men, with surprising presence of mind, by their admirable courage, were enabled before night to inspire some feeling of order in the excited throng. The King and Queen behaved nobly, and the young Duke of Lafoens deserves to be immortalized for his splendid conduct. He organized a band of noblemen who went about aiding the wounded, rescuing the children, and even burying the dead.

It was a strange and awful sight to see this multitude gather together on the summit of the hills which once overlooked their magnificent capital, and which now looked down upon a mere mass of smoldering ruins. As day declined and night came on, the Cardinal issued a proclamation, ordering all to kneel in prayer and entreat the mercy of God upon them, and then rose on the air the wailing tone of that saddest of psalms, the Miserere. When the shades of night had fully fallen, a frightful discovery was made; the city was in flames in a hundred places. The conflagration was greatly increased by a strong wind blowing in from the sea. There was now no hope of saving anything, and it was but too well known that thousands of human beings who had taken refuge in the cellars and crypts were being roasted alive.

But if the anxiety of the escaped was dreadful to witness, the scenes within the city itself were even more terrible. Robbers, escaped jail-birds, low sailors, and degraded negroes, formed bands, and went about amidst the ruins, pillaging the wounded of their trinkets, and even murdering those who ventured to oppose their ghastly deeds. The lewd inhabitants of the brothels broke from the rigid restraint in which they were confined by the law and joined the bandits. They plundered such of the wine-stores as were left intact, and maddened with drink and probably with terror, cast off their garments, and went dancing and whooping blasphemous songs through the desolate streets, if such they could now be called, while the lurid light from the innumerable fires cast a blood-colored glow on their naked and contorted forms. They got into the churches, robbed the sacred images, threw the holy vestments over their shoulders, and made the ruined walls re-echo the shouts of their beastly revelry. "It seemed," says Tray Bernando de Carmo, "as if hell had vomited forth its demons, and that the powers of darkness had indeed prevailed."

From the cellars of the houses rose the piercing cries of those who were perishing of their neglected wounds, or suffering from the effect of foul atmosphere. Here a mother wept over the bodies of her children; there a group of timid nuns stood around their Abbess and knew not which way to turn; now a fanatic rushed along howling dismal prophecies; now a long file of white-clad Cistercians passed by reciting mournful prayers; and then again fell upon the ear the horrid maniacal laughter of the gang of lewd women and brutal men at their dreadful revelry. An aged noble woman in full court garments was seen searching among the ruins of her palace for her jewels; and a famous Phryne of the day, Theresa Brandoo, suddenly converted, did such noble deeds of charity that her name deserves to be written in letters of gold.

For fifteen days was the city infested with robbers, until Carvalho, afterward the celebrated Minister Pombal, set an example of courage and energy. He descended into Lisbon, and remained days and nights together in his carriage or on horseback, directing affairs and assisting in clearing away the ruins; he planted soldiers all over the city, and whoever could not give a clear account of the property found in his possession was hung then and there, and three hundred and fifty-seven persons thus perished. Many months elapsed ere tranquillity was in a measure restored, and before the people began to think of rebuilding their homes. Indeed, it was at one time almost decided to remove the capital to Rio de Janeiro.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE THREE BIDDERS.

AN INCIDENT IN THE LIFE OF ROWLAND HILL.

Will you listen, young friends, for a moment,
While a story I unfold;
A marvellous tale of a wonderful sale
Of a noble lady of old,—
How hand and heart, at an auction mart,
And soul and body, she sold!

'Twas in the broad king's highway,
Near a century ago,
That a preacher stood—though of noble blood—
Telling the fallen and low
Of a Savior's love, and a home from above,
And a peace that they all might know.

All crowded around to listen;
And they wept at the wondrous love,
That could wash their sin, and receive them in
The mansions preparing above:
While slow through the crowd a lady proud
Her gilded chariot drove.

"Make room!" cried the haughty outrider,
"You are closing the king's highway;
My lady is late, and their Majesties wait:
Give way there, good people, I pray!"
The preacher heard, and his heart was stirred,
And he cried to the rider—"Nay!"

His eye like the lightning flashes;
His voice like a trumpet rings,—
"Your grand fete days, and your fashions and ways,
Are all but perishing things.
'Tis the king's highway, but I hold it to-day,
In the name of the King of kings!"

Then, bending his gaze on the lady,
And marking her soft eye fall,—
"And now in His name, a sale I proclaim,
And bids for this fair lady call.
Who will purchase the whole—her body and soul,
Coronet, jewels, and all?"

"I see already three bidders,—
The World steps up as the first.
'I will give her my treasures, and all the pleasures
For which my votaries thirst;
She shall dance through each day, more joyous and gay,
With a quiet grave at the worst.'

"But out spake the Devil, boldly:
'The kingdoms of earth are mine;
Fair lady, thy name, with an envied fame,
On their brightest tablets shall shine;
Only give me thy soul, and I give thee the whole,
Their glory and wealth to be thine.'

"And pray what hast thou to offer,
Thou Man of Sorrows, unknown?
And he gently said, 'My blood have I shed,
To purchase her for mine own.
To conquer the grave, and her soul to save,
I trod the wine press alone.

"'I will give her my cross of suffering,
My cup of sorrow to share;
But with endless love, in the home from above,
All shall be righted there:
She shall walk in white, in a robe of light,
And a radiant crown shall wear.'

"Thou hast heard the terms, fair lady,
That each hath offered for thee;
Which wilt thou choose, and which wilt thou lose,
This life, or the life to be?
The fable was mine, but the choice is yet thine;
Sweet lady! which of the three?"

Nearer the stand of the preacher
The gilded chariot stole;
And each head was bowed, as over the crowd
The thundering accents roll;
And every word, as the lady heard,
Burned in her very soul.

"Pardon, good people," she whispered,
As she rose from her cushioned seat;
Full well, they say, as the crowd made way,
You could hear her pulses beat;
And each head was bare, as the lady fair
Knelt at the preacher's feet.

She took from her hand the jewels,
The coronet from her brow;
"Lord Jesus," she said, as she bowed her head,
The highest bidder art thou;
Thou gav'st for my sake thy life, and I take Thy offer—and take it now.

"I know the world and her pleasures,
At best they but weary and cloy;
And the tempter is bold, but his honors and gold
Prove ever a fatal decoy;
I long for thy rest—thy bid is the best;
Lord, I accept it with joy!

"Give me thy cup of suffering,
Welcome, earth's sorrow and loss;
Let my portion be to win souls to thee,
Perish her glittering dross.
I gladly lay down her coveted crown,
Savior, to take thy cross."

"Amen!" said the holy preacher,
And the people wept aloud.
Years have rolled on—and they all have gone,
Around that altar who bowed.
Lady and throng have been swept along
On the wind, like a morning cloud.

But the Savior shall yet claim his purchase,
And around his radiant seat,
A mightier throng, in an endless song
The wondrous story repeat;
And a form more fair, while bending there,
Shall cast her crown at his feet.

So then in eternal glory
She'll rest from her cross and care;
Then do as she did, accept the same bid,
That you the same glory may share.
With an endless reward in the joy of your Lord,
O! will you not meet with her there?

PICKING BERRIES.

When I was a boy my father was a poor minister. We lived very plain, but that never troubled us. We always had enough wholesome food to eat, and my mother was one who always contrived to have a neat suit of clothes for each of her children. One day, when I was a little fellow, several little boys and girls came along on their way to pick huckleberries; they invited me to go with them, and when I saw their bright faces and little baskets I wanted to go. So I went into the house and asked my mother. I saw she favored me, but said I must ask my father.

"And where is father?"

"Up in the study, of course."

So up I bounded, hat in hand, and gently knocked at his door. He bade me come in.

"Well, Johnny, what is your wish?"

"I want, sir, to go with the children and pick berries!"

"Where are they going?"

"Only to Johnson's hill, sir."

"How many children are there?"

"Seven besides myself. Please let me go."

"Well, you may go. Be a good boy, and use no bad words."

Away I scampered, and just got to the bottom of the stairs when my father called me back. "Oh, dear, it's all over now. He is going to take it all back," I thought to myself. Trembling, I again stood in the doorway.

"Johnny," said my father, "I have a word of advice to give you. You will find the berries growing on the bushes, standing in clumps, all over the lot. The children will pick a few minutes at one place, and then go off to another, in hopes of finding better picking, and thus they will spend half the afternoon in roaming from one place to another. Now my advice to you is, that when you find pretty fair picking, stick to that spot and keep picking there. Your basket at night will show whether my advice is good or not."

Well, I followed my father's advice, and though the children would wander about and cry out, "Oh, Johnny, here is a world of them, and here you can fill your basket in less than no time," yet I stuck to my fair picking place. When we got through at night, to the astonishment of every one, and my own no less, it was found that I had nearly twice as many berries as any other one. They all wondered how it was, but I knew; and that was the lesson that made me a rich man. Whenever I have found "pretty fair picking," I have stuck to it.—Wayside.

A good cause makes a stout heart and a strong arm.

Be Kind in Little Things.—The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams, that are bright all the time. In the nursery, on the play-ground, and in the school-room, there is room all the time for little acts of kindness, that cost nothing, but are worth more than gold or silver. To give up something, where giving up will prevent unhappiness—to yield, when persisting will chafe and fret others—to go a little round rather than come against another—to take an ill word or a cross look, rather than return it; these are the ways in which clouds and storms are kept off, and pleasant, smiling sunshine secured even in the humble home, among very poor people, as in families in higher stations. Much that we term the miseries of life would be avoided by adopting this rule of conduct.—The Household.

WASTE OF LIFE.

It is plain that God designed to sustain man by food, air, water, light, heat, exercise, the protection of clothes and of houses, and by refreshing sleep. Now, as these are all necessities of his nature, he should so use them as to secure the end designed by the Creator in their use. It is the strange perversity of man's evil nature that enables him to turn all God's blessings into curses, or to use the good things which God has given him in such a manner as to make them productive of serious evil. Men should govern their appetites as to the kinds of food, the quantity eaten, the times of eating, etc. If these things alone were regarded, there would be no dyspepsia and very little headache in the world. From the first sin in Eden till the present time, men have been constantly engaged in destroying themselves by what they put into their mouths. They cannot, or rather they will not, be persuaded that there is any importance attached to the government of their appetites. And so they act with reference to all the things which God has made necessary to human life.

If people could realize the value of pure air, and of plentiful sunlight, and of sufficient and suitable exercise, or of keeping within the bounds of moderation where one's employment is severe manual labor, and of wearing such clothing as shall furnish necessary protection to the person, especially to the feet and limbs, and that shall not hinder the free circulation of the blood, and of securing sufficient and refreshing sleep, and would be careful in all these things, they might avoid a very large part of the physical troubles they now suffer, and might save a large measure of vital force which they now prodigally waste.

Perhaps no one item is worthier of attention than that concerning the value of good sleep. We should never lie down to sleep in an irritated, fretful, peevish, or impatient state of mind. Sleep, under such conditions, is not worth half what it was designed of God to be worth to us. It is our duty when we give ourselves up to sleep to do it with serenity, and peacefulness, and trust. This is the way to have sleep that will renew our strength, as God designed that it should be renewed each night for the labor and toil of the day to come.

But how shall we secure this condition for our sleep? Evidently there is but one way for this. We must live each day in this frame of mind from morning till night. This is what Paul means by having the peace of God rule in our hearts. In truth, it is worth as much to our health through the day as it is during the night. It does not follow that we are never to feel pain because of things that go wrong, nor never to take burdens caused by the wrong courses of others, which it may be our work to correct and put away; but all this may be done without fretfulness and peevishness on our part. If we fall into this, we wound our own souls, and we do not thereby benefit others, or in any way contribute toward the removal of the evil.

It is folly to fret over things that we cannot help. No one will deny this. It is also folly to fret over things we can help; for a wiser course would be to attend to the correction of them. And these two classes of things are all that there is for us to fret over. The burdens of life are heavy enough without our adding to them by fretting. No small share of the friction which deranges the vital machine comes directly from fretfulness.

It is our duty, as it is our privilege, to preserve our vital forces. We can do this by regarding the laws of our being. We need not waste our life forces. If we will carefully preserve what we now possess, there are few of us who may not even now secure to ourselves a good measure of health. Let us be true to ourselves, and we shall find that God will co-operate with us by the restorative power he has put within us.—Health Reformer.

Ignorance a Cause of Disease.—The more thoroughly the causes of disease are understood, the more and more are they found traceable to a violation of hygienic laws. If the ravages of cholera, of yellow fever and typhoid may be controlled in a great measure by the observance of such laws, why may not scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough—those scourges of infant life—be prevented, or very much limited? The prevailing sentiment that all children must necessarily have these diseases once, finds no support whatever in the nature of physiology or in the principles of hygiene. The fact is already well established that the spread and violence of scarlet fever, by isolation, cleanliness and ventilation, are very much modified, and, in some instances, entirely prevented.

When the community realizes fully that the means of preserving health, especially in early life, are placed, in a great measure, in its own hands, a far higher estimate will be placed upon the value of human life, and the responsibility for its preservation will be found to depend in a great measure upon human efforts.—Dr. Nathan Allen.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"YE ARE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD."

Christian, tell me, is thy light
  Burning with a steady ray?
Shining 'mid this world's dark night,
  Guiding travelers on their way?
Is it beaming out afar,
Like the brilliant evening star?

On life's dangerous, stormy deep,
  Many souls imperilled glide;
Lo! their eyes on thee they keep,
  Trusting in thy light to guide.
May they safely trust in thee,
On this fearful, rock-bound sea?

Dost thou trim thy lamp each day?
  Is it always bright and clear?
Can the loved ones round thee say,
  By thy light we'll safely steer
To the blest port from above,
To the heaven of peace and love?

Christian, keep a steady light,
  Fed by the pure oil of grace;
Shedding beams so clear and bright,
  All may see its glorious rays,
Then the world our Christ shall own,
And to him the nations turn.

Oh! if all our lamps would burn
  With a brighter, steadier light,
Soon would the millennial morn
  Burst in glory on our sight;
Girdled with its golden rays,
Earth would all be filled with praise.

THE SPEEDY PERSONAL RETURN OF CHRIST.

I think the angels are glad to hear what we are talking about, especially those two who, eighteen hundred years ago, stood by the group, gazing steadfastly up into heaven, and said, "Ye men of Galilee, . . . this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." They know that the church is not always to stand wistfully gazing after Christ. Oh no! our separation is not to last forever. We must go on calmly, patiently waiting awhile, and soon, very soon, will come the glad reunion. They saw him go up, and did they sorrow? No! they worshiped him; that was the first thing; and then they returned to Jerusalem with great joy, and were continually praising and blessing God. They were not weeping and lamenting their disconsolate condition, but they set about working zealously for their Lord, waiting, watching, hoping for his promised return.

Oh, brethren! great joy must fill our hearts as it filled theirs, at the thought that we shall yet see him as he is. We shall be happy to the fullest extent of our capacity for happiness; we shall see not him alone, but all that we have loved in him and for his sake, and after all the restraints and hindrances we have known here to the enjoyment of our adoption, we shall enter into the full enjoyment of the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

But there is gravity as well as joy in the thought of the second coming of Christ. The second Psalm presents the serious side. Christ will come as a Master to take account of his servants. He will determine as to the merits of the service of each, not they themselves, nor their fellow servants. From his determination there will be no appeal: "Well done, good and faithful," or, "thou wicked and slothful servant," will express the unalterable and final decision.

Wicked and slothful! Why? What had that servant done? Nothing. Nothing? Yes! that is wickedness on the part of a servant of Christ, which would not be wickedness in another. To please self when we have such a Master is wickedness.

The blessed hope of his second coming must not be kept out of sight. It must not be shelved. Every day we must stand ready, and though I cannot tell you when the Master will come, I can inquire, Are you prepared for the coming? How are you getting on in your service? How are you spending the time of his absence? Are you smiting any of your fellow servants, or speaking evil of them? Criticising any of them, judging and finding fault, because they are busy in another room, and doing a different work to yours? Oh, brethren! you have no time for that! Judge not; judge yourselves only. To his own Master you brother stands or falls. Let us look well to our own service, that we be not exposed to the judgment of those who, though they knew their Lord's will, yet did it not.

The church stands like Israel of old, a witness alike of the past and of the future. Israel had a double testimony. They bore witness to the deliverance from Egypt, and the triumph of the Red Sea. They bore witness also to Messiah the Prince, the Shiloh that was to come, the expected Son of David. Their past history and their future prospects alike constituted them a separate people. They had memories which none beside could share—hopes to which others were strangers. The church of Christ has the same. She witnesses to his first coming, and the redemption that it wrought; she witnesses also to his second coming to judge the world and reign in righteousness.

The church ought to return to a more vigorous and earnest testimony to this latter truth—to the second coming of her Lord. It formed an integral part of her witness, as of her hope, in the beginning; but it has been too much dropped from her witness in after ages; and yet no truth so checks the pride and haughtiness of men. When Christ comes to judge, he will, as we have heard, overturn! overturn! overturn! He will bring down everything that is high and lifted up; he will humble the lofty, and exalt them of low degree. The world talks of progress, and fancies it is by degrees approaching perfection. The church too often falls into a similar strain; but no! Christ will come and judge the oppressor, and deliver the poor and needy, and bring in everlasting righteousness.

I am not sure, but I question if we give the world a full gospel, if we leave out this last great feature of our testimony. The first coming of Christ will do for salvation; but salvation after all imperfect until the second coming. We must tell the nations of the world that we are saved by hope; he will come again and save us, that is our testimony—save us from persecution, save us from an evil world, save us from ourselves, deliver us from death; he will come the second time without sin unto salvation.

Our gospel is not that we shall go to heaven when we die; it is not come death, or come judgment, or come millennium, or come the heavenly Jerusalem. It is come Jesus! Jesus is coming—Jesus, who is worth a thousand millenniums! "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go."

Now, I question if this is sufficiently impressed on the church in our own land, and I gravely question if it is presented as it ought to be in missionary spheres, where the very doctrine is new. And yet when the Thessalonian idolaters turned to God from idols, it was not only to serve him, but to wait for his Son from heaven. How were those early christians so invigorated and encouraged? How were they nerved to suffer and to do? How? By the hope of the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ! What was the Roman Emperor to men who were looking out for the return of King Jesus? Why should we not put the same hope before converts from heathenism now? Oh, that we may be faithful witnesses, not to the sufferings of Christ alone, but to the glories that are to follow. Much has been accomplished by the testimony "Christ died for our sins," but to limit our preaching to this is not to follow the apostolic example; we must add, "he rose," and we must not omit, he "cometh with ten thousand of his saints," to be glorified and admired in them; he cometh to sit on the throne of his father David, and as the greater than Solomon to reign before his ancients gloriously.—Signs of Our Times.

"ABIDE IN THE SHIP."

J. W. THOMAS.

"Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." ACTS 27: 31.

Paul was an old sailor. Not from occupation, but from frequency of travel. He knew what it was to be in "perils on the deep," and no doubt he could have taken a vessel across the Mediterranean quite as safely as any experienced sea-captain. He was now making a trip to Rome; and this voyage, though one of the most perilous, was yet the most successful voyage he ever made. The ship was lost, but he had a blessed revival, and saved all on board, two hundred and seventy-five souls. Paul was shipped as a prisoner, but he was promoted to captain, for he had the whole crew looking to him for salvation.

It takes God to work. He can send out a storm on the sea, and bring wicked sailors and soldiers to bow at his feet in answer to the prayers of a righteous prisoner. Paul gave the centurion and managers of the ship good advice, saying, "Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much damage; not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives. Nevertheless, the centurion believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul. And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter . . . And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete. But not long after there arose against it a tempestuous wind, called Euroclydon. And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive. And running under a certain island, which is called Clauda, we had much work to come by the boat; which, when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and, fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, strake sail, and so were driven. And we, being exceedingly tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship . . . And when neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away." Man's extremity is God's opportunity. Paul was calm in the midst of it all. After long abstinence, he stood forth in the midst of them and said, "Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss. And now I exhort you to be of good cheer; for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cæsar; and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee. Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God that it shall be even as it was told me."

Blessed faith! What a strong refuge they have who trust in "the living God." Paul was now master of the whole company. God had exalted him in their midst, and they were now to obey his orders. "When the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria, about midnight, the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country. And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms; and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms. Then fearing lest we should have fallen upon rocks, they cast four anchors out upon the stern, and wished for the day. And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down the boat into the sea, Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved."

Reader, are you in the gospel Ship? Have you fled to Christ for salvation? Are you sailing toward the heavenly port? Abide in the ship. Do not backslide. Stay on board. The land heaves in view. The morning dawns. Wait. The Captain will bring you safe to land.

"Christ is my pilot wise,
  My compass is his word;
My soul each storm defies,
  Whilst I have such a Lord."

BAPTISM AND RANTISM.

L. C. McKINSTRY.

The two words thus associated together are alike in the source from whence they are derived, and in their construction, but very unlike in their meaning. We propose to consider them, both as to construction and meaning, for the purpose of eliciting truth, and to learn thereby their use and importance to the church of our Lord Jesus Christ. They are words of the class known as derivatives, being Anglicized Greek words, or words constructed into the English language, which are, after all, only Greek words slightly changed from their original orthography. One of them, "baptism," is quite a familiar word, and is known as the name of a religious rite. It is found in the dictionaries as a genuine English word. Theological works contain it, and every one acquainted with its history knows that it has been the subject of much dispute and discussion as to its meaning. It frequently occurs in the New Testament, and is therefore a word of great importance. The other word is not so well known. It has the sad misfortune not to be known at all. It is not in the Bible, nor the dictionaries, nor is its meaning generally discussed or disputed about. We may even be charged with having "coined" it, which, however, is not the case. Still we have imposed upon us the duty of introducing it to our friends, and endeavoring to make them acquainted with it, and of establishing its meaning, and proving its right to a place as a genuine English word, and worthy of its place as the name of an interesting and significant thing. It is certainly a necessity to the language, as events will prove; but it has been tabooed and ignored, and so neglected, that it has never pushed its way out of its Greek hiding-place, nor been brought out; and yet it should be known and recognized, as it has claims and rights which it is culpable to disregard and reject. It should have been in full and familiar use long ago, and not have been so unjustly treated. It has been so treated by calling "Baptism" to the task of doing double duty, and carrying its own meaning and the different meaning of "rantism" beside.

We propose, first of all, to consider the formation of the two words, and their equal claim to a place in the English language, and their meaning, and so divest "baptism" of all its forced meanings, and let it stand by itself in its own true character, so bringing "rantism" to the front out of its obscurity.

We notice first, that both words are derivatives, made from the original Greek, each in the same. They are really but Anglicized Greek words. There are two classes of words in the English language; those which are original to it, and those which are only naturalized foreigners. The pure English words are the Anglo-Saxon; the derivatives are made from other languages, sometimes by slight changes, and sometimes by no change at all. The changes usually consist in dropping the final letter, or letters, which characterize them as words of their native language, and giving them an additional letter, or letters; or leaving them as they are; any way answering the purpose if the word conforms to the English rules of spelling. These derivative words have no English birthright, and derive their meaning, as they do their construction, from the language from which they come. We notice a few of these words for the purpose of coming intelligently to the consideration of the method by which these two words become members of the English family, and their place and meaning there.

Of the words which are merely transferred words, we have such words as "sack," a Hebrew word; and "Adam," also Hebrew; "sack" meaning a bag, and Adam red earth, and used as the name of a man, for which, in the Old Testament translation, "man" is often substituted. From the Greek we have words and parts of words, and some from the Latin; while most of the words which, in the constant inflow, have more recently come into the language, are of French and German origin. The two words we are considering are a specimen of the Greek words, and there are many others. For example, we have the words "misanthrope" and "misanthropic," which are made from the Greek in this way: first, the Greek word is anthropos—"man"; dropping the Greek termination, we have anthrop; but that terminates too abruptly; so, for smoothness, we add an "e," and have anthrope, which, did we require it, might be used instead of the word "man"; but we yet have the good sense to prefer words native to the language, when we have them; and, as "man" is a strong Anglo-Saxon word, we choose it in preference to the Greek word. But we have a use for the Greek word, after all; so we take the Anglo-Saxon prefix Mis, which means "error," or "misapprehension," and have the word misanthrope, an amalgamated word, meaning a wrong apprehension or feeling toward man. Webster defines it strongly as meaning "a man-hater." Then we suffix the syllable "ic," meaning "to pertain to," and we have "misanthropic," which, as Webster defines it, means "a hatred of mankind."

From the Latin we have many, but slightly changed ones. Some of our nouns are borrowed from the Latin supine, or substantival nominative of the noun in the nominative, denoting existence, which is the modification of the Latin infinitive form of the verb; and some of our verbs are made from that infinitive; so that the English nouns and verbs of this class correspond with the Latin nouns and verbs. The rule for the change of the nouns is simply this: change those Latin nouns whose termination is tum, so the termination will be "tion"; and those that terminate with sum, to "sion." In this way we have "conver*tion*," from convertum, and "immersion," from immersum,—convertum being from the verb convertere, from which we have the verb "convert," which is made, as will be seen, by simply dropping the Latin verbial termination ere. Immersum is from emergere, by changing the "e" of the verb into "i." Without that change, we have the English verb "emerge," by dropping the final letters of the Latin verb—re. With it we have immerge, and immerse, "to dip into, or go into by plunging"; and emerge, "to come out of"; both words coming alike from the Latin emergere,—a striking fact, which we shall do well to remember when we come to notice the words we are considering more particularly.

We have thus brought illustrations of the formation of words before our readers, that they may more readily see the principle on which words of other languages become English words; and to make it more clear, as we proceed, that the words in question are as legitimately English words as any other; that baptism is as really an English word as "immersion"; and we shall find "rantism," whatever it may mean, has the same rights and privileges.

It is interesting in this connection, also, to notice that the English language is not strictly an original one; a large part of its words not being original or indigenous to it; so that those who speak it are as often speaking words of a foreign language, as they are those of the Anglo-Saxon. It is not, therefore, a pure language, but is mixed and mingled like the waters of a river, which flow into it from its many confluent streams; and it has one especial excellence,—it has the grand, glorious, strong, old Saxon original, which gives it strength and stability. The multitude of words from the other languages, which are constantly flowing into it, are like the brooks which augment the river, adding to the strength and force of the language, making it brilliant, graceful and flowing, so that it combines majesty and strength, with gentleness, grace and pathos. It is, therefore, a kaleidoscopic language, whose methods of expression may be varied in a thousand beautiful ways, each one peculiarly attractive, and surprisingly grand; or sweet, tender and winning, as the love of a child; thus allowing every writer and speaker a realm of lingual expression all his own, in which he may revel with delight, as in a garden fresh and fragrant; walking as among stately trees and beautiful flowers, and beside flowing, sparkling, and limpid streams, to regale himself at pleasure.

ATONEMENT.

There are three things bearing directly on this great truth, which I know with the most satisfactory assurance. The first is that I am a sinner and need pardon. The second is that my nature is polluted and needs cleansing. The third is the precious fact, that through faith in Christ, I have, and do obtain pardon and purity.

The first and second I know by direct consciousness—or conscious experience. Of the third, I have no less satisfactory and certain assurance, being promised in the revealed truth of God, witnessed to by the Holy Spirit, and revealed by conscious experience.

Very likely I know little about the nature of the atonement, or the manner in which the death of Christ lays an adequate foundation for justification and sanctification.

As a foundation of faith, however, I ask no other consideration, in connection with a consciousness of my necessities, than the plainly revealed fact that God can be just, and justify the believer in Jesus, and, "that the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin."

Those who came to Christ for healing, did not need, as a condition of believing in him, to understand the manner in which he would effect their cure. That, they probably never knew. They only needed to know that he was able and willing to do this thing for them. This they believed, and the work was wrought.

I have found this Scriptural and old Wesleyan doctrine both safe and successful, and have no inclination to run after modern speculation on this subject. If adhered to, we will be saved from much unnecessary hair-splitting and division among ourselves.—Rev. J. A. Wood.

— Practice flows from principle; for as a man thinks, so will he act.

SEEKING.

Mortal life is given to man, not that he may rest satisfied with what it brings to him, but that he may by its means seek for those things that are connected with eternal life. The great good of man's existence is not here, but hereafter. Temporal blessings produce but a surface tranquility which is easily marred by a reverse of temporal fortune.

In consequence of this we are urged in the Bible to seek for things that belong to heavenly surroundings rather than temporal; to lay up our treasure above that our hearts may also be there; to "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and the promise is that all needed temporal blessings shall be bestowed upon us. We are not taught to ignore the possession of temporal things entirely, but to regard them as of such minor importance as to allow them to have no influence over our conduct to cause us to swerve from the right course.

This lesson of seeking has been taught in various ways to the people of God at all times. Abel was taught to seek a redeemer, and illustrated the lesson by the lamb sacrifice on the altar.

Abraham was taught to seek a city whose builder and maker is God, and he illustrated his lesson by going out into a land he had never seen, and sojourning there as a stranger.

Moses was taught to seek one who was to be a leader to Israel, and he illustrated his lesson by leading Israel's host through the wilderness forty years entirely dependent on Jehovah for food and protection, "esteeming the reproach of Christ greater treasures than the riches of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward."

Jesus taught his disciples to seek the kingdom of God, and told them of the "glory of the Father" that should be revealed when the "Son of man" should "sit on the throne of his glory." He taught them of the new earth inheritance; of the reward at the resurrection; of the eternal life to be given when he would "raise them up at the last day." He told them of the temporal estrangements from home and friends that they should endure in this mortal life; of the temporal vicissitudes, losses, and crosses that should be their lot here, with the eternal life in the world to come. And he illustrated his lesson by his course of suffering; "for the joy that was set before him he endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

The apostles were taught to seek those things which are above; to look for a new heavens and a new earth, and they illustrated their lesson by coming out from the world, and separating themselves from worldly pride and ambition, and becoming the off-scouring of all things in the estimation of men.

The things to be sought for are not here, but are laid up in store for those who are faithful to the word of the Lord, and that faithfulness is caused in the present age by an indwelling of the Spirit of God, that gives strength to the soul as it stretches forward to grasp the heavenly promises. But the experience of seeking is in the present life, and that experience is always a legitimate result of the power of the affections, and the extent to which they reach.

It is frequently the case that the christian's affections are perverted from the true source of blessing, and rest upon things that are only given as passing encouragements to press on to the end. For instance: men are frequently taught the great thing to be sought for should be a condition of spiritual feeling, such as shall give them great ecstacy, and strong emotion, and shall lift them up above every feeling of depression, and keep them at all times in a shouting mood. They seek a certain sort of present experience for themselves; will not be satisfied with anything else; and when they can possess the feeling they want, will rest down fully satisfied to proceed no further. You talk to such in their ecstatic condition about the glories of the future; they don't care to hear it, they have all the glory they want now. You speak to them of the resurrection and the kingdom, and they care not for them; they have a kingdom in them, and they are above the thought of a spiritual flesh and bones life. Instead of the Holy Spirit in them being a foretaste of good things to come, it is the substance of all they expect, and as long as they can float in the sea of ecstacy their utmost wish is satisfied. Their only fear is that they shall lose this ecstacy, and then they count their Christianity as all gone, and they mourn the loss of their experience.

Such are like a mariner who sails out upon a sea, not that he may reach any particular port, but that he may float his vessel in deep water, and keep off from sand bars, and out of shallow places, and enjoy himself. Instead of watching the course of the ship by chart and compass, he is ever looking down to see how deep the water is in which his vessel rather floats than sails. He is always heaving the lead, and sounding the depth, and fearing lest he shall run aground. As long as he is afloat he is all right, no matter where port is.

Such a mariner is as likely to drift back to his original moorings as anywhere else. He is very liable to sail into narrow channels and to become cramped and stranded, and to go to wreck amid the tempests and gales that arise in his course.

And so is the christian who is taught to seek the Lord, but only seeks a feeling of joy; who is taught to seek the kingdom of God, but who confines his efforts to a present experience, and thinks more of ecstacy than he does of immortality, and who regards the good feelings of the present life as his highest ambition. The way to enjoy continued peace of soul, and rest in spiritual things, is to seek the Lord, and by perfect confidence to abide in him, and then, whatever experience we may have, we know for ourselves that "he doeth all things well."—A. C. Times.

GLORY vs. GLORY.

L. C. KERR.

Man is made subject, by submission, to two kinds of glory—natural, and spiritual. While he is in the flesh, or in a sensual state, he is subject to the glory of the natural and carnal mind; but when the man is spiritual, his glory is likewise spiritual. And these two are in direct opposition one to the other. "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be"; and "they that are in the flesh [that live after the flesh] cannot please God" (Rom. 8: 7, 8); so that to glory in the flesh is to glory against the spirit, and vice versa; from which we may infer that whatever we glory in, whether it be our talent, our learning, our ability to perform our task, our strength, either physical or intellectual, our position in life, our health or wealth, our honor or esteem, or anything that we possess, or that of any one else, is all a glory and pride in and of itself, and is against the glory of God. For "thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might; let not the rich man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord." Jer. 9: 23, 24.

Thus we see what we may, and what we may not glory in, in order to have the right glory; and Paul, being possessed of this same kind of glory, said, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." Gal. 6: 14. And again, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are, that no flesh should glory in his presence; but of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption; that, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." I Cor. 1: 26–31.

We understand from this, that is is utterly impossible for a man to glory in any thing that he may possess, and be justified in the eyes of the Lord, which would give veracity to the saying, "For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God." And as Christ pleased not himself in any thing, as pertaining to the flesh, but did everything to the glory and honor of God his Father, shall frail humanity be any the more justified in gratifying self, to glory in the flesh? As the flesh warreth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, so is the glory of man when he glories in temporal things supremely. He is boasting against God, and all such rejoicing is evil. Some glory in their wisdom and eloquence, and endeavor to make it prominent, even teachers of the word, that they may have glory of men; but in doing so they not only glory against Christ, but make the word unfruitful; for says the apostle, "If I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me. . . . In the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue." And, "except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air." 1 Cor. 14: 9, 11, 19.

So that, where such glorying is man's wisdom is prominent. Magniloquence does not edify or instruct the ignorant in the congregation. It is poor feed for the flock of Christ. Men retire home many times very little benefited by such sermons. It matters not how much truth was contained in it; if the needy could not understand it, it is fruitless with them, and savors of vain glory. For "whatsoever is not of faith is sin"; and what is not done to and for the glory of God is done against it. And we, brethren, should take heed that we glory in nothing save the cross of Christ. I can glory in nothing else. I feel myself as but filthy rags, poor and naked, and am willing to be such if I can only be counted worthy to glory in the matchless wisdom and goodness of God. What is man that he should glory in himself? is he not but flesh that perisheth and comes to nought, and all that he may boast of? "Therefore let no man glory in men." I Cor. 3: 21. Martin Luther said if he gloried in the sun, it would set; if he gloried in the earth, it would pass away; if he gloried in himself, he would die; but if he gloried in the Lord, his glory would abide forever; and this is the kind of glory that all men should covet, if they love eternal enjoyments. When we can feel that we are not our own, but are the Lord's, and bought with a price, we shall have little to boast of in ourselves.

The whole sum of the matter, then, is this: that we must not have our own will in any thing, but deny ourselves, break loose from everything that will have a tendency to promote self, and substitute Christ for all. We must deny ourselves, take up our cross, and go after Jesus. To deny myself, then, is not to deny my existence, or name, but to deny myself of every thing that is in any way detrimental to the cause of Christ, and cherish the workings of the Spirit; and then, whether I preach, or write, or work, or eat, or drink, or whatsoever I do, do all to the glory of God (1 Cor. 10: 31), and none other. Amen.

LIFE.

Our life is a test. If you bring a man into some important position, and there is a crisis where his behavior will either make or break you, you say: "Now I will have a chance to find out what he is." Well, every man is on his trial trip. Men, angels and devils are finding out what is in you, what you are worth, and what your weaknesses are. No man liveth to himself. Every word you speak, every action you perform, has a thousand echoes. Earth and heaven are gazing upon your behavior, and you are undergoing the trial. . . .

Our life is a conflict. If you have never tried to control your passions, tried to rouse yourselves up to a better manhood or womanhood, you cannot know what I mean. But if you have attempted to live a holy life, and to be better and to do better, then you sympathize with the apostle Paul when he represented our life on earth as a war with the devil. In addition to the struggle you have had a thousand outside battles. Sometimes it has been against poverty, against physical distress, against bad social position, against an unhappy family name. In one case it has been one thing, and in another case it has been another thing; and with many of you up to this point, it has been a hand to hand fight; and so it will be even unto the grave. Life is a conflict; so your own spirit affirms it. . . .

Our life is a preparation. If we are going on a long journey, we want some time to get ready. We must have extra apparel. We want our guide-book. Our comfort on the journey will depend very much upon what we start with. God has started us on a journey, and once started we can never come back. Are we getting ready? Are we armed? That question you hear to-day; but if I should utter it in an hour from now, perhaps you might not hear it. Life is a preparation. If you have any weapons to to sharpen, you had better sharpen them now. If you have any lamps to light, you had better light them now. When death once shuts the door of the sepulchre, the angel of repentance never opens it. "As the tree falleth, so it must lie." As far as I can tell your case, your great need is to get rid of your sins. I know only one way to do it. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sins; and though you may this morning count yourself the worst sinner, you may, by the grace of God, become the best saint. Where sin abounded, grace shall much more exceedingly abound."

Our life is a great uncertainty. We can make no calculation about the future. The world is full of temptation and of peril. We resolve on one thing, we do another. Our associations change. Our plans alter. Our friends change. We change. And life is such a complete uncertainty that I would not want to live one hour without the grace of God, and I very certainly would not want to die without it.—Extract from a discourse by Rev. Dr. Talmage.

PERFECTION.

This is relative. One may be perfect and imperfect at the same moment. A perfect bud is an imperfect flower; a perfect flower is not perfect fruit. A perfect primary pupil to-day must press on to the standard of juniors, and then to seniors, or meet censure. Thus it is in christian experience. The convert is perfect and imperfect, and as he grows in grace he cannot be otherwise. The perfection of yesterday is imperfection to-day; the standard rises with our years, and if we fail to rise we sin. We may all be perfect, and yet press on to perfection and never reach it.

The more perfect we are the more rapidly we grow. Perfect buds grow quickly to perfect flowers; perfect babes grow to perfect youth, and then to men; perfect christians grow like calves in the stall, like trees by living waters. This perfection becomes more perfect; from grade to grade we rise, more and more like Christ we become; richer and still richer our graces grow; step by step we mount Jacob's ladder, which reaches the skies; perfect all the way, and climbing always to a higher point. Through grace this may be the experience of all.—Baptist Union.

PURIFYING OUR HEARTS.

"Let us suppose that here is a spring of water which is poisoned in its very source, and which can of course therefore send forth none but poisoned waters. But a remedy is found which counteracts the poison, and makes the waters pure and sweet. That remedy is applied in the very source of the spring itself, and the waters flow out, therefore, pure and sweet. But they do so only so long as it is applied. The moment the remedy is stayed, that very moment the poisonous waters flow out as foul as ever.

"Now this is what the blood of Christ does for us,—it reaches the very spring itself, 'purifying our hearts by faith,' cleansing us 'from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit,' and enabling us by faith to realize that wondrous statement that 'every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.' We purify ourselves, not by effort, but by faith; not by works, but by the precious blood of Christ. This clean and humble condition, however, is ours only while the blood is applied by faith; for the very moment faith ceases to apply it, corruption ensues, and the same old bitter waters flow out."—Guide to Holiness.

— The wise man changes his mind; the ignorant man will not. The former will acknowledge his error and correct it, but the pertinacity with which the latter adheres to his opinions, always bears a just proportion to his ignorance.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 9, 1874.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the "CRISIS," issued from this time forward, are at the rate of $2.00 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ THOSE who send articles for the "CRISIS," should direct them to the "EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS," Boston, Mass.

PLEASE READ, REMEMBER, AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

The brethren, sisters, friends—one and all—whoever may write to this office, sending articles for insertion in the Crisis, or subscriptions for the same, notices, appointments, reports, or orders for papers, books, tracts, or anything of the kind, will confer a favor and do the right way by directing their letters in either one of the following ways:—

"Editors of World's Crisis, Boston, Mass."

"World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.," or

Geo. T. Adams, Agent, Boston, Mass.

Those who send articles for the Young Pilgrim should address—

NOTICE.

☞ To those who have sent us money to renew their subscription on the paper, and do not see the figures changed, we would say, Have patience with us, and we will do as fast as we can. On account of the campmeetings, a large amount of work has accumulated in the Office, but we hope in the course of two weeks to have all straight.

THE PROMISED LAND.

Putting the glass of historic remembrance to the eye and sweeping it over the long line of earth-scenes, in the groaning, changing past—viewing the strange variety of light and dark shades of human experiences, the gaining and losing, the rising and falling, the building and destroying, the triumphs and defeats, the liberty and oppression, the glory and infamy, the enjoyment of heaven's favor and suffering of its judgments, the joys of living and the woes of dying—the tender sympathies of humanity plaintively ask for rest for our race, and peace for our world.

In the distant past, upon the summit of a far-off mountain, may be seen a man of noble form and devout appearance, performing strange acts of sacred devotion. With an unyielding purpose, he places the stones of an altar, arranging the fuel for a burnt offering. Then laying his hands upon his son, whose form was so beautiful to his eye, and whose voice was so sweet to his ear, he bound him as a victim upon the altar, and in obedience to God's command, grasped the knife and raised his hand to deal the fatal blow: God, seeing his faith and obedience were perfect, bade him stay his hand; and he, in the same quiet submission, let it fall, returning the knife to its place.

Abraham, by his fidelity to God and his uncompromising submission to the divine will, became his special friend, and received the promise that he should be the father of a great nation, which should enjoy the protecting care of heaven. He was instructed that four generations of his posterity should sojourn in Egypt, and they should suffer cruel bondage, but that this should end in perfect deliverance. God also gave him assurance that his people should possess, as a resting place from their bondage and wanderings, the land of Canaan, one of the most delightful and fertile countries in the world.

All this might seem unmeaning to the philosopher's eye, and the communications unimportant to the statesman's ear, but in heaven they were regarded as wonderfully important, involving the future interests of that people, and of Egypt and Canaan, whose histories shadow forth the eternal triumphs of the redeemed, and the everlasting overthrow of the wicked, when the "holy nation" shall take the heavenly Canaan, and enjoy its riches, fruits, and glory forever.

Looking far back in the misty past, we see Abraham's children, exactly in harmony with these foreshadowings, multiplying and becoming, by divine interposition, renowned in the earth, and, by the strange guidance of an unseen hand, cultivating the verdant plains of the overflowing Nile. God first exalted them to the dizzy height of worldly riches and political power; but, seeing their danger of becoming satisfied with their home in the land of strangers, he, in mercy to them, cast them down into the pit of poverty and grievous bondage.

When the numbered days of their servitude had nearly passed, God raised upon the stage a deliverer, whom the Egyptians were taxed to educate and rear to refined manhood, that he might be prepared to take from them their slaves and vast treasures, and, according to the divine purpose, lead the family of Abraham to enjoy the coveted inheritance.

The time came for their emancipation; though all the circumstances bade defiance to their exode. They were penniless and without organization or leaders. They had neither military skill nor arms. A threatening sea was before them, and a hostile country through which they must pass, to conquer a land occupied by numerous nations, strongly fortified in walled cities, and defended by giants armed with the most destructive implements of warfare.

But the appointed time had come for their deliverance. Jehovah made bare his arm. Notable miracles were wrought to encourage his people, and sore judgments sent to dishearten the Egyptians, until they were driven to consent to their departure.

God gave them a heavenly lantern to direct and illumine their night marches, and a guiding cloud to lead them by day. He excavated a pathway through the disturbed sea, and led the fleeing fugitives safely through the piled-up waters. But when they first pressed the soil of the Eastern shore, and the piercing war-whoop of the pursuing Egyptians was hushed in the silence of death by the returning waters which engulfed them in an inglorious grave, the typical song of triumph sounded its joyful melody over the surging main, rolling its sweet notes far back into the solitary wilderness.

Then the marshaled tribes, under the leadership of their divinely appointed captain, commenced their march to the goodly land the Lord had promised them. But the commissary department was entirely deficient. No heavily-laden wagons, transporting meat and bread, were in the train. Want and starvation began to defy their advancement. But the purpose of Omnipotence could not be defeated. Myriads of quails were directed to the tented fields of the wearied host, thus supplying them with meat. Bread was prepared in the heavens, and transported to the hungry thousands, while never-failing water was furnished them through an aqueduct laid in the rock.

These were convincing arguments that the God of their fathers was faithful to them, performing all his promises.

But the human heart, always demanding constantly repeated evidences of unseen things, caused them still to doubt and complain, while God was continually manifesting wonders in the heavens, and miracles upon the earth—protection in faithfulness, and destruction in rebellion—the effulgence of heaven paling the sun at noonday, and the darkness of midnight shutting out its clearest rays—the awful presence of Deity on Sinai, darkly veiled in the mantle of night, shaking the earth like a quivering leaf, uttering his voice like the roar of a thousand thunders, and flashing his light as if burning worlds were coming in collision! Notwithstanding all these demonstrative proofs of the truthfulness of God's revelation relating to the goodly land promised, and the wonderful realities in the far-off future which these things prefigured, unbelief still darkened their minds. They doubted that there was such a land, and that they were able to go up and possess it.

God, willing to give them the utmost proof of all he had said, instructed them to select a man from each tribe, and send them out to search for the land; and when it was found, to ascertain its condition, productions, and advantages, and the prospect of their being able to go up and possess it. The men were selected and sent, and God defended them in their march to the promised land.

When their feet tracked the mountain's summit, and their eager eyes fell upon the looked-for land stretching far off into the hazy distance, with its majestic hills and verdant vales, its waving palms, sturdy oaks, and stately cedars, its creeping vines laden with tempting, delicious clusters, the tempting branches of the fig and pomegranate, bending with luxurious fruit, its winding streams and sparkling cascades, its broad green carpet and its blue overhanging curtain, ornamented with fleecy silvery clouds tinged with streaming light, wonderful emotions filled their hearts. The sight was grand and convincing. It spoke for God, and the truthfulness of his revelations.

They now gazed upon the land where the tent of their fathers fluttered in the breezes ages before. They hastened to print the God-given soil with their shoeless feet. They marched by Hebron, and quietly passed the mighty sons of Anak, winding their way to the delightful and fruitful valley of Eschol.

Here they rest under the guardian care of the protecting angels, and commence to carefully examine all the surrounding country, and gather the rich fruits of the land as seen in the picture. They ascend the lofty pomegranate and gather the delicious fruit for transportation. They haste to the low spreading branches of the richly laden fig tree, and triumphantly bear away the representative treasure of their looked-for Canaan. They gaze upon the unequaled clusters of first-ripe grapes with joyous wonder, breaking one cluster from its vine, suspending it upon a pole to be borne by two men to the camp of the anxiously waiting brethren. Their eyes with transports of delight survey the lovely landscape of their future home—the crystal waters of winding streams—the lofty mountains covered with rich verdure of waving forest trees—the productive fields laden with golden harvests—the numerous flocks and lowing herds grazing upon the green fields—the perfumed breezes fanning the energies of life—the solar rays reflecting among the lofty summits, while the curtain of the blue arch draws its folds above and around it all.

There was the center of nature's loveliness; the land of angels' boast and men's delight. God had selected it as the future home and resting place of his outcast and persecuted people; and, notwithstanding the massive walls and defiant gates of fortified towns, no giant arms could defend them. The God of all the earth had sworn to his servant, and repeated it to his children, that they should possess the land; and when the appointed time came, no power could prevent its accomplishment. The echo of rams' horns was made more effective in demolishing their walls, than siege, engines, or shot and shell.

The unbelieving and doubting multitudes of the tribes had been sifted out from among the faithful, and found their graves in the wilderness; but the remnant who believed God meant what he said, and would faithfully fulfill his sacred promises, triumphantly passed all barriers, uprooted the nations, and took the goodly land in peaceful possession.

Paul makes these things prophetical when he says, "all these things happened unto them for ensamples [types]; and they are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world have come." 1 Cor. 10: 11.) An ensample must have its likeness in a second part, therefore it is certain that all those providential circumstances connected with that people, and recorded by inspiration, must be duplicated in more important events. Part of them were fulfilled at the close of the Jewish age, and part of them will be at the close of the gospel age.

The great antitypical Moses did come in the person of Jesus, who was the typified prophet, and promulgated the second code of divine law for the government of God's people. He also took Aaron's place as High Priest, and received the sacred unction, making him the Christ, and offered an atoning sacrifice, and "entered in once into the Holy Place . . . . heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us . . . and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time." When he appears the second time he will take Joshua's place as the Deliverer of God's people, leading them into the antitypical Canaan, a "better country, that is, an heavenly." He will then appear in the royal vestments of David, and ascend the long vacated throne of the holy family, and sway the sceptre of earth as the "second man, the Lord from heaven."

Then will the smoke and dust of sin's terrible battle cease to darken our once glorious world, and the last echo of death's awful groan be exchanged for the heavenly melody of life's note of eternal victory. Then the mighty Exterminator of evil shall arise and fold up the sable curtain of the curse, and unfold to the enraptured gaze of countless millions the indescribable beauties and eternal blessedness of a renewed earth.

Then shall the eye, immortal, feast upon the untold glories of a perfect world, as with the swiftness of angelic vision it sweeps over the broad landscape, and marks the infinite perfection of the wisdom, skill, and almighty power of its glorious Creator. With gushes of eternal joy it shall view the rolling glories of its heavenly effulgence. It shall view with infinite delight the unmeasured fields filled with beauty and life; fruit that angels might covet; flowers in eternal bloom, a thousand times more beautiful than mortal eyes ever beheld; fragrance floating in every breeze, sweeter than ever perfumed the valleys of Sharon; every creature and being enjoying the sweetness of living, unalloyed with the fear of dying. Peace shall wave its palm through all the vast dominions, unchallenged by war. The lion and lamb shall join in the universal harmonies, and the peasant and king rejoice in heavenly equality. The blighting curse shall not be known in that "heavenly country." No storm cloud or bellowing thunder—no earthquake or battle scenes—no withering forest tree or groaning beast—no dying friend or sad parting scenes.

O, when shall the holy eyes dimmed by death, and those now anxiously waiting, look upon a redeemed world stamped with God-like perfection, where no foe invades or sound disturbs, where beauty never withers and happiness is eternal? When shall our Joshua come, and lead us out of this howling wilderness to Paradise restored, wherethe toil-worn and weary will rest under Immanuel's protection—rest in the bowers of Eden forever?

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The great campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H., closed last evening (Aug. 30th.) The location is quite picturesque on the bank of the lake Winnipesaukee, which is one of the most romantic lakes in the country. Several steamboats ply between Alton Bay and other landings, affording a very pleasant conveyance to the campmeeting. One boat brought in about fifteen hundred at one time, and in one day some six thousand arrived on the cars, besides some four thousand by private conveyance. This has been the largest and best meeting ever held on the ground. The last day of the meeting there were probably eighteen thousand people on the ground. Good order prevailed during the entire meeting. The preaching was excellent. Sermons were delivered by Brn. E. A. Stockman, J. Couch, A. Ross, D. W. Leavitt, N. Wheeler, H. L. Hastings, P. G. Bowman, S. G. Mathewson, H. F. Carpenter, I. A. Potter, I. C. Wellcome, M. Batchelor, A. A. Phelps, C. P. Dow. A. Simpson, C. Goodrich, G. W. Brown, Srs. Clark and McKinstry, and the writer.

The spirit of the prayer-meetings was earnest, and they accomplished much good. There was a deeper hungering after righteousness than usual, and many made a full surrender to Christ, and received the gift of the Spirit. Several were converted, and the ordinance of baptism was administered from one to three times a day. We have not learned the whole number who were baptized.

There appeared to be an increased conviction that our Savior will soon make his second advent to this world. The feeling on this subject was deep-toned and abiding; leading the people to feel the necessity of being "pure in heart" in order to be ready to meet the coming Bridegroom King. It is very apparent that the bride of Christ is making special preparation to meet him. She is putting on her bridal robes—Christ's righteousness—that she may be ready any moment to greet him with enraptured joy and gladness. There seems to be an increased certainty existing in the minds of the saints that Jesus will come very soon. Truly we are living in a glorious and solemn hour.

There were many incidents of special interest during the progress of the meeting, which we have not time or space to mention; but we will notice one connected with Bro. P. G. Bowman of S. C. Friday forenoon, Aug. 28th, we had a very interesting missionary meeting, when over two thousand dollars in cash and pledges were raised to spread in new places the truths we love so ardently. Near the close of the meeting, word was sent to the stand by some ladies, that they would make a liberal addition to their pledges if Bro. Bowman would quit the use of tobacco. We would say here, that he has used it from boyhood; and in S. C. it is considered all right. The old negroes used to delight in putting into his hands some of the best of the poisonous weed. This proposition from the ladies bore with heavy weight upon the mind of Bro. Bowman. Many were making sacrifices to raise money to assist him and others to preach the gospel of the kingdom; and he saw at once that it was reasonable that he should make a sacrifice, especially of a bad habit. After a little sober thought, he stood up in his tall manliness, and said it was the heaviest cross he ever took up; but if his tobacco was offensive to his brethren, he would use no more, if he died for his abstinence. A shout of joy rose from the camp, and some two hundred dollars more were pledged towards the southern mission work, because Bro. B. had sacrificed his idol. Let others go and do likewise. It is high time that those who are waiting for the coming of Jesus were cleansed "from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit." Save the tobacco money and give it to the missionary cause.

Sabbath, Aug. 30th, was the closing day of this great feast of tabernacles. The morning love-feast at 9 o'clock was excellent. Some four hundred and twenty-one spoke in one hour and fifteen minutes, besides nineteen songs of praise. During the day there was preaching at the stand and in three large tents; also from one of the balconies in the "square." In the evening, we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, when some fifteen hundred were present. It was a precious season in Christ. Thus ended the largest and best meeting at Alton Bay.

CONSECRATION.

Those who wish to be filled with the Holy Spirit should make an unconditional surrender of their all to Christ, to be his forever without reserve. As Paul says, this is our "reasonable service." Our wonderful constitutions were made for a holy use, and for no other purpose. Man was made to be a companion of his Creator; but sin has produced a separation. The union can be restored only when man will consent to stop sinning, and lead a holy life. The Lord cannot force any person's will, so long as he is on probation. He entreats, and uses all possible persuasive means to get man out of the broad way into the narrow path that leads to life eternal. We do not see how our Savior could have done more than he has to save rebellious man.

On the subject of consecration, the following from Bro. Hall, a noted minister in Europe, is excellent:—

"I disclaim all right to myself from henceforth,—to my soul, my body, my time, my health, my reputation, my talents, or anything that belongs to me. I confess myself to be the property of the glorious Redeemer. I dedicate myself to him, to serve, love and trust him, as my life and my salvation, to my life's end. I call thee to witness, O God, the truth and reality of this surrender of all I have, and all I am, to thee; and earnestly implore the influence of thy Spirit to enable me to stand steadfast in this covenant, as well as an interest in the blood of thy Son, that I may be forgiven in those instances (alas! that such an idea may be possible) in which I may in any degree swerve from it." When nearing death he said: "I have no anxious thought either for life or death. What I dread most are dark days. But I have had none."

M. G.

COURAGE.

David, in his boyhood days, was sent by his father Jesse to the camp of Israel with some food for his brethren. At that time the Philistines were led by the giant Goliath, and with taunting boldness were defying "the armies of the living God." It is said, "the men of Israel . . . were sore afraid," when they beheld the daring champion of the Philistines, who said, "Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us. And the Philistine said, I defy the armies of Israel this day; give me a man that we may fight together." It is said, "when Saul and all Israel heard these words of the Philistine, they were dismayed and greatly afraid."

When this defiant giant had "presented himself forty days," David appeared in the camp. After learning the alarming facts in the case, he said: "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?" Eliab, David's eldest brother, was quite displeased with him because he had come to the camp, and rebuked him sharply. Said David, "What have I now done? Is there not a cause?" Soon David stood face to face before the mighty giant and said: "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied." "The battle is the Lord's, and he will give you into our hands,'" and then, with a holy boldness, he ran with sling in hand to the mighty Philistine, and was soon seen returning with his reeking head to the camp of Israel.

At the present time there is need of courage like that of David, to meet those who "defy the armies of the living God." "Is there not a cause?" Let none be fainthearted in these last hours of peril. It is too late to make "provision for the flesh." Let us lay all on the altar of sacrifice, and trust the Lord without a doubt. We have nothing to fear, when fully consecrated to him. He that is for us is more than all that can be against us. This is the time to "stand fast . . . in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." When in him all is well, and we have nothing to fear. Let every christian soldier be clothed with "the whole armor of God." None others are prepared for the closing conflict, that is to decide for ever the destiny of every combatant. Truly we are living in a solemn hour, yet glorious.

M. G.

Discussion.—We have arranged to discuss the following at Plainfield, Vt.:—

"Resolved, That the Scriptures teach a conscious, intelligent existence of the soul of man separate from the body, between death and the resurrection of the body."

Stephen Skinner affirms.
Miles Grant denies.

The discussion is to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 15th, to continue four evenings.

Another Discussion.—We have also consented to debate the subject of Trine Baptism with Bro. W. C. Thurman, in Charlestown, Mass., Mystic Hall, No 70 Main St., commencing Tuesday evening, Sept. 22nd.

M. G.

The Bethel Campmeeting has opened with excellent promise. The first day (Sabbath, Sept. 6th) an attentive audience was present, and in the evening some four or five decided to become christians, and many consecrated their all to Christ, and were much blest. It is expected that this will be the best meeting ever held on the ground.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The great campmeeting is past, and its incidents and varied experiences are registered in a book to be opened, and their moral character to be decided by the Judge of quick and dead at his appearing. It was anticipated that, as the times were hard, the meeting would be smaller than usual; but in that we were mistaken, for it was larger than ever before. The multitude who came on to the ground seemed disposed to be orderly, with hardly an exception, and treated the worshipers respectfully. Men of the world, who are in the habit of witnessing the deportment at large mass meetings, testified that it was singularly orderly and quiet. We believe this can be partly accounted for from the fact that there is a fearfulness resting upon the hearts of men that the things we preach may be true. All can see that there are great changes taking place in the world, and their hearts are "failing them for fear" that the judgments of God are impending over this generation.

We had no night watch until the last Saturday evening, and there was no one on the ground from first to last who seemed disposed to harm or disturb us. We are inclined to think that there is not in New England, everything considered, a more desirable location for a large religious meeting than Alton Bay. It is not subject to rowdyism or sectarian bigotry, so as to prevent thepeople from generally attending the meeting in all the region of country. It is situated on as beautiful a lake of water as there is in the country, over which large and commodious steamers run, landing passengers directly at the grounds. It has the great advantage of being situated on one of the most safely managed R. Roads in the country—the Boston and Maine. There is of necessity much danger connected with the movements of such vast crowds of people by any conveyance, especially when so many thousands rush into the cars and are carried over a single track in an hour. The superintendent of the Road was on the ground the last day, and saw with his own eye, and directed with his own command every movement, which resulted in the most perfect order and safe conveyance of all.

The meetings of worship were considered, by many who spoke of them, better than any enjoyed on the ground for many years. They seemed to have deeper-toned devotion and less superficial excitement and animal emotion. A deep and heartfelt conviction rested upon all that the day of the Lord is just at hand, and that a thorough gospel preparation is infinitely important for all to enjoy at the present time. A number of sinners were hopefully converted, and many professors were revived and greatly strengthened in faith, who renewed their covenant with God to be faithful unto the end. We believe the meeting swept away much prejudice which existed against us as a people, and our peculiar faith, which has opened to us a wider door to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom to this generation. We believe God has in great mercy heard the prayers of his people, that divine blessings might rest upon this meeting, and make it a success in establishing his truth, advancing his cause, and preparing his people for the coming of Christ.

After the bustle and confusion of the multitude had gone, and the sweeter sounds of songs and prayers from devout lips had ceased to echo through the consecrated bower, and the servants of God had left the sacred desk and dedicated chapels in solemn silence, a divine influence seemed to linger, and whisper silently but impressively, Walk softly and speak gently and devoutly, for this is a holy place, because God has met his covenant people here, to prepare and marshal them for the marriage of his Son.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

The business aspect of the country looks quite discouraging. Men are afraid to go forward in business operations as in other days. They are impressed that heavy financial storms are impending. They have lost confidence in one another, and are perplexed at the signs of the times. They can see no way out of their perplexities. The clouds present no "silver lining," but are growing darker. Says the New York Journal of Commerce:—

"It is worse than idle to deceive ourselves, There is no wide-spread and substantial prosperity. We can find no class of manufacturers, merchants, agriculturists, artisans or common laborers who are steadily earning a profit, or have full and contented employment."

Says the Boston Herald of Aug. 29th, 1874:—

"It is not the panic of last autumn that has caused all the trouble. That panic was only a symptom of the national disease. It showed us where we were; how far we had drifted from our moorings. It gave evidence that there was something rotten in the apparent prosperity which had so long deceived the people and to which the politicians had pointed with proud boasts. The panic only affected a comparatively small number of concerns in one line of business. It toppled over a few large houses that had ventured, 'like little boys that swim on bladders,' too far out upon the sea of speculation. The great producing interests of the country were untouched. There was still work to be done, hands to do it, and money to pay for it. But speculation had received a check and speculative values had disappeared. We have been pretty near down to hard pan ever since, and had Congress possessed the courage to take advantage of the country's situation, and make our currency as good as gold, we should be in a more hopeful state to-day."

Bro. L. Boutell writes from East Pepperel, Mass, Sept. 7th, 1874:—"Our tent-meeting has been under way at this place for three days, and is in a very prosperous condition. We have had meetings from morning till evening; had preaching three times a day, besides prayer and conference meeting daily, with a children's meeting. The people fill the tent, and give good attention to the word of life. Some have started in the way of life, and an interest is awakened in the gospel of the kingdom, and a necessary preparation for the event. The meeting will still continue. Everything indicates good results. Pray for us.

"THE YOUNG PILGRIM."

We call the attention of the readers of the World's Crisis to the above paper. It is an illustrated children's paper, devoted to the interests of Bible truth, as understood by us, which furnishes wholesome religious instruction, adapted to the capacities and needs of the little ones; and also that which is calculated to interest and instruct the larger portion of our children. In a simple, yet interesting manner, it sets forth not only the necessity of conversion and holy living in order to salvation, but calls attention to the fact of Christ's speedy personal coming, the inheritance of the earth by the saints, the mortality of the human race, and their dependence on Christ for eternal life, and kindred truths. It is a paper that should visit every family where there are children, which should be circulated freely in our Sabbath-schools, and which should receive the aid and encouragement of every one who is interested in the spiritual welfare of the young.

Besides the foregoing reasons which justify its claim for patronage is the fact that it is the only such paper published by the people who are waiting for Jesus' coming, either east or west. We have some half a dozen papers for adult readers, published in various parts of the country, and only one devoted specially to the interest of the young. Surely this fact should cause it to receive a liberal support from the body at large.

We solicit subscriptions. It is published by the A. C. Publishing Society, at the office of the World's Crisis; and is issued twice each month for fifty cents a year, payable in advance. Address The Young Pilgrim, Box 355, Boston, Mass.

C. E. Barnes, Editor.

The Adventist Society of Hyde Park appears to be in a most healthy and prosperous condition. From a small beginning it has gradually grown until now quite a large society has been formed, and religious services of an interesting and profitable character are held each Sabbath, morning, afternoon, and evening. In its first stages it progressed very slowly, scarcely a dozen persons attending the meetings; but under the earnest labors of the present pastor, the Rev. Mr. Preble, Pythian Hall, in Central Block, is filled nearly to overflowing at each gathering. Mr. Preble is a zealous, earnest speaker, and advocates the doctrine of Adventism with a spirit that must convince any listener that he is sincere in what he says.

The religious interest in the society is quite manifest, and conversions to the faith are of frequent occurrence. Many who had at first attended these meetings through idle curiosity have become deeply interested in Mr. Preble's sermons, and have united with the society. It is a note-worthy fact that there are many persons in every community who never attend religious services in the churches, but who are easily induced to listen to the Word of God when proclaimed in a public hall. Why this is so we are unable to say, but such is the fact. And this is one reason why the meetings in Pythian Hall are so well attended.

Last Sunday, four persons who have attended the meetings at this hall during the past few months, were baptized by immersion, and joined the society. The solemn rites were observed in the Neponset river, and quite a large concourse of people were present. The pastor preached three able discourses during the day and evening, and in the evening nearly every seat in the hall was occupied by an apparently interested person. The society is certainly doing a good work, and we hope it will be sustained and encouraged. An excellent choir has been organized, and the singing is equal if it does not surpass that of our other societies. However much others may differ from the doctrines as here enunciated, all should unite in extending a welcome and helping hand to those engaged in building up this new religious society, as its mission is one of love and mercy, peace and good-will to men.—Norfolk County Gazette.

Sunny christians are very much needed. We are not cheerful enough in domestic life—in our social circles. There is great power in a happy life, that goes through the labor of the day, singing as it goes. We do not sing enough out of prayer-meetings and without a hymn book. There is power in a sunny face and a brightening eye. Oh! for an increase of sunny christians!

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

A. W. Sibley, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Soc.

Remittances shou'd be sent to the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams, Boston Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

PROPHECY.

B. SPAULDING.

"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning."

In reading the good book, we find many prophecies yet unfulfilled. Prophecy seems to be a history of future events; and so far as we have come down the stream of time, prophecy has had a literal fulfillment. This leads us to expect the rest will be just as literal. We see that the prophecies in relation to Nineveh, Babylon, and Jerusalem, were fulfilled to the letter of the word; and prophecies concerning Jesus' first advent: such as he should be born of a virgin, be born in Bethlehem of Judea, be called a Nazarene; that they should part his garments among them, and cast lots for his vesture; that he should die, and the third day rise again; all such prophecies had a literal fulfillment. Then may we not expect that the remaining prophecies will be just as literally fulfilled? Such as, "If I go away, I will come again"; "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven"; "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him"; "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout," etc., etc.

Then, again, other prophecies relating to what will follow Jesus' coming; such as, "Every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him"; "shall look upon him and mourn"; "And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb." "And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth. "And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth to the other end of the earth; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; they shall be as dung upon the ground." This, it will be seen, will require a space of time.

"Their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation; they shall also build houses, but not inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but not drink the wine thereof. . . . That day is a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness; . . . and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as dung." All this is in the great day of the Lord. We see it cannot be a literal twenty-four-hour day; but it is a space of time which the prophets call "the day of the Lord." It is the space between the first and second resurrection; the space when Jesus is fulfilling the unfulfilled prophecy. We see plainly there must be such a space (whether it be longer or shorter), in order to fulfill all which the prophets have written, as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. In that day of the Lord, Isa. 24th will be fulfilled,—the earth left empty, desolate, barren, and waste; the city of confusion broken down, and every house shut up. In the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction. "And it shall come to pass in that day (space of time), that the Lord shall punish the hosts of the high ones, that are on high, and the kings of earth upon the earth; and they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit [the grave], and shall be shut up in the prison [or grave], and after many days [or a thousand years] shall they be visited [or resurrected]. Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Blessed be the Lord. I believe it with my heart.

The infirmities of age are upon me, yet my health is good, and I enjoy life. My
